REGULATION VIII OF 1100.

A Regulation to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the Procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature

Passed by Her Highness the Maha Rani Regent of Travancore under date the 29th Karkatakom 1100, corresponding with the 13th August 1925, under Section 14 of Regulation II of 1097.

Whereas it is expedient to consolidate and amend the laws relating to the Procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

The Courts were provided with a Code of Civil Procedure for the first time in the year 1037 M. E., when Regulation II of 1037 was passed on the 15th August 1861/1st Chingom 1037. The Regulation was taken almost without alteration from the British Indian Act, VIII of 1859—the first British Indian Code of Civil Procedure. In fact, the only changes made consisted in the omission from the Regulation of a few Sections of that Act. That Regulation was in force till the year 1065 when Regulation II of 1065 was passed. It was based mainly on the British Indian Act XIV of 1882, with a few alterations made in accordance with the amending Act VIII of 1888 or to meet local requirements. In British India, the Act of 1882 was repealed by Act V of 1908 which is now in force. On the lines of this Act, the present Regulation, VIII of 1100, has been enacted repealing Regulation II of 1065.

Regn. VIII of 1100 : I. Objects and Reasons.—(1) " The existing Code of Civil Procedure was passed in the year 1065, and more than 30 years having passed, requires revision and re-enactment, to bring it into line with several judicial decisions, since passed, and the law in British India. Several modifications are now made as a result of the experience of the working of the Code for such a long period of 30 years; but speaking broadly, the general principles underlying the existing Code, which has worked satisfactorily, are kept intact.

2. The changes that are now proposed are referred to in some detail in the accompanying Notes on Clauses. One feature of the Bill requires prominent mention. In lieu of the hundreds of Sections making up the present Civil Procedure Code, it is proposed to enact 125 Sections in reference to such matters of policy and administration as, in case of change, should require the attention and consideration by the Legislature, while the carrying out of the purpose and object of these Sections is regulated by Rules, that are, in their essence, mere details of machinery, and are, therefore, fit to be changed and adapted to suit new or changed circumstances by means other than resort to the Legislature. This is the method adopted in British India, and has been long in vogue in Great Britain. It is obviously of great advantage in that it provides a means to easily alter mere machinery. There is the disadvantage, no doubt, that the method has to be familiarised and litigants and lawyers have to become familiar with Orders and Rules, as well as Sections, in place of Sections only. This is, however, only a temporary disadvantage, and the similar disadvantage in British India has disappeared long ago.

3. The machinery that has been so set up to alter, or add to or abolish the Rules that are gathered in the First Schedule will, it will be noticed, be quite an expert body. Three Judges, including the Chief Justice, and two Vakils of the High Court can be expected to have that close and intimate knowledge of the subject dealt with by Rules, which the lay members of the Legislative Council would find it difficult to acquire and apply. The Government retain, however, the right to sanction such alterations or additions with a view to be guided by the opinion of the public if and when expressed.

4. There is room for difference of opinion, as to what matter may be relegated to the Schedules. The policy of the British Indian Legislature has now been adopted, and alterations may, of course, be made in the course of the progress of the Bill.

5. In view of the reservations in the Legislative Council Regulation, certain matters relating to procedure in Civil Courts have to be provided for by means of a law passed by His Highness the Maha Raja direct. The enactment of such a law simultaneously with the passing of the Regulation, and arranged so as to fit in with the Regulation will be an adequate remedy.* * *"

The above Statement was followed by Notes on the various Clauses in the Bill. These are noticed in the Notes under the Sections, Orders and Rules concerned.

(2) In moving that the Bill be read in Council, the Official Member in charge spoke as follows :—

"I may now explain the general principles of the Bill. Before going into the details of the Bill, I may first observe that the existing Civil Procedure Code has been thoroughly recast and the Bill has given it a totally different form. It is therefore natural to question whether we should have adopted such a procedure instead of making the necessary amendments in the existing Regulation itself, keeping its present form. The question probably will be naturally asked by the older members of the legal profession and by the members of the judicial service whose term is almost expiring, whether they should be driven to the necessity of mastering this complicated Civil Procedure Code in the present form instead of being satisfied with the original form with the necessary amendments. My plea for having this particular form is that, in the first place, as all the lawyer members will bear me out, it is a very complicated piece of legislation, and every word in most of its important Sections has received judicial interpretation in Travancore, in British India and in England ; so that it is highly necessary that, when a lawyer has to look for a reference on a particular matter, it is desirable that, as far as possible, the Section or the Order or the Rule in the one should agree as nearly as possible with the corresponding provision in the Indian Act. The British Indian Code adopted the old form of legislation, namely, one similar to what we have got in Regulation II of 1065. But they subsequently changed it into Order and Rule. It is not merely for the purpose of copying the British Indian enactment that the same procedure is adopted here. The importance of it is that, where there is no express ruling in the Travancore High Court on any particular matter, we naturally have to refer to the British Indian rulings on that matter or the English rulings also. Further, even though there may be Travancore rulings, those rulings may have to be reconsidered in the light thrown upon the subject by the British Indian rulings or the English rulings. Naturally therefore, every lawyer, when he has to deal with the Civil Procedure Code in Court, has to refer to the corresponding provision of the British Indian Act, as also the English law on the subject. That being the case, the present arrangement will facilitate reference.

" Secondly, in regard to the most important portion of it, as I said at the outset, it is a complicated piece of legislation, and it is generally only a particular portion of this Regulation that the Legislature will have any interest in ; that is to say, the substantive portion and the most necessary portion which determines the policy. As for the ordinary Rules which regulate the daily routine and the conduct of the Courts and of the practitioners, they may be left to be decided or modified, as the case may be, by two Judges of the High Court assisted by another judge and legal practitioners. That being the case, it was thought necessary that what ought to go before the Legislature should form one portion of the Bill, and what ought to go before the Rule Committee, as will be explained later, should form a separate head, namely, under Order and Rule. This is in conformity with the trend of modern legislation. General principles are regulated by Statute, while the details are allowed to be governed by Rules. In the Companies Act, while the general provisions are included in the body of the Regulation, the details relating to Articles of Association are given in the Schedule; so also, Orders and Rules will be law governing Courts, unless they are modified in any instance by the Rule Committee. This is another advantage.

"Again, so far as the present form is concerned, I may assure my friends that it was after a good deal of discussion with the late Chief Justice, Mr. Raman Menon, that I adopted this particular form. As I said, the only point against me in this matter is that some practitioners may find it difficult to become acquainted with the thing, and, may, therefore, be put to some inconvenience. My plea is that the busy practitioners who have got large experience must necessarily by this time have been in a position and have had many occasions to refer to British Indian Orders and Rules. Therefore, so far as they are concerned, the arrangement will not in the least entail any serious inconvenience. Further, with the legal training that the senior practitioners have had and the analytical head that they are bound to have in arguing cases before the Court, the quick grasp they will have of all matters must stand them in good stead. A lawyer has to be acquainted with every branch of knowledge in the world, e. g., industrial, medical, sanitary, and, I may even say, theological, and a lot of other subjects, and he easily masters them for the purpose of any case. There could not then be any difficulty for him to master the various Sections of the Civil Procedure Code. So far as the practitioners that have just begun or not yet begun practice are concerned, I do not think that it will be very difficult for them either, because they have to study the procedure necessarily and, therefore, they cannot be put to any difficulty. In the result, the advantage of the present form far outweighs some inconvenience to which some of the practitioners or judicial officers may be put, and I think that the Council will approve the form in which the Bill is shaped. If necessary, it may undergo some change as may be found necessary from the discussion of the Bill by the Select Committee or at a later stage. No radical changes have been attempted. It is only the redrafting of the various Sections with the necessary modifications that has been done.

"Then, passing on to the various Sections of the Code, I shall refer to a few of the most important amendments that have been made. The first amendment is with reference to res judicata and this is done to clear all doubts as to what a former suit means. A former suit need not necessarily be one that was filed, but one that was decided formerly, i. e., earlier in point of time, and it is such a suit that will be res judicata. Another important matter in which an amendment has been made is this. The High Court at present has absolutely no power to transfer any appeal from the file of the subordinate Courts to its own file. This has naturally led to some inconvenience and difficulty. We know as a matter of fact that two or more suits are filed in the same Court in which the question involved is virtually the same. The Munsiff before whom the suits are filed decides all these suits together, and generally, I may say, by a single judgment. But, when the matter has to be appealed against, some have to go to the High Court and some to the District Court, with the result that the High Court defer the hearing of the appeal until the appeals preferred to the District Court are disposed of, and if it happens to be a concurrent judgment, it happens to operate as res judicata and the parties do not derive benefit from it when they go to the High Court. What is proposed by the Section is that in cases of that kind it is open to the High Court to transfer such appeals from the subordinate Courts to its own file. That, I believe, is decidedly a right step, and the parties will not only be not put to any unnecessary inconvenience, but they will even be in a position to save something.

"The next matter that I have to refer to is the question of interest. This, to my mind, is an important matter which deserves the attention of the House. Before going into the amendment that has been made in the Bill, I may explain what the law on the subject at present is. Our law is based on two Regulations of 1010, which are nearly a century old. The first Regulation enacts so far as money transactions are concerned that a person is not entitled to claim in a suit more than 12 per cent. interest, and in the case of paddy more than 20 per cent., per annum. The second Regulation enacts that a Court may award before decree interest equal to one-half of the amount of the principal and, after decree, interest equal to one-half of the principal in the case of money, while in the case of paddy the amount of interest in such cases may be equal to the principal. These are the main provisions of the existing law. With reference to the second portion of it there was some difference of opinion in the High Court, as to whether the interest amounting to one-half of the principal should be restricted to the date of suit or date of decree. But it has been ruled recently that a person can be entitled to only one-half of the principal amount up to the date of decree. In other words, if a person takes a hypothecation bond at 12 per cent. interest and waits for 4 years without filing a suit, and then if he files the suit, the interest amounting to one-half of the principal will be awarded to him; and, if, owing to the contention of the defendant, it takes about five or six years before the suit is finally decreed—the result, under the existing law, will be that the creditor who was honest enough to give some indulgence to the debtor and therefore took four years' time to go to Court would be prevented from securing the benefit of the advance in the shape of interest owing to no fault of his own, but owing to the delay due to the Court or owing to various other circumstances over which nobody has any control. Then again, in regard to the other portion, the Court usually allows six per cent. interest. The result is that, if anybody has to borrow from any banker or from his money-lender, he will have to pay 12 per cent. The Court allows only 6 per cent. interest. The interest cannot be awarded to the extent of more than one-half of the principal and therefore it is found that it is to the interest of the debtor to see that, as far as possible, steps are taken to prevent the judgment-creditor from executing the decree and throw all sorts of obstacles in his way, so that he may not derive the fruit of the decree itself. That is not my individual opinion. It has been represented at the Sri Mulam Popular Assembly on various occasions by various classes of members, merchants, ordinary ryots and lawyers. I may say that the attention of the Government was pointedly drawn to it at the last session of the Assembly, at the 17th session, by a trader at the 16th session, by another at the 13th session, by others at the 10th and 11th sessions and so on. * *

"That then is the existing state of the law, viz., that a person cannot, under any circumstances, get, in the case of money, more than half the principal up to the date of the decree and a like sum after the decree by way of interest. In the case of paddy, the amount of interest in either case may be equal to the principal at any rate. He cannot claim interest at a rate more than 12 or 20 per cent. in the case of money or paddy. That is the existing law. While that was so, at the 10th session of the Assembly, a trader or rather a member representing the trading classes brought to the notice of Government that the existing Regulation of 1010 was not working satisfactorily in the sense that it was considerably out of date, that it threw considerable restriction on freedom of contract, that it also interfered with natural rights, and that therefore since the merchants, with their honesty and integrity which are absolutely essential, could not afford to lend any amount at a lower rate, they had recourse to various devices in order to get the same amount which they had to pay to others as interest. These were the difficulties pointed out by him. Government referred the matter to the High Court for their opinion. The High Court then consisted only of four Judges. Mr. Ramachandra Rao, one of the Judges, said:-"There is no doubt that there is considerable inconvenience so far as merchants and traders are concerned." He was therefore of opinion that, if both the contracting parties were merchants and traders or if one of them was, then it was desirable that they should have freedom of contract, the Courts, of course, having the discretion to interfere in cases where it is considered harsh and unconscionable. In the case of a banker, he was prepared to allow compound interest and, therefore, was in favour of modification of the law in that direction. With reference to the third question, viz., as to whether interest on money should be enhanced, he said that, logically speaking, he could not find any distinction between interest at the rate of 20 per cent. for paddy and 12 per cent. for money. Logically speaking both ought to be on the same level. Therefore, interest up to 20 per cent. might be awarded in the case of money also. But he was not for the logical conclusion in such a matter being given effect to and therefore he would leave the matter as it was. Thus, in the result, he was of opinion that the Regulations of 1010 required modification and that the necessary modification might be made. The other Judge that expressed his opinion in the matter was Mr. Muthunayagom Pillai. He said that he was not for absolute freedom of contract. He could not see any reason whatsoever why there should be any difference between paddy and money, so far as the amount of interest was concerned. In the case of paddy, interest equal to the principal was awarded by Courts under the existing Regulation of 1010; and he could not see any reason why, if in the case of paddy the lender was entitled to have his interest equal to the principal amount, it should not be so in the case of money also. Thus we find that Mr. Muthunayagom Pillai agreed that the interest should be equal to the principal. With reference to the other matter, he said that interest after the decree should not be in any way restricted and that it should also be equal to the whole of the principal. He was not for absolute freedom of contract being restored and the Regulations of 1010 repealed in toto. He was only for some modification in those Regulations. The next Judge that expressed his opinion was Mr. Krishnan Nair, the then Chief Justice. What he said was that there should be freedom of contract and that it was absolutely undesirable that any restraint should be put upon the people in that matter. What he said was this:—

"People do not require perpetual spoon-feeding. They may be allowed greater freedom and be treated as capable of taking care of themselves. The policy of keeping them in a state of pupilage for ever is not calculated to develop in the people of Travancore the spirit of individuality and self-reliance. They may therefore be allowed freedom of contract, Courts of course being given power to give the requisite relief when they think that the terms of the contract are unconscionable."

"Mr. Justice Viraraghava Aiyangar, the present Chief Justice, also said that there should be freedom of contract between the parties, provided it was not unconscionable, and he further stated that, so far as the amount of interest was concerned, it might be equal to the interest that was claimable in the case of paddy. So that, taking all those opinions together, the result is, as everybody can see, that Regulation I of 1010 requires modification, and that there should not be any difference whatsoever so far as the amount of interest is concerned between paddy and money. Then again, in the case of merchants, an indulgence may be shown, particularly so far as compound interest or a higher rate of interest is concerned. Government accepted the view of the Chief Justice and Mr. Viraraghava Aiyangar who said that freedom of contract might be allowed to parties, so that they might agree between themselves as to any rate of interest, Courts being empowered to interefere only when the rate of interest was unfair and unconscionable. With the above object in view, a Bill was introduced in the Legislative Council, repealing Regulation I of 1010 and allowing freedom of contract; but it was objected to by the non-official members on the ground that such a revoluntionary change as that, viz., the complete repeal of Regulation I of 1010 was uncalled for and that it was not time enough for the people to have recourse to freedom of contract. As many of the Non-official Members were against the measure, the Bill was withdrawn out of deference to their wishes.

"This was, I believe, in 1911. After that, when the existing Civil Procedure Code was taken up for revision, it was thought necessary to give consideration to the various representations on the subject, and the provisions contained in the Bill are the result.

"Now, I may explain what the provisions in the Bill are. In the first place, there is absolutely no objection whatsoever to the borrower paying any rate of interest to the lender under the existing law. If it is actually paid or if all the interest is added to the principal amount and a fresh contract entered into, Courts will not interfere with such liability. Courts will interfere only in cases where a person claims more than 12 per cent. interest in the case of money. Courts will not grant more than 12 per cent. interest in the case of money and more than 20 per cent. in the case of paddy. The present attempt is to remove the difference between paddy and money as regards interest and thereby increase the rate of interest, especially in view of the fact that the rate of interest in the market has recently gone up considerably. It is within the knowledge of all that the 3 per cent. and 3½ per cent. interest on Government securities has gone up considerably higher now than before; and therefore they have affected very seriously the transactions between the ordinary banker and the merchants. Unless therefore there is some provision enhancing the rate of interest whereby, if parties are willing to pay interest up to 18 per cent. Courts should not interfere, considerable hardship will be caused to the parties concerned. What the present Bill says is that Courts may grant interest up to 18 per cent. Even there, it is discretionary for the Court to decree less. But the Court will not be justified in refusing it arbitrarily up to 18 per cent. That is what the present Bill proposes to provide. If in the case of paddy one can pay interest up to 20 per cent. why should he not pay it up to 18 per cent. in the case of money. This rate has been reduced to 18 per cent. in the case of Chitty transactions and in the case of Jenmis and Kudiyans. It may be said that the persons who borrow are agriculturists. I know that an opinion is entertained by some that, Travancore being an agricultural country and the borrowers agriculturists, the rate of interest in the country should not be increased. To this I shall only say that if we go further north it is the agriculturists who borrow. They borrow paddy at 20 per cent. interest, i. e. at a higher rate than is allowed under the Bill. Under the old Regulation, that is legitimate. The present Bill proposes to reduce it by 2 per cent. and not to enhance it. According to the Bill, money is not to be regarded as in any way different from paddy. This will enable Courts to award interest up to 18 per cent. and I think this cannot be considered going too far. Then going to the next portion of it, viz., how much the interest should amount to, I have read out to you the opinion of the Judges of the High Court that if the amount may be equal to the principal in the case of paddy there is no reason why it should not be so in the case of money also, and therefore it is said in the Bill that the amount of interest up to the date of the institution of suit may equal to the principal. It is only the interest that the judgment-debtor has got to pay every month or at any other interval as agreed to by him. If he did not pay or if he promised to pay at a future date and if the creditor showed him some indulgence, it is not fair that the latter should be asked to forego the interest to which he was legitimately entitled.

"With reference to the other portion, viz., interest from date of suit to date of decree, I think it will be agreed by all that for the delay in the administration of justice, the party ought not to suffer and he should not be called upon to forego the interest for that period. So also after the date of decree, obstacles are sometimes thrown by the judgment-debtors. Once the suit is filed, there is, strictly speaking, a legitimate and a formal demand for payment of money and if a debtor will not pay it, irrespective of the pendency of the suit or delay in the execution of the decree, whatever be the amount of interest that may be decreed by the Court, the judgment-creditor should be entitled to realise it. With reference to the third portion, i. e., compound interest, we all know—those who have got any dealing with banks or bankers know—that at the end of every year, on all our deposits, they calculate interest, that this interest is added to the principal, and that the amount is entered in our pass-book as principal, and we claim and do receive interest accordingly. If in the case of a banker he has to pay compound interest to his depositors and customers, I do not see why he should not receive compound interest from his debtors. In such a case, it is distinctly provided that there should be a written agreement to the effect that the debtor agrees to pay compound interest or that there must be usage to that effect. Otherwise, compound interest cannot be claimed. These are the three main provisions that have been made in the new Bill as regards interest.

"The next matter I may draw the attention of this House to is the provision contained in Sections 53 and 54. Under the existing Regulation, there is no particular provision to exempt any portion of agricultural produce from attachment. It may be that, in many cases, whatever the agriculturist has got by way of agricultural produce is attached. It will not then be possible for him to live till the next harvest and he will not be able to proceed with his cultivation for the next crop. Hence Section 53 provides that it is open to the Government with reference to all agriculturists or any particular class of agriculturists to declare that any portion of the agricultural produce or any particular class of agricultural produce shall be exempt from attachment in execution of a decree, so that the agriculturists may enjoy the privilege of continuing the cultivation and may be able to live until the next harvest comes.

"The next provision is about public nuisance. We know that, in the case of a public nuisance, nobody is entitled to file a suit until he is aggrieved. He must prove that he is damnified. If there is no such proof he is not entitled to sue. We know, as a matter of fact, that although a person may not be prejudiced by a nuisance, the public as a class may be prejudiced. In such cases, it is deemed desirable that somebody should come forward and see that the nuisance is abated. It is proposed to empower the Dewan or some one with the permission of the Dewan to institute a suit to remove such nuisances.

"Then there are particular Sections which provide for the making of Rules. I said that the Order portion of the Bill is only a matter detailing the procedure that has to be followed by or in Courts. That procedure may be modified by the High Court. The High Court now does it generally by means of Circulars. It is not necessary that the Council should be inflicted with the details of procedure, whenever it has to be modified. It is therefore thought that, being a matter which is of peculiar interest to and which is peculiarly within the knowledge of lawyers and Judges, it is desirable, instead of trying to bring in small amending Bills for insignificant matters, to leave such amendments to the Rule Committee. This committee is not to consist of Judges alone. It is to consist of the Chief Justice and a Judge of the High Court, a District Judge and two High Court Vakils. These Judges and Vakils who can give expert opinion on the subject should go into the question and see whether any particular Rule in the Order requires any slight modification. What is now generally done by means of Circulars would be done by them without being driven to the necessity of going to the Council for amending the Code. In the latter case there will be a lot of delay. It is also better done by a body of experts. Hence the provision relating to the Rule Committee.

"Then we go to Orders and Rules. There is a particular Order for the legal practitioner to follow in regard to pleadings, i. e., as to what all should be said in a pleading. Although as a matter of fact this is generally observed, the Bill states, in a little more detail, what should be done and what not.

"Then in regard to interrogatories. At present the provision regarding this is vague. Interrogatories are answered indefinitely and are never answered to the point. Every body tries to take shelter under the exception. There are ever so many circumstances under which the party may decline to answer an interrogatory. What the present Order proposes to lay down is that, after the issues are framed, it should be open to a party before letting in evidence to ask the opposite side to say whether he admits any particular fact, and if he does not admit it, the cost of proving it should be borne by the party who does not admit it. As a matter of fact, when the allegations are recorded and issues are framed, great care is taken to record admissions and denials. All the same, what the party says is "I do not know" or "I am not aware". The genuineness is admitted. According to this particular Order, any party may ask the other side to say whether he admits a particula fact or not. This will necessarily reduc the amount of evidence which one has t give.

"The next point is with reference to pre liminary and final decrees. A distinction now made between a preliminary decre and a final decree, and it is made obl gatory upon a person who is not satisfie with a preliminary decree to appeal im mediately. If he does not do so, the ap peal is barred. A preliminary decree ma be made in suits for the dissolution of part nerships, for account, etc. For instance, after the Court decides that the share should be distributed in a particular wa and after that the commissioner makes report and the various items are allotted t each individual, a party goes on appeal an says that the preliminary decree is wrong a good deal of money and time will hav been wasted by the party. Therefore, it i provided that, if a person is not satisfie with a preliminary decree, he may straight way prefer an appeal against it and, if h fails to do so, he shall not be allowed t take objection against the preliminary de cree later on.

"The next important matter is the pro vision about the restitution of conjuga rights. We know that in the Criminal Pro cedure Code there is a provision that, if Court decrees restitution, the man or woma who is not willing to obey the decree ma be sent to prison. Whether it is the hus band or the wife, it may not be that the de cretal portion will be satisfied by the en forcement of the decree in that manner. S that what the Bill provides is that a Cou may say that a wife shall not be arrested she refuses to obey the decree. Again i the case of a husband if he disobeys, h may, in the decree, be asked to award main tenance, because by no means of enforce ment can the Court make the parties liv together, if they do not like to do so. Henc some safeguards are provided and the pro vision as to imprisonment is removed.

"The next provision is about the appointment of receivers. Receivers are now appointed only by the District Courts. The Bill makes a provision according to which even the Munsiffs' Courts can do it. Receivers may be appointed not only under circumstances mentioned in the existing Civil Procedure Code, but in all cases where, in the interests of justice, the Court considers it desirable to do so. Wide power is vested in the Government with a view to the appointment of receivers.

"Another amendment that has been made is in the matter of appeals and objections. We know as a matter of fact that all objections have to be filed within a certain number of days, and if they are not so filed, the opinion of the High Court till recently was that the High Court had no power to excuse the delay. Recently, there seems to have been a change to the effect that the question of the delay can be gone into. Then again, if the appeal is withdrawn, the objection ipso facto fails. That is also prevented. Then again, objections are allowed to be preferred in forma pauperis. Then with reference to appellate powers there seems to have been considerable difficulty until recently. In some matters where a person claims money in a suit against A or B in the alternative, the Court decides that the plaintiff shall recover from A and the plaintiff is perfectly satisfied with that decision. But when A appeals and all are parties to the appeal, the Appellate Court finds that A is not liable, but that B is liable. But the plaintiff not having appealed against the decree, the Appellate Court has some difficulty in giving a decree against B. After straining the language and fully realising that the party did not prefer the appeal because he was satisfied with the decree, the High Court had to pass a decree against B. The present Bill only legalises or gives recognition to the ruling of the High Court and says that the decree in such cases may be modified by the Appellate Court provided that all parties to the transaction are brought in.

"Lastly, there is another amendment, which is with reference to paupers. In regard to suits to be instituted by paupers, there seems to be some restriction. As it is, paupers cannot sue for loss of caste, libel and slander. According to the present Bill, this restriction has been removed.

"It is impossible for me to detail all the various provisions from beginning to end, because the Bill is a voluminous one. The whole thing will have to be threshed out by the Select Committee. I have, therefore, given only some of the important outstanding features of the Bill, and I believe that the general principle of the Bill will be accepted by the Council."

Discussion followed in which several Non-official Members took part. Objections were raised to some of the principles embodied in the Bill, and to the form and arrangement of its provisions. To these, the Official Member in charge replied as follows:—

"I may sum up the criticisms under four heads: first, as to the form of the Bill; second, as to the delegation of the power of amendment of a portion of the Regulation to the Rule Committee, instead of vesting it in the Council itself; third, embodying the provision as to interest in this Bill instead of enacting a separate law for the same; and fourth, the provision as to the rate, amount and nature of interest. These, I believe, are the main heads of criticism. Of course, there were one or two minor matters which were referred to in the course of the discussion, but all those matters of detail may, I believe, be considered by the Select Committee, if the Bill is to be referred to it at all. I shall therefore confine my remarks to these four main heads.

"First, let me begin with the interest question, in respect of which there seems to be practical agreement on the non-official side. In the first place, I must demur to the suggestion of my friends that it ought not to find a place in the Civil Procedure Code. Every one of us is aware of the Regulations of 1010 M. E. But unless we refer to the Sections themselves we do not know whether they enact substantive law or procedure law. The Regulations of 1010 do not purport to be substantive law. Regulation I does not say that no man shall receive more than 12 per cent., but what it does say is :

"Munsiffs are hereby prohibited from allowing in their decrees a greater rate of interest in any suit brought before them than twelve rupees per cent. per annum."

"In decrees on suits, the Munsiff shall allow, in the decree, the interest that may be due from the period the suit may have been instituted to the day on which the decree shall be passed".

That portion of the Regulation applies only to the Munsiffs, although practically Zillah Judges exercise that power. Regulation IV relates to Zillah Judges.

"In decrees on civil suits, the interest must be charged on the principal from the date of the decree to the day of its execution."

So that what Regulations I and IV of 1010 say is that Munsiffs shall not award a greater rate of interest than 12 per cent. in their decrees ; but they do not say that no man shall receive more than 12 per cent. interest; nor do they say that, if more than 12 per cent. has been included in a settled account, that account shall be reopened. They only enact that a Munsiff or a Zillah Judge shall not decree more than what is permitted in the Regulation. And what I have said in Section 31 (1) is :

"In suits for money, or for grain, no Court shall, in respect to the period antecedent to the institution of the suit, allow in its decree a greater rate of interest."

I am, word for word, so to say, following the old Regulation when I say that no Court shall award more than a certain percentage of interest. And I do not know why there should be so much complaint about substantive and adjective law.

My friends on the other side do know that I perfectly appreciate any amount of criticism and even severe language. I am n at all distrubed and I do not take su criticisms amiss. What I ask is whether have introduced any new procedure stealtl ly into this Bill or whether I have smu gled anything into this Bill. It is a matt for this Council to decide. * *

"What I say is that, even under tl existing law, there is no prohibition at ɛ for anybody demanding 5 per cent. vattai but what we are concerned with is that : Court shall award a man more than 12 18 per cent. interest. I did not want avoid public criticism by introducing tl provision in this Bill instead of having separate enactment. I have always thoug that, when there are twenty-eight elect members of the people, they are quite co petent to criticise any particular Bill. that Bill is not acceptable to the publ certainly it will not be acceptable to tl Council, because the members here are t representatives of the people. I explain the provision in the Statement of Obje and Reasons and devoted a large portion my speech this morning to the questic Does this signify any covert intentio Is it consistent with stealth or smugglin It is rather uncharitable for the membe to say that it was with a stealthy or ulteri motive, i. e., to escape detection and there criticism that I put this clause into tl Bill. * *

"It is a matter relating to the inter the Court was competent to provide in t decree. It is a matter relating to that, ar therefore, that provision should find a pl in the Civil Procedure Code, and nowhe else. It was not because I wanted to ma any difference between substantive a procedure law, but because it was a matt which the Court had to decide that I int duced it here. But when so much objecti was taken on the ground that I stealth tried to incorporate substantive law i procedure law and procedure law into s stantive law, I contend that there is foundation for making such a serious char We are not concerned with the question to what a person may or may not receive from the debtor without any foundation. But what we are concerned with here is, what is it that a Court can decree? That, in my humble opinion, can find a place in this Code. After all, we are fighting the shadow and not the substance. The provision of this Section in the Civil Procedure Code will save a lot of trouble to the Civil Courts, lawyers and litigants, having to refer to some other Regulation on the question of interest. I have not the slightest objection to any amount of fair criticism and shall be glad to plead guilty, if there was any such intention in my mind. I will ask my friends to consider whether they were justified in this remark and leave the matter there. * *

"In British India there is no Regulation corresponding to the Regulations of 1010, directing Courts to decree in a particular way. There the whole thing is based on freedom of contract, and, unless, therefore, the interest claimed is unconscionable they do not do anything of the kind except as to future rates of interest. Here we have a law directing the Munsiff or the District Judge to decree in a particular way. * *

"In the Indian Legislature there was not only a move but an Act that freedom of contract should be restricted in some way. It was in the year 1918 or 1919—I do not exactly remember the year—that an Act was passed about interest, and Courts are empowered to interfere under certain circumstances.

"I have pointed out in what particular portion of the statute this has to find a place. I shall now deal with the next objection—the objection as to whether the rate should be 12 or 18 per cent. I never said that there should be complete freedom of contract. I was only referring to freedom of contract when I quoted the opinion of some of the Judges of the High Court. With reference to this aspect of the question, there are four points to be considered:—(1) the raising of the interest on money from 12 to 18 per cent; (2) whether there should be any modification in respect of the amount of interest awardable till the date of suit in the case of money; (3) whether there should be any limit to the amount of interest awardable after suit; and (4) whether compound interest under certain circumstances may be awarded. Under the last three heads, I heard no objection. * * I did not hear anything about the interest being equal to the principal before the date of suit. So that, practically, the whole discussion centres on one point, as to what the interest should be—12 or 18 per cent. In order that there may not be any distinction between money and paddy—probably it may be said there need be no logic in legislation—the interest on money has been raised from 12 to 18 per cent. and the interest on paddy reduced from 20 to 18 per cent. That was the line of my argument and I did not advance any other. So far as I could gather, the House seems to be against 18 per cent. in the case of money. I think that whether it should be 18 or 12 per cent. is a matter which could be very carefully threshed out in the Select Committee. I can assure my friends on the other side of the House—and I think those who were with me during the Select Committee discussion on the High Court Regulation Amendment Bill will agree—that if we are able to convince one another of the hardship or inconvenience or the absence of necessity of any particular measure, we generally agree and bring the Bill to a shape which would be acceptable to the public. The mere fact that a Bill has been introduced here does not prevent the Council from discussing it at a later stage. We are at the most preliminary stage now. The Bill has to be threshed out by the Select Committee; the Bill has to come again to the Council and it has to pass it once, twice and thrice. The members need not entertain any doubt that it is going to be passed into law as 18 per cent. Members do know that, under the Legislative Council Regulation, the Bill is not going to become law unless the Council passes it.

"Now I pass on to the next point, i. e., the part relating to the Rule Committee, about which much was said. I only said that the object in putting in that provision was that the time of the Council need not be taken up in making small amendments that may be required in a Regulation of this kind. * * *

"If the House is not agreed to the provision regarding the Rule Committee, I am not for delegating it to that authority. I never meant that the power of the House should be delegated to some other Committee. But I may explain that the ordinary substantive portion of the Regulation is in the main part and the purely procedure portion of it is in another part. These matters of detail, I thought, might be safely left to the Rule Committee and that they might very well be left to be decided by members of the High Court and the legal profession. But if that is not acceptable to the House, it is open to the Select Committee to delete that part, as has, on many other previous occasions, been done when Bills were referred to Select Committees.

"The only question that now remains is with regard to the form. * * * The question naturally asked is why we should adopt this form. A great deal was said about the form in which the Bill was presented. It was said that very great difficulty would be felt in mastering it. With all deference to my learned friends, may I say that it is not so difficult as they imagine? For a few months there may be some difficulty. But it should not be supposed that it will be stamped as a piece of legislation which will be perpetually confounding to all practitioners.

"Let me say what the Bill contains. One or two Sections deal with important matter; every detail connected with that matter is provided for under a particular Order as Rules. Matters connected with the forms for entertaining a suit, the production of a document, execution, etc., are provided for in the main body and the corresponding details under the head 'Orders'. These could be referred to without much difficulty. But then, my friend asks "why is it tha put it in this form?" * * *
Before I drafted the Bill, I had cussion, as I said, with the late Justice who was acquainted with C and British Indian Codes. I disc with him on two days about the re advantages or disadvantages of this : He said that he was attentively ening to every one of my arguments after that he stated that this parti form must be adopted. If my friends to the English Law they will find tha whole thing there is in the form of O and Rules. If I am accused of slavis itation of British Indian Law, I plead g along with eminent judges and jurists.

"If any practising lawyer has to re Travancore Law Reports to argue a cas first thing he does is to take up the B Indian Code. He finds that most of Orders and Rules of the British Ir Code are referred to there. The late ( Justice, therefore, advised me very seri and strongly that I should adopt this in the matter of the Civil Procedure ( so that we might have the benefit of rulings of eminent and learned judges in England and India. Therefore this f was adopted. There is nothing in i harmful as my friends would suppose. my friends have read the City Municipa Act or the Local Boards Act or any the recent legislative enactments in Bri India, they will find that the substan portion is put in the body of the Act and rest in the form of schedules which ma modified. Whatever may be the age that has to modify it, whether it is the Le lative Council or the Government, so fa these minor matters are concerned, t are relegated to a separate portion of Act instead of being bound up with the portant portion thereof. This appeale me to a great extent. I know that ther only one High Court in Travancore jurisdiction of which is not so large as t of British Indian Courts. The substant and important portion is all under one h and the processual and unimportant portion under another head. We have only to remember about thirty or forty Orders which any lawyer can master. * What I, therefore, appeal to this House is not to oppose the Bill on this solitary ground. In British India also there are numerous litigants and lawyers; and, after this new Code in its present form was introduced, they were able to become familiar with it in a few months. The Order system is more methodical, more satisfactory and easier for reference, and we shall be in a position to pick it up without difficulty. By so doing we get, in the words of the late Chief Justice, the advice of the best legal talent in India and England for nothing. I ask the House, if it would, for the mere sake of technical form, reject this Bill which is in the best legal form and ask me to do the laborious task of rearranging, amending and presenting it in another form; I appeal to the House to say whether, to save the trouble of mastering it in a month or two, it would have the whole Bill rejected and wait till a new Bill is introduced in the Council. Personally I shall be glad as the drafting of such a Bill would take a long time and I shall be spared the trouble and worry of steering it through the Select Committee and through this Council.

"We have spent a lot of money in preparing the present Bill. I repeat that I discussed the matter with the late Chief Justice whom I consider to be a very learned jurist, before I made up my mind to adopt this particular form, and I think that we should take note of the respect that is due to him before we reject this Bill. In our previous enactment on the subject we adopted the British Indian Act in the form in which it was enacted then. I do not see why we should not do the same thing now. If the substance is acceptable the form is immaterial. It is open to the Select Committee consisting of a large number of learned members of this House to modify the Bill in any way they choose except of course the form. I have said what I have to say in the matter and I am quite confident that the members will exercise their sound judgment before voting on the motion now before them."

After some further discussion, the Bill was read in Council and referred to a Select Committee.— L. C. P. dated 21-11-1922.

II. Leave to introduce the Bill was applied for and granted at the meeting of the Council held on 13-3-1919 (T. G. G., dated 15-4-1919). The Bill was published in the Gazette dated 13-6-1922. It was read in the Council and referred to a Select Committee on 21-11-1922 (L. C. P., Vol. II, Pp. 80—138). The Select Committee's Report was published on 13-1-1925. It was presented to, and considered by, the Council on 13-2-1925 (L. C. P., Vol. VI, Pp. 1188—1211). At the same meeting, the Bill was finally read and passed.

Regn. X of 1100. I. Objects and Reasons.—The Code of Civil Procedure Bill passed by the Legislative Council in its last session is to come into operation on the 1st day of Chingom 1101. It is a long and important measure affecting even the details of the procedure in Civil Courts. Representation has been received by Government for the postponement of the commencement of the measure. It is felt that it will be advantageous for all parties concerned, the Courts, litigants and practitioners, that they are allowed ample time to acquaint themselves with the measure after its publication as a Regulation. Hence the present Bill is drafted to postpone the commencement of the Code of Civil Procedure to the 1st Medom 1101.— S. O & R.

II. The Bill was published in the Gazette dated 11-8-1925. It was read in Council on 13-8-1925 (L. C. P., Vol. VII, Pp. 855-858). At the same meeting, it was taken up for consideration as the Bill being a short one it was considered unnecessary to refer it to a Select Committee. The Bill was considered, and an amendment for substituting 'Makarom' for 'Medom' was moved and passed. The Bill was finally read and passed on 14-8-1925 (L. C. P., Vol. VII, P. 954). The Regulation was published in the Gazette dated 18-8-1925.

Regn. III of 1101: I. Objects and Reasons.—"When the Code of Civil Procedure Regulation, VIII of 1100, was passed by the Council, matters which under the Legislative Council Regulation were beyond the purview of that body were excluded from that enactment. Amongst these matters were suits by or against the Sripadam Palace, the execution by the Travancore Courts of foreign decrees, suits in Travancore Courts by or against the Imperial Government or Indian Princes in alliance with the Imperial Government and the execution of decrees in such Courts. To lay down the procedure in such matters, the Amendment Regulation was passed.—

A. R., 1101 M. E. P. 66.

II. The Amending Regulation was passed by Her Highness the Maha Rani Regent, under Section 20 of Regulation II of 1097, and was published in the Gazette dated 2-3-1926.

III. The Sections of Regulation III of 1101 are embodied in this Code.—Vide Section 38-A, Explanation to Section 64, 66-A, 66-B, 67-A, 67-B, 99-A, 99-B, 99-C, and Schedule.

Preamble: I.

There is nothing in the Civil Procedure Code which will justify the inference that the term "Court" has been used by the Legislature as synonymous with "Civil Court". The Code (Regulation II of 1065) uses the expression "Civil Court" in several Sections. Section 580 [new Section 100] exempts a Magistrate from arrest under civil processes while going to, presiding in or returning from his Court. The term "Courts" in Section 269 [=Or. XXI, r. 50] which, in its ordinary meaning will apply both to Civil and Criminal Courts has been held to include Criminal Courts as well. The reason is stated to be to avoid unseemly conflict between the Courts. The Criminal Procedure Code contains p sions for the determination of claims t tached property. The effect of an c passed on claims under the Criminal cedure Code is the same as that of an c passed under the Civil Procedure C Both are final unless set aside by the de of a Civil Court.

"It is an undoubted rule of constru that when the language of the ena Sections of a statute is clear, the term the Preamble cannot be called in to strict their operation or cut them do (11 All., 262).

"I believe it to be an axiom that body of a Bill is not to be construed b Preamble, or, to put it more guardedl the Preamble provides for a wider misc than the Bill in its Sections enacts, you not to give those Sections a wider scope t their language properly interpreted j fies" (14 All., 154). "But the Preamb undoubtedly a part of the Act and may used to explain it, and is, as Lord Coke s a key to open the meaning of the make the Act, and the mischiefs it was inter to remedy, but, on the other hand, altho it may explain, it cannot control the acting part which may and often does beyond the Preamble" (1 Hare's Repo 196).

It is therefore clear that if the w "Court" includes a Criminal Court in ordinary meaning of the word, the I amble cannot be resorted to for the pur of limiting its meaning by excluding minal Courts, unless there are strong wo in the Preamble indicating the intentio the Legislature to control the effect of enacting portion. The Preamble to Civil Procedure Code is very short as such preambles are, and there is no gen rule that the Preamble can restrict comprehensive words of the enacting cla "But the Preamble cannot either rest or extend the enacting part when the la uage and the object and the scope of Act are not open to doubt. It is not usual to find that the enacting part is exactly co-extensive with the Preamble. In many Acts of Parliament, although a particular mischief is recited, the legislative provisions extend beyond it. The Preamble is often no more than a recital of some of the inconveniences and does not include any others for which a remedy is given by the statute. The evil recited is 'but the motive for legislation'; the remedy may both consistently and wisely be extended beyond the cure of that evil; and if, on a review of the whole Act a wider intention than that expressed in the Preamble appears to be the real one, effect is to be given to it notwithstanding the less extensive import of the Preamble" (Maxwell).—

II.

1. The Code of Civil Procedure deals only with adjective law.—

2. 'It is not uncommonly thought that it is sufficient to defeat an application or to reverse an order that no particular Section of the Code can be cited as an authority for it.'

'The Courts are not to act upon the principle that every procedure is to be taken as prohibited unless it is expressly provided for by the Code, but on the converse principle that every procedure is to be understood as permissible till it is shown to be prohibited by law. As a matter of general principle, prohibitions cannot be persumed.' (5 All. 172).

The Civil Procedure Code certainly binds the Court so far as it goes. If the Code prescribes a particular course, in a particular case, that course must be followed. If it contains an express prohibition, it must be given effect to. Each case has to be determined with reference to its own circumstances.—

3. The Civil Procedure Code is not exhaustive.—

4. The Code of Civil Procedure is a law prima facie laying down procedure, and substantive rights and rights of suit, which may be independently shown to exist, cannot, in the absence of express words, be held to have been abrogated by such a Code (F. B.).—30 T. L. R., 91 (4 T. L. J., 305).

5. The Code of Civil Procedure purports to be a statute which consolidates and amends the laws relating to the Procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature (F. B.).—

6. Where there is any precedent of the High Court which contains a definite expression of opinion on a disputed point of law or procedure, it ought to be followed in preference to any pronouncement of a foreign Court which, though entitled to the highest respect, has no binding force on the Travancore High Court, particularly when the two come into conflict with each other.—

42 T. L. R., 29 (16 T. L. J., 10).

7. It would not be wise to depart from a sound rule which has been settled law for several years, merely because a different view has been taken by the Courts in British India.— 16 T. L. J., 221.

8. Under the maxim 'Nova Constitutio, Futurin formam imponere debet, non-preteritis' (a new state of the law ought to affect the future, not the past), normally, Statutes are prospective and not retrospective in their operation. They are not to be so interpreted as to have a retrospective operation, unless they contain clear and express words to that effect, or the object, subject-matter, or context shows that such was their object. This rule is based on the presumption that the Legislature would not intend what is unjust. The rule prevails chiefly where the enactment would prejudicially affect vested rights, or the legal character of past transactions or impair contracts. It is, however, inapplicable to laws relating to procedure and form. Such statutes are, as a rule, retrospective in their operation, unless the contrary is expressed or there be some good reason against it. No one can be said to have any vested right in any particular form of procedure. It has however to be remembered that even procedural laws cannot be given restrospective effect if they tend to interfere with vested rights, unless they contain express provisions warranting the same. In procedural laws, retrospective effect should not be given in case the application of the new procedure will prejudice rights established under the old.— 17 T. L. J., 229.

9. While on the one hand it would be a dangerous doctrine to lay down a hard and fast rule to the effect that a criminal trial or enquiry should of necessity be stayed, simply because a civil suit has been instituted between the parties in which some of the matters in issue in the criminal case would have to be determined, it cannot be denied that, in some cases, it would be obviously undesirable to allow the same dispute to be fought out in two Courts, viz., the Civil and the Criminal.

It is unsafe to lay down a general rule that no stay of criminal proceedings can be ordered when the civil suit can be instituted later.

The objection that once the criminal proceedings against accused are stayed he will be in no hurry to bring the civil litigation to a close cannot hold good where the complainant himself has started the civil proceedings.

It is entirely within the discretion of the Magistrate to stay proceedings till the disposal of the civil suit and the High Court will not interfere unless the discretion has been exercised arbitrarily so as to defeat or hamper justice.— 17 T. L. J., 911.

10. Statutes are prima faci e prospective and not retrospective in their operations, unless a clear intention to the contrary is made out from the wording thereof. Even in cases where a retrospective operation is clearly gatherable from the wording, statute should not be construed so as have a greater restrospective operati than its language renders necessary. T) only exception to this rule is with respe to procedural statutes. Even as regar them no retrospective operation could given effect to, if they interfere with righ already vested in the parties.—

18 T. L. J., 72

III.

1. It is an elementary canon of inte: pretation of statutes that "expressions usc by the Legislature must be taken to be nc referring to the same matter but as bein mutually exclusive. Where analogot words are used each may be presumed t be susceptible of a separate and distinc meaning, for the Legislature is not sur posed to use words without meaning." "I has been justly remarked that where pre cision is required, no safer rule can be fol lowed than always to call the same thin by the same name. It is, at all events reasonable to presume that the same mean ing is intended for the same expression i every part of an Act" (Maxwell).—

2. If is an elementary canon of interpretation of statutes that the language usec therein has to be construed as it stand and its ordinary sense could not be strained by the importation of new words with a view to limit or enlarge the scope of the provisions contained therein.—

3. Where the marginal notes are not inconsistent with the plain meaning of the Section, they can be referred to.—

4. In interpreting statutes, it has to be remembered that there are certain other rules which are no less fundamental than the rule of literal interpretation. "It is in the last degree improbable that the Legislature would overthrow fundamental principles, infringe rights or depart from the general system of law, without expressing its intention with irresistible clearness; and to give any such effect to general words, simply because they have that meaning in their widest or usual or natural sense, would be to give them a meaning in which they were not really used. General words and phrases, therefore, however wide and comprehensive in their literal sense, must be construed as strictly limited to the actual objects of the Act, and as not altering the law beyond." (Maxwell). Under this rule, the learned author has cited numerous instances in which words and phrases of general import, such as "any Court", "every person," "all persons," "any act or thing whatever," "any agent", "every matter in dispute," &c., were given only restricted meaning when that was found to be the intention of the Legislature.

"The literal construction then, has, in general, but a prima facie preference. To arrive at the real meaning, it is always necessary to get at an exact conception of the aim, scope and object of the whole Act; to consider, according to Lord Coke, (1) What was the law before the Act was passed? (2) What was the mischief or defect for which the law had not provided? (3) What remedy Parliament has appointed? and (4) The reason of the remedy. According to another authority, the true meaning is to be found, not merely from the words of the Act, but from the causes of the necessity of its being made which are to be ascertained not only from a comparison of its several parts, but also from extraneous circumstances. The true meaning of any passage, it is said, is to be found not merely in the words of the passage, but in comparing it with every other part of the law, ascertaining also what were the circumstances with reference to which the words were used, and what was the object appearing from those circumstances, which the Legislature had in view." (Maxwell).—

N. B.—1. In the Notes are given, for facility of reference, the corresponding Sections of Regulation II of 1065, the Sections, Orders and Rules of the Indian Code (Act V of 1908) and the English Rules taken from the 1925 Edition of "the Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court." These are enclosed within square brackets. The figures given first (in ordinary type) refer to the Sections of the old Regulation, those given next (in italics) denote the Sections, Orders and Rules of the Indian Code, and the last set of figures, the English Orders and Rules. Where there is no corresponding provision in the old Regulation or in the Indian Code, the mark [,,] is used to denote the same.

2. Wherever the old Regulation or the Indian Code differs from the existing Regulation, the Sections and Rules of the former are given in full or the differences duly noted. In other cases, the provisions in the three enactments may be taken to be the same.

3. In view to an understanding of the provisions of the Regulation, explanations, wherever forthcoming, are also given in the Notes. For this purpose, the following have been utilised :—

3. Of the terms defined in Regulation II of 1065, the following have been omitted:—"Written" and "Immovable property." The latter expression was thus defined in the old Regulation:—"'Immovable property' includes decrees relating to immovable property." And, in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, it was observed that the term was so defined "in order to remove a doubt which would otherwise arise as to whether the procedure to be adopted in sales of decrees for immovable property is that prescribed for sales of movables or immovables".— Para 6.

Sec. 2 (2): I. The definition of the term in Regulation II of 1065 was the same as in the British Indian Code of 1882. It was as follows :—

"'Decree' means the formal expression of an adjudication upon any right claimed, or defence set up, in a Civil Court, when such adjudication, so far as regards the Court expressing it, decides the suit or appeal. An order rejecting a plaint, or directing accounts to be taken, or determining any question mentioned or referred to in Section 238, but not specified in Section 557, is within this definition : an order specified in Section 557 is not within this definition."

[Section 238 corresponds to Section 40 of the present Regulation, and Section 557 to Section 82 and Order XLII, Rule 1.]

II. In regard to the new definition, the Notes on Clauses say :—

"The definition of decree does not introduce any great change. The only noteworthy addition in the existing definition is to state that there might be composite as well as simple, preliminary and final decrees, with a definition of what is a preliminary decree."

III. The new definition is the same as that in the British Indian Code of 1908. The Indian Special Committee observed in their Report :—" The importance of the definition of the word 'decree' rests on the fact that, by reference to it, the right of appeal is determined. ;The Committee have, in the main, adhered to the existing definition; but they have modified it in two respects, and this has involved a slight recasting of the language. The principal modification aims at permitting an appeal from an adjudication which purports to settle the rights of the parties, though it does not completely dispose of the suit. Such an adjudication the Committee describe as a preliminary decree.

" The Explanation is intended to make it clear that a decree may be partly final and partly preliminary. Thus a decree for the possession of immovable property and for mesne profits would be of this mixed character.

"'The word 'within' has been substituted for 'mentioned or referred to in' with a view to bring within the definition of decree, orders against sureties and orders as to court-fees in pauper suits and thus providing for appeals therefrom.

" The only other modification is for the purpose of excluding a right of appeal from an order of dismissal for default."

[See Section 109 of the Regulation and Order XXXIII, Rule 13].

IV. 1. " The decree supersedes the contractual relation by a command which is the voice of the Sovereign in the concrete case, just as a statute is the same voice in a general rule. Thus a relation constituted by a decree stands on the same footing as the firmest ownership." (8 Bom., 308).—

Therefore, a suit to set aside a[n or]der passed in execution proceedings ma[king] the representatives of a deceased judgm[ent-] debtor liable to a decree passed against [the] debtor personally, on the ground that [the] representatives were in possession of as[sets] belonging to the estate of the decease[d, is] not maintainable (F. 4. Money realized in execution of [a] decree was ordered to be paid to the ho[lder] of another decree.

Held.—The order was one as betw[een] rival decree-holders and did not fall un[der] Section 238 of the Civil Procedure C[ode] [new Section 40]. Such an order did [not] fall within the term " decree " as defi[ned] by the Code and no appeal or special ap[peal] lay against such an order. Held.—The objection was one which ought to have been disposed of under Section 320 of the Civil Procedure Code [=Order XXI, r. 96], after the claim was numbered and registered as a suit between C and D (the decree-holders) as plaintiffs and A and B (the objectors) as defendants.

* The omission of the lower Court to number and register a claim as a suit, was tantamount to a rejection of the plaint and the order of the lower Court was, therefore, appealable.— 13 T. L. R., 76.

6. An order of abatement passed by an Appellate Court (which in the case included an order for costs also) is a final order from the date on which the limitation is to run for the execution of the decree of the original Court.

The definition of decree in the Civil Procedure Code includes the proceedings of the Court finally disposing of the suit so long as it remains upon the record.

The terms "decree" and "order" as used in the Limitation Regulation are not defined in the Regulation nor in the General Clauses Regulation and the definitions in the Civil Procedure Code are strictly speaking not applicable to the Limitation Regulation (F. B.).— 18 T. L. R., 119.

7. When the representatives of the deceased plaintiff applied for permission to be brought on record and to prosecute the suit, the Munsiff passed an order of abatement under Section 350, Civil Procedure Code, [=Or. XXII, r. 3 (2)], on the ground of limitation bar. The District Court reversing the Munsiff's order directed the impleading of the petitioners and re-trial of the suit. On the contention of the defendant that no appeal lay against the order:

Held.—The order of abatement under the first part of Section 350 was appealable as it was virtually a decree and disposed of the plaintiff's claim as completely as if the suit had been dismissed. The order put the suit completely out of Court and was as final as formal adjudication on the merits until set aside. Thus, it fell within the definition of a decree and as such appealable.— 21 T. 9. Where an appeal had been dismissed for default by the District Judge and where subsequently the petition for restoration of the appeal had also been dismissed:

Held.—The aggrieved party had no right of second appeal to the High Court, but his remedy was under Section 557, C. P. C., Clause 27, [=Section 82 & Or. XLIII, r. 1 (25)], to prefer an appeal from the order refusing to re-admit the appeal.

The effect of the order of dismissal for default by the lower Court seems to be that the appeal was simply struck off the file. It was equivalent to saying the Court refuses to entertain or to consider the appeal. The order is no doubt final; it is the formal expression of a decision of a Civil Court. It is not a decree; for if it were, there would be no need to make a special provision for it in Section 557 (27). It is not a decree because it is not 'an adjudication upon any right claimed'—an adjudication meaning a decision arrived at on a full consideration of the evidence and law in support of a claim.

An application for re-admission of an appeal is nothing more than a review of the order appealed against.— 23 T. L. R., 80.

10. An order dismissing an appeal for default under Section 527 C. P. C. [=Or. XL, r. 16], is not a decree and is therefore not appealable.

A decree must be an adjudication on the right claimed or defence set up on the merits or on a question of law affecting the merits and not an adjudication on a mere right or defence relating to matters of procedure (F. B.).— 25 T. L. R., 83.

11. Where the lower Court dismissed the petitioner's (1st defendant's) application to value the suit according to the market value of the properties :

Held.—As the order in question did not decide the case, it could not be revised by the High Court under Section 568, C. P. C., [new Section 89]. The above order is not one against which an appeal is allowed by Section 557 [=Or. XLII, r. 1 and Section 82].— K P., 247.

12. A decree was passed by the District Judge in a suit for settlement of partnership accounts defining the shares of and fixing the amounts due to each partner. The decree further provided that such of the partners, who were authorised to execu[te the] decree, should pay within 2 months [from] the date of preparation of the decre[e the] Court-fee payable on the sum of m[oney] awarded them by the decree, and on fa[ilure] of payment within the time so fixed should not execute the decree. This d[ecree] was passed on the 18th Chingom [...] Against this decree two appeals wer[e pre]ferred, and in appeal an order was p[assed] on the 1st Meenom 1082, which, inter [alia] altered the shares of the several partn[ers] fixed by the Court of first instance, directed accounts to be taken for ascer[tain]ing the exact amounts that will be d[ue to] each partner on the footing of the findi[ngs of] the Appellate Court as regards the nu[mber] of shares of the several parties. Subse[quent] to this order the original plaintiff died [and] his representatives were not imple[aded] within the time allowed by law. On [the] 3rd of Mithunom 1084, the Appellate C[ourt] held that the appeals had abated, and [dis]missed both the appeals.

The 4th defendant and the legal r[epre]sentatives of the 5th defendant appli[ed to] the Court of first instance on 4—7—108[.. for] execution of its decree and prayed fo[r ex]tension of the time fixed for paymen[t of] court fee due from them. The Court g[rant]ed their prayer. On appeal :

Held.—(1) The provison in the ori[ginal] decree fixing the time within which c[ourt] fee was to be paid was a surplusage, an[d the] penalty provided for non-payment of C[ourt] fee was illegal.

(2) The Court was competent to ex[tend] the time for payment of Court fee even [after] the expiry of the period originally fixe[d].

(3) The decision of the High Court, d[ated] 1st Meenom 1082, was a decree as de[fined] by Section 2, C. P. C., for that decision [is] the formal expression of an adjudic[ation] upon the right, namely, the right of t[he parties] declared to have a particular share clai[med] in the appeals. That decision may, in [any] case, be regarded as a preliminary judg[ment] which is binding upon the parties. [The] binding force of such a judgment dep[ends] upon general principles of law.

(4) The decree of the Court of first instance was superseded by the preliminary order of the High Court, dated 1-8-82, in respect of the shares to which each partner was entitled, and that order was binding on the parties.— 1 T. L. J., 169.

13. Orders allowing a suit or an appeal to be withdrawn are not decrees as defined in the Civil Procedure Code, and are, therefore, not liable to appeal as decrees. They are also not orders against which an appeal is provided for by Section 557, C. P. C., [=Section 82 and Or. XLII, r.1] and hence such orders are liable to revision by the High Court.— 2. T. L. Members of a joint Hindu family cannot be regarded as representing each other even during their life-time, so as to make each competent to validly assign decrees made in favour of any other.

An assignment of a decree made by unauthorised persons cannot be subsequently ratified by the decree-holder, when the same has not been made for and on behalf of the latter, especially when the ratification will prejudice creditors who have attached the decree before the ratification.— 6 T. L. J., 197.

16. A suit was withdrawn without permission being obtained to file another as mentioned in the second paragraph of Section 357 C. P. C. [=Or. XXIII, r. 1].

Held.—An order passed on such a withdrawal was not an appealable order under Section 557 [=Section 82 & Or. XLII, r. 1].

Such an order was not a decree.— 7 T. L. J., 6.

17. An order rejecting an appeal under Section 521 of the Civil Procedure Code [=Or. XL, r. 10] for failure to deposit the costs of the respondents in appeal within the time allowed for the same is neither a decree as defined by Section 2 nor an order falling within any of the Clauses of Section 557. An appeal on the above order is incompetent.—

18. Plaintiff, who got a decree, obtained delivery of properties in execution. In appeal, the decree was discharged and the suit remanded for impleading additional parties.

The defendants applied for the properties being re-delivered to them. The lower Court refused this prayer and allowed the plaintiffs to be in possession on their giving security for mense profits.

Held (on appeal by defendants).—Though an order under Section 583 [=Or. XL, r. 22] may not be a decree when the question is what is the nature of the appeal that should be filed from such an order, yet it satisfies all the other requisites of a decree as defined in Section 2. The Civil Procedure Code is not exhaustive; and though in terms Section 552 [new Section 108 (1)] would not apply, yet by analogy, its provisions must be extended to an order under Section 583.

As the decree in favour of the plaintiff had been reversed he must restore the benefit he had derived under that decree and the defendants' right to claim restitution was one which the Court has no discretion to refuse.

"A decree of reversal by an Appellate Court contains, by necessary implication, a direction to the Court below to cause restitution to be made of all the benefits of which the successful party in the appeal was deprived by the enforcement of the erroneous decree of the Court of first instance." "The legal effect of a decree of reversal is that the party against whom the decree was given is to have restitution of all that he has been deprived of under it." "The granting of restitution is not desoretionary; and the principle upon which the doctrine rests is that on reversal or supersession of the decree, the law raises an obligation on the party who received the benefit of the erroneous decree to make restitution to the other party for what he had lost".—

19. The District Court by a judgment dismissed an appeal before it for failure of the appellant to comply with an order directing him to deposit the day's costs of the respondent. A decree was also prepared in accordance with the judgment. A second appeal was preferred to the High Court.

Held.—No second appeal lay as there was in law, no decree passed by the District Judge in the appeal before him. The order dismissing the appeal was neither a decree as defined by Section 2 of the Civil Procedure Code nor an order falling within Section 557 [=Section 82 and Or. XLII, r. 1] of that Code, and was, consequently, not appealable.— 13 T. L. J., 396.

20. The original plaintiff having died, the present petitioners were impleaded as his legal representatives. On a subsequent date the defendant petitioned that these petitioners had been wrongly brought on record, and the Court, holding that the suit had abated on the death of the original plaintiff, directed the removal of the present petitioners from the array of parties.

Held.—The order directing the ment of the suit was virtually a decr was therefore appealable as such.—

Sec. 2 (3): 1. The term was defined as follows in Regulation II of 1065:—" 'Decree-holder' means any person in whose favour a decree or any order capable of execution has been made, and includes any person to whom such decree or order is transferred."

Sec. 2 (4): See Note under Section 3 Infra.

Sec. 2 (5): I. In Regulation II of 1065, the term was defined as follows :—" 'Foreign Court' means a Court situate beyond the limits of Travancore." This was reproduced in the original Bill. The Select Committee substituted the existing new definition. They said :—"The Agent to the Governor-General may hold a Court within the limits of Travancore. The definition as it stands may not exclude such a Court. Hence the amendment."

II. In the British Indian Code, Foreign Court "means a Court situate beyond the limits of British India which has no authority in British India and is not established or continued by the Governor-General in Council."

(6) "Foreign judgment" means the judgment foreign Court :

(7) "Government pleader" means a Sirkar Vakil includes also any Officer' appointed by Our Government to per all or any of the functions expressly imposed by this Code on Government pleader :

(8) "Judge" means the presiding Officer of a Civil C

(9) "Judgment" means the statement given by the J of the grounds of a decree or order :

(10) "Judgment-debtor" means any person against w a decree has been passed or an order capable of execution has made :

(11) "Legal representative" means a person who in represents the estate of a deceased person, and includes, where a p sues or is sued in a representative character, the person on wl the estate devolves on the death of the party so suing or sued :

Sec. 2 (7): The British Indian Code has the following :—"Government Pleader includes any officer appointed by......... ..imposed by the Code on the Government Pleader and also any pleader acting under the directions of the Government Pleader."

Sec. 2 (8): I. The definition follows the British Indian Code. The old definition was :—" 'Judge' means the presiding Officer of a Court," which was the same as in the Indian Code of 1882.

II. Section 19 of the Civil Courts Regulation says :—"No District Judge or Munsiff shall try any suit to or in which he is a party or personally interested, or shall adjudicate upon any proceeding connected with or arising out of such suit.

No District Judge shall try any appeal against a decree or order passed by himself in another capacity.

When any such suit, proceeding or appeal comes before any such Officer, he shall report the circumstances to the Court to which he is immediately subordinate.

The superior Court shall thereupon dispose of the case in the manner prescribed by the Code of Civil Procedure (Regul II of 1065)."

III. The Civil Courts Guide has th lowing Rules :—"502. Judges and Mu are strictly prohibited from trying wit the sanction from the High Court, sui cases to which their creditors or debtor directly or indirectly parties. All cases must be reported for the orde the High Court."

Rules 503 and 504 prohibit taking as ment of actionable claims and purcha property in Court auction.

Sec. 2 (10): Regulation II of 1065 d ed the term thus:—" 'Judgment-del means any person against whom a de or order has been made."

(12) "Mesne profits" of property means those profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received or might with ordinary diligence have received therefrom, together with interest on such profits, but shall not include profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession :

(13) " Order" means the formal expression of any decision of a Civil Court which is not a decree :

(14) " Pleader " means any person entitled to appear and plead for another in Court :

The Indian Code has the following words after the words "and includes"—"any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased and." These words have been omitted in the Regulation "as they would, if retained, unduly enlarge the scope of the term defined."— S. C. R.

II. In the Indian Code of 1882, there was no such definition. In the present Code, it was inserted by the Special Committee, and they said in their Report :—"The expression has been variously interpreted by the High Courts as would appear from the reported cases which are not easily reconcilable with one another. The Committee trust that the definition which has been added by them will set at rest what owing to the absence of any such definition from the present Code is a somewhat debatable point."

Sec. 2 (12): I. As in Section 211 of the Indian Code of 1882, this definition formed the Explanation to the corresponding Section 206 [=Or. XX, r. 12] in Regulation II of 1065. In the new Code, "the definition which is of general application has been removed to its proper place from the Explanation."

The definition in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—" 'Mesne profits' of property mean those net profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received, or, might, with ordinary diligence, have received therefrom ". The definition in the Indian Code of 1882 from which the above definition was taken, had at the end the words " together with interest on such profits ". These words were omitted from the above definition " for the reason that no interest is allowed on mesne profits by the recognised custom of the country ".— S. O. & R., Para 29.

II. The new definition reproduces that in the present Indian Code. In regard to the addition of the words " but shall not include......possession ", the Indian Special Committee observed that they " have altered the definition of 'mesne profits' so as to exclude from the calculation any increased rents and profits due to improvements made by the person in wrongful possession for which he cannot at present claim compensation from the rightful owner either by way of mitigation of damages or otherwise".

Sec. 2 (13) : Case Law.

Orders passed by the trial Court from time to time in purely interlocutory matters are not matters subject to review. The provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to reviews apply only to orders which satisfy the definition of an order in Section 2 of the Code. Such an order must be a decision, i. e., decision in a case or any part of a case. The order to examine a witness or to take a plan of the disputed property does not decide any part of the case before the lower Court. The order which led to the appeal before the lower Court was not an order passed on a review, and hence Rule 1 of Clause 27 of Order 42 did not apply to it.— 19 T. L. J., 865.

(15) "Prescribed" means prescribed by Rules :

(16) "Public officer" means a person falling under a of the following descriptions namely :—

(a) every Judge ;

(b) every officer holding a Commission from Us ;

(c) every officer of a Court of Justice whose dut is, as such officer, to investigate or report any matter of law or fact, or to make, auth ticate or keep, any document, or to take cha or dispose of any property, or to execute a judicial process, or to administer any oath, to interpret or to preserve order, in the Co and every person specially authorised by Court of Justice to perform any of such duti

(d) every person who holds any office by virtue which he is empowered to place or keep a person in confinement ;

(e) every officer of Our Government whose duty is, as such officer, to prevent offences, to gi information of offences, to bring offenders justice, or to protect the public health, saf or convenience ;

(f) every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, take, receive, keep or expend any property behalf of Our Government, or to make a survey, assessment or contract on behalf of O Government, or to execute any revenue-proce or to investigate, or to report on, any matt affecting the pecuniary interests of Our Gover ment, or to make, authenticate or keep a document relating to the pecuniary interests

Sec. 2 (16) : 1. The Explanation is an addition, not found in Regulation II of 1065.

(17) "Rules" means Rules and Forms contained in the First Schedule or made under Section 91:

(18) "Share in a corporation" shall be deemed to include stock, debentures or bonds: and

(19) "Signed", save in the case of a judgment or decree, includes stamped.

Subordination of Courts.

3. For the purposes of this Code, the District Court is subordinate to the High Court and every Civil Court of a grade inferior to that of a District Court is subordinate to the High Court and District Court.

---

Sec. 2 (19): The definition follows the British Indian Code. In Regulation II of 1095, "'Signed' includes marked, when the person making the mark is unable to write his name; it also includes stamped with the name of the person referred to".

Sec. 3 [=S. 2=S. 3]

I. In Regulation II of 1065, as in the Indian Code of 1882, this Section formed part of the definition of "District Court". In the present Indian Code, this has been made an independent Clause, "as the subordination of Courts is not strictly a matter of definition". This arrangement has been adopted here.

II. The definition in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"'District' means a Zillah or the local limits of the jurisdiction of a principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction: "District Court" means a Zillah Court; every Court of a grade inferior to that of a District Court shall, for the purposes of this Code, be deemed to be subordinate to the High Court and the District Court".

III. Sections 10 and 11 of the Civil Courts Regulation may be noted here:—"10. The District Court shall be deemed to be the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction within the local limits of its jurisdiction.

"11. The District Court, shall, subject to the general control of Our High Court, have control over all Munsiffs' Courts within the limits of its jurisdiction".

Case Law.

PART I.

Suits in General.

Jurisdiction of the Courts and Res Judicata.

7. (1) No person shall, by reason of his descent or place of birth, be in any civil proceeding exempted from the jurisdiction of any of the Courts.

Courts to try all civil suits unless barred.

(2) The Court shall (subject to the provisions herein contained) have jurisdiction to try all suits of a civil nature excepting suits of which their cognizance is barred by any enactment for the time being in force.

Explanation.—A suit in which the right to property or to an office is contested is a suit of a civil nature, notwithstanding that such right may depend entirely on the decision of questions as to religious rites or ceremonies.

„ (2) [ = S. 7 = S. 9 ]

I. 1. Sub-section (1) is the same as Section 6 of Regulation II of 1065. The British Indian Code has omitted this provision. The Indian Special Committee observed :—"The provisions contained in Section 10 of the Code were first enacted by Act XI of 1886 and were reproduced in the Code of 1859 and in subsequent Codes. In the opinion of the Committee, their retention is no longer necessary and they have been omitted."

2. The original Bill had omitted the provision. But the Select Committee restored the old Section, as they "thought it necessary to retain the same." Instead of making it a separate Section, the Committee made it a Sub-section.

3. Section 6 of the Civil Procedure Code [new Section 7 (1)] cannot be construed to mean that Civil Courts have unlimited jurisdiction in insolvency matters. The object of the Section is sufficiently indicated by the use of the words "by reason of his descent or place of birth." It refers only to personal jurisdiction [ 28 T. L. R., 87 (3 T. L. J., 45) ].

See also 10 T. L. J., 117, under Section 19 Infra.

II. 1. Sub-section (2) is the same as Section 7 in Regulation II of 1065; only the words used in the old Regulation in the beginning were "The Courts" and not "The Court." In the Indian Code also, the word "Court" is used in the plural.

2. In the Indian Code of 1882, the corresponding Section 11 was the same as Section 7 of the 1065 Regulation. In the present Indian Code, the wording is :—"The Courts shall......excepting suits of which their cognizance is either expressly or impliedly barred." There is no difference in the wording of the Explanation.

It may be noted that the original Bill adopted the wording of the present Indian Code. But the Select Committee "thought it desirable to retain the wording of the Section as in the old Regulation."

3. The words "barred by any enactment for the time being in force" were omitted in the present Indian Code, because the words made the Section too wide. 'It excludes only suits 'barred by any enactment'. There are many matters of a civil nature which are barred by general principles of law, such as those relating to Acts of State and public policy." The words were held to mean "expressly barred." They were therefore omitted, and the words "expressly or impliedly barred" substituted in their place.—

The latter class are within the cognizance of the Civil Courts of the country. When the executive acts happen to be contrary to law, it is the duty of the judicial power of the Sovereign which is represented by the Courts, to interfere and set them right. If the Courts have no jurisdiction over the wrongful acts of the Executive the subject will often remain without any remedy for infringement of his rights. The Courts, in sitting in judgment over such acts, 'simply act in obedience to the legislative and judicial will of the Sovereign' (F. B.).—

14. Certain lands in Travancore, belonging to the Tripunithura Devaswom, whereof His Highness the Raja of Cochin was the trustee, were originally assessed to revenue, but the disputes regarding the liability of the properties for tax were settled by mutual agreement between the Cochin Government and the Travancore Government. By this agreement, the arrears were agreed to be written off, and the practice was agreed to be continued in future. In the recent Revenue Settlement, the properties were assessed to revenue. In a suit brought by the Dewan of Cochin for a declaration that the imposition of tax was illegal, it was contended, on behalf of the Travancore Government, that the agreement was a political transaction, of the nature of a treaty between two independent States, and that, therefore, the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

Held (Over-ruling the contention).—The agreement was not a political, but an executive act. Even if it be regarded as a treaty obligation, the Civil Courts had jurisdiction under Section 7 of the C. P. C., as the suit was one of a civil nature, whose cognizance was not barred by any legislative enactment.— 2 T. L. J., 152.

Orders mentioned in Section 17 have reference only to those that are made for the protection of Government interests by way of exactions, fines and penalties and assessments prohibitory or otherwise.

Government being the absolute proprietor of all Poramboke lands can dispose of them in any manner they please.—

declared an outcaste and the first defendant, Sirkar, directed the second defendant, the Karanavan of plaintiff's Tarwad, to perform the Jeeva Sradhom of plaintiff and to dissociate him from all social functions and to forbid his residence in the Tarwad house. The Sirkar also declared that the plaintiff could not enter temples for purposes of worship. Plaintiff sued for a declaration that the decision in the Smartha enquiry was not binding on him on the ground that the persons who held the Smartha enquiry declared him guilty without taking his explanation or hearing him. The defendant Sirkar contended that the Civil Courts were not competent to question the legality of the order passed by Government inasmuch as the Smartha enquiry, based as it was on customary law, was properly conducted. The District Judge gave a decree as sued for holding that the Civil Courts were competent to question the legality of the order and that, as the decision in the Smartha enquiry was passed behind the back of the plaintiff, it was against natural justice.

Held.—The District Judge's decision was correct.

Per Hunt, O. C. J.—The right to enter a temple for the purpose of worship is a civil right which is vested in every member of a caste or community entitled to worship in such temple. The right is a purely personal one and gives a person whose right is infringed a remedy by way of suit.

Per Viraraghava Aiyengar, J.—A decision in a Smartha enquiry excommunicating a person behind his back on the strength of statements made against him and to which he was no party is opposed to natural justice and cannot be upheld.—

18. Suit by a Gowda Saraswat Brahmi for damages for wrongful expulsion fro membership of the Samooham of the Saraswat Brahmins of Parur, and for the wrongful act of the defendants in preventing hi from performing Upakarmam in the templ owned by the Samooham. Plaintiff, inter alia, also claimed damages for the loss of reputation entailed by the act of the defendants. Both the lower Courts dismissed the suit holding that it was of a nature not cognisable by the Civil Courts.

Held (in second appeal).—The suit was not outside the cognisance of Civil Courts.

"It seems difficult to maintain on principle that the membership of a Yogam or Samooham, is an interest unprotected by law, and may therefore be violated without incurring any legal liability. A Yogam or Samooham, like the one in question, is in essential respects analogous to an incorporated members' club. Both are voluntary associations of persons each of whom contributes to the funds out of which the expenses of conducting the societies are paid ........The members for the time being are jointly entitled to all the properties and funds of the Association, but their individual interests remain incapable of realisation until a dissolution takes place. Until then, their rights are merely to enjoy the use of the premises of the association and other privileges (if any) in accordance with the Rules so long as they duly pay their subscriptions and continue to be members".

"Yogams or Samoohams again have in common with clubs a certain measure of legislative autonomy. They may, within limits, lay down laws unto themselves to regulate many matters of constitution and internal management........These Rules operate as conventional law. They form part of the contract between the members ........An irregular or improper expulsion of a member from a Samooham or Yogam would, as in the analogous case of clubs, be remedied by our Courts. And this jurisdiction would be rested, as the Courts of Equity in England rest their jurisdiction to interfere in cases of wrongful expulsion from clubs, on the right of property vested in the member, of which he is unjustly deprived by the unlawful expulsion".

"If two or more persons agree to associate with one another they may either intend that the agreemet shall create legal rights and duties or they may not. In the latter case, the privilege of association is out of the pale of legal protection. In the former case, if the association does not possess property, there is no foundation for the exercise of the equitable jurisdiction of the Courts. But an action for damages would probably lie for breach of contract, if a member be wrongfully expelled. If however the association be possessed of property the equitable remedies of injunction and specific performance would be available to a member who is wrongfully expelled from it. Property in this connection would seem to include the rights obtained by members in consideration of their having paid their subscriptions to participate in the benefits of the society according to its Rules including the right of vote".

"As to the extent of the jurisdiction of Courts, the law is that where the Rules of the association provide for expulsion if the power be exercised in good faith for the benefit of the association, in strict conformity with its Rules, and in accordance with the principles of natural justice, the Court will not further interfere with its autonomy".

An action for damages for loss of reputation owing to a member's wrongful expulsion from a Yogam is also one that could be taken cognizance of by Civil Courts.—

19. Plaintiff's suit was against the Sirkar for money, being the value of three court fee stamps and one general revenue stamp which became spoiled and unfit for use, after they were purchased by the plaintiff, or in the alternative for the recovery of other stamp papers in their place. An application made to the Division Peishkar under Section 51 of the Stamp Regulation for refund of the amount sought to be recovered was rejected by that Officer on account of the plaintiff's refusal to substantiate his claim, as he was required to do.

The defendant, Sirkar, contended that the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, that even if they had, the plaintiff could not effectively invoke it, until he had exhausted all the remedies available to him under the Stamp Regulation, that the Peishkar was quite within his rights in calling for evidence to satisfy himself as to how the stamps got spoiled and that the effect of the plaintiff's refusal to act in accordance with the requisition is to put himself out of court.

Held.—A party aggrieved by the refusal of a Division Peishkar to grant any relief under Section 51 of the Stamp Regulation had no right to institute a suit in the Civil Court against the Sirkar or the Division Peishkar in respect of such relief.

Section 51 of the Stamp Regulation does not cast a duty on the Division Peishkar or create a correlative right in favour of an aggrieved party, but merely confers a power on the former which is exercisable in his discretion.--

Per Kochukrishna Marar, J.--Section 7 makes it clear that two conditions must exist to invest Courts with jurisdiction over suits. They are (1) the suits must be of a Civil nature; and (2) they must be such that their cognizance is not barred by any enactment for the time being in force. In order that a suit may be of a civil nature, it must be one based upon a right falling within the domain of private law and vested in the plaintiff. Likewise, a civil action is described as 'a proceeding in a Court of Justice in which one party, known as the plaintiff, demands against another party, known as the defendant, the enforcement or protection of a private right or the prevention or redress of a private wrong.' What is given by Section 51 of Regulation IV of 1080 is not a right, but a mere concession, which is incapable of forming the basis of any suit which could be called a suit of a civil nature.-- 34 T. 22. Per Sesha Aiyar, J.--If by an ac done by Government, with whom the Regu lation of the distribution of the water of a irrigation work rests, sensible injury is in flicted on a body of riparian owners by dim inishing the water supply which they hav hitherto utilised, the riparian owners in juriously affected have, under the commo law, a right of suit against Government and this right of suit is not lost by reaso of the provisions of the Irrigation Regula tion.

The one fundamental Rule of statutory construction--the Rule which at once de fines the office of the judiciary and mark the limit of their legitimate authority—is that the Court should seek out and enforce the true purpose and intention of the Legislature. The first endeavour must, of course, be to ascertain this intention from the language employed in the Act; and if this language is plain and free from doubt or obscurity, it must be taken as meaning exactly what it says, whatever may be the consequences. This is the cardinal rule, and though the statement of it is simple, its application in particular cases has not infrequently been found to be attended with difficulty by the Courts. Nothing is more familiar in legal hermeneutics than the rule that a thing may be within the letter of the statute, and yet not within the statute, because not within its spirit nor within the intention of its makers. A slavish adherence to the letter of a statute is dangerous and is avoided by the Courts when such adherence leads to strange, unexpected, absurd, or mischievous consequences irreconcilable with the spirit and reasons of the enactment; and Courts have in such cases the power to declare that a case which falls within the letter of the statute is not governed by the statute. In other words, the intention of the Legislature, although it may not be consistent with the exact and literal import of the language employed, must be enforced by the Court.

The riparian rights of a ryot are as much property as is his land or building. The ryot cannot be divested of his right of using the water, which is a property right, except by a constitutional exercise of the power to appropriate private property for public use on making compensation. The construction of works may be necessary for the distribution of water for irrigation: but statutory powers authorising the construction are meant to be exercised so as to cause as little damage as possible to existing rights: and in any given case where injury has resulted, it would be for Government to show that they could not exercise their statutory powers without injuring the property rights of the plaintiff.

When a defendant contends that the plaintiff's right of action has been taken away by a statutory enactment, the burden is upon him to show that the Act beyond all doubt has taken away such right; and if that burden is not discharged, the plaintiff's right of action must be held to subsist. It is a well-recognised rule that statutes which encroach on the rights of the subject, whether as regards person or property, should be interpreted so as to respect such rights. There is the highest authority for the principle that a statute must not be deemed to take away or extinguish existing rights, unless it appears by express words or plain implication that it was the intention of the Legislature to do so: and when the intention is not unequivocally expressed and there is no provision for compensation in the statute or the statute is silent about compensation, an intention to take away property should not be imputed to a Legislature.— 11 T. L. J., 91.

23. It is within the competence of Government to assess Cherikkal Jenmom lands in accordance with the Rules on the subject.

The action of Government in assessing the Jenmom Cherikkal lands for more than half the tax leviable on Sirkar Cherikkals was illegal. The jurisdiction of the Civil Court to remedy this illegality is not one ousted by Section 52 of the Revenue Recovery Regulation (F. B.).— 36 T. L. R., 174.

24. Plaintiff filed his suit on 6-11-1094 for setting aside an order of the Division Peishkar convicting him under Section 6 of the Land Conservancy Regulation for unauthorised occupation of Poramboke and sentencing him to a fine of Rs. 5 and ordering his eviction therefrom. The order was finally confirmed by the Dewan in Thulam 1093. The suit was dismissed by the District judge as barred under Section 18 of the Land Conservancy Regulation. The contention having been raised that the order was ultra vires, as the land in question was not Government land but the plaintiff's own and that, therefore, Section 6 had no application;

Held.—Section 18 of the Land Conservancy Regulation runs thus:—'No suit against Government shall be entertained in any of Our Civil Courts in respect of any order under this Regulation, except upon the ground that the land in respect of which such order has been passed is not a land which is the property of Government, whether a Poramboke or not: Provided that Civil Courts shall not take cognisance of any such suit, unless it shall be instituted within one year from the date on which the cause of action arose". Thus an order passed under the Regulation could be impeached by suit only on two conditions being satisfied, namely, (1) that the ground of relief is that the land dealt with by the order is not Government land, and (2) that the suit is instituted within one year of the date of the order.

The setting aside of an order passed under the above Regulation, in the manner contemplated therein, should form the groundwork of such other relief or reliefs that may be granted by the Courts to private individuals, and therefore, if the prayer to set aside the order is barred, the foundation for the suit falls to the ground.

The suit having been brought more than one year after the order complained of, was not maintainable.

Per Sesha Aiyar, J.—In the construction of a statute, in order to determine the true intention of the Legislature, the whole and every part of the statute must be considered. This rule is of primary importance and has long been settled. A statute should be read with reference to its leading idea, and its general purpose and intention should be gathered from the whole Act, and this predominent purpose will prevail over the literal import of particular terms or classes, if plainly apparent, operating as a limitation upon some and as a reason for expanding the signification of others, so that the interpretation may accord with the spirit of the entire Act, and so that the policy and object of the statute as a whole may be mad fectual and operative to the widest po extent.

Though the successful applicant run risk of the decision in his favour being on appeal, yet in order to divest him vested right,the proceedings in appeal conform strictly to the provisions of 36 of the Puduval Rules.

In this case, the appeal having not filed within 2 months of the decision o Tahsildar and the appellate order h contained no reference to the appeal preferred after the time and not h therefore excused such delay, the Pei (the appellate authority) must be hel have had no jurisdiction to entertain appeal and his order, passed without j diction, is a nullity.

Per Raman Tampi, J.—Following observations of Sir Arnold White, C. 29 Mad. 461 at p. 464—" It does not f that, because it is not open to a Civil C to cancel a Pattah because some of the malities of the rules have not been ob ed, it is not open to a Civil Court to aside the order of an appellate Rev Tribunal which allows an appeal against a grant by a Revenue Officer on the ground of irregularity of procedure, if the Court is of opinion that there is no evidence of irregularity; it also does not follow that, because it would not have been open to a Civil Court to interfere if the Tahsildar had declined to make the grant on the ground of irregularity of procedure, it is not open to a Civil Court to interfere when a grant is set aside by the appellate authority on the ground of irregularity of procedure if the Court is of opinion that there is no irregularity. If no grant has been made, there is no contract. If a grant has been made, there is a conditional contract."

In the absence of precise provisions in the Puduval Rules, the only grounds, which would justify interference with the Tahsildar's order, are those of fraud, misrepresentation or mutual mistake as to an essential matter or non-compliance with the specific rules on the topic.

That this was the intention of the Government is clear from the deliberate omission on the part of Government to define and regulate the scope and extent of the Peishkar's powers in the Puduval Rules.

If Government should be held to have intended to invest Peishkars with autocratic powers, the very object of the rules would be defeated thereby and insecurity of tenure would result therefrom. The person who is entitled to the appeal must be a party who has an undoubted locus standi in the inquiry which culminated in the order objected to.

The delay in the presentation of the appeal cannot be excused, unless, having regard to all the circumstances, the appellant has been vigilant.

The above views do not conflict with the rights and interests of either Government or the law abiding citizen. They are based on considerations of justice, equity and good conscience which ought to be the guides in the absence of specific rules of customary or statute law.—14 T. L. J., 106.

Civil courts will not interfere when a spiritual right alone is affected. "If the result of an excommunication is to deprive a man of his civil rights, a Civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit brought to set aside such excommunication as illegal and to inquire into the merits of the case. But even here the jurisdiction is limited. All that the Court can inquire into is whether the order of excommunication was passed bona fide in accordance with natural justice, i. e., after a due hearing given to the party excommunicated, at a regularly convened meeting of the caste which passed the order, or by a person duly authorised by the caste to pass it, in accordance with either caste usage or rule, and for an offence against that usage or rule which the man excommunicated did, as a matter of fact, commit...... If these conditions are fulfilled, the Court must hold that the caste acted within its powers as a domestic tribunal with whose discretion it will not interfere—the Court in that case having jurisdiction to inquire from the point of view of the caste, not of the Court, into the reasonableness or justifiable character of the rule for a breach of which the order of excommunication was passed."

The Jacobite Syrian Church is a voluntary society who possesses a body of rules and a tribunal of their own for the purpose of regulating their internal concerns and enforcing discipline among their body.

Sec. 8 [ = S. 7-A = ,, ]

I. Section 1 of Regulation II of 1037 enacted that "the Civil Courts shall take cognizance of all suits of a civil nature, with the exception of suits of which their cognizance is barred by the laws and customs of Travancore." Civil Courts had no jurisdiction over Kandukrishi lands. With the enactment of Regulation II of 1065, Section 7 thereof authorised the Courts to try all suits of a civil nature unless their cognizance was barred by some enactment. In the absence of any enactment against the jurisdiction of Civil Courts over Kandukrishi lands and in view of the omission of the word 'custom' in the above Section 7, it was held, in 9 T. L. R., 142, that, under Section 7 of the new Code (Regulation II of 1065), Civil Courts had jurisdiction to try suits relating to Kandukrishi lands (26-11-1067). In 9 T. L. R., 169, it was held by a Full Bench that, under the Royal Proclamation, dated 4th Edavom 1061, the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to try suits relating to Viruthi lands, whether alienated or unalienated or even trespassed upon (26-11-1067). Para 8 of the Proclamation laid down that "no action shall lie respecting any such land." "Such" land was interpreted to mean all Viruthi lands whether alienated or not. It was observed in that case that "the scope and object of the Royal Proclamation, the special character of Viruthi tenure and the unlimited power of disposal the Government has over property of this description, point to the conclusion that the Legislature intended to divest the Civil Courts of jurisdiction over suits relating to Viruthi lands." In agreeing to the dismissal of the suit, T. Kunhiraman Nair, J. observed:—"The effect of the law as now interpreted by the Full Bench, is to deprive a large class of petty and poor landholders in the State of the protection afforded by the Civil Courts established in the country for settlement of disputes of a civil nature, while the declared general policy of Government has always been to make the possession of landed and other property as secure as possible. It is, I think, a matter for the serious consideration of Government and the Legislature, whether the existing law should not, in the interests of justice, be so amended as to enable the Viruthi holders to have recourse to the regularly constituted tribunals of the State for enforcing their rights as against private individuals, in connection with their Viruthi holdings, the prohibition enacted in the last Clause of Para 8 of the Royal Proclamation of 12th Kanni 1068 being restricted to suits against Government for anything done under its orders."

In 10 T. L. R., 60, it was held that the Full Bench ruling in 9 T. L. R., 169 applied only to such Viruthi lands as had been granted and settled under Para 6 of the Proclamation of 1061, and not to those remaining unsettled (2-4-1068).

In 12 T. L. R., 190, plaintiff sought the reversal of the decree of the lower Court which disallowed his claim to sell Viruthi lands in satisfaction of a hypothecation debt due to him from 1st defendant. It was contended for the appellant that the Viruthi lands not settled under the terms of the Proclamation on the subject being under the jurisdiction of the ordinary Civil Courts, they might properly be the subject of a private or public sale as any other species of lands. It was held that the question of jurisdiction over, and the question of alienability of, Viruthi or Inam lands had to be decided on different principles, and that such lands being held by the defendant on the condition of his rendering certain services to Government had been treated by immemorial usage as inalienable. (25-12-1070).

II. On 22-10-1070, the amending Regulation II of 1070 was passed. That Regulation added Section 7-A to Regulation II of 1065. The addition was thus explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons :—

"Section 2 of the Bill prohibits the Civil Courts from taking cognizance of suits relating to pensions, Kandukrishi, Viruthy and Service Inam lands, without the special order of Government. Before the present Code of Civil Procedure came into force, suits relating to Kandukrishi lands were not cognizable by the Courts. (A. S. Nos. 92 of 1043, 262 of 1044 and 148 of 1057.) Viruthy lands are a species of Service Inams. In British India, claims to Service Inams are exclusively adjudicated by the Revenue authorities (Madras Regulation VI o[f] Suits relating to hereditary pensio[n] not entertained by Civil Courts in [B] India, except under the sanction of G[overn]ment (Section 6 of Act No. 23 of 1871 [... con]sidering the peculiar nature of the v[arious] kinds of property referred to in this S[ection] and the absolute power of disposal the Government has, in theory, over it is expedient that suits relating to should be treated differently from suits. There may be cases in wh[ich] rights of the Government are involve[d ...] the dispute is confined to the rival cla[ims of] private individuals. In such a cas[e] Government may permit the par[ties to] establish their rights in Civil Courts the ordinary procedure. The absolu[te pro]hibition will throw upon the Gover[nment] the duty of adjudicating upon a ver[y] number of petty claims. The satisf[actory] discharge of this duty would be imp[ossible] in the ever-increasing work of the g[eneral] administration".

In regard to the Explanation, i[t was] observed by the Select Committee c[n the] amending Bill that "lands granted f[or] services could not be treated as S[ervice] Inam lands as the holder is not bo[und to] render service".

"The object of the Section evide[ntly is] that, as lands such as Kandukrish[i and] Viruthi are at the absolute disposal [of Go]verument, whenever any change in t[he dis]position, or even possession, of such l[ands is] sought for, it is the Government, w[hich is] fully competent to effect it at thei[r will], that should be applied to, and not th[e] Courts, except when Government c[hooses] to leave it to the latter, in the circums[tances] of particular cases, to grant redress.

" The words "relating to" in Secti[on ...] do not lend themselves to the constr[uction] that it is only where the lands them[selves] are sought to be affected by the decre[e that] Government sanction for the suit is ne[cessary]

In adding Section 7-A, the Government only adhered to their old policy. The severity of the law pointed out in 9 T. L. R., 169 continued.

III. The Section (7-A) as thus enacted was adopted in the original Bill which became the present Regulation (VIII of 1100). To this, the Select Committee added the Exception. The Committee said:– "The provision requiring sanction for all suits relating to Kandukrishi lands causes considerable delay and hardship to the registry holders of Kandukrishi pattom lands. With a view to minimise such delay and hardship, the Government have by their Rules, published at page 326 of Vol. II of the First Supplement to the Land Revenue Manual, provided that sanction may ordinarily be accorded to certain cases. This executive order may now be given legislative sanction".

IV. When the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee was considered by the Council, a motion was made by a Non-official Member to delete the Section, on the ground that no such restriction should be maintained. The Member in charge, in opposing the motion (which after discussion was lost) spoke as follows:— "* * Elsewhere, pensions are regulated by Pensions Act and the question of pension is entirely a matter between Government and the pensioner, and therefore it is that Government sanction is insisted upon in suits relating to pensions. So far as Servide Inam lands are concerned, I daresay that it will be readily conceded that sanction is necessary. The only question is about Kandukrishi lands. I daresay that the House knows that these lands are supposed to be the home-farm lands of the Sovereign, and so, they are at his entire disposal. When the Select Committee were at the Section, certain inconveniences and difficulties were brought pointedly to their notice. Therefore, to remedy those inconveniences and in accordance with the Rules that have been promulgated by Government themselves, the Select Committee thought it necessary to give exemption in certain cases, namely, in cases where the suit is for the recovery of the lands from mortgagee or lessee or for evicting a trespasser therefrom. In those cases, anybody is at liberty to sue without sanction. Even in the case of suits for the recovery of service lands from a mortgagee or lessee or for the eviction of a trespasser, this may be done, so that in respect of Service Inam lands in which the interests of Government will not be affected, suits are allowed to be filed without sanction. I think these are the ordinary cases in which the holders of Kandukrishi lands will be affected and for which Government sanction has hitherto been required. I think the exemption proposed by the Select Committee is quite ample; and I do not think it desirable to extend it further, for this reason also, that, if you extend it to Kandukrishi lands, it is open to defendant to say that the Sirkar is interested in the property and that it should be impleaded as a party and that the suit should be filed in the District Court and thus have it protracted. The provision, as it is, is to my mind also a safeguard, because so far as the ordinary Kandukrishi tenant is concerned, recovery from a mortgagee or a lessee or evicting a trespasser, these are ordinary cases in which the holder of Kandukrishi lands will have to file a suit.

"* * Government are not bound to recognise the partition unless it is declared by a Proclamation that these holders have got a permanent right of occupancy alienable, heritable and all that; consistent with that principle, it should not be allowed that a proprietor or a land-holder should be compelled to recognise the various sub-divisions of his estate. That being the case, in the case of partition, if Government should recognise the divisions of holdings, I say Government sanction would be required. Ordinary cases are met by the provision that has already been made. * *.

"Till now, there is no permanent right of occupancy. The relation is only that of an ordinary landlord and tenant. An ordinary landlord is not bound to recognise sub-divisions made by his tenants without his consent, if the tenant has not got heritable and alienable right as in the case of ryotwari holdings. So long as the lands are Government lands—Government may not evict—just as in the case of Jenmies and Edavakais, but the right to evict is there. When there is no permanent heritable or alienable right, I do not think it desirable. * *

" Every partition will have to be recognised and also sub-division. The apportionment of assessment will have to be made and other things contingent thereon. So long as the tenant has no permanent right of occupancy, the Government are not bound to recognise partition. That is why Government sanction is necessary. The point is that, if once a party gets Government sanction, he has got the assurance that Government will act according to the decision of the Court. If without sanction the man gets a partition decree by going to a District Court or High Court and ultimately Government refuse to recognise the partition, it will be absolutely of no use. Therefore, in order not to launch upon speculative transaction and ultimately to be told that Government would not recognise it, sanction should be obtained. If sanction is obtained, there will be a guarantee that Government will abide by the decision of the Court, and it is a safeguard. To my mind, the sanction is absolutely desirable and it is not prejudicial to the tenants and the extent to which we have gone is sufficient to satisfy all ordinary requirements. I should say that the amendment made by the Select Committee is in the interests of the tenant and will also safeguard the interests of the Government. * *."—

V. The Rules referred to by the Select Committee with reference to the Exception added by them are contained in the Proceedings of Government, No. 2790/L. R. 2066 of 1914, dated 29th May 1918/16th Edavom 1093. At the 14th Session of the Popular Assembly the Member for Neyyattinkara Taluk urged the abrog[...] of the Rule regarding the sanction o[...] vernment for filing Civil suits in respe[...] Kandukrishi lands. In regard to this p[...] and another, the above Proceedings o[...] Government were issued. The G. O. w[...] follows :—

"In regard to the first point, the [...] referred to by the Member is Section 7- the Civil Procedure Code. Under Section, no Civil Court could take c[...] zance of any suit relating to the Kanduk[...] lands or to any benefit arising out of [...] lands without the previous sanction of [...]vernment. Government consider that provision of law is very necessary in interests of the Kandukrishi lands and [...] not be abrogated.

" 2. With regard, however, to the po[...] of granting permission to file suits in res[...] of Kandukrishi lands under the above [...]vision of law, Government feel that standing orders on the subject are not c[...] vague and indefinite but tend to cause [...] hardship in individual cases. Governm[...] therefore, resolve to issue the follow[...] revised instructions in regard to the gr[...] of permission to institute civil suits in [...]pect of Kandukrishi Pattom lands or benefits arising out of such lands :—

(1) The Rule directing the transfer Revenue registry of alienated Kandukri[...] lands in favour of alienees is cancelled [...]cept in those cases where the alienor's ri[...] to redeem the lands has been barred limitation ;

(2) when the registry-holder or Pat[...]dar of a Kandukrishi land seeks to rede[...] it from the person to whom it might h[...] been alienated for consideration, perm[...]sion to sue will be given ;

(3) the registry-holder or Pattadar c[...] Kandukrishi land will be permitted to [...] for the eviction of a trespasser from [...] land provided the former undertakes to c[...]serve the rights of Government over [...] land trespassed upon ;

(4) permission to sue will, as at present, be given to the registry-holder or Pattadar of a Kandukrishi land to redeem it from a lessee :

(5) the permission contemplated above will, of course, be given without prejudice to the interests of Government over the land, which are paramount ;

(6) when a mortgagee or other alienee of a Kandukrishi land seeks to sue for the recovery of the amount due, without proceeding against the property, no sanction is necessary.

"2. The instructions contained in the preceding paragraph will not apply to Kandukrishi Thanathu lands. These stand on a different footing and no permission to file suits in respect of them will be given under any circumstances".

VI. In Section 8, the rigour of the Rule contained in the old Section 7-A had been relaxed and an exception made in the case of suits by registry-holders of Kandukrishi Pattom lands recognised as such in the Government Revenue accounts for the recovery of such lands from a mortgagee or a lessee or for the eviction of a trespasser. * * The policy adopted in such matters seems to be towards recognising alienations by way of mortgages and leases with regard to Kandukrishi Pattom lands.—

Case Law.

1. In computing the period of limitation for suits relating to benefits arising out of Kandukrishi lands, the time taken to obtain the sanction of Government required under Section 7-A of the C. P. C., shall not be excluded.

Neither the Civil Procedure Code nor the Limitation Regulation makes any allowance in respect to the time taken to obtain the sanction of Government. There being no saving Clause in Section 7-A in respect to claims that had accrued before it was passed by the Legislature, plaintiff's claim to recover from his tenant the rent due for 1068, in respect of a Kandukrishi land which he held under the Sirkar, should have been brought into Court within three years. The suit was filed in 1072 ; and it was rightly dismissed.— 15 T. L. R., 8.

K. P., 287.
19 T. L. J., 782.
Fol.—K. P., 270.

2. A suit for recovery of damages on account of the non-performance of the Ooliam services attached to a Viruthi land is not a suit for the recovery of the land or any interest in it and, therefore, no Government sanction is necessary to institute the same.

3. There are two sorts of Kudumba Poruthi grants—(1) granted in consideration of past services or meritorious conduct and (2) granted in consideration of future services agreed to be rendered. The first kind of grant is not resumable or recoverable by the grantor ; while the second, intended simply as wages for future services, may be resumed under certain circumstances and is intended by the Legislature to be brought within the purview of Section 7-A, C. P. C., as would be clear from the Explanation attached thereto.— 16 T. L. R., 31.

Ref.—2 T. L. J., 391.

4. According to Section 7-A, the Civil Courts have no power to take cognizance of suits affecting Kandukrishi lands without permission of the Government and that permission must be filed with the plaint. Assuming that the plaint property is Kandukrishi land, it does not lie in the judgment-debtor's mouth to set up the plea at this stage (after the decree) for the purpose of setting aside the sale. He had not appealed against the decree nor had he raised this contention at the date of sale, nor did it appear in his written statement. Whether the land is Kandukrishi or not is a matter of evidence, and is a fact that should have been established before the passing of the decree.

Per Chief Justice.—If the lands are really crown lands, the proceedings taken will not bind the Crown, though, as between the parties to the decree, the decree must be enforced.— 18 T. L. R., 157.

5. The statutory prohibition against alienation of Viruthi land will not affect the operation of the ordinary law of procedure. 20 T. L. R., 218.

6. A suit for recovery of arrears of Thiruppuvarom was dismissed on the ground that the Thiruppuvarom in the case was charged on Viruthi land and that a benefit arising out of such land could not be made the subject of a civil suit without Government sanction under Section 7-A of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held.—Thiruppuvarom being a payment recognised by the Sirkar the person entitled to receive the payment could sue in a Civil Court to recover it as rent from the holder of the land without previous sanction of Government.

It is only in the following two classes of cases that such sanction is necessary:—

(a) Where Government is to be charged with any liability to pay any grant or land revenue.

(b) In cases of Service Inams, Kandukrishi and Viruthi lands where the lands themselves are sought to be made liable or alienated by a decree of Court.—

7. Where the Service Inam lands are burdened with future service, a suit for rent without the sancti n of Government is prohibited by Section 7 ., C. P. C.—

K. P., 270.

8. Where two disti pieces of land were leased at the same ie, the first suit was brought to recover only one piece of land and the second suit in respect of the second piece after obtaining the sanction of Government as it was Kandukrishi land. The Munsiff dismissed the second suit holding that the claim therein made arose from the same cause of action as in the prior suit and that as the 1st suit related to only one piece, the plaintiff must be taken to have relinquished the other under Section 39 [=Or. II, R. 2] of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held (confirming the decision of the lower Appellate Court).—As the plaintiff could not have included the latter piece in the first suit for want of sanction of Government, the right to sue did not arise at the same time in both though the causes of action arose at the same time.

As the claim for the second suit could not have been made at the date of the first suit, it could not be taken to have been relinquished.

Per C. Vencobachariar, C. J.—As two distinct pieces of property were leased, though at one and the same time, the plaintiff had a separate cause of action for each property both of which he was not bound to join together in one suit.— K. P., 287.

9. Sri Pandaravagai Anubhogam property comes under the class of Service Inam lands referred to in Section 7-A of the Civil Procedure Code; and in a suit relating thereto, the plaint must be accompanied by an order of the Government permitting the plaintiff to seek redress in Civil Courts.—

2 S. D., 61

10. A suit in respect of Kandukrish lands could be instituted under Section 7- of the Civil Procedure Code only with th special sanction of the Government. sanction accorded by Government is vali and gives jurisdiction to the Court, unle such sanction was obtained through mi representation or fraud (F. B.).—

11. It is only when a grant is made consideration of future services that Section 7-A of the Civil Procedure Code applies, and the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is ousted.— 2 T. L. J., 391.

12. A suit for redemption of a mortgage of Kandukrishi lands is not cognisable by a Civil Court, unless the plaint is accompanied by an order of Government permitting the plaintiff to seek redress in Civil Courts as required by Section 7-A of the Code of Civil Procedure.—28 T. L. R., 250
(= 3 T. L. J., 209).

[The addition of the present Exception to the old Section 7-A has changed the law and mitigated the severity noted in 9 T. L. R., 169.]

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 782.

13. A suit for declaration of title to a building standing on Kandukishi land and put up by one or the other of the parties to the suit is maintainable even without Government sanction under Section 7-A, Civil Procedure Code, as the suit relates to the building only and does not in any way affect the land.— 30 T. L. R., 213.

19 T. L. J., 782.

14. (1) The rights of a tenant of Kandukrishi lands over the improvements effected by him on such land, that is, plantations effected and buildings erected by him on such land are attachable and saleable in execution of a decree against such tenant and Section 7-A of the Civil Procedure Code is no bar to such attachment and sale.

The improvements effected on such lands by Kandukrishi tenants, many of whom have been, according to the traditional policy of the Crown of not capriciously disturbing possession, left to enjoy Kandukrishi lands for generations, are often of a substantial kind, and there is no reason why such valuable rights should not be made available by attachment and sale, for satisfying decree-debts, due by those tenants, unless there is some express provision of law to the contrary.

(2) Section 7-A, Civil Procedure Code, applies only to suits, as understood in the grammatical sense, and its provisions should not be applied to execution proceedings.

The use of the word 'plaint' in Section 7-A and the language of Section 44 [new Section 24 and Order IV, Rule I] which says that 'every suit shall be instituted by presenting a plaint to the Court or such Officer as it appoints in this behalf' appear clearly to show that the word 'suit' was used in its ordinary sense, i. e., as a proceeding beginning with the presentation of a plaint and ending with the passing of a decree. If the Legislature had thought that Section 7-A should govern execution proceedings also, they would have used language more clearly expressing that intention. (F. B.).— 33 T. L. R., 240
(= 7 T. L. J., 280).

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 782.

15. The plaintiff's case was that the plaint properties, though originally Kandukrishi tenure, were under a Royal grant made over absolutely to one S. and others, that plaintiff purchased their rights under a registered sale-deed, that plaintiff and her predecessors in title were in possession for over sixty years adversely to the Sirkar, that she was forcibly evicted therefrom under the orders of the defendant Sirkar, and that she was entitled to restitution of the property or in the alternative to the value of improvements. The Sirkar contended that the Court was not competent to take cognisance of the suit, since the properties were Kandukrishi lands and the plaintiff had not produced any sanction from Government permitting her to seek redress in Civil Courts.

Held.—In view of the plaint allegation that the suit properties passed under a Royal grant with absolute power of enjoyment and that the plaintiff and his predecessors were in adverse possession for over sixty years, sanction under Section 7-A was not necessary (F. B.).— 10 T. L. J., 60.

9. No Court shall proceed with the trial of any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim litigating under the same title where such suit is pending in the same or any other Court in Travancore having jurisdiction to grant the relief claimed.

Stay of suit.

Explanation.—The pendency of a suit in a foreign Court does not preclude the Courts in Travancore from trying a suit founded on the same cause of action.

16. A sanction, which in terms is one granted to a party personally, may in substance be one intended for and on behalf of others also, if in fact the sanction was obtained by such person in a representative capacity, in which case not only the person who obtains the sanction but others for whose benefit it is obtained may institute or prosecute a suit.— 11 T. L. J., 285.

17. No sanction of Government under Section 8 is necessary to institute a suit by the registry-holder of a Kandukrishi land for recovery of the rent due in respect of the property from the lessee.

The benefit mentioned in Section 8 must be such an interest as would affect the land itself, if a Civil Court grants the relief prayed for in the plaint. Rent in respect of Kandukrishi lands cannot be called a benefit arising out of the land. The Government are not concerned with the rent due to their tenant from his lessee. Their interest is confined to the land. Rent pure and simple is a question exclusively between lessor and lessee. It does not affect the land.— 19 T. L. J., 782.

I. 1. The corresponding Section in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"8. Pending suits.—Except where a suit has been stayed under Section 17, the Court shall not try any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit for the same relief between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, pending in the same or any other Court, whether superior or inferior, in Travancore, having jurisdiction to grant such relief.

Explanation.—The pendency of a suit in a foreign Court does not preclude the Courts in Travancore from trying a suit founded on the same cause of action."

2. For Section 17 of the old Regulation, see under Section 22, Infra.

II. 1. The words "proceed with the trial" have been substituted for the word "try" in order "to express clearly the action to be taken by the Courts." (Select Committee on the 1901 Bill).—
India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

2. The words "for the same relief" which occurred after the words "in a previously instituted suit" have been omitted "because the application of the provision should depend not upon the mere prayer of the parties, but upon the matter in issue."— Ibid.

It has been held, however, that the omission does not alter the law as it stood under the old Section.

III. Section 8 (old) comes into operation only where the matter directly and substantially in issue as well as the relief asked for are identical in the two suits and they are between the same parties or their privies (17 T. L. J., 642).

Case Law.

1. The Sirkar started proceedings under the Land Conservancy Regulation against the plaintiffs alleging that the plaint property was Sirkar Poramboke. Plaintiff accordingly filed a suit for declaration of title to and possession of the property on the ground that it formed part of his registered holding. Even after the filing of the suit, the Sirkar went on with the proceedings, and it was decided that the land was Poramboke, and a fine and prohibitory assessment were levied from the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs then filed another suit to recover as damages from the Sirkar the amounts so levied. Both the suits were tried together and dismissed by the District Judge. The plaintiffs appealed. It was contended for the defence that the proceedings under the Land Conservancy Regulation constituted a suit in which the matter in issue was substantially the same as in the suit, and that the suit for declaration of title was not maintainable as Section 8 of the Civil Procedure Code barred the trial of the suit.

Held.—Proceedings under the Land Conservancy Regulation are not suits within the meaning of Section 8 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The term 'suit' is not defined in the Civil Procedure Code or the General Clauses Regulation. But it has been held that the term ought to be confined to such proceedings as under that description are directly dealt with by the Code of Civil Procedure or such as by the operation of the particular Acts which regulate them are treated as suits (22 Cal., 943).

The order under the Land Conservancy Regulation passed after the suit was filed could not operate as a bar to the suit for declaration of plaintiff's title.—

2. If a defendant to a suit wishes to show that the trial of the suit is barred by Section 8 (old Code), it is his business to produce before the Court such documents as will satisfy the Court that the Section is applicable (39 I. C., 906). Where he does not do so, he cannot be heard upon the contention.

3. Both under the old and the new Civil Procedure Code, the trial of a suit in which a matter directly and substantially in issue is similarly in controversy in a previously instituted suit between the same parties litigating under the same title, cannot be proceeded with if such suit had been pending in a Court of competent jurisdiction in Travancore. The wording of Section 9 shows that the suspension of proceedings in the latter suit is imperative. A decision of the suit in derogation of this imperative provision would clearly be an illegality, and a plea of res judicata based on such decision cannot be countenanced. Inasmuch as the jurisdiction and competency of the Court to decide the second suit is one of the essential conditions for its sufficiency to operate as a bar, the Court before which such a plea is raised has to examine its validity on that basis and to refuse to accept the plea if the decision in the second suit is tainted with an illegality as being in contravention of an express and imperative provision in the statute.

In cases of this kind, the trial Court should have consolidated the two suits by virtue of its inherent powers (F. B.).—

4. In proper cases, to avoid injustice, even if it arises only from unnecessary hardship being caused to parties in conducting the cases, a Civil Court has inherent jurisdiction to order a suit pending before it to be stayed pending the disposal of a criminal

Res Judicata.

10. No Court shall try any suit or issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title, in a Court competent to try such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised, and has been heard and finally decided by such Court.

Explanation I.—The expression "former suit" shall denote a suit which has been decided prior to the suit in question whether or not it was instituted prior thereto.

Explanation II.—For the purposes of this Section, the competence of a Court shall be determined irrespective of any provisions as to a right of appeal from the decision of such Court.

case arising out of the same facts. Great care must be taken that without very good reasons an action should not be held up for the disposal of another, the decision of which can have no legal effect on it.

Section 9, C. P. C., or the principle underlying it is applicable only to cases where there exists the essential element of jurisdiction in both Courts to deal with the matter in controversy and to decide it finally, so that the decision when actually made by one Court will be binding on the other. This principle is not applicable where the actions are before two Courts of absolutely independent jurisdiction, the evidence and decision in one Court upon any matter common to both the actions being quite useless for its determination in the other Court.

Where a civil suit will involve the cross-examination of the defendant—the accused in the criminal case—which will embarrass the accused in making his statement before the Criminal Court, in answer to the prosecution, the Civil Court will be doing justice if it stays trial of the suit before it.—

Or. III, r. 2.—18 T. L. R., 65.

Sec. 10 [ = S. 9 = S. 11 ]

I. The changes made in the Section are:—

(1) The words "of jurisdiction" which occurred before the words "competent to try" in the main para of the old Section, have been omitted.

(2) Explanations I and II are new and "are the result of judicial decisions of this State in conformity with the Judicial decisions in British India. See 1 T. L. J., 49; 25 T. L. R., 77."— Notes on Clauses.

(3) Explanations III, IV and V reproduce the old Explanations I, II and III respectively.

(4) Explanation VI is the old Explanation V with the words "of a public right or" added after the words "in respect."

II. The Section as thus enacted is the same as Section 11 of the Indian Code. The Report of the Indian Special Committee says in the Notes on Clauses:—

"It is not possible to make a complete exposition of a subject so complex as that of res judicata within the limits of a Section of an Act and the Committee think it better to re-enact Section 13 as it stands in the Code

Explanation III.—The matter above referred to must in the former suit have been alleged by one party and either denied or admitted, expressly or impliedly, by the other.

Explanation IV.—Any matter which might and ought to have been made ground of defence or attack in such former suit shall be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit.

Explanation V.—Any relief claimed in the plaint, which is not expressly granted by the decree, shall, for the purposes of this Section, be deemed to have been refused.

Explanation VI.—Where persons litigate bona fide in respect of a public right or of a private right claimed in common for themselves and others, all persons interested in such right shall, for the purposes of this Section, be deemed to claim under the persons so litigating.

with such modifications only as experience has shown to be necessary.

"The Committee recognise that a proceeding does not come within the language of that Section; but they think it better not to deal with this point in express terms for the reason that the applicability of the doctrine of res judicata to certain proceedings is not open to doubt; and they foresee that any express reference to proceedings in a crystallised definition might only lead to difficulties (L.R., 11: I A; 37, and I.L.R., 29 Cal., 70).

"Explanation II is new and is intended to affirm the view that the competence of the jurisdiction of a Court does not depend on the right of appeal from its decision.

"Explanation VI.—The inclusion of public rights is to give due effect to suits relating to public nuisances (Clause 91)." [Section 71 of the Regulation.]

III. The following Explanations (IV and VI) which were in Regulation II of 1065 have been omitted:—

"Explanation IV.—A decision is final within the meaning of this Section when it is such as the Court making it could not alter (except on review) on the application of either party or reconsider of its own motion. A decision liable to appeal may be final within the meaning of this Section until the appeal is made."

The latter portion of the above Explanation (2nd sentence) was in the Indian Civil Procedure Code Bill of 1907. The Select Committee of 1908 in omitting it said:—"We think it is liable to misconstruction and that the law is well established apart from the Explanation."

Explanation VI.—See Note under Section 18 Infra.

IV. Section 2 of Regulation II of 1087 was as follows:—"2. The Civil Courts shall not take cognizance of any suit brought on a cause of action which shall have been heard and determined by a Court of competent jurisdiction in a former suit between the same parties or between parties under whom they claim."

V. 1. The expression "cause of action" has been omitted by substituting in its place the expression "matter directly and substantially in issue," an expression which will include not only the cause of action on which the suit is based, but also all matters which are or ought to be put in issue, for the determination of the cause of action".—

5 T. L. J., 64.

2. The Appellate Court, though it usually does not take evidence itself (and decides upon arguments and records) also "tries" the issue when it investigates the arguments and goes into the records for coming to a conclusion.—

( = 1 T. L. J., 51 ).

3. "There is a difference between 'cross suits' and 'connected suits' strictly so called, though the expression 'connected suits' might be used to signify 'cross suits' also. In two cross suits, the rights claimed in one suit are identically the defences set up in the other suit, while the rights claimed in the latter suit are identically the defences set up in the former suit. (Examples of cross suits are where a landlord and a tenant bring separate suits, each against the other, on the same lease transaction, or where two traders bring suits against each other on the same set of transactions, and so on). In connected suits, the subject-matters are different, while most of the issues of facts and law are the same, and it is not necessary that the position of the parties as plaintiff and defendant in one suit should be reversed as defendant and plaintiff in the other suit. The principles of law governing the decision of the question of res judicata do not, it seems to me, materially differ. In two cross suits, the rights allowed and disallowed as well as the findings are the same (except in the matter of costs), whereas in connected suits most of the findings are the same, though the subject-matters and consequent reliefs are different. In cross suits, if we hold that the Appellate Court is not precluded in the appeal against the decision in the first of the suits from altering or reversing the decision by the fact of the adjudication in the second sui not having been appealed against by th same aggrieved party, a doubt arises whether the decree in the second suit so no appealed against, becomes ipso facto altered or reversed, by the alteration or reversa of the decree on the first suit in appeal though, in the natural course, the secon decree has become final. This great difficulty and anomaly is not fully faced in th decision in 29 Mad., 333, where their Lordships say that the appeal decision in th first suit would have the effect of superseding the adjudication in the second suit, bu that it was not necessary to consider wha might be the exact legal effect of sucl supersession. "However in the case o connected suits, the said difficulty does no arise, as the reliefs granted and the decre passed in one connected suit cannot b superseded by the reliefs and decree in th other connected suit; and the only questior will be whether the findings in one connected suit the decision of which has become final, are res judicata and binding o the Appellate Court to which appeal ha been preferred from the decision in th other connected suit. The strength of th doctrine of res judicata is not so powerfu in the case of cross suits as in the case o connected suits for, in the former case, th decisions and decrees themselves are practically the same (except in the matter o costs), whereas in the case of connected suits, the decrees are essentially different and whereas in the former case, an appea against the decree in one of the cross suit might be considered as an appeal practically in both suits, and hence as affecting the decision and findings in both suits, th same considerations do not apply to decree in connected suits."—27 T. L. R., 77
( = 1 T. L. J., 51)

4. One of the essential requisites for the operation of the rule of res judicata is that the parties in the second suit must have been parties in the prior suit or their privies. One person becomes privy to another (1) by succeeding to the position of that other as regards the subject of the estoppel, (2) by holding in subordination to that other. Privies so far as the rule of estoppel or res judicata is concerned are of three classes:— (1) privies in blood, (2) privies in law, and (3) privies in estate.

It has to be remembered that privity for the purpose of the operation of these rules arises from property and not personal relation. 'To make a man a privy to an action he must have acquired an interest in the subject-matter of the action either by inheritance, succession or purchase from a party subsequently to the action or he must hold property subordinately."

The first class of cases (privies) set forth above refers to persons succeeding by inheritance. The second class contemplates cases that come in by act in law, such as tenants by the courtesy, testator and executor and the like. The third class includes cases of derivative interest acquired by the person concerned.— 43 T. L. R., 108 ( = 17 T. L. J., 593 ).

VI. 1. To be a res judicata, there must be an adjudication of some sort, and not a mere non-suit.— 2 T. L. R., 33.

2. No proposition of law is more firmly established than that when, in a former suit, the parties were the same and appeared in the same capacity and the same point was in issue, the judgment on such point is conclusive on those parties. It makes no difference so far as the question of res judicata is concerned that the form of action is not the same in each case. The conclusive effect of a res judicata extends to any matter which it was necessary to decide and which was actually decided as the ground work of the decision itself though it does not extend to any matter which came collaterally in question.— 7 T. L. R., 177.

3. The rule of res judicata applies to an issue as well as to a suit once tried and determined between the same parties or those under whom they claim.— 18 T. L. R., 222.

4. The rule of res judicata applies alike both to claims and pleas.— 21 T. L. R., 127.

5. The rule of res judicata applies as much to execution as to suits.— 29 T. L. R., 204.

6. Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code (old) applies to the retrial of any issue as well as of a whole case.— 1 S. D. 277.

7. An innocent party can plead fraud in a subsequent suit in order to make the former judgment a nullity so far as that former judgment is sought to be used as res judicata in respect of a collateral matter, that is, in respect of a finding or other matter not affecting the actual rights and liabilities created and established by the former decree.— K. P., 578.

8. The rule of res judicata only prevents, in certain circumstances and under certain conditions, the trial of a suit or an issue which has already been heard and decided. It does not operate so as to invest the finding with the effect of a decree. A declaratory decree, on the other hand, confers a distinct specific relief.— 34 T. L. R., 116 ( = 8 T. L. J., 218).

9. It is undisputed law that the findings in a judgment upon matters which subsequently turn out to be immaterial to the grounds upon which a suit is finally disposed of, as to the plaintiff's right to any relief sought by him as declared by the decree amount to no more than obiter dicta and do not constitute a final decision.— 9 T. L. J., 323.

10. The cause of action has no relation whatever to the defence which may be set up by the defendant, nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff. It relates entirely to the grounds set forth in the plaint as the cause of action, or in other words, to the media upon which the plaintiff asks the Court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour.

"For findings to operate as res judicata, they must have been findings upon which the decree or some operative part of it was made, and must have been findings which were necessary for the making of the decree in the way it or some operative part of it was made, and it is the decree read in the light of such findings and not the findings in the judgment apart from the decree which finally decides the matter in issue."

Where the issue is not necessary for the decision of the suit, the decree couched in general terms does not cover the finding on that issue. It is, however, equally clear upon the authorities that if two or more issues are so decided that the decree may have been based on either or any of the decisions, every one of the decisions will be deemed final and will constitute res judicata.

When the judgment discloses that, in spite of decisions on several issues, the decision on one issue is made the sole basis of the decree, there can be no difficulty in treating the decisions on the other issues as not final and as not operating as res judicata; but when the decisions on various issues are treated as cumulative or additional ground for disposal of the suit, it will be difficult to say that those decisions will not have the effect of res judicata in a subsequent suit.

The principle of res judicata applies not only to the trial of suits but also to the trial of issues.— Ibid.

11. Where a decision has been given on a state of the law as it existed at the time, that decision will be res judicata in a subsequent suit even though the law has since been altered by a Statute having retrospective effect on for that matter by a judicial decision.— 32 T. L. R., 190.

I. MATTER IN ISSUE.

1. The obtaining of money decree upo[n] a hypothecation bond is no bar to a fres[h] suit for the enforcement of the obligee' right of lien on the property hypothecated 3 T. L. R., 2

2. The dismissal of a suit for default t[o] adduce evidence by the plaintiff, in whic[h] the defence was that the cause of actio[n] had not arisen and that the Court had n[o] jurisdiction, cannot be a bar to a subsequen[t] suit in the proper Court, when the cause c[of] action actually arises.— 3 T. L. R., 3

3. The plaintiff claiming to be the Ka ranavan of the Tarwad sued to set aside a[n] attachment of some property of the Tar wad. His claim was rejected upon whic[h] he brought this suit to establish hi[s] claim and raise the attachment. In a for mer suit which the plaintiff brought again[st] the 1st and 2nd defendants for part of th[e] property belonging to the Tarwad, it wa[s] decided that the plaintiff having been ad opted into another family, had no claim t[o] the property of his natural Tarwad. Th[e] defence contended that the decision in th[e] former suit barred the present suit.

Held.—It is a fundamental rule of la[w] that the decision of a Court of competen[t] jurisdiction on a point directly and substan tially before it, binds the parties thereb[y] and debars them from contesting the sam[e] point in a subsequent suit between them.

The point decided in the former suit de clared the status of the plaintiff in relatio[n] to the 1st and 2nd defendants and thei[r] family, and the adjudication was conclu sive as between them. The fact that th[e] prior suit had reference to a different piec[e] of land did not affect the question as t[o] whether the decision operated as re[s] judicata.— 6 T. L. R., 9

4. Plaintiffs, Ooranmakar of a Devaswom sued to recover the property in disput from defendants whose ancestors had take[n] it on Venpattom lease. The defendants de nied plaintiff's claim and pleaded that [...]

was res judicata by a former decision. The question was whether the plaintiffs were entitled in the face of the final decree in the former suit declaring defendants permanent tenants of the Devaswom, to which decree the plaintiffs were parties both in the original and appellate Courts, to re-open the question of the nature of the defendants' tenancy in the present suit.

Held.—They were not. Though the plaintiffs were arrayed as defendants along with the present defendants in the former suit, yet they were, to all intents and purposes, real plaintiffs, as the plaintiff in that suit claimed through them and sued really on their behalf to obtain an ejectment. The mere accidental fact that they were defendants and not plaintiffs, as they ought to have been, and as they could have been made under the Civil Procedure Code, either on their own motion or at the instance of the Court, during the progress of the suit in the original Court, did not make the least difference in the effect of the decree as against them. Otherwise, there is no object gained by bringing into a suit all those interested in the subject-matter thereof, and multiplicity of suits would be the result.

Where a plea of res judicata is set up, the main point to be considered is whether the matter in question was directly and substantially in issue between the same parties and was finally adjudicated upon in the previous suit; and it makes little difference whether the parties were marshalled in the one case differently from the other, so long as they had the fullest opportunity of contesting the point decided.

The defendant in the case had already been through two Courts and had obtained a final decree in the highest Court of the country in a suit to which the plaintiffs had been parties—not nominal but really interested in the result—and which had been instituted by one who had been put forward by them as their proxy and after all that trouble and expense, to be subjected to another harassing litigation, at the instance of the present plaintiffs themselves exactly on the same basis and for the same relief, would be to make judicial proceedings a mere farce.— 6 T. L. R., 100.

5. A and B obtained a decree against C for recovery of certain property with mesne profits. They subsequently sued also C, D, E and others, the alienees of C, to recover from them mesne profits on the portions of the property held by them, during the pendency of the former suit, from the date of their alienation.

Held.—The claim against C was res judicata inasmuch as a decree had already been obtained against him on the same cause of action for the same relief, but the claim against D, E and others, the alienees, pendente lite was not open to that objection because they were no parties to the former suit.

A and B had a cause of action for profits against all those who held possession of their properties since the decree in the former suit did not deal with that claim.

6. The defendant had a money-decree in O. S. No. 917 of 1059 against the plaintiff. In execution it was agreed that defendant should receive 350 fanams in full satisfaction of the decree. Plaintiff executed a mortgage-deed to the defendant's wife for this amount and also for 250 fanams which he was to borrow. But the defendant instead of certifying satisfaction of the decree recovered the whole decree amount. Defendant's wife sued the plaintiff and recovered the whole mortgage amount. Plaintiff sued the defendant and his wife to recover the said 350 fanams, but it was dismissed on the ground that there was no cause of action. The present suit was against the defendant alone to recover the amount realized in execution of O. S. 917 of 1059 together with interest.

Held.—The plaintiff's cause of action in the case was the defendant's failure to certify satisfaction of the decree and the plaintiff was entitled to claim as damages, what he had lost by the execution of the said decree.

The mere accident that the defendant was a party to the previous suit cannot make the decree in one res judicata with regard to the claim in the other, the cause of action being entirely different.— 7 T. L. R., 59.

7. A party is bound to bring forward his whole case in respect of a matter in litigation and open to him upon the points of decision in the suit. He cannot abstain from relying upon, nor abandon, a ground of claim which is in question and proper for consideration and decision in the suit, and afterwards make it a fresh cause of fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter.— 7 T. L. R., 171.

8. If any slight variation between the cause of action in the former suit and the cause of action in the subsequent suit, be held sufficient to re-open a litigation even in cases where the Courts find that they are substantially one and the same, the conseqence would be a frightful increase in the inaccuracies in pleadings and a virtual repeal of the law of res judicata. In cases of this kind, the question for the consideration of the Courts is whether the cause of action in the subsequent litigation is substantially the same as in the former suit; and the variations in the date, amount or the like must be duly considered in arriving at a decision.— 8 T. L. R., 62.

9. The mere fact that no specific issue was raised in the former case, will not prevent the operation of the rule of res judicata, if in substance the matter was heard and determined therein (F. B.).— 11 T. L. R., 112.

Ref.—2 S. D. 40.

10. The plea of res judicata taken and determined in the original Court, may be entertained in special appeal, even though it was not urged in the regular appeal.

Where a suit for cancelment of an attachment was based on plaintiff's claim to the property under a division, and the issue as to division was considered and decided against him, and a second suit for the same purpose was instituted on the ground that the attached property is plaintiff's inheritance from his father:

Held.—It was open to plaintiff to have based his title in the former suit, on division or inheritance. It was plaintiff's right to possession, by whatever title it might be sustainable, that was heard and determined in the former suit; and the mere change of the form of action would not save the present claim for being res-judicata by the decision in the former suit.— 11 T. L. R., 154.

11. A, a timber merchant of Quilon, sued B, also a timber merchant residing in Madras, for recovery of a certain sum of money on account of loss sustained by the former by the act of the latter in selling timber at Madras below the rate agreed upon. B pleaded that he having already obtained a decree on the same transaction against A in the Madras Court of Small Causes, A's suit as against him was res judicata. The decree obtained by B was ex parte. A tried to get the decree set aside, but failed. He then instituted the present suit. The question was whether A's suit was res judicata.

Held.—Under Section 9, Explanation II, [=present Explanation IV], Civil Procedure Code, any matter which might and ought to have been a ground of defence in a former suit, shall be deemed to have been directly and substantially in issue in such a suit. The present claim being one which arose in the same transaction, it was A's duty to have pleaded it in the former suit and the first suit having been disposed of on the merits by a Court competent to adjudicate on the present claim, A was barred from maintaining this action.

An ex parte judgment is final until set aside. The word "review" in the Clause (Explanation IV to Section 9) includes an application to set aside an ex parte judgment.— 14 T. L. R., 6.

12. A plaintiff whose claim for future mesne profits was neither expressly allowed nor refused in the decree, might be allowed to bring a fresh suit for profits from the date of the decree up to the date of satisfaction of the decree (F. B.).—

13. A Jenmi obtained a decree for ejectment of his tenants and for three years' future Michavarom from the date of the decree. He did not get possession of the lands for some time. The present suit was for recovery of mesne profits that accrued subsequent to the three years fixed in the prior decree.

Held.—The plaintiff's suit for the subsequent mesne profits was not res-judicata and was maintainable.— 17 T. L. R., 115.

( = 7 T. L. J., 326).

14. The pleadings and judgment might be looked into to ascertain the real object of a plaint or the meaning of a decree. Though the appeal was against the decree alone the relief claimed in the appeal memo involved a declaration of defendant's title just as the relief claimed in the plaint involved a delaration of plaintiff's title. When findings as to title are necessary and form the indispensable basis of the grant of consequent relief, the title also forms the subject-matter of the suit. "In order to see what has been in issue in a suit or what has been heard and decided, the judgment must be looked at. The decree does not afford any information as to the matters which were in issue or have been decided" (F. B.).— 21 T. L. R., 1.

15. P sued D to establish title to and recovery of possession of the plaint land. In a prior suit by P to recover the value of the crop alleged to have been unlawfully carried away by D, the question of title to the land was directly and substantially in issue and found against P.

Held.—The finding in the prior suit with regard to the question of the title operated as res judicata in the subsequent suit.

The position that in order to raise an estoppel by a prior judgment, the cause of action in the second suit must be in all respects the same as in the first, is repugnant to the reasons of public policy embodied in the maxim "Interest republicae ut sit finis litum" and is also opposed to the doctrine that the rule of res judicata applies alike both to claims and pleas.—21 T. L. R., 127.

16. In a suit by the vendee for cancellation of a sale deed on the ground of fraud and misrepresentation on the vendor's part where plaintiff claimed a prior lien to take precedence over a hypothecation decree to which he was a party and where he further claimed, in appeal, damages for breach of an express warranty of title :

Held.—Where a purchaser had partial notice of a fact or instrument, he should be held to have had notice of all connected facts and instruments. Fraud and misrepresentation, being serious allegations charged against the person sought to be made liable, must be positively proved and such proof was wanting in the case. One cause of action giving rise to one set of reliefs cannot be altered into a different cause of action giving rise to different and inconsistent reliefs. Where both parties knew the defect of title, the purchaser could not claim the benefit of the usual implied covenant for title and if a prior mortgagee be made a party to a suit by a puisne mortgagee and omits to set up his prior lien and a decree is passed generally for sale without imposing a liability on the subsequent mortgagee in favour of the first mortgagee, the latter cannot afterwards bring a suit to enforce his prior lien (F. B.).—

17. A, as tenant of B sued C, who claimed to be a lessee under D, for recovery of property alleged to have been demised. C and D were made pro forma defendants. The only issue tried was "whether it was A or C who cultivated the property on lease." It was decided in favour of C and the suit was dismissed.

B subsequently brought a suit against C and D for recovery of the property. It was contended that the second suit was barred by res judicata.

Held.—The contention on the question of res judicata was not maintainable.

A finding must be certain and definite in order to constitute res judicata.

Obiter.—If the Karanavan of a Malabar Tarwad conducts a Tarwad litigation bona fide without fraud or collusion, his mere negligence cannot prevent the result of the litigation being res judicata against the other members of the Tarwad.—

18. Plaintiffs 2 and 3 the owners of plaint properties had mortgaged same to the 1st defendant in 1073. First defendant had obtained a money decree in 1244 of 1077 against the vendors. After this decree the properties were conveyed on sale to first plaintiff. First defendant instituted suit No. 1135 of 1079 for a declaration that the sale was had to defraud him of the payment of the decree amount in 1244 of 1077. In that suit it was held that the sale was effected to defeat the creditor—the first defendant. The decree amount due to the first defendant was paid by the first plaintiff and the present suit was instituted for redemption, the plaintiffs 2 and 3 admitting in the plaint that 1st plaintiff was entitled to redeem. On the first defendant's contention that the sale deed having been found to be fraudulent in suit No. 1135 of 1079 between the same parties, that finding operated as res judicata and that therefore the present suit was not maintainable.

Held.—Though the finding in 1135 of 1079 that the sale was fraudulent was res judicata against 1st plaintiff in 1st defendant's favour, that would only operate as a finding that, on the date of that decision, 1st plaintiff had no title which he could set up against the 1st defendant, and that finding was not a bar to the present suit brought after payment of the prior decree amount, as in this suit the vendors had by their admission in the plaint that 1st plaintiff was entitled to sue for redemption created title in 1st plaintiff.— 23 T. L. R., 145.

19. The rule of res judicata applies alike to claims and pleas. In order that the rule should have operation, it is essential that there should be a decision substantially on the points raised either by a specific issue or on the pleadings.— 2 S. D., 40.

20. Where the Court of first instance tried together two cross suits but passed separate decrees in each and the appellant who was first defendant in the other suit which was earlier not having appealed against the findings and decree in that suit, the question was raised whether that decision would be a bar under Section 9 C.P.C., to the present appeal.

Held.—If at the time two suits were tried together, there was no bar by reason of Section 9 C. P. C., there could be no subsequent bar in appeal arising from a decision unappealed against. "It would lead to startling results if we were to hold that appellate tribunal is precluded from dealing with a question which comes before it on appeal, because an inferior Court, upon the same facts but in a case other than the case under appeal, had given a decision which had not been appealed against at the same time as the decision in the case under appeal.—

K. P., 402.

21. Where the defendant obtained a decree for redemption of a mortgage of 1049 and tried to execute the decree, she was resisted by 2nd plaintiff who claimed the property by purchase from an assignee of the mortgage of 1049. As the objection was disallowed by the execution Court, plaintiffs brought the present suit to cancel the said decree on the ground that the mortgagor in question was their Karanavan and not the defendant's. This was denied by the defendant. Though both the lower Courts found in defendant's favour, yet the Court of first instance holding that a decision in a former suit that the mortgagor was not the Karanavan of Omminy (defendant's Karanavan) operated as res judicata against defendant's plea, gave a decree for plaintiffs. The lower Appellate Court, however, reversed that decree on the ground that the bar of res judicata would not apply as the properties litigated in the two cases were different.

Held.—(1) The bar of res judicata applies to an issue as well as to a whole case irrespective of the difference in the properties involved in the two suits.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, C. J.—The defendant in this case may be treated as constructively a party to the former suit and an innocent party can plead fraud in a subsequent suit in order to make the former judgment a nullity when that former judgment is sought to be used as res judicata in respect of a collateral matter, that is, in respect of a finding or other matter not affecting the actual rights and liabilities created and established by the former decree. If the rights and liabilities themselves are sought to be nullified that decree must be set aside by appropriate proceedings.

(2) As the lower Courts concurrently find after remand, that Omminy's conduct of the prior suit in not prosecuting the appeal in the District and High Courts was fraudulent, there was no res judicata and the Zillah Court's decree should be confirmed.— K. P., 578.

22. An erroneous decision in a suit on a question of law will not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit, if the causes of action in the two suits are different.—

I T. L. J., 33.

23. Three suits were filed by a Jenmi for recovery of Michavarom and other dues against the same tenant, each in respect of a separate Kanom deed. The contentions and issues in all the suits were the same. The three suits were disposed of by one judgment. From the decrees of two of the suits, appeals were preferred to the District Court as the value of each of the suits was less than Rs. 500. The District Court dismissed the appeals. From the decree in the third suit the value of which was more than Rs. 500, both the plaintiff and the defendant appealed to the High Court.

Held.— The findings in the two connected suits, though they were decided by a subordinate tribunal were binding on the High Court, and the matter in appeal was therefore res judicata.

The Appellate Court, though it usually does not take evidence (and deals upon arguments and records) also "tries" the issue when it investigates the argument, and goes into the records for coming to a conclusion (F. B.). — 25 T. L. R., 77

24. Plaintiff's predecessor brought a suit to redeem the plaint properties from a mortgage of 1043. It was dismissed on the ground that he failed to prove the particular mortgage. Subsequently the plaintiff brought a suit for the redemption of the same property from a mortgage of 1040. It was contended by defendants that the suit was barred by Sections 9 and 39, C. P. C. [ = Sec. 10 and Or. II, r. 2 ].

Held.—(1). The alleged mortgage of 1043 on which the former suit was based was a transaction substantially and in every way different from the mortgage of 1040.

The real test to be applied to find whether there is a bar is whether the cause of action or transaction on which the two suits are based is the same, and not whether the transaction is sought to be established in different modes or by different means.

(2) The cause of action (the rights in respect of which the plaintiffs demand judgment) for the subsequent suit being entirely different from that for the previous suit, Section 39, C. P. C., which simply enjoins that the whole claim arising out of the same cause of action should be included in one suit, could have no application.

(3) Explanation II to Section 9, C. P. C. did not render it incumbent on a plaintiff to combine as grounds of attack every cause of action he might have had at the date of suit in respect of the property sued for, the principle being that where the several independent grounds of action are available, a party is bound to unite them all in one suit, though he is bound to bring before the Court all grounds of attack available to him with reference to the title which is made the ground of action.

The Explanation does not support the position that a plaintiff who seeks to redeem a specific mortgage which is not proved is thereby precluded from seeking to redeem the same property from another specific mortgage.— 25 T. L. R., 118.

25. The trustees of a Devaswom sued and obtained a decree for recovery of the schedule property on the strength of a lease. The decree was unexecuted, and the execution was allowed to be barred. In a subsequent suit brought within twelve years of the prior decree for recovery based on the Devaswom's title to the property, it was contended for the defence that the suit was barred by the decree in the prior suit.

Held,—The suit was maintainable, as the cause of action in the prior suit was different from that in the subsequent one.

As the basis of the prior suit was the legal relation of lessor and lessee and that of the present was the plaintiff's title to t land as trustee of the Devaswom, t causes of action in the two suits were diff ent, and therefore the prior decision d not operate as res judicata.

"A plaintiff who has once sued a defen ant to judgment, cannot, while the jud ment stands although unsatisfied sue hi again for the same cause, not because he estopped from doing so (though he as we as the defendant is estopped from averri anything contrary to the record), but b cause the cause of action is merged in th judgment, which creates an obligation of higher nature." "But there will be n merger unless the cause of action is th same, and the plaintiff had an opportunity o recovering in the first action what he seek to recover in the second; otherwise, th defendant is not twice vexed for the sam cause."

There is no difference in principle be tween a suit for recovery of property base on a lease which is dismissed and one whic is decreed, but of which execution is barred so far as its effect on a subsequent suit base on title is concerned. If in the first cas the remedy by a subsequent suit based o title is not barred, there is no reasson wh in the second case the same remedy should not be open to the plaintiff, if for some reason or other he has disabled himself from reaping the fruit of the former decree in his favour.— 27 T. L. R., 51

26. The rule of res judicata is not restricted in its application to suits technically so called. It extends to counter-claims by a defendant as well. So, in respect of any one cause of action, it is quite as much incumbent on the defendant, as it is on the plaintiff, to set out every ground or attack that is available.— 27 T. L. R., 161.

27. A decree for money obtained by a mortgagee does not operate as a bar to a suit for redemption by the mortgagor.—
29 T. L. R., 59.

28. The suit was to redeem an outstanding mortgage. The defence was that as the mortgagee had sued and obtained a decree for the money advanced, the present suit was barred by res judicata.

Held.—A decree for money without a foreclosure clause in a suit by the mortgagee for the mortgage amount does not operate as bar to a subsequent suit for redemption by the mortgagor.—

4 T. L. J., 54.

29. The plaintiff and K. T. were brothers. The latter sued the plaintiff and his father's brother's sons for a fourth share in certain properties, which, he alleged, were common to himself, the plaintiff and his father's brother's sons, having been acquired by his grand-father. The defence of his father's brother's sons was that the properties were not common, and K. T. was not entitled to any share. This defence was overruled, the properties were found to be common, and a decree was given for a fourth share. The plaintiff having now sued for recovery of his one-fourth share in the properties, the same defence was advanced by the appellants who were the contending defendants in the prior suit.

Held.—The judgment in the prior suit operated as res judicata, and it was not open to the appellants to urge the plea that was over-ruled in the first suit.

The finding, in a previous suit for partition brought by one co-sharer against other co-sharers as defendants, that the properties are liable to partition is res judicata in a subsequent suit brought by another co-sharer, who was one of the defendants in the previous suit, against the rest of the co-sharers.

The decree in a partition suit is not, like a decree for money or a decree for the delivery of specific property, a decree in favour of the plaintiff alone. The decree is, or ought to be, a joint declaration of the rights of persons interested in the property of which partition is sought, and is a decree in favour of each sharer. It decides what interest each of the sharers has in the property, the subject of partition, whether those sharers be plaintiffs or defendants; and renders unnecessary any subsequent suit by any of such co-sharers for the declaration of his interest in the property (F. B.).

30. A decree was obtained against K. A., Karanavan of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad on a hypothecation bond executed by him when he was a junior member in management of Tarward affairs. Pending execution of the decree, K. A. died, and the second defendant, the next Karanavan, was impleaded as his representative. Notice was issued to the second defendant to state his objections, if any, to sale of the hypotheca (which was Tarwad property), but second defendant did not appear and contest though he accepted service of the notice. The hypotheca was sold and purchased by the 1st defendant. Plaintiffs, junior members of the Tarwad, sued to set aside the sale on the ground that K. A. was incompetent to execute the hypothecation bond and that it was unsupported by consideration and Tarwad necessity. The Munsiff dismissed the suit as not maintainable, but the District Judge reversed the Munsiff's decree.

Held.—Though a decree against a de jure and de facto Karanavan of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad prima facie binds the Tarwad, yet under the decisions of the High Court, one opportunity must be given to the junior members to have the validity of the decree tested on the ground of want of consideration and Tarwad necessity. That one opportunity had been afforded in the present case when the 2nd defendant was given notice to show cause why Tarwad properties should not be sold in execution of the decree against K. A.

The second defendant who in spite of notice remained silent, should be deemed in law to have raised the objection and failed. The order to sell was an implied decision by the execution Court that the decree was enforceable against the hypothecated Tarwad property, and as it was not alleged or proved that second defendant remained ex parte through fraud or collusion, the question of the liability of the Tarwad property for the decree debt was res judicata so far as the Tarwad was concerned.

Obiter.—It has been held in 24 T. L. R., 169, that when in execution of a hypothecation decree against a Karanavan, his legal representatives are impleaded, they may resist the sale of the hypotheca on the ground that the decree-debt was not binding on the Tarwad and that the question of the liability of the hypotheca may be settled in execution under Section 238 of the C. P. C. [new Section 40]. Though it is not expressly so ruled the view in 24 T. L. R., 169 of the learned Judges appears to be that the question of liability not only may but ought to be raised and settled in execution under Section 238 of the Civil Procedure Code.— 30 T. L. R., 224 (=5 T. L. J., 134).

31. The plaintiff who was the mortgagee of certain properties had hypothecated his mortgage rights to the defendant. The mortgagor sued for redemption and obtained a decree to which the plaintiff and defendant were parties. Subsequent to the decree, the defendant obtained a decree against the plaintiff on the footing of his hypothecation, and in execution of that decree, had the mortgage right of the plaintiff sold in auction, and purchased it himself. The decree for redemption was not executed and had become barred. The plaintiff alleging that, by the non-execution of the decree for redemption, the equity of redemption passed to the plaintiff and had become vested in him, sued to redeem the mortgage held by the defendant.

Held.—The equity of redemption still vested in the original mortgagor notwithstanding his failure to execute the decree for redemption in time.

The non-execution of a redemption [de]cree does not operate as a transfer of [the] decree-holder mortgagor's rights to [the] judgment-debtor mortgagee. Such n[on] execution but bars the mortgagor's right [to] recover the mortgaged property throu[gh] Court by a second suit on the ground [of] res judicata. The bar interposed by [res] judicata unlike the bar of limitation, [has] not the effect of extinguishing one's title [to] property.— 31 T. L. R., 1 (= 5 T.L.J., 7

32. Plaint property originally belong[ed] to K. Tarwad as Kanom holders. Th[ey] mortgaged it to the predecessor in intere[st] of defendants. Subsequently, K. Tarw[ad] became extinct. As a result of the escheat proceedings started on the death of the la[st] member of the K. Tarwad, the plainti[ff] got pattah for the plaint property from th[e] Sirkar. Plaintiff in 1083 sued the defend[ants] for redemption of the mortgage basin[g] his suit on a fresh Kanom from the Jenm[i] after an alleged surrender to the Jenmi b[y] the K. Tarwad, because it became extinc[t]. The alleged surrender and demise wer[e] found false and the suit thrown out. I[n] 1085, the plaintiff brought the present sui[t] for redemption on the strength of the Pat[t]ah granted to him by the Sirkar. Th[e] defence, inter alia, was that the suit wa[s] barred by C. P. C., Section 9, Explanatio[n] II, and that even otherwise the Pattah based as it was on the surrender and demise found to be false did not confer on plaintiff any title to the property. The Munsiff upholding the latter contention dismissed the suit. The District Judge concurred in the decree, but on the ground that the suit was barred by Explanation II to Section 9.

Held.—The suit was not barred by res judicata as the cause of action in the two suits were different.

Krishnan Pandalai J.:—The principle which guides the Courts in determining whether the trial of a matter arising in a subsequent suit is barred by reason that it was not, when it might and ought to have been raised in a former suit, is to see whether the cause of action or transaction on which the two suits are based is the same and not whether the transaction is sought to be established in different modes or by different means. For, although a plaintiff or defendant is compelled to bring forward all grounds of attack or defence in reference to the cause of action on which the suit is founded, and if he omits to do so punished by Explanation II of Section 9, C. P. C., by not being permitted to rely on any such ground in a subsequent suit, there is nothing which compels a party to unite in the same suit distinct causes of action. The real difficulty is in any given case to decide whether the cause of action in the first and second suits is the same. The identity of the material object movable or immovable to which the suits relate is not a sufficient test of the identity of the cause of action; nor is diversity in that respect alone sufficient to show that the causes of action are different. The most useful and practical test suggested is whether the same evidence will maintain both actions.

Viraraghava Aiyengar, J:—The real test is 'whether the cause of action or transaction on which the two suits are based is the same and not whether the transaction is sought to be established in different modes or by different means.—

5 T. L. J., 64.

33. The Karanavan of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad obtained a decree for redemption of a mortgage. But the decree provided that, unless he paid additional court fee within a certain date, the suit would stand dismissed. The additional court fee was not paid in time. On the Karanavan dying, the present plaintiff sought in execution to be allowed to recover the property on payment of the mortgage amount. The mortgagee successfully resisted this application on the ground that there was no executable decree as the suit was to be dismissed for non-payment of the additional court fee. Plaintiff thereupon brought this suit for redemption. Defendant-mortgagee contended that a second suit for redemption would not lie.

Held.—The principle applicable to a second suit for redemption of the same mortgage did not apply to the case, as there was no executable decree for redemption in the first case. Having once successfully contended that there was no executable decree for redemption, the defendant-mortgagee was estopped from contending otherwise in the present suit.— 5 T. L. J., 128.

34. Suit for Thiruppuvarom payable to a temple which, though plaintiff claimed in the plaint as his private property, was at a later stage alleged to be a public institution with plaintiff as trustee. The plaintiff did not adduce any evidence that the Devaswom was a public institution. A previous suit for arrears of Michavarom for a different period on the same allegations had been dismissed. The defence was that the previous decision operated as res judicata. Both the Courts below held that the previous decision did not operate as res judicata as the subject-matter of the two suits was different.

Held (in second appeal).—The decision in the prior case operated as res judicata and the subsequent suit was not maintainable.

The identity of subject-matter was not always essential to constitute a prior decision res judicata in regard to a subsequent suit, and as the title under which plaintiff claimed the arrears in both suits was the same the fact that the arrears related to two different periods did not prevent the judgment in the former suit operating as res judicata in the latter.

"The result or fruit of the litigation at which the parties are aiming is no longer a matter for the consideration of the Courts. What is to be considered is, if the metaphor may be extended, the root of the difference between them, and the Courts are now forbidden to try any issue in which the matter directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit had been directly and substantially in issue in the former suit."— 5 T. L. J., 176.

35. The plaintiff, a Namburi lady, had sued for arrears of maintenance from 1078 to 1082. The defendant had objected to the claim on the ground that the plaintiff's separate living without his consent disentitled her to the claim, and that the rate claimed was too high. The Court held that as the defendant himself had not been living in the family house, plaintiff's living separately was justified, and that the rate claimed was not too high.

The plaintiff again sued for arrears of maintenance at the former rate. The defendant contended, inter alia, that he had been living in the family house, that the plaintiff's separate living was, therefore, not justified and that she was not therefore entitled to separate maintenance, and that the financial condition of the family having changed for the worse since the former decree, the rate claimed was too high.

Held,—The former decree did not operate as res judicata against the defendant.

A decree in a maintenance suit is not final in the sense that the rate fixed can never be altered; if there is a change in the circumstances of the family and the persons obliged by the decree they are entitled to have the rate of maintenance reduced. But, in cases such as these, the Courts would require clear proof of materially altered circumstances before interfering with the terms fixed by the previous decrees and would not allow the rule which prohibits the re-agitation of res judicata to be disregarded by a mere allegation of altered circumstances.—31 T. L. R., 117 (=5 T. L. J., 289).

36. A suit for Thiruppuvarom for the years 1039 to 1050 was dismissed on the ground that a claim for Thiruppuvarom was not a claim for rent but constituted an interest in land, and the non-exercise of the said right for 12 years effectually barred the party seeking to recover. Subsequen[tly] the view prevailed that a claim for Thir[u]puvarom was a claim for rent, that it wa[s a] recurring cause of action and that the n[on-] exercise of the claim for any length of ti[me] would not bar the right. Plaintiffs broug[ht] a suit for the arrears from 1077. The clai[m] was resisted on the ground that the pr[e]vious decision operated as res judicata.

Held,—The previous decision did n[ot] operate as res judicata. If Thiruppuvaro[m] was rent and the claim was a periodicall[y] recurring one, as it undoubtedly was, i[t] was clear that the cause of action for th[e] Thiruppuvarom that was claimed in the present suit was different from the cause of action for the claim made in the previou[s] suit, and the subject-matter of the two suits was different.

Further, an erroneous decision on a question of law in a former suit is binding on the parties thereto only as far as the subject-matter of that suit is concerned and does not prevent the Courts from deciding the same question rightly between the same parties in subsequent suits where the subject-matter of the suit is different.— 6 T. L. J., 357.

37. If in respect of a cause of action, the plaintiff omits to sue for all the reliefs which result therefrom, he would be precluded from suing for them in a subsequent suit.

The advantage which a suitor may obtain solely from the operation of the rule of res judicata is not a relief for which he is bound to pay fees under the Court fees Regulation (F. B.).— 34 T. L. R., 116 (= 8 T. L. J., 218).

38. The plaintiffs as representing one of four branches of an Ezhava Tarwad which, by long separate residence and course of conduct had become divided among themselves, sued for recovery of their one-fourth share of items 1 and 2 of the plaint properties. They also alleged that item No. 1 had originally gone out of the Tarwad, and that their branch Karanavan, M. had recovered it on payment of money from their sub-Tarwad funds, and to this extent they claimed a special interest in item No. 1 and sought as contribution from the defendants who represented the other branches three-fourths of the above amount.

Prior to the present suit M. brought a suit (O. S. No. 597 of 1071) against the defendants for declaration of title to and recovory of possessson of item No. 1 on the allegation that he had recovered the property with money that he had obtained as Makkathayam gift and that he had a right to retain posssession of the property till his special lien was discharged. This suit was dismissed on the ground that the property had not been acquired with funds M. had obtained as Makkathayam.

The defendants contended that the suit was barred by resjudicata by reason of the judgment in O. S. 597 of 1071 so far as the recovery of the money was concerned.

Held (Per R. Viraraghava Iyengar and Sesha Iyer J. J., Palpu Pillai J. dissenting).-The judgment in the prior suit did not operate as res judicata to the present suit. The cause of action in both the suits were not the same.

Per Sesha Iyer, J.—The plea of res judicata depends upon the exact effect of a decision. The plea of res judicata being one in restraint of the right of a litigant to have his case fully tried and determined, the judgment which is pleaded in bar of this right must be strictly construed.

The prior suit was brought on the basis that the acquisition was made by M. with his Makkathayam funds and as such he had a special right which the defendants had violated by dispossessing him of the property. The Court held that the property had not been acquired with funds M. had obtained as Makkathayam and the special right based thereon which he pleaded was negatived. On that ground and on a further ground that the property was in the possession of the Tarwad Karanavan, the prayer for recovery of possessson was refused, the plaintiff's right, if any, being according to the Munsiff, to sue for the money. The present suit was brought for contribution in respect of money spent by M., as co-mortgagor with the defendants, for recovery of the property that was outstanding with a stranger, on the ground that the amount so spent was funds of plaintiffs' branch Tarwad of which M. was the senior member. The scope of the findings in the prior suit was specifically confined by the pleadings, and it is obvious that the cause of action and the relief prayed for there were different from the cause of action and the relief sought in this suit. A plaintiff may not, of course, evade the application of the rule of res judicata merely by varying his form of pleading or by describing the subject-matter of his suit or expressing his rights in different language; but it is also generally agreed that a plaintiff is not bound to put forward in one suit all his titles to the subject sued for, nor when several independent grounds of action are available to him to unite them all in one suit.

Per Palpu Pillai, J. (dissenting).—The cause of action in the two suits was substantially the same.— 9 T. L. J., 323.

39. The suit was for redemption of a mortgage given by the plaintiff's ancestor to the Karanavan of the defendant. The defendant denied the mortgage.

Held.—The recital of the admission that he held the plaint property under a mortgage from the plaintiff's family, made by the defendant's Karanavan as a defendant in a prior suit instituted by the plaintiff's father against his co-sharers for a partition of the family properties including the plaint property, was admissible as relevant evidence of the admission of the plaintiff's title by the defendant's Karanavan.

The former suit was a suit for partition, while the present suit was one for redemption. The issues that arise in this case could not, from their very nature, have arisen in the former case. In fact the causes of action in the two suits are quite different. The plea of res judicata must therefore fail.— 36 T. L. R., 187

(=10 T. L. J., 143).

40. Where one of the respondents to an appeal dies during the pendency thereof and the appeal abates so far as that respondent is concerned by reason of no one being brought on record in that place, the decision of the lower Court does not become final nor does it operate as res judicata as regards the other respondents.

Section 9 or the principle of res judicata of which the Section is held to be an imperfect embodiment is not applicable. To invoke this principle, there must be a final determination of the question that is subsequently raised. There is no such final determination here as the decision of the District Munsiff was deprived of its finality when an appeal was preferred. On the filing of the appeal, the judgment ceased to be operative as res judicata and became res subjudice.

The abatement of the appeal by the death of one of the respondents cannot affect the prosecution of the appeal against the other respondents when the right of the appeal survives against them.— 14 T. L. J. 267.

(=17 T. L. J., 436).

41. Per Viraraghava Iyengar, C.J.—"An erroneous decision by a competent tribunal on a question of law directly and substantially in issue between the parties to the suit does not prevent a Court from deciding the same question arising between the same parties in a subsequent suit according to law. The Court cannot of course allow the correctness of the decree in the former suit to be questioned in the later suit on the ground that the former suit was decided under a mistake of law, nor can it pass a decree the effect of which would be to set at naught in whole or in part the decree in the former suit."

Per Raman Tampi, J.—Though a decree in a former suit is binding on the parties thereto in so far as it affects the subject-matter thereof, no decision on a point of law involved therein has such binding force except to the extent of the same being necessary for the conclusiveness of the facts so decided.

It is also well understood that where it is sought to apply the estoppel of a judgment rendered upon one cause of action, the inquiry must always be as to the point or question actually litigated and determined in the original action, not what might have been thus litigated and determined, and that only upon such matters is the judgment conclusive in another action.—

(=14 T. L. J., 620).

42. The members of a Tarwad can be allowed to impeach documents executed by other members, even though the latter failed to do so in a former suit based on such documents. The latter suit cannot operate as res judicata.— 16 T. L. J., 550.

43. Plaintiff sued defendants on a Chitty hypothecation bond, executed by one P., deceased Karanavan of defendants 1 and 2. The defendants resisted the suit. In the course of the trial, the plaintiff stated that he would be satisfied with a decree against the separate assests of the deceased. In execution, the plaintiff attempted to proceed against the hypotheca. On the question whether he could do so :

Held.—The plaintiff's statement that he was content with a decree against the separate assets of P., implied the abandonment of his claim to enforce the debt on the hypothecated properties within the meaning of Explanation III of Section 9 of the old C. P. C. The plaintiff was, therefore, estopped from proceeding against the hypotheca.— 18 T. L. J., 851.

II. PARTIES.

1. As suits against Malayali families were invariably brought against the Karanavan alone, a decree against the Karanavan binds generally the other members of the Tarwad as if they were parties.— 4 T. L. R., 42.

2. An ex-parte judgment is good for purposes of res judicata provided the parties are the same.— 6 T. L. R., 19.

3. Judgments of Courts must be accepted as declaring facts as they truly are and parties thereto are entitled to their legal rights flowing from such judgments whatever may have been their averments or contentions in the litigations which resulted in those judgments.— 6 T. L. R., 78.

4. Where a plea of res judicata is set up, the main point to be considered is whether the matter in question was directly and substantially in issue between the same parties and was finally adjudicated upon in the previous suit; and it makes little difference whether the parties were marshalled in the one case differently from the other, so long as they had the fullest opportunity of contesting the point decided.— 6 T. L. R., 100.

5. The decree obtained against the junior members of a Malabar Tarwad, does not operate as res judicata against the Tarwad, i. e., against its other members.

The sale of Tarwad property held in execution of a decree against the junior members, cannot affect the interests of the Tarwad in that property.— 7 T. L. R., 137.

6. A decree obtained against a mere manager of a Malabar Tarwad, who had not the full rights and privileges attaching to the position of a Karanavan and who is known to have acted in breach of his duty, in a suit to which the Karanavan was not a formal party and had no opportunity of proving the claim of his Tarwad, cannot operate as res judicata against a subsequent suit based on the same claim and instituted by representatives of that Tarwad.— 8 T. L. R., 33.

7. A judgment passed in a suit to which the Karanavan of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad is a party will bind all the other members thereof, though the latter may not be the parties specially named in the record. If the rule were otherwise, the principle of res judicata can never be applied to Malabar Tarwads.

If any slight variation between the cause of action in the former suit and the cause of action in the subsequent suit be held sufficient to reopen a litigation even in cases where the Courts find that they are substantially one and the same, the consequence would be a frightful increase in the inaccuracies in pleadings and a virtual repeal of the law of res judicata. In cases of this kind, the question for the consideration of the Courts is whether the cause of action in the subsequent litigation is substantially the same as in the former suit; and the variation in the date, amount and the like must be duly considered in arriving at a decision.

In the case, the cause of action was substantially the same as the one on which the prior suit was based; and as the present plaintiff (the Karanavan of the Tarwad) was a party to that litigation, the decision passed therein bound all the plaintiffs (F. B.).— 8 T. L. R., 62.

8. The act of the Karanavan, in the absence of fraud or collusion, is the act of the whole Tarwad. A decree or judgment passed in a suit brought by or against a Karanavan binds all his Seshakars and operates as res judicata. An order under Section 230 (old C P. C.) has the same force of res judicata as a decree in an original suit.— 9 T. L. R., 78.

9. Suit by plaintiffs, Kysthanakkars of a Devaswom, to have a Venpattom lease, granted by the 1st to 2nd defendant cancelled on the ground of the former's incompetency to do so. The Zilla Judge, in effect, held that the 1st defendant was precluded by a former decree to which he was party, declaring plaintiffs alone to be competent to grant leases on behalf of the Devaswom, and allowed the plaintiff's claim.

Held.—The 2nd defendant, being the person who claims to retain the property in virtue of the lease, has a substantial interest in the present suit, the 1st defendant being a party pro forma. The 2nd defendant being no party to the previous decree, and the property now in suit being different from the subject-matter of the former suit, the judgment in the prior suit could not operate as a bar against the 2nd defendant who is the real defendant in the case. The fact that 1st defendant is a formal party to the present suit, could not alter the aspect of the case (F. B.).— 9 T. L. R., 86.

10. An order passed on a claim petition by the Court executing the decree has no force of res judicata. Its only effect is that after a lapse of one year from the date of its passing, the parties to it cannot question its validity or legality as regards the particular property to which it relates.— 10 T. L. R., 37.

Fol.—18 T. L. R., 200.

11. In the absence of positive proof of fraud and collusion, the Seshakars will be bound by the decree passed against their Karanavan. The mere fact that a reconsideration of the genuineness of the debt-bond on which the decree was passed would lead the Courts to a conclusion different from the one already arrived at in the sui against the Karanavan, is not sufficient t raise a presumption of fraud and collusio in obtaining that decree.— 10 T. L. R., 46

12. (1) Under Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code, the rule of res judicata ap plies to claims as well as to pleas. The tria of the issue prohibited under this Section may be one raised by the plaint or the writ ten statement of the defendant, or by th contention of the defendant raised at th first hearing of the suit. The issue nee not necessarily be raised by, or founded upon, the pleadings of the plaintiffs alone.

(2) A decision in favour of, or against the Karanavan of a Tarwad, in a suit bona fide prosecuted or defended, binds th whole Tarwad, unless and until fraud o collusion in obtaining that decision is established.

(3) The mere fact that no specific issue was raised in the former suit, will not prevent the operation of the rule of res-judicata, if in substance the matter was heard and determined therein.

(4) Section 332 of the old Civil Procedure Code says:—"Upon the hearing of the appeal, the respondent may take any objection to the decision of the lower Court which he might have taken if he had preferred a separate appeal from such decision." It is silent as to the mode in which objections should be taken to the lower Court's judgments.

Where the final judgment shows that a certain objection was taken, though not in writing, and allowed by the final Appellate Court, the decision with respect to the objection cannot be impugned in a subsequent suit, as based on an objection improperly taken and wrongly allowed.

(5) The decision of a competent Court, though based on an erroneous view of law or fact, will operate as res-judicata in a subsequent suit, provided the other conditions of res judicata exist (F. B.).

Held on Review affirming the foregoing rulings (1) and (2):

The phrase "right claimed" in Explanation V of Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code (Regulation II of 1065), applies to bona fide claims, as well as to bona fide defence.

A decree properly obtained against a Karanavan in a suit in which he was defendant, has the same legal effect for purposes of res judicata, as a decree against him in a case in which he was plaintiff.

Section 26 [ = Or. I, r. 8 (1) ] of the Civil Procedure Regulation has no application to cases of Malabar Tarwads.—

13. Suit to set aside a hypothecation of an elephant by the Karanavan of a Tarwad, and the decree obtained thereon, on the grounds that the hypothecation was bad for want of consideration and that the decree in question was obtained during pendency of a suit to remove the Karanavan from his office. The defence contended that the question of consideration was res judicata by a decree in a suit brought by the Karanavan himself to set aside the hypothecation on the ground that it had no consideration.

Held.—The suit by the Karanavan having been brought as Karanavan and dismissed on the merits, the decree therein operated as res judicata on the question of consideration. The fact that if, instead of the Karanavan, his Anandaravan (present plaintiff) had brought the suit, the onus probandi would have been on the creditor and not on the debtor (the Karanavan), could not deprive the decree of its legal validity and character. The rules relating to onus probandi are rules of mere procedure and could not affect the principles of substantive law which determines the weight due to the regular adjudications of a Court of law.— 12 T. L. R., 87.

14. An order passed on the merits on a petition claiming any portion of attached property is conclusive unless it is disputed within one year by means of a regular suit.— 15 T. L. R., 63.

15. A is the senior male member or de jure Karanavan of an Ezhava Tarwad. T and B are its junior members. R, the Karanavan of the said three persons, and T and B were sued by X for the redemption of a Tarwad mortgage. T and B contested the suit, although R died during its progress. The first Court gave a decree for X and it was confirmed both in the District and the High Courts. In none of these Courts was A, the successor of the deceased R, made a party. A, therefore, sued for a declaration to the effect that the decree thus obtained by T and B was not binding upon the Tarwad as himself, its legal representative, was not made a party to the suit after the death of R. The District Munsiff gave a decree for plaintiff, but on appeal, the District Judge reversed it on the ground of res judicata and holding that T and B as managers sufficiently represented the Tarwad in the previous suit.

Held.—As Karanavan alone can sue and be sued on behalf of the Tarwad, the Tarwad was not properly represented in the previous suit.

When a junior member joins with the Karanavan in the execution of documents, the natural inference is that he was acting in subordination to the Karanavan and not by way of supersession.

The mere execution of documents legally by a Seshakaran cannot make him a de facto Karanavan :

The conduct of suits on behalf of the Tarwad by a junior member will not give him a right to ignore the existence of the Karanavan:

It is only when a party dies after argument and before decree that his death will affect the validity of the decree.

As the Karanavan was not made a party to the previous suit and as he cannot be said to be claiming under or through a Seshakaran according to the spirit of Explanation V of Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code, the bar of res judicata does not apply to the case.— 17 T. L. R., 18.

16. Junior members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad are, in the absence of fraud, bound by a decree obtained against a Karanavan and manager of the Tarwad, and they should be treated as parties to the decree-execution and not as strangers.

Where a decree has been obtained by fraud practised upon the opposite party by which he was prevented from placing his case before the tribunal which was called upon to adjudicate upon it in the way most to his advantage, then the decree may be set aside; but a simple allegation that a decree is wrong or that the suit or defence was not conducted with due care or diligence or that the evidence adduced was conflicting and unsatisfactory or that there was other available evidence which, if tendered, would have turned the scales in one's favour cannot be acted upon.— 18 T. 19. The suit was to set aside an Otti an Kuzhikanom mortgage executed by defend ants Nos. 6 to 8 to defendants Nos. 1 to on the ground of want of good and vali consideration. The contention was tha defendants 1 to 5 as the mortgagees of de fendants 6 to 8 should be bound by prior judgment against the latter. Th plaintiffs claimed to be members of th Tarwad of the defendants.

Held.—After a mortgage has been dul created, the mortgagor in whom the equit of redemption is vested no longer possesse any such estate as would entitle him to re present the mortgagee in a subsequent sui so as to render that decision binding upo and conclusive against such mortgagee. De fendants 1 to 5 cannot claim under defend ants 6 to 8 within the meaning of Section 9 C. P. C. That Section has been interpreted as if after the words "under whom they or any of them claim," the words "by a title arising subsequently to the commencement of the former suit" had been inserted (F. B.) 4 S. D., 169

20. A sued B for setting aside an alienation. A died during the course of the suit. C and D two rival claimants came forward each claiming to be brought on record as the heir of A. The Munsiff before whom the suit was pending passed an order under Section 351, C. P. C., [=Or. XXII, r. 5], in favour of C. Subsequently C brought a suit against D for recovery of some property which belonged to A and which D had taken possession of after A's death, alleging that he and not D was the heir of A. The Munsiff on the strength of the former summary order, decreed the suit, holding that D was not the heir of A,

Held.—The order passed under Section 351, C. P. C., in the former suit cannot operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit.

"There is no rule of universal application that an order in any proceeding between two litigants debars the trial of the same question between the same parties in a subsequent proceeding, no matter what the scope of the subsequent litigation may be and no matter what were the circumstances in which it might have been commenced. If we were to lay down any such comprehensive rule of law, we should obviously assume the functions of the Legislature."

A summary investigation under Section 351 C. P. C., cannot be as full and as searching as an investigation in a regular suit.—

21. Plaintiff, who obtained from the foreman of a Chitty an assignment of a bond executed by a prized subscriber (the predecessor in title of the defendants), sued to recover the arrears of subscriptions in respect of 14 instalments of the Chitty. The defendants contended, inter alia, that the suit was barred by Section 9, C. P. C., on the ground that, in a prior suit, to which the foreman and the defendants were parties (defendants), a decision was passed in favour of the then plaintiff, a non-prized subscriber, charging the decree amount on the moneys in the hands of the defendants and payable to the foreman.

Held.—The decision did not operate as res judicata.

Per Hunt, J.—In order to successfully raise the plea of res judicata between co-defendants, there must have been such an adjudication in the former suit as will be res judicata on the matter between the defendants themselves as effectually as between the plaintiffs and defendants in the former suit. There can be no res judicata betweeen co-defendants in a case where there has been no active controversy as between them.

Per Ramachandra Row J.—When any relief given to the plaintiff in a case involves or requires a decision regarding the rights inter se of the defendants, such decision must be held to operate as res judicata in all subsequent proceedings between the co-defendants.

Whether the decision of a point which was in active controversy between the co-defendants, but which was not necessary for the disposal of the plaintiff's case, would operate as res judicata between the co-defendants, will depend upon whether on the basis of such decision the judgment gave any relief to the defendants inter se; if it did, the decision might be res judicata: if otherwise, not.— 2 T. L. J., 6.

Fol.—2 T. L. J., 275.

22. The plaintiffs obtained a mortgage deed from the defendant, the Karanavan of a Malabar Tarwad, for 1000 Fanams. The junior members of the Tarwad sued to set aside the deed, on the ground, inter alia, that the mortgage was not supported by consideration. They made the plaintiffs and the Karanavan, the mortgagor, as parties—defendants to the suit. The plaintiffs and the defendant (Karanavan) contended that the document was fully supported by consideration, but the Court found that the mortgage was wanting in consideration to the extent of 450 Fanams. The plaintiffs brought the present suit to recover the sum of 450 Fanams from the defendant. The defence was, inter alia, that the matter was res judicata by reason of the finding on the question of consideration in the suit brought by the Seshakars.

Held.—The matter was not res judicata.

In order to apply the principle of res judicata between co-defendants two conditions have to be satisfied:—(1) The finding on the disputed question in the subsequent suit must have been necessary for the purpose of affording relief to the plaintiff in the former suit; and (2) there must have been a conflict of interests between the co-defendants themselves.

Under Explanation V to Section 9, Civil Procedure Code, a right to relief can be said to be "claimed in common" only as between parties who would be benefited by such relief if granted and who have such an interest in the relief obtained that they could join as co-plaintiffs under Section 22, [ = Or. I, rr. 1 & 4 ], Civil Procedure Code.— 27 T. L. R., 70 (= 2 T. L. J., 275).

23. The judgment in a former suit brought by a junior member of a Malabar Tarwad to set aside an alienation made by the Karanavan operates as res judicata to a second suit brought by another junior member for exactly the same relief.

Per Muthunayagom Pillai, J.—If the first suit was one instituted on behalf of the Tarwad and if the Karanavan of the Tarwad was a party to it as the accredited head of the family, Explanation V to Section 9 would bar a second suit. The fact that the plaintiff in the first suit was a junior member and not a Karanavan does not make any difference.

Per Viraraghava Iyengar, J.—In a litigation brought by a junior member or some junior members of the Tarwad for setting aside an alienation of Tarwad property and to which the Karanavan is a party, the Tarwad, notwithstanding that all the Tarwad junior members for the time being are not actually parties to the record must be taken to have been fully and properly represented and to have had an opportunity of vindicating its corporate rights against the alleged improper acts of its agent or representative, the Karanavan. The observations of Sadasiva Iyer, C. J., in the Case in II Thandu Iyer's Select Unreported Decisions, page 256 at 257, were referred to. The trend of the decisions of this Court has all along been in favour of the view that Exaplanation V, to Section 9, C. P. C., applies t Malabar Tarwads.— 31 T. L. R., 104

25. The decree in a prior suit based o an oath agreement does not operate as re judicata as against persons who thoug parties to the prior suit are not parties t the oath agreement in terms of which th prior decree was passed.— 8 T. L. J., 120

26. When a decree declaring a right t partition has not been given effect to by th parties proceeding to partition in accor dance with it, it is competent for them, o any of them, if they still continue to be in terested in the joint property, to bring an other suit for declaration of a right to a partition in case their right to partition i called in question at a time when, by reason of limitation or otherwise, they cannot pu into effect the decree first obtained. I this respect, suits for declaration of righ to partition differ from most other suits. S long as property is jointly held, so long does a right to partition continue.

Such a decree amounted to nothing more than an inchoate partition insufficient to change the character of the property which continues a joint estate until there has been an actual partition by metes and bounds or a division of title.— 9 T. L. J., 25.

27. A benamidar can bring a suit in his own name without bringing on record the real owner who, though not a party to the litigation, is fully affected by the rules o res judicata. In such a suit it is open to the real owner to apply to be joined in the action.— 10 T. L. J., 338.

28. Where the Karanavan in his representative capacity sues or is sued on behalf of the Tarwad and a decree is made in such suit, the decree must, in the absence of invalidating circumstances and in the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary, bind the Tarwad, or enure for the benefit of the Tarwad as the case may be. The junior members are consequently constructive parties to such decree and to the execution proceedings following it (F. B.).—

29. A obtained a decree against B. B had also obtained a decree against A. The decree obtained by A was for a larger amount. C obtained a decree against B and attached the decree-debt due to B from A. C then applied to get himself impleaded as the decree-holder in the attached decree and to execute it. Notice was issued to A to show cause why the decree should not be executed after impleading C as the decree-holder. No objections having been received, the Court on 7-5-1098 passed an order:—"attaching decree-holder is allowed to execute the decree." Notice was again issued to A to show cause why the decree should not be executed against him. A, thereupon, produced the decree he had obtained against B in Court and objected to the execution of the decree obtained by B against him praying for satisfaction being entered of the smaller decree.

Held (accepting the objection of A).—The order of 7-5-1098 allowing execution did not operate as res judicata. The notice issued to A before that order was passed could be taken to have been issued only for the statement of objections, if any, to the impleading of the attaching creditor as the decree-holder. The issue of a second notice to A calling upon him to show cause why the decree should not be executed against him clearly supported that view.—

30. The plaint properties belonged to the second defendant's Brahmaswom and were held on Kanom by the first defendant. The first defendant hypothecated, and later on sold, the properties to the plaintiff. Subsequent to the hypothecation but before the sale, the second defendant had filed a suit against the first defendant for redemption of the properties and that suit was decreed in terms of the plaint. The plaintiff brought the present suit to recover the amount under the hypothecation from the plaint properties and the first defendant, alleging that the finding in the redemption suit that the first defendant had only a redeemable mortgage right over the properties could not bind him. It was accepted as common ground that the sale became infructuous by reason of the pendency of the redemption suit.

Held.—The finding in the redemption suit that the Kanom was a redeemable one cannot bind the plaintiff who had acquired a mortgage right in the properties before the date of that suit. The plaintiff could not be deemed to be a person claiming under the first defendant within the meaning of Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code, corresponding to Section 10 of the Code of 1100.—

31. A mortgagee who purchases the equity of redemption in execution of a mortgage decree obtained against his mortgagor cannot, by such purchase, be deemed to be such representative of his mortgagor as to make a decision obtained against the latter to which the mortgagee is not a party, operate against him as res judicata.

The sale in execution of the decree obtained by the mortgagee should be deemed in law to be but an enforcement of the rights he already possessed under his mortgage. He cannot therefore be said to be claiming under his mortgagor so as to create a privity in estate under his judgment-debtor to justify the rule of res judicata being operative against him.— 43 T. L. R., 108
( = 17 T. L. J., 593).

III. COMPETENT COURT.

1. The decision of a Court, in a former suit, on the same cause of action, between the same parties, or between parties under whom they claim, is no bar to a subsequent suit, unless the Court, that decided the former suit was competent to try the subsequent suit.— 3 T. L. R., 60.

2. The decision of a competent Court will operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit, if the parties, the subject-matter, the cause of action and the issues are substantially the same in both suits notwithstanding that the former decision may have been based on an erroneous view of the law or on a wrong assumption of facts, and that the title set up in the second suit may be different from that set up in the first.— 9 T. L. R., 92.

3. The fact of a decision being by an inferior Court would not preclude its being res judicata upon all points decided thereby, and raised in a subsequent suit filed in a superior Court, between the same parties and in respect of the same subject-matter, provided the inferior Court was competent to try the case at the time it recorded its decision. The fluctuations in the price of property and the consequent changes of pecuniary jurisdiction cannot be allowed to revive claims once finally adjudicated upon. —11 T. L. R., 208.

4. Where the District Judge held that a judgment passed in a certain suit by a Munsiff in respect of the question whether the parties were governed by the Marumakkathayam Law or the Makkathayam Hindu Law, estopped the defendant from setting up the Makkathayam Law:

Held.—Under Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code, it is the judgment of a Court of equal or superior jurisdiction which has the effect of res judicata. The fact that there was a regular appeal to the Zillah Court and a special appeal to the Hig[h] Court does not alter the position of affairs.

The former suit was instituted in and de[-]cided by a Munsiff's Court. The subsequen[t] suit was instituted in the District Cour[t]. The Munsiff was not competent to try thi[s] suit. His judgment in the former sui[t] therefore, could not conclude the proceed[-]ings in the District Court.— 13 T. L. R., 15[?]

5. Under Section 9, C. P. C., the issue decided in the former suit must, in orde[r] to be res judicata in the second suit, hav[e] been decided by a Court "competent to tr[y] such subsequent suit."

The criterion is not whether the Cou[rt] which passed the former judgment ha[d] jurisdiction over that portion of the clai[m] which is in dispute in the subsequent sui[t] but whether the former Court would hav[e] been competent to try the subsequent su[it] itself.— 3 S. D. 22[?]

6. There were two connected suits o[n] the file of the Krishnapuram Munsiff['s] Court. The material issues in the case were the same. The 1st case was decided i[n] the Krishnapuram Munsiff's Court, whic[h] recorded findings against the appellant and the decision was affirmed in appeal i[n] the Quilon District Court. The 2nd sui[t] which was also decided against the appel[-]lants, came up in regular appeal to th[e] High Court as the value of the suit wa[s] over Rs. 500. The respondent raised [a] preliminary objection that the High Cour[t] was concluded by the decision of the Dis[-]trict Court against the appellants in th[e] connected suit and against which no secon[d] appeal had been preferred.

Held.—The final decision of the Distri[ct] Court in appeal in the connected suit oper[-]ated as res judicata in the second suit.

"Serious anomalies and inconvenience would arise if we hold that a final adjudica[-]tion binding on the parties in one of tw[o] cross suits or connected suits is n[ot] binding on the parties in an appe[al] from the decision in the other suit, simply because, for the sake of brevity and convenience, a single judgment is written by the first Court for both suits or on the ground that it does not look well for an Appellate Court to be bound by the decision of a lower Court in another suit" (4 M. L. T., 172).— 1 T. L. J., 49.

7. For purposes of res judicata, it is the competency of the original Court which decided the former suit that must be looked to and not that of the Appellate Court which ultimately decided the suit on appeal. 19 T. L. J., 510.

IV. HEARD AND FINALLY DECIDED.

1. The dismissal of a suit for default to adduce evidence by the plaintiff, in which the defence was that the cause of action had not arisen and that the Court had no jurisdiction, cannot be a bar to a subsequent suit in the proper Court, when the cause of action actually arises.— 3 T. L. R., 39.

2. The decision of a suit upon the oath of one of the litigating parties is not res judicata inasmuch as it is not an adjudication upon the merits. Its effect is simply the disposal of the former suit; but not res judicata upon future litigation.— 3 T. L. R., 56.

Fol.—10 T. L. R., 60.
Diss.—32 T. L. R., 32
(=6 T. L. J., 126)

3. Only judgments, based upon evidence duly recorded on the issues raised, have the force of adjudication and res judicata.— 3 T. L. R., 59.

4. When a suit is dismissed on a preliminary ground, the opinions expressed on the merits would not operate as res judicata against the maintenance of a second suit.

The findings in a judgment upon matters immaterial to the ground upon which a suit is finally disposed of, amount to no more than obiter dicta and do not constitute a final decision (7 All. 606). It has also been held in British India that when a suit is dismissed on a preliminary ground, the opinions expressed on other issues were not res judicata so as to bar the maintenance of a second suit. (3 Bom., 223 and 11 Cal., 544).— 8 T. L. R., 158.

5. Two sisters having inherited from their father certain property subject to a mortgage, one of them (since deceased) sued the other and obtained a decree for partition as also for redemption of the whole property subject to her surrendering her sister's moiety on the latter's paying her share of the mortgage amount. This decree was allowed to become barred by lapse of time. Since the legal bar, the interests of the surviving sister were purchased by 2nd plaintiff who sued, under that right, to redeem the whole property, on payment of the whole debt.

Held.—The plaintiff was entitled to recover only a moiety of the property on payment of proportionate share of the debt and the claim to the share of the deceased sister was res judicata by reason of the prior decree granting redemption which had become time-barred.

The principle that a mortgage is indivisible, is intended for the protection of the mortgagee's interest, and is inapplicable to the case where it would, instead of helping the mortgagee, deprive him of what he had acquired a title to by lapse of time.— 9 T. L. R., 89.

6. To apply the principle of res judicata the Court must be satisfied that there are three identities: (i) parties, (ii) property, and (iii) cause of action.

A judgment cannot be denied the force of res judicata because it expounded, and proceeded upon, erroneous views of law, provided there are the three identities.

No subsequent change in the law or in the opinions of its expounders, can revive rights once finally adjudicated upon.— 9 T. L. R., 139.

11. No decree based on a compromise could operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit as such a decree is not an adjudication on the merits, on the disputed points, under Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The distinction between an estoppel by representation and res judicata is that "the latter prohibits the Court from entering into an enquiry at all as to a matter already adjudicated upon, whilst the former proh bits the party, after the enquiry has alrea been entered upon, from proving anythi which would contradict his own previo declarations or representations to the pr judice of another party, who has, relyi upon those declarations or representatior altered his position; in other words, res j dicata prohibits an enquiry in limine whil an estoppel is only a piece of evidence. "The plea of res judicata proceeds up the grounds of public policy properly called, whilst an estoppel is simply an a plication of equitable principles betwe man and man, two individual parties to litigation.

Sometimes, the representation of a par to a litigation, which representation pleaded as an estoppel in subsequent litig tions, might be untrue or false, and in suc a case, it would indeed be inequitable bind that party in all future litigations, l that representation, even as against oth party to the first litigation; more so, again the rest of the world. The effect of the r presentation should, in such cases, be limi ed to the extent of prohibiting the par making it from seeking, in a subsequent sui to invalidate what has been, on the strengt of it, done by the other party in respect the subject-matter of the litigation in th course of which that representation w made or which was determined in accor ance with that representation.—

14. It is only when the findings support the decree that the questions to which they refer can be said to have been "heard and determined" under Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the adjudication becomes res judicata. The natural inference regarding findings which are unconnected with the decretal order and, a fortiori those which are opposed to that order, is that they are immaterial and not necessary for the decision of the case and hence, cannot operate as res judicata.—

The objections to X's claim to an one-fifth share now urged by T had been urged in that suit also. 19. The suit was for a declaration that the plaintiff and not defendant was entitled to spiritual supremacy over a church and for an injunction restraining the defendant from making further appointments of Kathanars to the church and preventing the present Kathanars from officiating therein. Holding inter alia that the suit was opposed to the principles of the provision of Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act inasmuch as it did not contain a prayer for consequential relief, the District Judge dismissed it.

Held.—Injunction in the case of improper interference with the performance of religious service is a consequential relief, the appropriateness of which will depend on the circumstances of each case and that, therefore, the suit is not contrary to the principles of Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act:

In the case of joint trustees of a religious institution, the possession of one is possession of all:

A compromise in a pending suit made by the contending parties as a provisional arrangement without causing any prejudice to their legal rights as may be finally decided in the suit will not operate as an estoppel as to title in a subsequent suit by the same parties:

A material issue which has been tried and determined between the same parties in a prior suit and in a competent Court as to the status of one of them in relation to another, cannot be tried in another suit between them, though the property, the subject-matter in the one suit, is not the same as in the other (F. 21. Plaintiffs who represented one bran of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad sued f redemption of their 1/8 share of proporti numbers 1 and 2 from defendants who we donees under a deed of gift by X anoth sharer and assignee of the mortgages ex cuted by plaintiff's Karanavan. Defendar admitted the claim to property No. with some modifications as to its exten but with regard to No. 2, they alleged previous mortgage of 970 which had t come barred. In a prior suit by anoth co-sharer against X, the latter's plea of t previous mortgage was found to be false.

Held.—The judgment in the prior s could not bar the defendants' contention mortgage in 970 as res judicata under Se tion 9. The plaintiff in that suit was n one under whom the plaintiffs in the pr sent suit claimed title. The Karanavan these plaintiffs was added as a supplemen al defendant in the prior suit, but he w ex parte, and therefore there was no acti contest as to titles between that Karanav and the party from whom the defendar claimed title. Hence the suit could not said to be heard and determined betwe parties under whom the parties in t present suit claimed, litigating under t same title, as required by Section 9.

22. In a suit by the junior members of Ezhava Tarwad to set aside a hypoth cation bond and the decree based there where the defendant (hypothecatee) contended that the debt having been contracted by the Karanavan and 2 senior Anandaravars in connection with an Abkari contract, the Tarwad properties were liable, that the suit having been brought 3 years after the date of the decree it was barred by limitation, that as the Karanavan and the senior Anandaravars were parties to the suit, the other members were in the eye of the law presumed to be parties and therefore though the defendants in the former suit were ex parte, the fresh suit was bad for res judicata and that plaintiffs could not bring a fresh suit to set aside the execution proceedings but could apply only by a petition under Section 288, Civil Procedure Code [new Section 40]:

Held.—(1) For a declaration of the Tarwad's title to immovable property free from liability to sale in execution of a decree, the limitation period is six years:

(2) An ex parte decree is res judicata against the parties and privies thereto till set aside:

(3) Even where the Karanavan was ex parte in the first suit, if he remained so, not on account of fraud or collusion or misconduct, the Tarwad must be bound by the decree;

(4) (a) Where there has been fraud or collusion or treachery on the Karanavan's part or (b) when the Court was cheated into believing that the case was fairly fought or the Tarwad was fairly represented when in point of fact it was not so or (c) where the Karanavan had not defended properly the former suit because the plaint debt being a personal debt of his, he could not very well himself defend the suit on behalf of the Tarwad though there was no fraud, collusion or treachery, the Tarwad ought to be given an opportunity in a fresh suit to prove that the debt did not exist or was not binding on it, in other words, that the suit was not barred by Section 9 or 238, C. 26. If the order on a claim petition becomes final, that order prevents the party aggrieved thereby from reopening the question as a defendant, the principle of res judicata applying to a defence as well as to a claim as plaintiff.

The bar of the prior order even on a point of limitation without going into the merits of the case would conclude quite as much as it would conclude the plaintiff.— 2 S. D., 55.

27. In a suit for recovery of immovable property by a benamidar, in his own name, it must be presumed to have been instituted with the consent and approval of the real owner against whom any adverse decision on the title set up will take effect as res judicata.

The test is whether the beneficiary consented to the action of the benamidar, the prima facie presumption is that he did consent. But it is a rebuttable presumption (F. B.).— 2 S. D., 62.

28. In a suit for recovery of arrears of Michavarom, the defendant failed to set up the plea of set off on account of overpayment and the suit was decreed in favour of the plaintiff.

In a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff against the same defendant for recovery of arrears of Michavarom, the defendant set up the plea of set off.

Held.—The plea of set off though not raised in the previous suit could be raised in a subsequent suit.

If in the prior suit, the defendant had pleaded a set-off of the excess payment under Section 106 of the C. P. C. [=Or. VIII, r. 6], and paid court-fees on the same, that would have enabled the Court "to pronounce a final judgment in the same suit, both on the original and the cross-claim" as provided in the last para of Section 106. The above phraseology indicates that, in the absence of such plea of set-off, the finding in the judgment would not be final as to the excess amount of the counter-claim.

Again, in order to bar a second trial of an issue under Section 9, the matter must have been "directly and substantially in issue" in the prior suit and it must have been therein "heard and finally determined". In the subsequent suit, the payment made by the defendant up to the amount of arrears claimed in the prior suit was, no doubt, a matter directly in issue therein, because, if it was found true, the plaintiff would not have been entitled to any part of the arrears then claimed. The question of payment to any extent beyond that would not have been a point in issue there, unless the Court was seised of jurisdiction to enter into it by a plea of set-off raised by defendant under Section 106 which he did not do.

"It appears to be generally agreed upon that a fact cannot be in issue directly when the judgment can be correct, whether that fact exists or not". "A judgment is only conclusive on the matters which are directly in issue and not those which are brought incidentally into controversy during a trial. Ordinarily the pleadings in a suit constitute, make, define and limit the matters in issue. If under the pleadings in the former action, the plaintiff could not obtain the judgment on the note if introduced in evidence and the proof entitled him thereto, it would seem necessarily to follow that no judgment could be rendered which would bar his right of action thereafter". The question of overpayment in the prior suit was not, therefore, res judicata.— 2 S. D., 105.

29. A consent judgment or ex parte judgment is as much res judicata as a contested judgment.

32. Judgments passed on oath have the effect of res judicata.

"It has always been the law that a judgment by consent or by default raises an estoppel just in the same way as a judgment after the Court has exercised a judicial discretion in the matter. The basis of the estoppel is that when parties have litigated a matter, it is in the interest of the State that litigation should come to an end; and if they agree upon a result, or upon a verdict, or upon a judgment, or upon a verdict and judgment, as the case may be, an estoppel is raised as to all matters in respect of which an estoppel would have been raised by judgment, if the case had been fought out to the bitter end." "The truth is a judgment by consent is intended to put a stop to litigation between the parties, just as much as a judgment which results from the decision of the Court after the matter has been fought out to the end, and I think it would be very mischievous if one were not given a fair and reasonable interpretation to such judgment and were to allow questions that were really involved in the action to be fought over again in a subsequent action."— 3 S. D., 226.

33. The plaintiff, as real owner of certain properties, sued to redeem a mortgage of the same granted by his father in 1062. One L. to whom the plaintiff and the deceased brother had executed a benami sale, had twice sued for redemption of the same mortgage, but without success. The defence in the plaintiff's suit was res judicata.

Held.—The suit was barred under Section 9, C. P. C., by reason of the decision in the suit brought by plaintiff's benamidar.

Per curiam.—It is a well-recognised principle of law that when a benamidar institutes a suit for recovery of possession of property standing in his name, there is a presumption, which may be rebutted, that he has instituted the suit with the full authority of the beneficial owner.

There was not even an allegation in the plaint that the suits by L. were instituted without his knowledge, consent or approval; nor was there any evidence adduced to rebut the presumption. The plaintiff must, in the circumstances, be held to have stood by and permitted L. to sue for recovery of plaint property. He was, therefore, bound by the decree in the former suit, and could not recover on his secret title.

When a suit for redemption of a mortgage is dismissed, a subsequent suit for redemption of the same mortgage based on title could not be sustained, as the bases of both the suits were the same, viz., ownership of the equity of redemption, and the relief claimed were identical, viz., redemption of the self-same mortgage.— 2 T. 37. The Dewan of Travancore sued to recover a sum of money due from the defendant to the Sri Padmanabha Swami Temple. The defendant contended, inter alia, that the Dewan of Travancore was not competent to sue on behalf of the Temple and he did not owe all the money sued for. The first Court decreed the plaintiff's suit in toto. The defendant appealed only with regard to the sum of money not admitted by him to be due and raised objection regarding the competency of the Dewan of Travancore to sue.

Held.—The competency of the Dewan to sue having been accepted by the defendant in relation to the sum adjudged by the decree and not questioned in appeal, the finding became final between the parties and could not be re-opened (F. B.).

Per Krishnan Pandalai, J.—On the question of the plaintiff's right to sue, reference may be made to the decision in 28 Mad., 229, where it was observed that where in an appeal the conclusion of the Appellate Court with reference to matters properly arising before it is such as to render any portion of the decree of the lower Court not made the subject of appeal inconsistent with such conclusion, it would be not only anomalous to leave such portion of the decree in force while setting aside only so much of it as was comprised in the appeal, but it might also involve a breach of the rules as to res judicata. If the Appellate Court should find the claim barred by limitation, it could not for that reason reverse the decree to the extent it has been appealed against, as the unappealed portion is based on the view that there is no bar of limitation, and that view is final between the same parties. The only consistent course is in such cases to dismiss the appeal or reverse the whole decree. The ground that the plaintiff is not competent to sue is like the defence of limitation one that goes to the root of the claim and cannot be allowed to prevail in this case, as the defendant has not appealed against two-thirds of the decree which the plaintiff has got on the same bond.— 5 T. L. J., 48.

38. The Karanavan of the plaintiff and others sued to set aside two alienations made by two persons in favour of the 1st defendant's Karanavan and the second defendant on the ground that they and the alienors were members of the same Tarwad and that the alienations were unsupported by consideration and Tarwad necessity. The plaintiff was also made a defendant to the suit and he remained ex parte. The alienees denied, inter alia, that the plaintiff's Karanavan and others as well as the plaintiffs were not members of the alienor's Tarwad, and were not therefore competent to question the alienations. The suit ended in a compromise by which the plaintiff's Karanavan and others who had sued were held not to be members of the alienor's Tarwad, and the validity of the alienations was affirmed. The plaintiff was not a party to the compromise which dealt with matters outside the dispute in the suit. The plaintiff now sued to set aside the alienations formerly in question as well as a sale subsequently given on the grounds, inter alia, that he and the alienors as well as his Karanavan were members of the alienor's Tarwad, that the alienations were not valid, that the decree in the prior case having dealt with matters outside suit was invalid, and that he was not bound by the decree.

Held.—A compromise entered into by a Karanavan in his representative capacity as Karanavan and embodied in a decree is binding on all the members of his Tarwad, except where it is proved to have been obtained by fraud. That what he did was prejudicial to the Tarwad may be a ground for getting the compromise set aside, but is insufficient to warrant the inference that he did not act on behalf of the Tarwad in entering into the compromise.

All terms which form the consideration for the adjustment of the matter in dispute in the suit, whether they form part of the subject matter of the suit or not, do become related to the suit and can be embodied in the decree.

The principle of res judicata applies to the trial of suits as well as of issues.—

39. Certain properties of a Malabar Tarwad were sold to defendant who was directed by the deed of sale to pay a certain debt of the Tarwad. The defendant failing to pay the debt, the Tarwad paid the same. Two suits, one by the Karanavan and the other by certain junior members (in which the Karanavan was a party, defendant) were brought for the recovery of the amount. The defendant pleaded limitation. The Munsiff upheld the defence plea and dismissed both suits as barred by limitation under Article 91. The Karanavan appealed to the District Court against the decree in his suit. The District Judge dismissed the appeal holding that the suit was barred but under Article 96 and not under Article 91. In second appeal by the Karanavan a preliminary objection was raised by the respondent that the decree in the other suit not having been appealed against that decision operated as res judicata in the case under appeal.

Held.—There was no res judicata. It was not possible for the appellant to have appealed against a decree dismissing the suit in which he was but a defendant and it was meaningless to say that simply because he (the Karanavan) did not do what was not possible for him to do, he is precluded from maintaining an appeal which he is otherwise entitled to maintain.—

(= 5 T. L. J., 451).

40. The plaintiff brought a suit for recovery of property leased. The Court expressed its findings on the issues raised and gave the plaintiff a decree, which, however, contained a direction that in default of payment by the plaintiff of the additional court fees found due within a specified time, the suit would stand dismissed. The plaintiff defaulted to pay the additional court fees and the suit was accordingly dismissed. The plaintiff brought the present suit for the same relief. It was contended by the defendant that the decree in the prior suit operated as res judicata.

Held.—The dismissal of the prior suit for the plaintiff's default to pay additional court fees should be viewed only as an order rejecting the plaint under Section 50, C. P. C., [ = Or. VII, r. 11 ] and therefore, did not operate as res judicata.—

41. Appellants obtained a decree against Z on 10-8-1073. On 18-8-1080, they applied for execution, but the notice to judgment-debtor was returned unserved as he was dead. On 7-6-1080, appellants applied to implead respondent as legal representative and the application was granted and respondent impleaded on 27-6-1080. On 2-12-1080, appellants applied for attachment of the property in dispute, and on 12-12-1080 the attachment was laid. The application was struck off on 19-2-1081 for default of prosecution. The next application was made on 20-7-1083, and on notice being given to respondent, the latter objected on 21-1-1084 to the attachment on the ground that the debt was not a Tarwad debt and Tarwad property was therefore not liable for same. The execution Court upheld the contention and raised the attachment. On appeal, it was contended for the appellants that as the property had been duly attached with the respondent on record and after notice to him, the question of the liability of the property for attachment for the satisfaction of the decree was res judicata and could not be allowed to be re-opened.

Held (overruling the contention).—The respondent cannot be said to have had notice that the decree-holders were claiming to execute their decree against the property in dispute and to have had an opportunity of disputing such a claim. The order, therefore, made by the Court for attachment could not in justice conclude the respondent.

There can be no doubt that an adjudication passed in the course of execution of a decree will be binding on the party against whom it is made and may not, unless and until it is reversed in due course of law, be re-opened or collaterally impeached by him at any subsequent stage of the same proceedings, and this, on a principle analogous to that enunciated in Section 9 of the Civil Procedure Code. "If the question of the judgment-debtor's personal liability, or of the liability of his property generally to execution of the decree had really been determined by an adjudication in the course of the execution proceedings, that determination, so long as it stood unreversed, would, no doubt, be binding on the parties, whether the term res judicata properly applied to it or not." (11 Bom., 537). But this rule is subject to important qualifications, one of which is that the decision, in order to be so binding and operative, must have been arrived at after notice to the party against whom it is sought to be pleaded, intimating to him the nature of the claim which is made against him and which he is called upon to answer.

A determination come to without the said preliminaries could not conclude the party against whom it has been made.

An order, prima facie only of an executive character, could not possibly have the effect of res judicata unless the judgment-debtor, being called on to dispute, if he wished or if he could, a certain proposition of right and consequential demand of relief or action by the judgment-creditor, had then either failed in his contention to the contrary, or, at any rate, allowed the judgment to go by default.

"When it is endeavoured to obtain in execution something not granted by the decree, mere notice to the defendant that further execution is to be applied for, will not be sufficient to make the order res judicata against him. And where the application is not for the execution of something which has been directed to be done by any decree or order so as ipso facto to carry information as to what the claim made and the relief prayed for are, notice to the judgment-debtor without inserting the specific prayers will not render the order made upon such application res judicata."

The rule of res judicata, when applied to adjudications in execution proceedings must be qualified in the manner stated above, if it is to serve as a rule of justice, equity and good conscience.—

42. Suit to set aside an assignment of mortgage executed by 2nd and 3rd defendants setting themselves up as heirs of one deceased N, the mortgagee. Plaintiff denied the heirship of defendants 2 and 3 and their competency to execute the assignment. Fourth defendant, plaintiff's Karanavan, had sued to set aside the same assignment but the suit ended in a collusive compromise between the parties in favour of the defendants 2 and 3. Defendants 2 and 3 in the present suit contended that the compromise decree operated as res judicata, and that the plaintiff cannot collaterally impeach that decree he having failed to set it aside within three years within knowledge of fraud under Article 77 of the Limitation Regulation.

Held.—The plaintiff's suit was not barred by res judicata and plaintiff without directly setting aside the compromise decree could collaterally impeach it by showing it was the result of collusion between the parties thereto and adverse to the interests of the Tarwad.

A party to a collusive decree is bound by it as there could be no fraud against him. Such a party cannot generally be allowed to callaterally impeach the decree if the period of limitation prescribed for a suit to set it aside has expired, yet one who is represented in a suit by the party actually on record may collaterally impeach the decree passed therein if it is the result of collusion between the actual parties and may treat it as a nullity without taking proceedings to set it aside.

"To create an estoppel by judgment it is essentially necessary that there be a genuine and honest judgment. It must not be merely collusive or simulated. A judgment or sentence, we are told, is a judicial determination of a cause agitated between real parties, upon which a real interest has been settled. In order to make a sentence, there must be a real interest, a real argument, a real presentation, a real defence, a real decision. Of all these requisites, not one takes place in the case of a fraudulent and collusive suit. There is no judge; but a person invested with the ensigns of a judicial office is misemployed in listening to a fictitious cause proposed to him; there is no party litigating, there is no party defendant, no real interest brought into operation."

"A collusive suit is not a real judgment, but something obtained by fraud from the Court which is not binding."

"Even if, without any fault or neglect of one party, his adversary succeeded by fraud in obtaining an unjust or unauthorised judgment, he must, through some prescribed mode, reverse or annul the judgment before he can claim to treat it as invalid. But it is necessary to distinguish between judgments entered by the collusion or fraud of both parties and such as are obtained by the fraud of the plaintiff. The former are void as to creditors only, not against the defendant, and may be attacked in any collateral proceedings by them, whilst the latter can be attacked by the defendant alone, directly, and in the proper Court."

"A judgment obtained by fraud or collusion, even, it seems, a judgment of the House of Lords may be treated as a nullity."

"A judgment or decree obtained by fraud upon a Court binds not such Court, nor any other Court, and its nullity upon this ground, though it has not been set aside or reversed, may be alleged in a collateral proceeding."— 32 T. L. R., 25

43. Suit for declaration of title to and recovery of possession of property brought by a junior member of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad against certain other members of a divided branch of the same Tarwad. The Karanavan of plaintiff had previously instituted a suit against the same defendants for the same relief. During the course of that suit the Karanavan, the then plaintiff, and the defendants had entered into an agreement to settle the matter by oath, whereby the then plaintiff was to have taken the oath, and it also provided that if either party defaulted to perform his part of the agreement, the suit may be decreed against him. The plaintiff in the prior suit defaulted to take the oath, and the Court dismissed the suit. It was contended for the defence in the present suit that the former decision operated as res judicata.

For the plaintiff it was contended that the decision did not operate as res judicata, its effect being merely that of an order dismissing a suit for default of appearance.

Held.—The plaintiff's suit was barred by res judicata.

The decision of the Court dismissing the prior suit on failure of the present plaintiff's Karanavan to take the oath as agreed to by him in that suit, was as much a decision on the merits against the then plaintiff, as a decision of the Court allowing his suit in terms of the oath agreement if the oath had been taken would have been. It was a decision on the records as they then stood before the Court similar to a decision passed by a Court under Section 153 [ = Or. XVII, r. 3] of the C. P. C., and as in the case of a decision passed under Section 153, it had all the legal effects of an adjudication on the merits for purposes of res judicata.

A decision based on an oath which had been taken by one of the parties to an oath agreement has the effect of res judicata.—

44. Suit for redemption. There was a prior decree for redemption passed in a suit brought by one M who was a second mortgagee from defendants 2 to 9, who were the Jenmis of the plaint property, against the 1st defendant who was the original mortgagee. This decree had become barred at the time of the suit of the plaintiff. The first defendant, original mortgagee, contended in the present suit that as the right to redeem had been once exercised, no second suit on the same cause of action could be brought.

Held.—The prior decree did not operate as res judicata since in the prior case no decree was passed in favour of the mortgagors.— 7 T. L. J., 439.

45. The plea of res judicata has to be substantiated by the party who sets it up.

The decree in a prior suit based on an oath agreement does not operate as res judicata as against persons who, though parties to the prior suit, are not parties to oath agreement in terms of which the prior decree was passed.

So far as the parties to an oath agreement are concerned, a decree based thereon will operate as res judicata in subsequent su relating to the same subject matter.—

The special Officer made a reference to the District Court. The plain tiffs, junior members of the second defend ant's Tarwad, sued for a declaration tha defendants 1 and 2 were not entitled to an portion of the compensation money on the same grounds as were mentioned by the third defendant in his application before the Special Officer. Defendants 1 and 2 contended that the adjudication under the Land Acquisition Regulation concluded the parties and that it operated as res judicata to the suit filed by the plaintiffs.

Held.—(1) Where a case had been decided by the special Court in respect of matters arising under the Land Acquisition Regulation, it could not be made the subject-matter of fresh proceedings in the ordinary course.

When statutory rights and liabilities have been created and jurisdiction has been conferred upon a special Court for the investigation of matters which may possibly be in controversy, such jurisdiction is exclusive and cannot concurrently be exercised by the ordinary Courts. If the objection relates to the person to whom the compensation is payable or to its apportionment amongst the persons interested, the matter may be investigated either upon a reference to the Court of the special Judge or by a suit in the ordinary Courts, and although either of these two methods are available, the claimant, if he has made his choice and selected his remedy, cannot, because he has failed in the course adopted, fall back upon the other (2 Cal., 388).

(2) In order that the decision by the special Court may be binding on the Seshakars, who sue on the same cause of action as was decided in the prior proceedings, it must appear that the Tarwad was properly represented in the prior proceedings.—

47. Where the parties to a suit enter into a compromise consisting of terms which partly relate to matters lying outside the scope of the controversy as disclosed by their allegations and counter-allegations, such compromise, if submitted to the Judge for consideration and incorporation if deemed appropriate in the decree, does not require registration, whether all its terms are so incorporated or whether they are merely referred to in the decree (F. B).—

48. There is abundant authority for the proposition that a mere opinion on an abstract question of law does not per se operate as res judicata. But where an erroneous opinion on a point of law is applied by a Court of competent jurisdiction to the concrete facts of a case and a decision is consequently given in favour of or adversely to a particular party, the doctrine of res judicata can be invoked in a subsequent suit based on the same cause of action between the same parties or their privies.

Where a promissory note stamped according to the law of Cochin and sued on in a Travancore Court without affixing a Travancore one anna stamp was held inadmissible in evidence, and the suit based thereon was dismissed, and where a second suit was brought on the same note with a Travancore one anna stamp affixed.

Held.—The decree in the first suit operated as res judicata on the second suit.

Quaere.—Whether the refusal of the Court to receive the note in evidence on the ground that the note, though stamped according to foreign law, was unstamped according to Travancore law, was erroneous in law.— 38 T. L. R., 186,

49. When the legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor fails to object in execution proceeding that the properties proceeded with are not liable for the decree debt, he will be barred from raising the question at a later date.

An order to sell is an implied decision by the execution Court that the decree is enforceable against such properties.

To operate as a bar, the order in execution must have been passed after notice, sufficient to give information of the nature of the relief sought in the execution application.

An order passed in execution in the presence of the party affected by it is res judicata and he cannot impeach it except in one of the modes provided by law.

"One principle seems to be clear and that is, that the party who is sought to be affected by the bar of res judicata should have notice of the point which is likely to be decided against him and should have an opportunity of putting forward his contention against such a decision.—

50. Where one of the respondents to an appeal dies during the pendency thereof and the appeal abates so far as that respondent is concerned by reason of no one being brought on record in that place, the decision of the lower Court does not become final nor does it operate as res judicata as regards the other respondents.

Section 9 or the principle of res judicata of which the Section is held to be an imperfect embodiment is not applicable. To invoke this principle, there must be a final determination of the question that is subsequently raised. There is no such final determination here as the decision of the District Munsiff was deprived of its finality when an appeal was preferred. On the filing of the appeal, the judgment ceases to be operative as res judicata.

Ex.—42 T. L. R., 231.

In order that a decree based on a compromise may operate as res judicata, the terms of the compromise have to be embodied in the decree or made the basis of such decree.— 14 T. L. J., 488.

52. Where the former decree is necessarily based on a finding as to some matter directly and substantially in issue between the parties, such finding operates as res judicata in a subsequent suit. But where the decision is come to in spite of any finding or independently of any finding on matters in issue, the doctrine of bar by res judicata cannot be invoked. The question whether an issue was substantially raised and decided is a matter of fact to be determined upon the circumstances of each particular case.

A matter is not 'finally decided' unless the decision is followed by any result particularly appropriate to itself and where a finding is followed by a result which would equally follow from something essentially different, that finding cannot be deemed to be a final decision.—40 T. L. R., 222 (=15 T. L. J., 258).

53. The plaintiff, a junior member of a Malabar Tarwad, of which the 2nd defendant was the Karanavan, sued for cancellation of a Melotti executed by 2nd defendant in favour of the 1st defendant.

The 1st defendant had filed a former suit on the strength of his Melotti for redemption of the first mortgage and the parties to that suit were the present 4th defendant who was the first mortgagee and the 2nd defendant the Karanavan of the Tarwad. The present 4th defendant, as the junior member-mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged property resisted redemption in that suit on the ground of absence of consideration and Tarwad necessity for the Melotti, but the Court found against these contentions and decreed redemption.

On the question whether the decision in the prior suit would operate as res judicata:

Held.—Such prior decision operates as res judicata.

The junior member-mortgagee in the first suit occupied two capacities, one that of the mortgagee merely, and the other, that of a component part of the Tarwad. It was in his former capacity that his interests were opposed to those of the Tarwad, his mortgagor. But it was not as mortgagee merely that he was allowed to put the Melottidar to the proof of the validity as against the Tarwad, of the Melotti granted by the Karanavan; for if he were a stranger to the Tarwad, it would not be open to him to question the right of a person who has obtained a Melotti from the Karanavan to redeem him even though no consideration may have been paid under the Melotti. Then it was in his capacity as a member of the Tarwad that he was allowed to put the Melottidar, to the proof of the validity of the Melotti. The right so conceded to such junior member is the same as the right that he or any other junior member has as plaintiff, in a suit filed for the cancellation of the Melotti. If, in the latter case, the junior member represents the Tarwad, it does not stand to reason why the junior member—defendant in suits like the one under consideration, does not represent the Tarwad.— 16 T. L. J., 207.

54. The puisne mortgagee had brought a suit to enforce his mortgage making the prior mortgagee a party. In that suit the puisne mortgagee had not attacked the validity or priority of the prior mortgage and the prior mortgagee had not appeared to defend his mortgage. In the present suit by the assignee of the prior mortgagee to enforce his mortgage against the puisne mortgagee, the latter contended that the prior mortgage might and ought to have been made a ground of defence in the former suit and that by the omission to do so, the present suit was barred as res judicata.

Held.--Under the circumstances, the case came within the terms of Section 96 of the Transfer of Property Act and the property could only be sold as therein provided with the consent of the prior mortgagee who had a paramount claim outside the controversy of the suit unless the mortgage was impugned, and, therefore, to sustain the plea of res judicata it was incumbent on the puisne mortgagee to show that he sought in the former suit to dispute the title of the prior mortgagee and postpone it to his own, and that had not been done. The puisne mortgagee, therefore, had failed to establish the conditions essential to his plea.—

55. The members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad can be allowed to impeach documents executed by other members, even though the latter failed to do so in a former suit based on such documents. The latter suit cannot operate as res judicata.

The plea of res judicata was, in the case, not raised in the lower Court. The plea has to be treated as a ground which the defendant is bound to set up in answer to the plaint claim within the meaning of Section 9, Explanation II, of the Civil Procedure Code of 1065.— 16 T. L. J., 550.

56. Interlocutory orders are as binding on parties as a final judgment. The binding nature of such decisions is based upon general principles of law and not upon any statutory provision, as otherwise there would be no end to litigation. Even as regards interlocutory orders, the validity of an order made at one stage of a litigation unless forthwith challenged by an appropriate proceeding in a superior tribunal is conclusive between the parties and cannot be questioned or collaterally attacked at a later stage. Orders upon applications for amendment of decrees have been held to be final if heard and disposed of on merits. A later application of the same scope and character has been treated as being barred. On general principles therefore, such orders are conclusive unless vacated by appropriate proceedings allowed by law. Though Section 10 of the C. P. C. of 1100 deals with suits and issues alone, the general principles underlying the same are applicable to other proceedings also.— 17 T. L. J., 125.

57. The rule that a dismissal of a suit for default of appearance would prevent the decision from operating as res judicata, though generally true as regards Courts of first instance, cannot be indiscriminately applied to cases of dismissal by Courts of appeal.

An appeal may be dismissed either before the hearing or at the hearing. A dismissal before the hearing is technically known as 'rejection' of the appeal and it is avowedly a disposal not on the merits. It is rather a refusal to hear it on the merits for the reason that the appeal is not properly constituted or because all the conditions necessary to be fulfilled to entitle an appellant to a hearing on the merits have not been satisfied. In such cases there is properly speaking no appeal at all and therefore nothing to prevent the decision sought to be appealed against from operating as res judicata. When the appeal is disposed of at the hearing, strictly speaking, the judgment should be one confirming, varying or reversing the decree appealed against, unless the parties agree as to some other form of decree or order.—See Section 546 [=Or. XL. r. 31]. Generally therefore a judgment of dismissal by an Appellate Court is an affirmance of the decree under appeal and its effect is to restore to it the attribute of finality which was in suspense while the appeal was pending. There may however be cases in

I. This Section was newly introduced in the British Indian Code, and the Special Committee observed in their Report that the Clause was "necessitated by the transfer of certain of the provisions of the existing Code to Rules." For the Rules that bar a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action—

Vide Or. 2, r. 2—Omission to sue in respect of part of a claim.
Or. 9, r. 9—Decree against plaintiff by default bars fresh suit.
Or. 22, r. 9—Abatement of suit bars fresh suit.
Or. 23, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit without leave of Court bars fresh suit.

II. Cause of action means every fact which is necessary for the plaintiff to prove in order to succeed in his suit; and everything which, if not proved, gives the defendant an immediate right to judgment must be part of the cause of action. It does not comprise every piece of evidence which is necessary to prove such facts, but every fact which is necessary to be proved to entitle him to a decree." It refers to the media upon which the plaintiff asks the Court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour. It is an infringement of the right which the plaintiff possesses by the defendant and includes also the right so infringed.— 43 T. L. R., 310 (= 17 T. L. J., 523).

I. This Section is the same as Section 13 in the British Indian Code, except that in Clause (c) the wording in that Code is:— "Where it appears......international law or a refusal to recognise the law of British India in cases in which such law is applicable." A similar wording was adopted in the

(a) where it has not been pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction;

(b) where it has not been given on the merits of the case;

(c) where it appears on the face of the proceedings to be founded on an incorrect view of international law or of any law in force in Travancore;

(d) where the proceedings in which the judgment was obtained are opposed to natural justice;

(e) where it has been obtained by fraud;

(f) where it sustains a claim founded on a breach of any law in force in Travancore.

original Bill. But the Select Committee retained the wording of the old Section.

In regard to Clause (a), which is new, the Notes on Clauses said:—"A judgment is rendered liable to be impeached on the ground of absence of jurisdiction in the Court which had pronounced the judgment. The reason is obvious, and the view of law clear, as to why such a provision may be included."

II. In Regulation II of 1065, the Section was as follows:—"10. No foreign judgment shall operate as a bar to a suit in Travancore—

(a) if it has not been given on the merits of the case;

(b) if it appears......in force in Travancore;

(c) if it is, in the opinion of the Court before which it is produced, contrary to natural justice;

(d) if it has been obtained by fraud:

(e) if it sustains......in Travancore."

III. See Section 2 for definition of "Foreign Judgment."

IV. For execution of foreign decrees, see under Section 38-A.

Case Law.

1. Regulation IV of 1061 has not the effect of creating two classes of foreign judgments, the one enforceable in the Courts of this State by execution and the other only enforceable by a separate suit. There is only one class of valid foreign judgments which till the year 1061 could only be sued on and which now can be executed as if they had been made by the Courts of this State. If for some reason or other a foreign judgment cannot be executed in Travancore, say, as having been pronounced by a Court having no jurisdiction in the subject-matter of the suit, then it cannot be enforced at all, even by a separate suit.—

14 T. L. J., 122.

2. Per Jacob, J.—The proceedings of the Dewan of Cochin passed under the Cochin Regulation I of 1081 (Cochin Hindu Religious Institution Regulation) are judicial proceedings: the Dewan is exercising the powers of a Court and his order is analogous to a judgment. Hence the order passed by the Dewan is analogous to a foreign judgment.

The fact that the Dewan happens to be the chief Executive Officer of the Darbar does not disqualify him from exercising judicial functions and for this reason the foreign judgment cannot be said to be contrary to natural justice.

Per Chatfield, J.—The order of the Cochin Government under the Cochin Regulation I of 1081 is a foreign judgment, and as the proceedings taken in Cochin would be perfectly valid and proper if taken in this State under the Travancore Regulation III of 1079, the Order of the Cochin Government is not contrary to natural justice.—

Sec. 13 [ = S. 9, Ex. VI = S. 14]

I. This corresponds to Explanation VI in the old Section 9 which was as follows: "VI.—Where a foreign judgment is relied on, the production of the judgment duly authenticated is presumptive evidence that the Court which made it had competent jurisdiction, unless the contrary appears on the record; but such presumption may be removed by proving the want of jurisdiction."

II. The Section follows the wording of Section 14 of the Indian Code. The reason for making it a separate Section in that Code was thus explained by the Select Committee which reported on the Indian Code Bill of 1901:—"The existing Explanation VI, which in strictness is not an explanation at all but rather a substantive rule of evidence, has been relegated by us to a more convenient position at the end of the Chapter."—

III. See Note under Section 38-A, Infra.

I. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Indian amending Bill of 1901, it was observed:—"This provision has been held to regulate procedure only, and not to deprive any Court of jurisdiction otherwise possessed by it.

It has been held that it is the money-value of the original suit that fixes the jurisdiction throughout the subsequent litigation in its several stages. Jurisdiction, if properly exercised with regard to the suit at the time of its institution, ought not to be ousted merely because a plaintiff has made unwarrantable additions to his claim; nor should it be lost in execution because, by the accumulation of interest, the value of the property has increased; although it may be destroyed if the plaint is so amended as to exceed the pecuniary limits governing the particular Court".—

II. Where the subject-matter is not capable of being estimated at a money-value, the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction is that specified by the Rules made by the High Court under the Suits Valuation Regulation, III of 1068 (See Page 767, Vol. 1).

III. 1. This Rule is only a rule of procedure and not of jurisdiction, a direction to the suitor and not an absolute rule binding on the Court (23 Mad, 357).

2. A subordinate Judge is not precluded from trying a suit within the jurisdiction of the Munsiff's Court (17 Cal. 155).

3. The District Judge, Subordinate Judge and Munsiff would have concurrent jurisdiction in respect of all suits not exceeding Rs. 1000 in value of their subject-matter which were within the local limits of the Munsiff's jurisdiction (8 Bom. L. R., 516).

4. There is no provision either in the various Civil Courts Acts or in the Code, prescribing a minimum jurisdiction as there is prescribing a maximum jurisdiction. A superior Court is by this Section forbidden from trying a suit cognizable by an inferior Court, not on account of any inherent incompetency to try it, but on grounds of public convenience and economy. It has been thought that this Section prescribed a minimum limit of jurisdiction, and that, for instance, a Subordinate Judge would have no jurisdiction to try a suit which, owing to its value, was triable by a Munsiff. But it has been held that this Section relates to procedure only, and regulates the practice of the Courts, but does not deprive any Court of jurisdiction which it may otherwise possess. The Section is merely directory, and does not oust the jurisdiction of a Subordinate or District Judge (14 C. W. N., 322).

5. The Civil Courts Regulation of Travancore prescribes only a maximum and not a minimum jurisdiction. District Courts in this State, as in British India, are Courts of unlimited pecuniary jurisdiction. The unlimited nature of the jurisdiction of District Courts extends, so to speak, not only upwards but also downwards. In other words, District Courts are competent to try all suits, however high or however low their value may be (28 T. L. R., 94).

Case Law.

1. A suit was filed in the Munsiff's Court. On the defendant objecting to the valuation, a commission was issued to ascertain the value of the property. On the report of the commissioner, the Munsiff returned the plaint to be presented to the proper Court; whereupon the suit was filed in the District Court. After filing, the plaintiff put in a petition stating that he would not claim relief as regards half of the property. It was contended that the suit was thus within the Munsiff's jurisdiction, and the District Judge had no jurisdiction to try the case.

Held.—The objection raised was overruled following the first three of the British Indian decisions mentioned in the Notes above.— 26 T. L. R., 200.

( = 3 T. L. J., 57).
( = 6 T. L. J., 101).

2. The suit was for redemption and was filed in the Munsiff's Court. On the defendants' plea that they had improvements in the property, they were called upon to pay court-fees for the amount of the claim. On payment of the court fees, the Munsiff returned the plaint to be presented to the proper Court on the authority of 23 T. L. R., 123, in which it was held that, if the amount of the claim for improvements, &c., exceeds the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court, the written statement on which fee has been levied as well as the plaint should be returned for presentation to the proper Court having jurisdiction over the combined subject-matter as a whole. The plaint was accordingly presented to the District Court which decreed redemption in favour of plaintiff. In appeal, it was contended on the strength of the ruling in 25 T. L. R., 1, overruling the decision in 23 T. L. R.,

123, that the District Court had no jurisdiction to hear the case. On the question being referred to a Full Bench:

Held.—(1) The District Court had jurisdiction. Section 11 of the Code related to procedure only and regulated the practice of the Courts, but did not deprive any Court of jurisdiction which it otherwise possessed. The decision in 12 T. L. R., 188, that a District Court had no jurisdiction to entertain and try a suit which was below its pecuniary jurisdiction was overruled.

(2) Under Section 4 of the Suits Valuation Regulation, III of 1068, no Court of Appeal or Revision shall entertain an objection as to jurisdiction of the Court of first instance, based on the over-valuation or under-valuation of a suit, unless the objection was taken in the Court of first instance at or before the hearing at which issues were settled. In the case, no such objection was taken in the Court of first instance (F. B.).— 28 T. L. R., 94 (= 3 T. L. J., 57).

3. Plaintiff at first presented a suit in the Munsiff's Court, and, on the contention of the defendants as to jurisdiction, the plaint was returned to be presented before the District Court. When the plaintiff presented the plaint before the District Court, the second defendant contended that the plaintiff's claim was within the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Munsiff. The District Judge upholding the contention of the second defendant returned the plaint to be presented to the Munsiff's Court. When the suit came again before the Munsiff, the second defendant turned round and said that the Munsiff's Court had no jurisdiction.

Held.—The second defendant was clearly estopped from raising that contention after the District Judge, on his contention, had decided that the Munsiff had jurisdiction. Both the parties to a suit are bound by an order passed in their presence and by the valuation made by the Court in their presence. The Zillah Court had jurisdiction to decide whether it had jurisdiction over the suit or not, and neither side could afterwards be allowed to impugn it except by way of appeal. It would be impossible to put an end to litigation, if parties be thus permitted to play fast and loose with their pleadings.— 2 S. D., 261.

4. A plaint valued at Fs. 10,000 filed in 1083 before a District Court was returned for presentation to the proper Court on the ground that the Sirkar was an unnecessary party to the suit. The suit was accordingly instituted in the Munsiff's Court in 1085, when the Munsiff's pecuniary jurisdiction had been raised to Rs. 2,000, and the Munsiff tried and disposed of the suit. It was contended in appeal that the suit of 1085 was a continuation of the suit of 1083, filed in the District Court when the limit of the Munsiff's jurisdiction was only Rs. 1000 and that the Munsiff had, therefore, no jurisdiction to try the suit.

Held.—The re-instituted suit must be regarded as an independent one in all respects except that, under certain conditions, the time requisite for going from Court to Court is excluded in computing the period of limitation. The re-instituted suit is a new suit and is governed by the law applicable to it at the time of the re-institution. By the time the suit was filed in the Munsiff's Court, his pecuniary jurisdiction has been raised, and he had the right to entertain the suit.— 31 T. L. R., 169 (= 5 T. L. J., 344).

5. In cases where it is thought the Sirkar should be made a party, the Munsiff's Courts should implead the Sirkar as a party, and then return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. Mere direction to implead the Sirkar as a party would not justify the return of a plaint.

The element which takes away the jurisdiction is the existence of the Sirkar as a party. Until the Sirkar is put on record as a party, the District Munsiff has jurisdiction, and hence the Munsiff before returning the plaint should make the Sirkar a party.— 5 T. L. J., 351.

6. Suit for 350 fanams being balance of consideration for the assignment of a mortgage right by plaintiff to defendant. Suit was filed first as a Small Cause, but under order of Court it was refiled as an original suit. The Munsiff gave plaintiff a decree. The District Judge, on appeal, dismissed the suit finding that the whole amount of the consideration had been paid. In second appeal, plaintiff contended that the suit, though tried as an original suit, was still a Small Cause suit, and that though the decision of the Munsiff was valid, no appeal lay to the District Court.

Held.—(1) The suit being only for money, and not for specific performance of a contract, was triable as a Small Cause.

(2) Section 13 of the Civil Courts Regulation merely regulated the procedure to be adopted in the adjudication of certain classes of suits, and did not take away the jurisdiction of the Munsiffs to try them as original causes, and therefore, the decision of the suit by the Munsiff as an original cause was valid and operative. The words "shall try" in Section 13 are not conclusive.

(3) Under a strict interpretation of Section 512, C. P. C. [new Section 76] and Section 13, of the Civil Courts Regulation, which interpretation was more convenient and conducive to justice, it was the nature of the trial and not of the suit that decided whether an appeal lay or not, and that therefore in the present case, as the suit, though a Small Cause, was tried as an original suit, the appeal to the District Court was competent.

(4) In spite of the omission of the party to raise the objection to jurisdiction in the lower Courts, the High Court was bound to hear and consider the objection, as where there is an entire absence of jurisdiction in the lower Courts the objection to it could not be waived by the party, and his failure to take it could not, therefore, operate to confer jurisdiction.— 32 T. L. R., 88 (=6 T. L. J., 101**).

Provided that a suit to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immovable property held by or on behalf of the defendant may, where the relief sought can be entirely obtained through his personal obedience, be instituted either in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the property is situate, or in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the defendant actually and voluntarily resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain.

Explanation.—In this Section, "property" means property situate in Travancore.

I. The changes made in the old Section are:—(1) the addition of the words "with or without rent of profits" in Clause (a), and (2) the insertion, in Clause (c), of the word "sale" after "foreclosure" and of the words "or charge upon" after the words "mortgage of."

II. The Section as it stands now is the same as in the British Indian Code. In regard to addition No. (1) above noted, the Indian Special Committee in their Report said:—"The insertion of the words "with or without rent or profits" is intended to remove any difficulty there may be where the defendant does not reside within the local limits of the Court within whose jurisdiction the property is situate."

III. The Section specifies the Courts in which suits relating to immovable property and suits for the recovery of movable property actually under distraint or attachment are to be instituted.

Case Law.

1. Residence in Travancore under circumstances raising the presumption that it is not casual and possession of property within Travancore are sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Travancore Courts over persons who are not born subjects of His Highness the Maha Raja of Travancore.—

2. A suit was instituted in the Anjikymal Zillah Court in the Cochin State in respect of a property situated in that State: and a decree was passed. During the pendency of the suit, the territory in which the property in litigation was situate was awarded to Travancore by the decision of the Arbitrator in the Travancore and Cochin States Boundary Dispute. The decree was passed after such territorial transfer. When plaintiff proceeded to execute the decree after getting it transferred to the Parur Zillah Court, a purchaser of the property from the heirs of the original mortgagor-lessee objected to the execution and the objection was allowed. In the suit then instituted to enforce the attachment:

Held.—The decree of the Cochin Court against the mortgagor-lessee having been passed after the transfer of the mortgaged land to the Travancore jurisdiction, the decree and the subsequent attachment thereunder were inoperative.—

Fol.—K. P., 314.

3. A money decree obtained by X against Y in the Quilon Munsiff's Court was transferred for execution to the Kottarakarai Munsiff's Court and in execution of that decree, properties belonging to plaintiff and Y were attached. In a suit brought by plaintiff in the Kottarakarai Munsiff's Court to cancel the decree and execution proceedings on the ground that the decree was fraudulent and collusive as the bond on which it was based was a forgery, both the lower Courts concurrently found the plaint allegations as to the bond being a forgery and the decree collusive, true, but the Munsiff's decree confined itself to a direction that the attachment be cancelled while the District Court in confirming the Munsiff's decree remarked that the decree and attachment are liable to be cancelled.

Held (following 18 T. L. R., 14).—The Kottarakarai Munsiff's Court being one of equal status had no jurisdiction over the suit. Till the decree is set aside by the Quilon Court, the Kottarakara Court ought to treat it as a valid decree, and as plaint properties are Tarwad properties, execution against the same is perfectly valid till the decree is set aside. Section 12, CivilProcedureCode,which directs that suits for determination of rights to and interests in lands should be brought in the Court within whose jurisdiction the lands lie, cannot be held by a side wind to give jurisdiction to the executing Court to entertain a suit for setting aside the attachment of lands effected in execution of a decree of another Court on the ground that the latter decree itself was null and void. The non-liability of the lands from attachment under the decree of the other Court is wholly dependent upon the alleged invalidity of the decree, and so long as the decree continues valid (which it does till set aside by the Court which passed it), the attachment proceedings also continue to be perfectly valid.

The decree of the lower Courts was therefore reversed and the plaint directed to be returned to plaintiff to be presented to the proper Court having jurisdiction.—

4. Suit to set aside a panayam deed in respect of the plaint properties, a decree based thereon, a court sale in pursuance of the decree, and a sammatham deed in respect of the properties executed by some of the members of the plaintiff's Tarwad, and also for recovery of the properties. Plaintiff alleged that the properties belonged to the Tarwad, the documents above mentioned were unsupported by consideration and Tarwad necessity, and that the decree and court sale were fraudulent and collusive. The decree whose cancellation was sought, was passed and the sale ordered by the Alleppey District Court within whose jurisdiction the properties were at that time situated. The present suit was brought in the Kottayam District Court to whose local jurisdiction the locality 'where the properties lay was transferred and within whose jurisdiction the defendants permanently resided. The District Judge of Kottayam relying on the decisions in 18 T. L. R., 14 and 21 T. L. R., 138 held that he had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the cancellation of the decree of the Alleppey District Court and returned the plaint to be presented to the competent Court. On appeal:

Held.—The question of jurisdiction of Courts raised in the case should be decided with reference to the provisions of Chapter II of the Civil Procedure Code. Applying the provisions of Sections 12 and 14 of that Chapter (new Sections 15 and 19), it was clear that the present suit was rightly instituted in the Kottayam District Court inasmuch as the immovable properties sought to be recovered by the plaintiff were situated, and the defendants in the suit lived, and at least a part of the cause of action for the reliefs claimed in the suit had arisen, within the territorial jurisdiction of that District Court.

Applying the principle of Section 586, C. P. C., (see Section 34) which laid down that the expression "the Court which passed a decree" occurring in Chapter XIX of the Code included cases "where the Court which passed the decree to be executed has ceased to exist or to have jurisdiction to execute it, the Court which, if the suit wherein the decree was passed were instituted at the time of making application for the execution of the decree would have jurisdiction to try the suit," the decree in O. S. No. 284 of 1075 of the Alleppey District Court (the decree sought to be cancelled) might well, in the circumstances, be considered in law to have been passed by the Kottayam District Court.

Therefore even as regards the plaint relief for setting aside the decree of the Alleppey District Court, even accepting the view entertained in 18 T. L. R., 14 and 21 T. L. R., 138, as correct, the suit had been rightly instituted in the Kottayam District Court (F. B.).— 32 T. L. R., 168

5. In execution of a decree of the Quilon Additional Munsiff's Court obtained by the 1st defendant against the 2nd defendant who was the Karanavan of the Tarwad of the plaintiffs and the 2nd defendant, the Tarwad property situate within the jurisdiction of the Haripad Munsiff Court was attached by that Court. The plaintiffs sued in the Haripad Court to set aside the attachment. The District Munsiff holding that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court.

Held.—The suit was one for declaration that the plaint property which was admittedly situate within the jurisdiction of the Haripad Munsiff's Court was not liable to be sold in execution of the decree of the Quilon Munsiff's Court. The cause of action for the suit was the attachment laid on the property by the Haripad Court in execution of the decree of the Quilon Court under Sections 12 and 14 of the C. P. C.,(new Sections 15 and 19), the suit was cognisable by the Haripad Court, even though that Court might have to declare that the Quilon decree could not bind the Tarwad.—

6. Plaintiffs, Nanjinad Marumakkavazhi Vellalas, sued for recovery of Ukanthudamai dues from the Tarwad properties of their deceased father, a member of an undivided Tarwad consisting of several branches and possessed of properties in Travancore and Cochin, the properties in the latter State being in the enjoyment of one of such branches. The plaintiffs, while basing their claim for Ukanthudamai on the value of the whole Tarwad properties, prayed that the sum that might be decreed to them be charged on the Travancore properties alone. The fourth defendant, the common Karanavan of the whole Tarwad, was a party to the suit, but not any of the members of the Cochin branch. The trial Judge, relying upon Section 12 of the Civil Procedure Code, held that the properties in Cochin could not and should not be taken into account in determining the plaintiff's claim and directed the plaintiffs to file an amended plaint excluding the value of the Cochin properties. The plaintiffs appealed against the order.

Held.—The Judge's order could not be supported and should be reversed.

A suit for the recovery of Ukanthudama dues by the sons of a deceased Nanjinad Vellala father is essentially a suit for the recovery of money, which by the customary law prevailing among the Nanjinad Vellalas is a charge upon the immovable properties of the Tarwad to which the father belonged. It is not a suit for the recovery of any share of the immovable properties owned by the father's Tarwad. No doubt, in arriving at the amount due to the children of a deceased Nanjinad Vellala for Ukanthudama, the quantum of the share, which the father would have taken in the Tarwad properties —treating them for the moment as if they were partible—is calculated according to certain rules laid down in the reported decisions but this is only for ascertaining the value of the fraction of such share which is taken as the Ukanthudama amount due. The sons of a deceased Najinnad Vellala cannot insist as a matter of right, on being given a share of the corpus of the properties belonging to the father's Tarwad in satisfaction of their claims for Ukanthudama.

The plaintiff's claim being one for money which was a charge on all the Tarwad properties of their father, wherever situate, they had a right to realise whatever amount that might be decreed to them on account of their claim from all such properties. The value of the Cochin properties had also to be taken into account. But there was nothing to prevent the plaintiffs from saying that they would be satisfied with a charge for their claim on some portion alone of the Tarwad properties of their father, viz., the immovable properties situated in Travancore.

The Tarwad of the father being undivided and represented in the suit by the fourth defendant, the Karanavan residing in Travancore, there was no legal bar to the plaintiffs asking the Travancore Court to take into account also the value of the properties in Cochin, as to which the Tarwad's title was indisputable, in calculating the plaint claim.

The suit itself being clearly one for money, Section 12 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application. Nor could the suit be considered as one to obtain relief respecting immovable property falling within the Proviso to that Section. The plaint referred to immovable property outside Travancore, but it was not, for that reason, a suit for relief respecting that property. The Explanation of the term property in Section 12 clearly showed that the suit was not governed by that Section.—

(= 10 T. L. J., 329).

7. The widow and daughter of a deceased Karanavan of a Nanjinad Vellala Tarwad sued in the Nagercoil Munsiff's Court and obtained a decree for the recovery of Ukanthudama from all the properties of that Tarwad. In appeal, a compromise decree was passed making some of the Tarwad properties liable for the Ukanthudama. The decree was transferred for execution to the Padmanabhapuram Munsiff's Court. There, a purchaser at a private sale of the properties made liable for the decree debt filed a suit for the cancellation of the decree on the ground that he had no knowledge of the decree and that the decree was obtained subsequent to his purchase of the properties in question. The Padmanabhapuram Munsiff holding that the decree having been passed by the Nagercoil Munsiff's Court, he had no jurisdiction to try the suit returned it for presentation to the proper Court.

Held.—The Padmanabhapuram Munsiff had jurisdiction to try the suit.

Where a decree has been obtained in one Court, and in execution of that decree, the judgment-debtor's property situated within the jurisdiction of another Court is proceeded against, the latter Court is competent to entertain a suit for setting aside the decree and execution proceedings.

Chapter II of the Civil Procedure Code [Place of Suing—Sections 11 to 21 = new Sections 14 to 19 and 21 to 23] contains the provisions for determining the Courts in which suits of different kinds are to be instituted, and these provisions are not to be nullified by what may be considered to be the policy of the law as to one Court sitting in judgment over the validity of the decree of another Court. Having regard to the provisions of Chapter II, the rulings in 35 T. L. R., 190 and 6 T. L. J., 52 and the trend of the recent decisions in the British Indian Courts, the decisions in 18 T. L. R., 14 and 21 T. L. R., 138 have to be over-ruled (F. B.).— 40 T. L. R., 194

Suits for immovable property situate within jurisdiction of different Courts.

16. Where a suit is to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immovable property situate within the jurisdiction of different Courts, the suit may be instituted in any Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate:

Provided that, in respect of the value of the subject-matter of the suit, the entire claim is cognizable by such Court.

Place of institution of suit where local limits of jurisdiction of Courts are uncertain.

17. (1) Where it is alleged to be uncertain within the local limits of the jurisdiction of which of two or more Courts any immovable property is situate, any one of those Courts may, if satisfied that there is ground for the alleged uncertainty, record a statement to that effect and thereupon proceed to entertain and dispose of any suit relating to that property, and its decree in the suit shall have the same effect as if the property were situate within the local limits of its jurisdiction:

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—.

"16. If the suit be to obtain relief respecting, or compensation for wrong to, immovable property situate within the limits of a single district, but within the jurisdiction of different Courts, the suit may be instituted in the Court within whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate, provided that in respect of the value of the subject-matter of the suit, the entire claim be cognizable by such Court.

If the immovable property be situate within the limits of different districts, the suit may be instituted in any Court, otherwise competent to try it, within whose jurisdiction any portion of the property is situate."

II. 1. This Section is intended for the benefit of suitors, the object being to avoid multiplicity of suits.

2. Where a suit may be filed in more than one of several Courts, it is a general principle of law that the plaintiff may select the forum in which to bring the suit (19 M. 477).

1. Sub-section (2) of Section 18 in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—"(2) Where a statement .............is situate, the Appellate or Revisional Court shall not allow the objection if, in its opinion, there was at the time of the institution of the suit any reasonable ground for uncertainty as to the Court having jurisdiction with respect thereto".

2. The words at the end of the new Sub-section (2)—"and there has been a consequent failure of justice"—are taken from the British Indian Code. The Indian Special Committee in their Notes on Clauses say that they added these words "in order still further to restrict the taking of technical objections as to jurisdiction".

Provided that the suit is one with respect to which the Court is competent as regards the nature and value of the suit to exercise jurisdiction.

(2) Where a statement has not been recorded under Sub-section (1), and an objection is taken before an Appellate or Revisional Court that a decree or order in a suit relating to such property was made by a Court not having jurisdiction where the property is situate, the Appellate or Revisional Court shall not allow the objection unless in its opinion there was, at the time of the institution of the suit, no reasonable ground for uncertainty as to the Court having jurisdiction with respect thereto and there has been a consequent failure of justice.

Suits for compensation for wrongs to person or movables.

18. Where a suit is for compensation for wrong done to the person or to movable property, if the wrong was done within the local limits of the jurisdiction of one Court and the defendant resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain, within the local limits of the jurisdiction of another Court, the suit may be instituted at the option of the plaintiff in either of the said Courts.

I. This Section reproduces Section 20 of the British Indian Code. Section 14 of Regulation II of 1065 corresponding to the new Section 19 was as follows :—

"14. Suits to be instituted where defendants reside or cause of action arose.—Subject to the limitations aforesaid, all other suits shall be instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction—

(a) the cause of action arises; or

(b) any of the defendants, where there are more than one, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily resides, or carries on business, or personally works for gain; provided that in such case either the leave of the Court is given, or the defendants who do not reside, or carry on business, or personally work for gain, as aforesaid, acquiesce in such institution; or

(c) the cause of action, wholly or in part, arises.

Explanation I.—Where a person has a permanent dwelling at one place and also a temporary residence at another place, he shall be deemed to reside at both places in respect of any cause of action arising at the place where he has such temporary residence.

Explanation II.—A corporation shall be deemed to carry on business at its sole or principal office in Travancore or, in respect of any cause of action arising at any place where it has also a subordinate office, at such place.

Illustrations.

(a) A is a tradesman in Quilon. B carries on business in Trivandrum. B, by his agent in Quilon, buys goods of A and requests A to deliver them to the South Indian Railway Company. A delivers the goods accordingly in Quilon. A may sue B for the price of the goods either in Quilon where the cause of action has arisen, or in Trivandrum, where B carries on business.

(b) A resides at Nagercoil, B at Quilon and C at Trivandrum. A, B and C being together at Alleppey, B and C make a joint promissory note payable on demand, and deliver it to A. A may sue B and C at Alleppey, where the cause of action arose. He may also sue them at Quilon, where B resides, or at Trivandrum, where C resides; but in each of these cases, if the non-resident defendant objects, the suit cannot proceed without the leave of the Court.

(b) all the defendants, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily reside, or carry on business, or personally work for gain; or

(c) any of the defendants, at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily resides or carries on business, or personally works for gain: Provided that the defendants who do not actually and voluntarily reside, or carry on business, or personally work for gain, as aforesaid, have immovable property within Travancore, or that the leave of the Court is given, or the defendants who do not reside, or carry on business, or personally work for gain, as aforesaid, acquiesce in such institution.

Proviso—In a suit on a foreign judgment, the possession by the defendant or any of the defendants of property movable or immovable within the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit is instituted, is sufficient to give jurisdiction to such Court.

Explanation I.—Where a person has a permanent dwelling at one place and also a lodging at another place for a temporary purpose only, he shall be deemed to reside at both places in respect of any cause of action arising at the place where he has such temporary lodging.

Explanation II.—A Corporation or Company shall be deemed to carry on business at its sole or principal office in Travancore or, in respect of any cause of action arising at any place where it has also a subordinate office, at such place.

Explanation III.—In suits arising out of contracts, the cause of action arises, within the meaning of this Section, at any of the following places, viz:—

(1) the place where the contract was made;

(2) the place where the contract was to be performed or performance thereof completed :

(3) the place where, in performance of the contract, any money to which the suit relates, was expressly or impliedly payable."

II. In regard to the omission of Explanation III in the Indian Code, the Indian Special Committee say that it "has become unnecessary owing to the addition made in Sub-clause (c) of the words 'wholly or in part' in reference to the cause of action."

III. The following were the observations made in the Notes on Clauses appended to the Statement of Objects and Reasons for the Indian Civil Procedure Code Amending Bill of 1901 :—"This provision has been recast. The existing Section commences by requiring the 'cause of action' (which means ordinarily the sum total of the facts necessary for a plaintiff to allege before he can obtain a relief) to have arisen within the local limits of the Court's jurisdiction. On grounds of convenience, however, it has been held that, for the purposes of this Section, the arising of a material portion of the cause of action within jurisdiction would be sufficient, and Explanation III which relaxes the rule in the case only of suits arising out of contract, was accordingly added by the amending Act of 1888. There seems to be no sufficient reason for so limiting the relaxation ; and, in view of English experience, it is thought preferable to apply the principle embodied in Section 74 of the County Courts Act, 1888 (51 and 52 Vict. c. 43) by requiring only a material portion of the cause of action to have so arisen, provided that, in the case of a suit instituted under this provision, the leave of the Court is first obtained. It may be that, in these circumstances, Explanation III is no longer strictly necessary ; but it is proposed to retain it for the present as a useful and practical guide for subordinate tribunals."

III. Explanation III, though omitted, is good law and contains a correct statement of the meaning of 'cause of action' in cases arising out of contracts. The words "wholly or in part' makes the clause applicable to all classes of suits (34 All., 49).

Case Law.

1. A suit founded on a breach of contract may be brought in any of the three following Courts :—

(a) The Court within whose jurisdiction the contract was made.

(b) The Court within whose jurisdiction the breach of such contract took place.

(c) The Court within whose jurisdiction the defendant resides.

When a Court finds that it has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit, it ought to return the plaint to the plaintiff to enable him to present it in the Court that has jurisdiction.

Fol.—8 T. L. R. 161.

2. Where a person has his permanent residence in one place and his ancestral house at another, an intention to return to the ancestral family may be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary.

Either of the dwellings may be taken as his residence for the purpose of determining jurisdiction.— 8 T. L. R., 89.

Dist.—30 T. L. R., 235.

3. A residing at Quilon executed to B carrying on business at Alleppey a pro-note which specified no place of payment. B indorsed the pro-note to C who sued in the Alleppey Zillah Court for recovery of the money. A objected to the jurisdiction of Alleppey Zillah Court.

Held.—In the absence of any mention of a specific place for payment, the reasonable inference would be that the payment should be made where the holder of the note permanently resides or carries on business. Where there is no express covenant, the presumption of law is that the obligor is bound to seek the obligee and tender the money at the residence or place of business of the latter (I. L. R., 9 Cal., 106). Consequently, the cause of action must be taken to have arisen within the jurisdiction of the Alleppey Zillah Court, and the objection as to jurisdiction was unsustainable.— 11 T. L. R., 184.

Fol.—17 T. L. J., 451.

4. In a suit on a pro-note executed by the defendant at Mattancheri in Cochin, the defendant while admitting the fact of his execution contended inter alia that the suit was barred by the Limitation Law of Cochin where the contract was entered into and that under Section 14, C. P. C., the suit was not maintainable at Nagercoil inasmuch as the cause of action arose in Cochin and Cochin was the place where he resided and carried on business.

Held.—Though the contract was entered into in Cochin, yet under Clause (b) and Explanation I to Section 14, C. P. C., the defendant could be sued in Nagercoil where he is proved to have a permanent dwelling. The Limitation Law of this State was applicable as the parties were not domiciled during the period of limitation in Cochin and as it was not shown that the Cochin Limitation Law would extinguish the contract.

A person's domicile is the place where he has his permanent house and principal establishment and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. K. P., 387.

5. To recover compensation for the infringement of plaintiff's copyright in a certain book, he instituted the suit on 5-10-1083 in the Trivandrum Principal Munsiff's Court. The plaint alleged that copies of the book printed in the defendant's press at Quilon were offered for sale in Trivandrum on the 2nd Edavom 1080 through his agent. The defendant contended inter alia that the Trivandrum Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit and that it was barred by limitation as the plaintiff had not come to Court within the 12 months prescribed by Section 5 of the Copyright Regulation.

Held.—Inasmuch as the defendant's agent had possession of the copies for sale in Trivandrum, it amounted to defendant's possession and the cause of action having therefore arisen in Trivandrum, the Trivandrum Court had jurisdiction under Section 14 of the Civil Procedure Code. Further, under Section 15 of the Civil Procedure Code, in suits for compensation for wrong to movable property (new Section 18), plaintiff had the option to institute the suit in Trivandrum, because it was there that the wrong was committed. In this view also, the lower Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit.— 27 T. L. R., 167 (=2 T. L. J., 344).

6. Where a suit was brought before the Quilon Munsiff's Court to recover money due under a Chitty conducted by the defendants who had their Tarawad house at Paravoor (within the jurisdiction of the Quilon Munsiff's Court) but who had been for more than 20 years before suit living in their self-acquired property at Warkalai (within the jurisdiction of the Attingal Munsiff's Court) where the Chitty was being conducted:

Held.—The defendant's residence at Warkalai, and not their Tarwad home at Paravoor, should be taken to be their permanent residence and the District Munsiff at Quilon had, therefore, no jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

The residence which is necessary to form the foundation of jurisdiction under Section 14, is an actual and bona fide residence and one of a more or less permanent character, although a man may have more than one permanent residence and although, where he has a permanent residence, the permanency of such residence will not be negatived by a temporary absence from it or by his living in a temporary lodging. Explanation I provides for the last class of cases. But in respect of causes of action arising at the permanent residence, suits must be brought only in the Court having jurisdiction there. The question whether, in spite of absence and in consequence of an intention to return, a family house, like any other place of residence, is to be considered a permanent residence is one of fact.—30 T. L. R., 235.

7. Even though the defendant is an absent foreigner, if the cause of action arises within the jurisdiction of a Travancore Court, it has jurisdiction to try the suit.

Reference was made to Section 6 of the Civil Procedure Code [new Section 7 (1) ]. It was contended that, under the rules of international law, the Courts of any country have no jurisdiction to try a case against an absent foreigner, i. e., a foreigner who was not present in the country at the date when the suit was instituted. Also, that Section 14 confers no jurisdiction but merely decides in which a suit should be filed where jurisdiction already exists and that the Code of Civil Procedure must be construed as not infringing the principles of international law. In British India, it was held that a British Indian Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit, if the cause of action has arisen within the local limits though the defendant does not reside within such limits, but is a foreigner, domiciled and residing in a protected Indian State. The Sovereign of a country may by legislation confer on his Courts a power to entertain suits against absent foreigners which would be recognised in the State itself, though such legislation might have no effect or validity in Courts outside the State, if it were necessary to take proceedings there (F. B.).— 10 T. L. J., 117.

8. A suit for money was brought against several defendants. Some of them (including the appellants 4th and 8th defendants) who were admittedly foreigners owning no property within the jurisdiction of the trial Court, pleaded to its jurisdiction for entertaining the suit. This contention was put in issue between the parties, formally tried, and found against the defendants by the trial Court. The suit was proceeded with on the merits of the respective cases of the parties and decided against the appellants. The 4th and 8th defendants who were foreign subjects contended in appeal that the trial Court had no jurisdiction to deal with the suit against them.

Held.—(1) The conduct of the defendants in having adduced evidence in support of their case and in having omitted to appeal from the order of the trial Court overruling their objection as to jurisdiction amounts to an acquiescence in the institution of the suit and submission to the jurisdiction of the trial Court.

Where a party has voluntarily submitted himself to the jurisdiction of a Court, he cannot afterwards be heard to say that the Court has no jurisdiction. This submission may take place in different ways. If a person selected, as plaintiff, the tribunal of a country as the one in which he would sue, he could not subsequently avoid the judgment of that tribunal on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Where again, the defendant appears without protest, he must be held to submit himself to jurisdiction. Where he appears and pleads to jurisdiction, but also pleads to the merits, or at any rate, takes part in a defence on the merits, he must be considered to have submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the Court.

(2) Sections 14 and 17, C. P. C., deal with distinct classes of suits, and there is no warrant for reading the two Sections together on the assumption that the same procedure applies to both.

(3) The provisions of Chapter II of the Civil Procedure Code relating to jurisdiction have no application except when the conflict as to jurisdiction is one between two Courts in this State. Where the contending defendants are foreigners who have no domicile and own no property in Travancore, the rule applicable is one of private international law. Judged by that law, the defendant's conduct amounts to submission to jurisdiction (F. B.).

Per Viraraghava Aiyengar, C. J.—The word 'acquiesce' in Section 14 should not be understood in the restricted sense given to it by Section 17; for, though the idea connoted by the word 'acquiesce' is general and the fact of acquiescence might be established in a variety of ways, still under Section 17, the failure of the defendant to apply for stay of proceedings as provided therein was conclusive and constituted an acquiescence by him in the institution of the suit.

Per Sesha Aiyar, J.—Acquiescence is quiescence under such circumstances that assent may be reasonably inferred from it. It is essentially an instance of the law of estoppel by words or by conduct; and ordinarily, to constitute acquiescence there must be conduct or language inducing a reasonable belief that a right is foregone. On general principles, there can be no warrant for assigning to the term 'acquiescence' the special meaning prescribed for it in Section 17.— 38 T. L. R., 189

9. In the absence of any express mention in the document itself of the place of performance, it is open to the Court to look at the circumstances existing at the date of the contract and to what has taken place subsequent thereto in order to decide what, in the contemplation of the parties was the place for the performance of the contract.

In the case, a pro-note was executed in Bodi in British India, but from the circumstances, the Court held that the parties contemplated performance in Travancore.— 13 T. L. J., 337.

10. The suit was on a pro-note which made no mention of any specific place of payment.

The ordinary rule is that, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, it is the duty of the obligor to seek out his creditor and make the payment at the creditor's place of residence or his usual place of business. This rule is applicable also to the determination of the question of jurisdiction under Section 14 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1095. The place of payment under this rule should be taken to be the place where the money is impliedly payable under the contract. As the document was silent on the matter, the ordinary rule of law governing the same could, by implication, be treated as part of the contract. The expression "impliedly" occurring in Section 14 justified the application of the ordinary rule of law relating to the place of performance in such matters.— 17 T. L. J., 451.

20. No objection as to the place of suing shall be allowed by any Appellate or Revisional Court, unless such objection was taken in the Court of first instance at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement, and unless there has been a consequent failure of justice.

Objections to jurisdiction.

21. Where a suit may be instituted in any one of two or more Courts and is instituted in one of such Courts, any defendant, after notice to the other parties, may, at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement, apply to have the suit transferred to another Court, and the Court to which such application is made, after considering the objections of the other parties (if any), shall determine in which of the several Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed.

Power to transfer suits which may be instituted in more than one Court.

22. (1) Where the several Courts having jurisdiction are subordinate to the same Appellate Court, an application under Section 21 shall be made to the Appellate Court.

(2) Where such Courts are subordinate to different Appellate Courts, the application shall be made to the High Court.

Sec. 20 [ = ,, = S. 21 ]

Case Law.

Where a Court has no jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the suit, the want of jurisdiction is a defect which cannot be waived by consent. An objection can be taken at any stage, provided that, on the admitted facts, the trial Court has no jurisdiction. It does not appear that any distinction can be drawn between cases where the Court has no jurisdiction on account of the value of the subject-matter and cases where it has no jurisdiction on account of the location of the subject-matter.

Section 20 of the new Code, corresponding to which there is no Section in the Code of 1065, cannot have any retrospective operation.— 18 T. L. J., 1171.

Sec. 22 [ = S. 20 = S. 23 (1) and (2) ]

1. Sections 21 and 22 correspond to Sections 19 and 20 of Regulation II of 1065 which are given below. Sections 17 and 18 which have been omitted in the new Regulation, following the Indian Code, are also sub-joined. In the Indian amending Bills there was a provision for stay of proceedings, &c., similar to Sections 17 and 18 of the Regulation. But the Select Committee omitted them as "unnecessary, sufficient provision having been made for transfers under the succeeding Clause." The four Sections of the Regulation mentioned above are :—

"17. "Power to stay proceedings where all defendants do not reside within jurisdiction. – If a suit, which may be instituted in more than one Court, is instituted in a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the defendant or all the defendants does not or do not actually and voluntarily reside, or

23. (1) On the application of any of the parties and after notice to the parties and after hearing such of them as desire to be heard, or of its own motion without such notice, the High Court may at any stage—

General power of transfer and withdrawal.

(a) (i) transfer any suit, appeal or other proceeding pending in any subordinate Court to any other subordinate Court competent to try or dispose of the same, or

(ii) retransfer the same for trial or disposal to the Court from which it was transferred, or

(b) withdraw any appeal or other proceeding pending in any subordinate Court and try or dispose of the same.

carry on business, or personally work for gain, the defendant or any defendant may, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to the Court to stay proceedings, apply to the Court accordingly; and if the Court, after hearing such of the parties as desire to be heard, is satisfied that justice is more likely to be done by the suit being instituted in some other Court, it may stay proceedings either finally or till further order, and make such order as it thinks fit as to the costs already incurred by the parties or any of them.

In such case, if the plaintiff so requires, the Court shall return the plaint with an endorsement thereon of the order staying proceedings.

Application when to be made.—Every such application shall be made at the earliest possible opportunity, and in all cases, before the issues are settled; and any defendant not so applying shall be deemed to have acquiesced in the institution of the suit."

"18. Remission of court-fee where suit instituted in another Court.—Where the Court, under Section 17, stays proceedings and the plaintiff re-institutes his suit in another Court, the plaint shall not be chargeable with any court-fee, provided that the proper fee has been levied on the institution of the suit in the former Court, and that the plaint has been returned by such Court."

"19. Procedure where Courts in which suit may be instituted subordinate to same Appellate Court.—Where a suit may be instituted in more Courts than one, and such Courts are subordinate to the same Appellate Court, any defendant, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to such Court to transfer the suit to another Court, may apply accordingly; and the Appellate Court, after hearing the other parties, if they desire to be heard, shall determine in which of the Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed."

"20. Procedure where they are not so subordinate.—Where such Courts are subordinate to different Appellate Courts, any defendant, after giving notice in writing to the other parties of his intention to apply to the High Court to transfer the suit to another Court having jurisdiction, may apply accordingly. If the suit is brought in any Court subordinate to a District Court, the application, together with the objections, if any, filed by the other parties, shall be submitted through the District Court to which such Court is subordinate. The High Court may, after considering the objections, if any, of the other parties, determine in which of the Courts having jurisdiction the suit shall proceed."

(2) On the application of any of the parties and after notice to the parties and after hearing such of them as desire to be heard or of its own motion without such notice, the District Court may, at any stage, transfer any suit or proceeding pending in any Court subordinate to it to another such Court within its jurisdiction.

(3) Where any suit or proceeding has been transferred or withdrawn under Sub-sections (1) and (2), the Court which thereafter tries such suit shall, in the absence of a special direction to the contrary in the case of an order of transfer, proceed from the point at which it was transferred or withdrawn.

Sec. 23 [ = S. 21 = S. 24 (1) and (2)]

I. 1. Section 25 of the Indian Code of 1882, from which Section 21 of Regulation II of 1065 was taken, was as follows :—

"25. Transfer of suits.—The High Court or District Court may, on the application of any of the parties, after giving notice to the parties and hearing such of them as desire to be heard, or of its own motion, without giving such notice, withdraw any suit, whether pending in a Court of first instance or in a Court of Appeal subordinate to the High Court or District Court, as the case may be, and try the suit itself or transfer it for trial to any other such subordinate Court competent to try the same in respect of its nature and the amount or value of its subject-matter."

2. If the words italicised in the above Section are omitted, then it reproduces Section 21 of Regulation II of 1065. The statement of Objects and Reasons of the 1065 Bill explained the change thus:—"8. Section 25 is so amended as to confine to the High Court the power of transferring suits from one Court to another. This is the present law, and considering the limited extent of Travancore territory, and the comparative facility with which applications may be made to the High Court and the relative rank of the District Courts and Munsiff Courts in this State, it has not been deemed advisable to extend the power to the District Courts. As, under the present constitution of the High Court, it cannot try an original suit, the provision empowering the High Court to transfer the suit to its own file, is omitted."

II. Section 24 (1) and (2) of the present Indian Code, corresponding to Section 23 of the present Regulation is as follows:—

"24. (1) On the application of any of the parties and after notice to the parties and after hearing such of them as desire to be heard, or of its own motion without such notice, the High Court or the District Court may at any stage—

(a) transfer any suit, appeal or other proceeding pending before it for trial or disposal to any Court subordinate to it and competent to try or dispose of the same, or

(b) withdraw any suit, appeal or other proceeding pending in any Court subordinate to it, and

(i) try or dispose of the same; or

(ii) transfer the same for trial or disposal to any Court subordinate to it and competent to try or dispose of the same; or

(iii) re-transfer the same for trial or disposal to the Court from which it was withdrawn.

(2) Where any suit or proceeding has been transferred or withdrawn under Sub-section (1), the Court which thereafter tries such suit may, subject to any special directions in the case of an order of transfer, either re-try it or proceed from the point at which it was transferred or withdrawn."

III. 1. In regard to the present Section 23, the Notes on Clauses say :—

"An important change is made in this Section. Under the existing law, the High Court has held itself powerless to transfer any appeal or any other proceeding to itself, and its power has been confined to transferring from one subordinate Court to another subordinate Court. It is felt that the powers of the High Court should not be so circumscribed, when, in obvious cases, transfer to its own files of cases pending in the subordinate Court would be to the manifest advantage of all parties, and to the curtailment of delay and the removal of conflict in the disposal of cases. Such a power exists in criminal proceedings, and there is no reason why it should not exist in Civil cases. In view, however, of the fact, that the High Court does not exercise original jurisdiction, the power to transfer to its own file is restricted to appeal, and other proceedings only, and does not extend to trials of original suits."

2. In the original Bill, the power was given only to the High Court. The Select Committee considered it "expedient to empower District Courts to transfer suits or other proceedings from District Munsiffs' Courts"; and accordingly added Sub-section (2).

3. For Sub-section (3), the original Bill adopted the wording of the corresponding Sub-section (2) of the Indian Code. The Select Committee, however, altered it into the form in which it now stands.

IV. For Form of Notice of application for transfer of a suit to another Court for trial, see Appendix I, Form No. 2.

Case Law.

1. Section 21 C. P. C., (new Section 23) does not empower subordinate Courts to make any reference to the High Court inviting opinions on questions of law.—

5 T. L. J., 358.

2. On an application for transfer, the High Court called upon the lower Court to send up a report on the allegations made therein. On the question whether the applicant is entitled to a copy of such report:

Held.—The applicant is entitled to such copy as the report is prima facie a public document.

It is an elementary principle of law that no man should be condemned unheard, and the hearing of a party implies that he should be allowed reasonable facilities to state his own case and answer that of his adversary. If, in the instance in question, the applicant is denied the opportunity of having access to the Munsiff's letter, he cannot complain. But his prayer for a copy thereof cannot be refused, as such refusal is tantamount to an intimation that the Court, while prepared to hear his view of the case, is not inclined to hear what he may have to say in answer to or explanation of what the Munsiff might have written against him. The Munsiff's letter is not privileged communication addressed to the High Court in his capacity of a departmental subordinate. It is, on the other hand, a statement of facts and opinions showing cause against the rule issued by the High Court to an inferior Court, and as such it is prima facie a public document.—

15 T. L. J., 409.

3. In order that the High Court may exercise the jurisdiction conferred by Section23, the suit or other proceeding must have been properly instituted before any Court.

Under Order XLV, Rule 2, unless the application for the review is made to the Judge who passed the decree or made the order, it cannot be said to have been properly instituted.

The expression "made" contained in the Rule means "presented" and not "moved."

Institution of suits

Summons and Discovery.

Summons to defendant.

25. Where a suit has been duly instituted, a summons may be issued to the defendant to appear and answer the claim and may be served in manner prescribed.

Service of foreign summonses.

26. (1) Summonses issued by any foreign Civil or Revenue Court may be sent to the Courts in Travancore and served as if they had been issued by such Courts :

Provided that Our Government have, by Notification in Our Government Gazette, declared the provisions of this Section to apply to such Courts.

(2) Our Government may, by like Notification, cancel any Notification made under this Section, but not so as to invalidate the service of any summons served previous to such cancellation.

The application for review presented to a different Judge, therefore, is not in order and cannot be transferred.

The application for review of a judgment presented after the Judge who decided the case has been transferred to another Court cannot, in the exercise of the powers conferred upon the High Court, by Section 23, be transferred to the Court to which the Judge has been transferred (F. B.).—

I. The old Section was as follows :—

"44. Every suit shall be instituted by presenting a plaint to the Court or such Officer as it appoints in this behalf."

II. See Order IV, Rule 1, Infra.

III. The Section that followed the old Section 44 has been omitted; and it ran thus :—" 45. The plaint must be distinctly written in the language of the Court : Provided that the plaint may (with the permission of the Court) be written in English; but in such case, a translation of the plaint into the language of the Court shall be filed in Court."

---

Power to order discovery and the like.

27. Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, the Court may, at any time, either of its own motion or on the application of any party,—

(a) make such orders as may be necessary or reasonable in all matters relating to the delivery and answering of interrogatories, the admission of documents and facts, and the discovery, inspection, production, impounding and return of documents or other material objects producible as evidence;

(b) issue summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents or such other objects as aforesaid;

(c) order any fact to be proved by affidavit.

Summons to witness.

28. The provisions in Sections 25 and 26 shall apply to summonses to give evidence or to produce documents or other material objects.

Penalty for default.

29. The Court may compel the attendance of any person to whom a summons has been issued under Section 27 and for that purpose may—

(a) issue a warrant for his arrest;

(b) attach and sell his property;

(c) impose a fine upon him not exceeding five hundred rupees;

(d) order him to furnish security for his appearance and in default commit him to the civil prison.

30. The Court, after the case has been heard, shall pronounce judgment, and on such judgment a decree shall follow.

Judgment and decree.

I. Section 193 of Regulation II of 1065 corresponds to the new Section 30 and Sub-Rule (1) of Rule 1 of Order XX. Sub-rule (2) of Rule 1 of Order XX corresponds to Section 194 of the old Regulation. The two Sections of the old Regulation were as follow :—

"193. The Court, after the evidence has been duly taken and the parties have been heard either in person or by their respective pleaders or recognised agents, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once, or on some future day of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders."

"194. A Judge may pronounce a judgment written by his predecessor but not pronounced."

II. 1. Rule 1 of Order XX is also given below for reference in connection with the case-law :—

"1. (1) The Court, after the case has been heard, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or at some future day, of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders.

(2) A Judge may pronounce a judgment written but not pronounced by his predecessor."

See also Order XL, Rules 29 and 30.

III. 1. It is a well-established principle of law that the decision of a case must be in accordance with the pleadings. If, at the final hearing, the Court learns that the case stated in the pleadings is inaccurate, it must either dismiss the suit or allow the plaintiff to withdraw it with liberty in either case to bring a fresh suit.—7 T. L. R., 33.

2. When the plaintiff's claim is found unsustainable, the defence need not be gone into.— 12 T. L. R., 177.

3. It is the duty of the Courts to grant such of the reliefs claimed as are admissible upon the admitted or proved facts of a case.— 16 T. L. R., 39.

4. The Zillah Judge has in the case not considered all the documentary and oral evidence and his judgment is extremely meagre. He has not discussed the several points and the evidence as he should have done when dealing with an original suit (F. B.).— 1 S. D., 44.

5. Where a party is entitled to a relief he should not be asked in the judgment to furnish security before he is allowed, in the case, to realise and take the decree amount. 1 S. D., 73.

6. When a judgment has become final, whether right or wrong, it is binding on the parties.— 3 T. L. J., 41.

7. The words "amount in suit" occurring in the decretal portion of the judgment go to show that the judge who decided the suit intended to award future interest also which was claimed by the plaintiff, and the decree was wrongly prepared because the wording of the judgment was wrongly interpreted by the officer who prepared the decree. The question before the lower Court was only one for bringing the decree into conformity with the judgment.— 3 T. L. J., 160.

8. Under the law, errors in judgment can only be corrected by an application for review or on appeal (Obiter).— 31 T. L. R., 61 ( = 5 T. L. J., 352).

9. Where the Munsiff did not appear to have given proper consideration to the contentions of the parties as they appeared in the plaint and written statement, his decree could not be supported.— 6 T. L. J., 56.

10. "A judgment does not vest in a judgment-creditor any portion of the property of his judgment-debtor. It gives him a right to have the judgment executed, but until execution the property of the judgment-debtor does not vest in the judgment-creditor by the virtue of judgment".— 36 T. L. R., 56.

11. A judgment written, but not duly pronounced, is a mere memorandum made by the judge who wrote it, and not a document having the force of a judgment conforming to the requirements of law.

A judgment rendered without jurisdiction is invalid in law (F. B.).— 39 T. L. R., 220 (= 13 T. L. J., 385).

1[illegible] [illegible] judgment pronounced without the hear[illegible] of final arguments is liable to be set aside as bad in law.— 15 T. L. J., 368.

Case Law.

1. The possibility of the defence turning out to be false is no ground for refusing a fair trial to a defendant who is entitled to full opportunity to prove the defence by any admissible evidence.

A decree passed without a proper trial in the manner contemplated by the Code of Civil Procedure cannot be supported.— 5 T. L. R., 76.

2. If, in the opinion of a Judge, a question of fact is immaterial for the decision of a case, the evidence bearing on it ought to be left unconsidered and the question undetermined. But if, on the other hand, it is in any way material—though not directly—the evidence ought to be properly weighed and conclusion distinctly recorded. Indifferent mode of dealing with a question of fact is likely to be prejudicial to the interests of the parties.— 9 T. L. R., 107.

3. It is only when a party dies before argument and before decree that his death will affect the validity of the decree.— 17 T. L. R., 18.

4. Where in a suit the defendant confessed judgment, but died before the judgment was pronounced and his representative objected to the execution of the decree on the ground that the judgment was obtained against a person who was dead at the time of its declaration and in the absence of his representative on record :

Held.—There was nothing anomalous or contrary to principle in the delivery of a judgment, drawing up a decree thereon and in executing the same after the death of a defendant, if he has before death confessed judgment.— 17 T. L. R., 182.

5. A Court will decree a suit, though apparently it is speculative, if it is neither illegal nor immoral.— 19 T. L. R., 54.

6. A suit once filed subsists until there is an order of the Court directing it to abate or otherwise giving finality to the litigation by judgment or order; but the mere fact that a plaintiff or defendant dies pending the disposal of the suit does not necessarily make the subsequent proceedings invalid.

The principle of the decision in 17 T. L. R., 182 clearly is that, if the party against whom judgment is given had full opportunity to be and was heard and if the suit had not abated, the absence of the legal representative of a deceased party is not fatal to the validity of the judgment.— 25 T. L. R., 108.

7. An order directing a party to pay additional Court-fee ought not to be embodied in a judgment which records findings against him on the merits. Such an order ought to be recorded in a separate proceedings and judgment reserved till the payment is made.

A valid judgment and a binding and final decree cannot be reconsidered by the Court except on a petition for review or an order from a superior Court, and any fresh decree passed, except under these conditions, is a nullity and cannot operate as a bar to the execution of the prior decree which has ipso facto become final.

The principle of construing a decree with reference to the judgment is applicable only to those cases where the decree is ambiguous or expressed in extremely vague and general terms.— 26 T. L. R., 58 (= 1 T. L. J., 150).

8. On revision the High Court ordered in the case, that the District Judge's observations which were not necessary for the disposal of the appeal should be expunged from the record.— K. P., 271.

9. In a suit for redemption of a mortgage, the period fixed for the mortgage had not expired at the date of the suit. The period expired at the hearing of the appeal.

Held.—The plaintiff could not get a decree for redemption as the decree must have reference to the state of things existing on date of plaint, and plaintiff was not entitled on date of plaint to get the relief he now claimed.

Judgments and decrees relate to the state of things at the date of suit.— 2 T. L. J., 145.

10. It was contended, on behalf of the special appellant that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court was bad in law, because (1) after the appeal has been first heard by the District Judge and taken up for judgment, the District Judge granted the first defendant's petition to be heard afresh and did so without notice to the appellant or his Vakil, and (2) the judgment was written by the Judge after he had been transferred from the Court.

Held.—The hearing of a party without notice to the opposite party or his Vakil after the case is taken up for judgment, is at the most, an irregularity which does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court, and is not by itself sufficient ground for reversing a judgment, if as laid down in Section. 547, C. P. C., [new Section 78], the merits of the case are not affected by such irregularity. There is nothing illegal in a Judge writing a judgment after his transfer to another Court, as Section 194, C. P. C., [ =Or. XX, r. 1 (2) ] provides for the pronouncement by one Judge of judgment written by his predecessor in office.— 3 T. L. J., 215.

11. The Court below adjourned a case for argument to a day during the mid-summer vacation, actually heard the arguments of the plaintiff's Vakil on two days, one of which was a Sunday, the defendants' Vakil being absent on both these days, and took up the case for judgment without hearing the defendants' arguments, and pronounced judgment before the re-opening of the Court after the mid-summer vacation.

Held.—The procedure of the Court below was wrong, and the judgment was not passed according to law.— 4 T. L. J., 227.

Ref.—15 T. L. J., 368.

12. It is clear law that, without a petition for review or an order from a superior Court, no Judge has jurisdiction to pronounce a fresh judgment when there is already a valid judgment in the case passed by the Court.— 31 T. L. R., 61 (=5 T. L. J., 352).

13. The recital of the admission of the title of the plaintiff's family contained in a judgment is admissible as relevant evidence of the mortgagee's admission of the mortgagor's title.— 36 T. L. R., 187 (= 10 T. L. J., 143).

Rel.—16 T. L. J., 277.

14. Where an Appellate Court fully adopts the reasoning and conclusions of the Court of first instance, it is not bound to set out the reasons for its decision with the same fulness as if it was deciding the suit in the first instance or as if it was reversing the first Court's decree.

As regards the contention, in the case, that the evidence in the appeals had not been properly considered by the lower Court, the omission of the lower Court to consider certain material portions of the evidence had probably affected its finding both on the question of title and possession. In the interests of justice, it was desirable that the evidence should be examined in more detail than had been done. The decree of the lower Court was accordingly reversed and the appeal remanded.—

15. A judgment pronounced after practically shutting out the argument of a party is not a valid judgment under the law. The judgment and the decree of the Munsiff, were reversed and the case sent back for fresh decision after hearing both sides.

Section 193 of the Civil Procedure Code makes it incumbent on the Court, after evidence in the case had been duly taken, to hear both sides either in person or by their pleaders before pronouncing judgment in open Court.

"Omission to pronounce judgment in open Court is in direct opposition to an express provision of the law; and in practice it is highly inconvenient, and deprives the Court and the litigants of a valuable safe-guard against error".— 38 T. L. R., 90 (=13 T. L. J., 173).

Ref.—15 T. L. J., 368.

16. The District Judge, who had heard the parties before the midsummer vacation, went to the Court-house on a day during the vacation and pronounced his judgment without previously intimating to the parties that he intended to do so. After judgment was pronounced written notice of the decision was served on the parties.

It was contended before the High Court that the judgment of the District Judge was invalid, inasmuch as the Judge had acted in contravention of the provisions of Section 193 of the Civil Procedure Code, whereby he was bound to pronounce judgment in open Court at once after the case was heard or on a future date notified to the parties.

Held.—1. The District Judge had jurisdiction to pronounce judgment during the mid-summer vacation and his having done so in the case under consideration did not per se militate against the provisions of Section 193 of the Civil Procedure Code.

2. The practice of Courts did not in effect amount to a rule of law making it obligatory on a judge to abstain from exercising judicial functions during vacation or on public holidays. The very fact that a subordinate Judge is competent, with the sanction of the High Court, to exercise judicial functions when his Court is in recess is indicative of the unbinding nature of the practice itself.

3. The rendition of judgment without giving previous notice of the date to the parties was a mere irregularity which did not vitiate the judgment as it was not shown to have prejudiced the party assailing it. Section 547, Civil Procedure Code, [new Section 78] covers this case.

When it is remembered that a judgment pronounced after the death of a party which takes place subsequent to the final hearing, is nevertheless deemed to be binding on the representatives of that party, it is idle to contend that an error of procedure in the matter of notice is followed by more serious consequences.

The expression 'in open Court' is contradistinguished from the expression 'in camera'. The essence of the former is that the place is commonly accessible to the public, though the Judge may on good grounds and on specific occasions curtail this right of the public. The Civil Courts Regulation authorises the Government to fix places for the holding of Courts. It is reasonable to conclude that a Judge who transacts judicial business at any place so fixed must be deemed to hold Court there and that a judgment rendered at that place in such a manner as to permit the public to have access thereto is a judgment pronounced in open Court (F. B.).—

17. The judgment of a Court pronounced eight months after arguments were heard is not one in accordance with law. In pronouncing the judgment after such a long delay, the Judge has acted against the wholesome provisions of Rule 518 of the Civil Courts' Guide, which directs that judgments should be written out promptly when the facts are likely to be fresh in the mind of the Judge. The decree was set aside and the case remanded for disposal after hearing the Vakils on both sides.—

18. The function of a Court of Appeal is to come to an independent conclusion on the evidence, whatever be the view taken by the trial Court. Only it must always bear in mind, in deciding a point, on which there is a conflict of oral testimony, that it has neither seen nor heard the witnesses, and consequently make due allowance in this respect.

"There are two ways in which one may approach the question of credibility. When the question is whether a witness is speaking the truth or not, light is thrown upon it by the demeanour of that witness in the box, by the manner in which he answers questions, and by how he seems to be affected by the questions that are put to him, and so on. No doubt there, the trial judge has an advantage which cannot possibly be shared by any Appellate Court. But when the views upon credibility are founded upon argumentative inferences from facts which are not disputed, then the Court of Appeal is really in just as good a situation as the Judge of first instance.— 16 T. L. J., 608.

19. Judgment requiring consideration may be reserved, but should be declared in reasonable time after date of hearing; otherwise it cannot be said to be one in accordance with law. No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to what the reasonable time is, as it depends upon the nature and circumstances of each case.

In the case, the judgment of the lower Appellate Court was pronounced eight months and ten days after the hearing. Considering the nature and circumstances of the case, it was held, that the time taken was quite unreasonable and that the judgment was accordingly not in accordance with law.— 43 T. L. 20. Rule 518 of the Civil Courts' Guide requires that after final hearing the judgment should be written and declared promptly when the facts are likely to be fresh in the mind of the judge, the judgment in complicated suit requiring consideration being alone permitted to be reserved for a few days. Where the judgment requires consideration, it may be reserved, but should be declared in reasonable time after the hearing; and no hard and fast rule can be laid down as to what the reasonable time is, as it depends upon the nature and circumstances of each case.

The fact that the Munsiff had elaborately stated his reasoning after discussion of the evidence (which is referred to in more than one place) and which seems to have more influenced the judge in agreeing with the Munsiff's conclusion does not relieve the Judge of his duty to form his own opinion on the evidence and record reasons for his findings. The function of a Court of Appeal is to come to an independent conclusion on the evidence, whatever be the view taken by the trial Court. Where the decision of a case involves issues of fact, and the first Court has gone fully into the evidence and recorded its finding and decision, if the Appellate Court agrees with the conclusions of the Court below, the Appellate Court is no doubt not obliged by law to state in detail the reasons previously recited in which it concurs. But a general and wholesome adoption of the judgment of the Court

I. 1. Section 204 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"204. In suits for money, decree may order certain interest to be paid on principal sum adjudged.—When a decree is for the payment of money, the Court may, in the decree, order interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable to be paid on the principal sum adjudged, from the date of the suit to the date of the decree, in addition to any interest adjudged on such principal sum for any period prior to the institution of the suit, with further interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable on the aggregate sum so adjudged, from the date of the decree to the date of payment, or to such earlier date as the Court thinks fit.

"Effect where decree is silent as to further interest.—Where such a decree is silent with respect to the payment of further interest on such aggregate sum as aforesaid from the date of the decree to the date of payment or other earlier date, the Court shall be deemed to have refused such interest, and a separate suit therefor shall not lie, except, in the case of decrees passed before this Code comes into force."

2. Section 7 of Regulation IV of 1010 was as follows :—"7. Rate of interest to be decreed.—Munsiffs are hereby prohibited from allowing in their decrees a greater rate of interest in any suit brought before them than twelve rupees per cent per annum, but if the interest mentioned in the document be less, Munsifis shall decree accordingly."

II. The Section as framed in the original Bill was as follows :—

"31. Interest :—(1) In suits for money, or for grain, no Court shall, in respect of the period antecedent to the institution of the suit, allow in its decree a greater rate of interest than 18 per cent. per annum, and the amount adjudged as interest for such period shall not exceed the principal amount sued for.

Provided that, in the case of money owing to or from bankers, the Court may allow compound interest at rate not exceeding 18 per cent. per annum if there is an express agreement in writing to pay such compound interest, or if there is a commercial usage to that effect.

(2) Where and in so far as a decree is for the payment of money, the Court may, in the decree, order interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable to be paid on the principal sum adjudged, from the date of the suit to the date of the decree, in addition to any interest adjudged on such principal sum for any period prior to the institution of the suit, with further interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable on the aggregate sum so adjudged, from the date of the decree to the date of payment, or to such earlier date as the Court thinks fit.

(3) Where such a decree is silent with respect to the payment of further interest on such aggregate sum as aforesaid from the date of the decree to the date of payment or other earlier date, the Court shall be deemed to have refused such interest, and a separate suit therefor shall not lie."

In regard to the above provision, the Notes on Clauses said :—

"This section makes an important change in the law relating to recovery of interest. The present statutory law consists of remnants of two Regulations passed in 1010 M. E., relating to procedure of Civil Courts. According to the law in vogue, no other than simple interest may be recovered, and no more than 12 per cent. in cases of money can be allowed. By a strict interpretation of the wording of the Section, the High Court have recently held that the amount of interest adjudged cannot exceed half the principal as at date of decree, and not as at date of suit. These provisions regarding payment of interest were passed nearly a century ago, and have been the subject of adverse criticism at the hands of laymen, merchants, and lawyers alike. The existing law makes a difference between loans of money and paddy, as, in the latter case, as much as 20 per cent. may be allowed, and the interest may go up to an amount equal to the principal. Whatever may have been the reason which existed to justify this difference of treatment, there is none now to support the continuance of such treatment. Various devices are resorted to by lenders and borrowers to defeat the existing law.

"An attempt, however, to wholly abrogate this law, and allow complete freedom of contract failed, when steps were taken at no distant past to give effect to the same in the Legislative Council. It is felt that, while complete freedom of contract need not be granted, the restraint now in force must be substantially relaxed. Hence it is proposed to put both money and paddy on the same footing, and allow in both cases the rate of 18 per cent. which is now allowed in the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation. The amount of interest is allowed equal to the amount of the principal, as in the case of paddy. It is also in conformity with the Hindu Law Rule of Damdupat. With the repeal of enactments of 1010, the ground of the recent High Court decision to award as interest a half only of the principal as at date of decree, will disappear, and the decision itself will no longer be law. It will afford some gratification to know that, whatever be the restraints that are put on contract, delay in the disposal of cases will not of itself impose on the successful litigant a possible penalty of loss of interest, as, at present, it must. Courts will be free to adjudge interest from date of suit to date of realisation without any restraint on the amount."

Section 7 of Regulation I of 1010, quoted above was repealed, as also so much of Clause 5 of Section 17 of the same Regulation as related to interest for money.—

See Vol. I, Pp. 1-2.

III. The Select Committee, in reporting on the Bill, observed in regard to this Section :—

"We do not think it desirable to enhance the maximum rate of interest of twelve per cent. now permitted by law, or to allow Courts to decree as interest before suit more than one-half of the principal. The Court may, however, award any amount that may accrue as interest from the date of suit to the date of decree. We consider it necessary that the maximum rate of future interest may be raised to 9 per cent. and that the maximum amount of interest accruing after decree may be equal to the aggregate amount of the decree. In other respects, we think that Regulations I of 1010 and IV of 1010 may stand as they are."

The Committee accordingly made the necessary changes, and the Section stands now as modified and recast by them.

IV. When the Council was considering the Bill, a motion was made by a Non-official Member to modify Sub-section (2), so that the maximum amount should not exceed twelve per cent., or half the principal amount till the date of the decree. The amendment proposed was that the words "subject to the provisions of Regulations I and IV of 1010" be substituted for the words "Notwithstanding anything contained in Regulation I of 1010."

In opposing the above motion (which finally was lost), the Member, in charge explained the position as follows:—"* * I may point out that, at the time the Bill was introduced, there was great opposition to this Clause, and, out of deference to the wishes of the House, the Select Committee made it as harmless as possible. The first Subsection says that, before the date of suit, half of the principal may be decreed as interest. I dare say it is within the knowledge of the House, especially the lawyer members, that recently there was a Full Bench ruling which said that till the date of decree we can recover only half of the principal by way of interest. In other words, even if the interest had accumulated to half the principal or more on the date of suit, if only the suit had been dragging on —as in the recent case which was pending for six years—the plaintiff should not get any interest for the period of suit however long it may be, although there is no fault on the part of the plaintiff. At any rate, I do not see any reason why the plaintiff should suffer for the delay in the disposal of suits, especially when he is not in the least responsible for the delay. There was much complaint in the Assembly about this particular question. With a view to avoid such complaints, it was decided by the Select Committee that the plaintiff should get interest, not exceeding 12 per cent. from the date of suit till the date of decree. No doubt, we are willing to abide by the old Regulation as regards the interest till the date of suit. I submit, it was in accordance with public opinion and in deference to the representations in the assembly that it was thus laid down by the Select Committee. Otherwise, the defendant will postpone the evil day for him as much as possible. He will delay the decree as much as possible. It is really very hard that, for no fault of his, the creditor should not get any interest for his money from the date of suit till it is finally decreed by the High Court. I dare say that that was not the sort of impression that the Court had at the time they gave the ruling."

"I do not see why the plaintiff should be mulcted for the delay caused by the frivolous contentions of the defendant. The plaintiff demands only the money that he had advanced; he has come to the Court in time. Unnecessary and frivolous contentions were raised by the defendant and the disposal of the suit was delayed. Why should the creditor forego his dues for no fault of his? Much capital was made in the Assembly of the delay in the disposal of suits, of the protracted nature of suits, of the trouble given to the creditors by debtors, of the small rate of interest allowed by the Court, and of all the inconveniences and hardships of the creditors. The creditors, as all of us are aware, are not able to get money from the Bank even at 6 per cent. It is the existing law on the subject that is mainly responsible for the delay in suits and the delay in execution proceedings. The defendants are tempted to drag on, since they will thereby get time during which they will not be forced to pay interest. All these facts were pointed out in the representations in the Sri Mulam Popular Assembly. Regulations I of 1010 and IV of 1010 were interpreted by the High Court to mean that they did not empower the Courts to award any interest for the period between the date of suit and the date of decree. It is this that is mainly responsible for the delay experienced in the Execution Courts and the delay in the disposal of suits. The provision as settled by the Select Committee will deter the defendant from raising unnecessary and frivolous contentions and from delaying the disposal of suits, because delay will mean a pinch in his purse. Therefore, once we take away this provision from the Bill as settled by the Select Committee, we take away the most essential requisite for prompt realisation of decree debts and prompt disposal of suits".— L. C. P., dated 13-2-1925.

V. The corresponding Section 34 of the British Indian Code is as follows :—

"34. Interest.—(1) Where and in so far as a decree is for the payment of money, the Court may, in the decree, order interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable to be paid on the principal sum adjudged, from the date of the suit to the date of the decree, in addition to any interest adjudged on such principal sum for any period prior to the institution of the suit, with further interest at such rate as the Court deems reasonable on the aggregate sum so adjudged, from the date of the decree to the date of payment, or to such earlier date as the Court thinks fit.

"(2) Where such a decree is silent with respect to the payment of further interest on such aggregate sum as aforesaid from the date of the decree to the date of payment or other earlier date, the Court shall be deemed to have refused such interest, and a separate suit therefor shall not lie".

VI. 1. "When a man gets a decree for money, it does not necessarily follow that he ought to get interest as well up to the date of the satisfaction of the decree. The determination of the question depends upon the facts of each particular case. A Court, before making a decree for money, will consider what was the rate of interest charged in the bond, whether the creditor took undue advantage of his position, whether the bond put in suit was the last of a series of renewals, &c., and it will then be determined once for all whether it will allow interest subsequent to the date of the suit".

"Regulations I and IV of 1010 make twelve per cent. the maximum rate of interest, and I do not see why that rate should be made the normal rate of interest by our Courts. That may be the ordinary market rate of interest in the country, but that ought not to be the rate chargeable on judgment-debt, which is the best security for money which a creditor can have" (Per Ramachandra Aiyar, C. J.).—

10. Held (by the Full Bench, Govinda Pillay, J. dissenting).—In a suit by the plaintiffs for recovery of the amount (including principal and interest at 15 per cent. per annum) found due on a certain date, on which date the debtors had signed a receipt in plaintiff's account books stating—"We shall repay the sum we borrow with interest at 15 per cent." followed by the entry of the amount then found due by way of principal and interest as above calculated, the said receipt was a bond superseding the prior causes of action and creating a new cause of action for the said amount as from the date of the said receipt. The plaintiffs were entitled to realise the said amount with interest on the same at 12 per cent. per annum from the date of the receipt till date of suit and at 6 per cent. per annum thereafter.

Per Govinda Pillai, J.—The receipt was merely an acknowledgment and not a bond creating a new cause of action as the same was unsupported by consideration and the causes of action for the several loans arose on the respective dates when such loans were advanced.— 23 T. L. R., 17.

Held.—Interest is always claimable on arrears of rent. The fact that the premium is left in the hands of the lessor without interest is no reason for disallowing the claim for interest.

Interest on Government tax paid by the lessee is allowable, as an equitable claim. It must be allowed by the lower Court in execution at the same rate at which interest is allowed to the plaintiff.—3 S. D., 82.

24. The plaintiff sued the defendant for money on an agreement by the latter that he would pay monthly Rs. 5, as long as he had in his hands a sum of Rs. 250 belonging to the plaintiff. The suit was for recovery of arrears of such monthly dues. The Munsiff threw out the suit on the ground that it was an illegal agreement.

Held.—The agreement was to pay interest at 24 per cent. per annum. Even though the rate of interest fixed by the parties was higher than the rate sanctioned by law, there was no objection to awarding the lawful rate or any lesser rate at the discretion of the Court. The Munsiff's reason of illegality did not therefore warrant the dismissal of the suit.— 2 T. L. J., 263.

25. The plaintiff had agreed with the defendant to pay interest on moneys borrowed at more than 12 per cent. per annum. The plaintiff had paid interest at the contract rate, and the money paid had been appropriated towards interest. In suing for settlement of accounts and recovery of money, the plaintiff alleged that the contract to pay more than 12 per cent. interest was illegal and prayed that moneys paid by him in excess of 12 per cent. must be refunded to him. On the question being referred to the Full Bench:

Held.—Section 7 of Regulation I of 1010 did not make the charging of a higher rate of interest, than 12 per cent. illegal but unenforceable by suit. The payment at the excess rate was voluntarily made, and the defendant could not be compelled to refund.— 31 T. L. R., 219 (= 5 T. L. J., 441).

26. When a usufructuary mortgagee who is directed to enjoy the usufruct of the property in lieu of interest on his mortgage amount is kept out of possession by the mortgagor, whatever may be the equities between the mortgagor and the mortgagee in regard to the interest on the mortgage amount, he (the mortgagee) can have none as against a subsequent encumbrancer who is not found to have fraudulently combined with the mortgagor to keep the prior mortgagee out of possession; and hence the latter is entitled to priority over the subsequent encumbrancer only in respect of the principal amount secured by the first mortgage and not in respect of the interest on the same.— 6 T. L. J., 460.

27. "Mesne profits" does not as a matter of law include also "interest on mesne profits." The decree-holder, therefore, is not entitled as a matter of law to get interest on mesne profits, where the decree sought to be executed does not provide for such interest.— 7 T. L. J., 8.

28. In a suit for recovery of Rs. 521-14 as principal and Rs 531-21-0 as interest due on two hypothecation bonds executed by the defendants, the Munsiff gave a decree for the principal and interest amounting to only one-half of the principal. On appeal against the decree disallowing a portion of the interest, it was contended for the plaintiff that the prohibition contained in the latter part of Clause 5 of Section 17 of Regulation I of 1010, but limited the amount awardable as interest between the date of suit and the date of decree, and not the amount awardable on account of interest that had accrued prior to date of suit.

Held (Overruling the contention).—The latter part of Clause 5 of Section 17 of Regulation I of 1010 related not merely to the interest awardable between the date of suit and the date of decree, but to all interest whatsoever up to date of decree, and therefore, the Munsiff's judgment refusing more than Aravasi interest was right.— 33 T. L. R., 234.

30. Under Section 17, Clause (5), of Regulation I of 1010, not more than half the principal amount can be allowed by the Courts as interest up to the date of the decree,—which clearly indicates that the interest accruing due during the pendency of the suit, i. e., between date of suit and date of judgment is also to be included in decreeing the moiety which is prescribed as the maximum limit in money transactions. When such moiety has accrued due at the date of the plaint itself and has been decreed by the Court, no interest from date of suit up to date of decree can be further decreed. Under Section 21 of Regulation IV of 1010, the interest that can be allowed from the date of the decree up to the date of the execution of the decree, i. e., the date when the decree-holder realizes the amount due to him under the decree, shall not, in money transactions, exceed half the principal.— 35 T. 31. The plaintiff instituted the suit for the balance amount due to him from the defendant on account of provisions supplied to, and contract work executed for, the defendant by the plaintiff. The plaintiff also claimed interest on the previous month's balance, setting up an express agreement to pay such interest.

It was found that the agreement to pay interest was false, and that there was no demand by the plaintiff of the amounts due to him.

It was contended for the plaintiff in appeal that he was entitled to get interest in the shape of damages.

Held.—The claim for interest was unsustainable.

Per Sesha Aiyer, J.—Prima facie interest on the price of goods sold and delivered is not payable. Interest may, of course, be payable by agreement, express or implied. An implied agreement may be deduced either from the course of dealings between the parties or from usage of trade. There is no rule of law authorising the allowance of interest as damages for the detention of a debt. In the present case, there was no agreement that the price of the goods sold should be paid on a day certain. There was no demand for the price made. There was no agreement for interest. There was no intimation that interest would be charged beyond a period of credit. And there was nothing in the course of the dealings between the parties to suggest that the dealings were intended to carry interest. In these circumstances, the claim for interest must be disallowed (F. B.).—
10 T. L. J., 341.

32. Where a hypothecation bond contained a stipulation to pay interest at 9 per cent. per annum on certain fixed rates and, in default to pay on those dates, to pay interest at 12 per cent. per annum from the date of the bond.

Held.—The provision for the enhancement of the rate of interest with effect from the date of the bond was a penalty that should be relieved against. But as the enhanced rate was only 12 per cent. per annum, the plaintiff might fairly be awarded interest at that rate by way of compensation from the date of the last payment till date of suit.

33. The suit was for the principal and the interest due on a hypothecation deed which stipulated (a) that interest at 1 per cent. per mensem should be paid on the principal at the expiry of every year, and (b) that, if default was made in the annual payment of interest, interest on the amount so due should be paid at one per cent. per mensem.

The Lower Court disallowed the claim for interest on interest, relying on Section 7 of Regulation I of 1010.

Held.— The plaintiff was entitled to charge interest at 12 per cent. per annum on every year's arrears of interest. The object of the parties, as seen from the terms of the hypothecation deed, appeared clearly to have been to treat the amount of interest in arrears at the end of every year as an ascertained debt and to charge interest on such amount. Interest allowed was not allowed on interest as such, but on an amount which both parties had agreed to treat as a principal debt by itself.

The larger question whether interest could be charged on interest as such did not arise for determination under the terms of the hypothecation bond by which the parties were bound (F. B.).—

Plaintiffs sued to set aside the mortgage deed and to recover as damages the mesne profits from the mortgaged property.

Held.—The damages awardable in a case like this will be represented by interest at a fair rate on the unpaid mortgage amount, and not the amount of mesne profits from the property for the period the mortgagee was in possession.— 38 T. L. R., 311

42. In procedural laws, retrospective effect should not be given in case the application of the new procedure will prejudice rights established under the old. But the right to costs or future interest cannot be said to be a vested right. In this case, the defendants who, if at all, should be taken to be prejudicially affected could not be said to have any right as regards the extent to which the interest or costs could be decreed against them. The award of future interest and costs is a matter within the discretion of the Court. In this view, the argument that the adoption of the later statute in matters relating to future interest would prejudicially affect the defendants could not have any force.

The proceedings in appeal are but a continuation of the suit and the decree in appeal is the decree in the suit. As such, it would be competent to the High Court to invoke the aid of Section 31 in case the peculiar circumstance of the case warrant the award of the maximum limit allowed thereunder as regards future interest. It has however to be noticed that the provisions of Section 31 are directory and not mandatory (F. B.).— 17 T. L. J., 229.

43. Section 31, Clause (2), empowers the Court to decree interest only on the principal sum adjudged from the date of the plaint to that of the decree. The lower Court was, therefore, wrong in allowing interest upon the aggregate amount due towards principal and interest up to the date of the plaint.— 17 T. L. J., 393.

44. Section 21 of Regulation IV of 1010 is imperative and Civil Courts have no authority to pass any orders, the effect of which, either directly or indirectly, will be to nullify the beneficial provisions of the above Regulation. Even where the decree-debtor has entered into an undertaking in the course of the execution proceedings, which has no doubt obtained the sanction of the Court, that circumstance will not entitle the decree-holder to realise amounts in terms of the new undertaking, if, by so doing, the express provisions of the said Regulation, become a dead letter.— 17 T. L. J., 623.

45. The trial Court had allowed first defendant only the principal (paddy) and an equivalent amount towards interest up to date of decree, presumably, under Section 17, Clause (5), of Regulation I of 1010 which was in force on the date of his decision. But he had not made any provision in the decree for interest after date of decree till date of deposit which he could have awarded under Section 204. The amount realisable on this account could not, as laid down in Section 21 of Regulation IV of 1010, exceed one-half of the principal amount. The omission to make a provision herefor may be taken to be a refusal to award the same in exercise of the discretion vested in the Court under Section 204. But, in the nature of the peculiar facts of the case, it could not be said that future interest could, with propriety, have been refused. Nothing was also awarded towards interest between date of plaint and date of decree on the quantity of paddy accrued due on date of plaint and directed to be deposited. This too was but proper in the light of the provisions in Section 17 (5) of Regulation I of 1010. The direction to deposit the paddy in kind or its equivalent in money calculated at the nirak rate of paddy on date of suit, made presumably under Section 203 [Or. XX, r. 10] held applicable in such cases in 40 T. L. R., 181 also seemed to be proper. Under the circumstances, the interest awardable after date of decree till date of realisation could be only on the value of the amount of paddy received as principal.— 17 T. L. J., 793.

46. A prized subscriber to a Chitty is, no doubt, entitled, if he so chooses, to call upon the foreman to retain in his hands such portion of the prize amount as may suffice to cover the future instalments of the Chitty and to pay him the balance. But the initiative in the matter should be taken by the subscriber. I. 1. The new Section reproduces Section 35 of the Indian Code.

2. Sections 213, 214, 215 and 217 of Regulation II of 1065 are given below for reference,

"213. Costs of applications.—When disposing of any application under this Code, the Court may give to either party the costs of such application, or may reserve the consideration of such costs for any future stage of the proceedings."

"214. Judgment to direct by whom costs to be paid.—The judgment shall direct by whom the costs of each party are to be paid, whether by himself or by any other party to the suit, and whether in whole or in what part or proportion."

"215. Power of Court as to costs.—The Court shall have full power to give and apportion costs of every application and suit in any manner it thinks fit, and the fact that the Court has no jurisdiction to try the case is no bar to the exercise of such power:

Provided that, if the Court directs that the costs of any application or suit shall not follow the event, the Court shall state its reasons in writing.

Every order relating to costs made under this Code and not forming part of a decree may be executed as if it were a decree for money."

"217. Payment of costs out of subject-matter.—The Court may direct that costs be paid out of, or charged upon, the subject matter of the suit."

II. Subject to such conditions......prescribed.—The following Rules deal expressly with costs:—Order XI, Rule 3 (Costs of interrogatories; Order XXIV, Rule 4 (Cost on payment into Court): Order XXXIV Rule 3 (Costs in interpleader suits).

III. (1) Rule 1 of Order LXV of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—

"1. Costs to be in the discretion of the Court.—Subject to the provisions of the Acts and these Rules, the costs of and incident to all proceedings in the Supreme Court, including the administration of estates and trusts shall be in the discretion of the Court or Judge; Provided that nothing herein contained shall deprive an executor, administrator, trustee or mortgagee who has not unreasonably instituted or carried on or resisted any proceedings, of any right to costs out of a particular estate or fund to which he would be entitled according to the Rules hitherto acted upon in the Chancery Division: Provided also that where any action, cause, matter, or issue is tried with a jury, the costs shall follow the event, unless the Judge by whom such action, cause, matter, or issue is tried, or the Court, shall, for good cause, otherwise order".

(2) Section 5 of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1890, is as follows:—

"5. Costs.—Subject to the Supreme Court of Judicature Acts, and the Rules of Court made thereunder, and to the express provisions of any Statute, whether passed before or after the commencement of this Act, the costs of and incident to all proceedings in the Supreme Court, including the administration of estates and trusts, shall be in the discretion of the Court or Judge, and the Court or Judge shall have full power to determine by whom and to what extent such costs are to be paid".

IV. In the British Indian Code, Act IX of 1922 has added the following Section (35-A) providing for payment of costs by way of compensation in cases of false or vexatious claims and defences:—

"35-A. Compensatory costs in respect of false or vexatious claims or defences.—(1) if in any suit or other proceeding, not being an appeal, any party objects to the claim or defence on the ground that the claim or defence or any part of it is, as against the objector, false or vexatious to the knowledge of the party by whom it has been put forward, and if thereafter, as against the objector, such claim or defence is disallowed, abandoned or withdrawn in whole or in part, the Court, if the objection has been taken at the earliest opportunity and if it is satisfied of the justice thereof, may, after recording its reasons for holding such claim or defence to be false or vexatious, make an order for the payment to the objector, by the party by whom such claim or defence has been put forward, of costs by way of compensation.

"(2) No Court shall make any such order for the payment of an amount exceeding one thousand rupees or exceeding the limits of its pecuniary jurisdiction, whichever amount is less: * *

Provided further, that the High Court may limit the amount which any Court or class of Courts is empowered to award as costs under this Section.

"(3) No person against whom an order has been made under this Section shall, by reason thereof, be exempted from any criminal liability in respect of any claim or defence made by him.

"(4) The amount of any compensation awarded under this Section in respect of a false or vexatious claim or defence shall be taken into account in any subsequent suit for damages or compensation in respect of such claim or defence."

Case Law.

1. Plaintiff sued in ejectment to recover a small piece of property, and obtained a decree, but without costs, in the Court of first instance. He appealed to the lower Appellate Court on the question of costs and was successful.

Held.—In a special appeal from the last decree it was not competent to the defendant to re-open the case on the merits.— 2 T. L. R., 8.

2. The absence of demand may be a ground for refusing costs of the litigation if the defendant (Sirkar in the case) deposited in Court before the hearing of the suit the amount admittedly due.— 4 T. L. R., 84.

3. No appeal lies against the order refusing to take security from the plaintiff for costs.— 5 T. L. R. App., 9.

4. As the first plaintiff in the case had not spoken truth on some points and as the plaintiff's Vakil attempted to introduce new pleas in appeal inconsistent with the case originally set up in the Court below, the award to plaintiffs of the costs of the appeal shall be refused.— 5 T. L. R., 116.

5. The lower Court refused plaintiff his costs on the amount awarded by it, and this refusal was one of the grounds of the appeal. There was no reason why the plaintiff who had succeeded in establishing his claim, should suffer in costs. Costs therefore would be awarded him throughout on the amount decreed.— 5 T. L. R., 120.

6. An Appellate Court is fully competent to make any order as to costs it may think fit, notwithstanding that no regular appeal or objection had been filed against the lower Court's order as to costs.— 6 T. L. R., 13.

7. Where parties on the same side retain each a separate pleader, the other party, if he loses, may be charged with the fees of each of the pleaders if the interests of the parties are distinct, but the assessment of the fee should be on the value of the claim put forth by each party, when such value is less than the whole value of the suit, and not necessarily on the aggregate value of the suit.— 6 T. L. R., 37.

8. Who is mostly to blame for the litigation,—whether plaintiff or defendant—is the chief point to be considered in the award of costs. That the costs should be saddled on him who, without good grounds, occasioned the litigation, is clear.— 7 T. L. R., 66.

9. The suit as against first defendant having been dismissed, the costs of plaintiffs should not have been saddled on that defendant. He is exempted from liability to pay plaintiffs' costs.— 8 T. L. R., 120.

10. In allowing the appeal, no order as to the costs of the proceedings was made as the point on which the appellant succeeded was for the first time taken before the High Court.— 8 T. L. R. App., 12.

11. As plaintiffs were allowed to sue and appeal to the High Court in forma pauperis, they should not be saddled with the defendants' costs of the appeal.—

12. As the point on which the appellant succeeded had not been urged in the Court below, each party should bear his own costs throughout.— 11 T. L. R., 92.

13. In reversal of the original decree, the plaintiffs' suit was dismissed with costs in the High Court to second defendant: the parties to bear their own costs in the lower Court, as the second defendant set up an untrue plea in that Court.—

14. The appeal was unsustainable and was dismissed, but without costs, as the question of law raised in the case was a new one.— 12 T. L. R., 39.

15. The assignment by one judgment-debtor to another of the portion of the decree which related to costs in respect of which there was joint liability was invalid under the provisions of Clause (b) of the Proviso to Section 225 of the Civil Procedure Code [ = Order XXI, r. 14 ]. The assignee could not be allowed to enhance the liability of his co-defendants in the matter of costs, under colour of assignment.—

16. The award of costs is a matter entirely left to the discretion of the Court deciding the suit, and unless the discretion is shown to have been very arbitrarily exercised, an Appellate Court should not interfere with such discretion (F. B.).—

17. As the objection on which the dismissal of the suit was based was not taken up by the defendants in the lower Court, the parties should suffer their own costs in that Court, and the plaintiff should pay the 2nd defendant's costs in the High Court and bear his own (F. B.).—

18. In the case, it was held that the defendants were responsible to the Government who appointed them, if there was any accountability on their part, and not to the plaintiff. As this point was taken by the High Court of its own motion, the parties will bear their costs throughout.—

19. There being no difference in principle between a 'compromise' and a 'confession of judgment', the Vakil's fees under the Vakils Regulation of 1040 would be one-fourth if the confession is made before all the requisite pleadings shall have been filed, and one-half, if after.—

20. Whenever proportionate costs are decreed, it is only the court-fees paid on the plaint or appeal memorandum and the Vakil's fee that should be apportioned. The other costs should be borne by the parties who have incurred them, unless the judgment gives distinct instructions as to the apportionment of all or any of them (F. B.).— 14 T. L. R App., 21.

21. As regards costs in the case, the plaintiff appears to have made a written demand for the money before the institution of the suit and the defendant did not pay the money into Court until after the decree. The fact that the defendant admitted the claim does not absolve him from liability for costs incurred by the plaintiff in consequence of the defendant's neglect to discharge the debt, and the decree should award the plaintiff the costs in proportion to the claim allowed.—

22. Award of costs is peculiarly with the discretion of the Court deciding the case. Unless it is clearly shown that the discretion was wrongly exercised, no appellate Court will interfere with the award.— 15 T. L. R., 33.

23. The plaintiffs having virtually disobeyed the lower Court's order, they should pay the respondent's costs in the High Court.— 15 T. L. R., 118.

24. The District Judge dismissed a pauper suit on the ground that the plaintiff, a resident in Travancore, failed to furnish security for the costs of the defendants as directed by the Court.

Held.—The order of the Judge was illegal as there is no law for demanding security for costs from residents in Travancore and as Section 354 of the Civil Procedure Code [ = Or. XXII, r. 3] does not apply to a suit permitted to be filed in forma pauperis (F. B.).— 15 T. L. R., 178.

25. The dismissal of the plaintiff's suit by the District Court seems right, but as the defendants falsely denied the authenticity of the bond, they ought not to get any costs. The parties will bear their respective costs throughout.— 15 T. L. R., 180.

26. The suit was for contribution. The original decree was obtained by the children of the Karanavan of a family governed by both the Makkathayam and the Marumakkathayam systems of inheritance against the said Karanavan and his Seshakars for recovery of property mortgaged by the latter to the present plaintiff along with other properties and of costs and mesne profits. In pursuance of this decree, the plaintiff was dispossessed of the suit property and the whole costs and mesne profits were realised from him. He sued the Karanavan and his Seshakars for their aliquot portion of the mesne profits and costs. The defendants admitted their liability to pay their portion of costs, but refused to pay the mesne profits on the ground that the plaintiff alone enjoyed the usufruct of the property and, therefore, he was liable to account for the profits. The District Judge decreed only a moiety of the costs awarded by the former decree against the Karanavan, the first defendant, and dismissed the rest of the claim.

Held.—The plaintiff was entitled to a decree against each defendant for an aliquot share of the costs.

As the defendants cannot go behind the original decree they are liable to pay the mesne profits pro rata in the same way as costs.— 16 T. L. R., 111.

27. Plaintiff's appeal was dismissed, but without costs, as the defendant had set up some false allegations.— 16 T. L. R., 145.

28. A decree granted reliefs separately against each property. The holder of one of the properties deposited in Court the proportionate debt charged upon that property. The Court, in spite of the deposit, sold the very property along with the others for the realisation of the outstanding portion of the debt.

In appeal, the sale was cancelled, and each side was directed to bear his costs, as the respondent was not liable for the mistake of the Court and the appellant might have then and there moved the stay of the sale when the decree-holder accepted the money tendered by him.— 16 T. L. R. App., 3.

29. A District Judge ordered that a plaint be taken off the file with costs to be paid from the estate of plaintiffs who were declared to be minors. The Judge's order was based on a deposition given by 1st plaintiff in the heading of which his age was given as 16.

Held.—The order dismissing the suit was wrong and the order for the recovery of the defendant's costs from the minor's estate illegal. See Section 422, C. P. C. [ = Or. XXXII, r. 2].— 17 T. L. R., 166.

30. Where a District Judge granted a review of the order passed by him to the effect that the plaintiff who sued as a pauper should furnish security for the costs of the defendants and it was argued that the Judge was wrong in granting the review :

Held.—The District Judge was right in granting the review.

The Judge was right in cancelling his former order as there was no evidence to show that the plaintiff was not a resident of Travancore and as the poverty of the plaintiff was no reason for calling upon him to furnish security for the costs of the opposite party. If pauper plaintiffs were, simply because they are paupers, required to furnish security for costs, it would nullify the good intentions of the Government who have made special provision to assist such persons in recovering their just claims.— 17 T. L. R. App., 20.

31. The provisions of Section 521, C. P. C. [=Or. XL, r. 10] are wide enough and vest a discretion in the Court as to extension of time as well before as after the time once fixed for the deposit of respondents' costs by the appellant has expired.— 17 T. L. R. App., 41.

32. The High Court has power under Section 568, C. P. C., [new Section 89] to revise an interlocutory order regarding the payment of the day's costs passed under Section 151, C. P. C., [=Or. XVII, r. 1] in case of any irregularity in the matter (By majority).— 19 T. L. R., 82.

33. Where there are several defendants, only one set of costs should be awarded to all defendants even though they appeared by separate Vakils, provided their defence was common and not separate; and when only one set of Vakil's fees is allowed, the filing of one certificate for Vakil's fees for all the defendants together is enough to charge the plaintiff with the whole costs.— 19 T. L. R., 103.

34. As in the case there were reasons to suspect misconduct on the part of the Sirkar's (fifth defendant's) servants, the lower Court, it could not be said, was wrong in its order as to costs of, and payable by, the fifth defendant.— 20 T. L. R., 24.

35. As for the memo of objection filed on the defendant's behalf relating to costs, it could not be said that the discretion vested in the Court in the matter of costs was arbitrarily exercised by the lower Court in the case. Interference was declined, and objection also disallowed.— 1 S. D., 21.

36. A Government Officer, whose order made within the scope of his authority, was sought to be set aside in a regular suit was not a necessary party to that suit; but the Goverament represented by the Dewan should be made a party, if the plaintiff wants any relief against the Forest Department in which the said Officer (3rd defendant) was employed.

The plaintiff did not want any relief against the Department, and his suit was for a declaration of his title and possession as against the 1st and 2nd defendants. The plaintiff was, no doubt, misled by the Munsiff's order in making the 3rd defendant a party, but the plaintiff was to blame for not appealing against the Munsiff's order and for again making the 3rd defendant a party to the appeal. The 3rd defendant was entitled to his costs as he acted simply in his official capacity and did not exceed his authority or jurisdiction.— 1 S. D., 235.

37. The 2nd defendant was a pro forma defendant. It was the contention of first defendant that drove plaintiffs to the suit. The first defendant should therefore pay the costs of plaintiffs and second defendant in both Courts.— 2 S. D., 94.

38. The defendant (Sirkar) raised a number of contentions which were not established, and put plaintiff to the expense of disproving them and of being ready with counter-evidence to rebut any that might be adduced by the Sirkar.

Held.—A decree directing the defendant to suffer his costs was not improper.— 3 S. D., 79.

39. As to the costs of defendants 2 to 5 in the case, they must certainly get their costs, as they had no interest in contesting plaintiff's suit. Though the plaintiff did not originally include them in the suit, his contentions necessitated their being brought into the case. As the plaintiff was responsible for this, the lower Court's order in saddling him with the costs of defendants 2 to 5 was correct.— 3 S. D., 114.

40. An unconditional tender before suit will not exonerate a defendant from liability for costs, if it is not accompanied by payment into Court after suit and before decree.— 3 S. D., 190.

41. In dismissing the second appeal, the parties were ordered to bear their respective costs in the High Court, as the legal questions involved were by no means easy of solution or free from doubt.— 3 S. D., 199.

42. The plaintiff was not a dutiful son of his parents and having regard also to the relationship between the parties (the 1st defendant being plaintiff's mother and defendants 2 and 3 being plaintiff's sisters), the parties were directed to bear their respective costs in all Courts.— 3 S. D., 212.

43. A plea of tender of mortgage money to the mortgagee before action must be accompanied by a payment into Court after action.

As no payment was made into Court, the plaintiff should in the circumstances of the case, pay 1/4 of the costs of defendants (2, 3 and 10) in the lower Court and 1/2 the costs of defendants (2 and 3) in the High Court and bear his own.— K. P., 40.

44. In a redemption suit by a superior mortgagee the lower Court directed 1st defendant (mortgagee) to pay plaintiff's costs.

The general rule laid down in several decisions is that the costs of a redemption suit should be borne by the party seeking to redeem. But where the suit is rendered necessary by the vexatious and unreasonable conduct of the mortgagee, the latter must not only forfeit his costs but also pay plaintiff's costs.

Held.—The lower Court was right in its order as to costs as the conduct of the 1st defendant was vexatious, while that of the plaintiff showed his readiness and willingness to redeem.— K. P., 102.

( = 14 T. L. J., 80).

45. In a suit for redemption by Melottidars :

Held.—The lower Court was right in giving the mortgagee his costs of the suit, as the plaintiffs (Melottidars) did not even tender the mortgage amount into Court.— K. P., 159.

( = 14 T. L. J., 80).

46. The plaintiff having failed to substantiate his case ought to have no costs. He succeeds merely on the admission of the defendants who on the other hand have not taken pains to prove their case. The most equitable order seems to be to order each party to bear his or their own costs throughout.— K. P., 323.

47. In a suit for redemption of a mortgage one of the defendants (4th defendant) contended inter alia that the plaintiff was not heir of the mortgagor and that he was holding the property under Court-sale. The lower Court in entering judgment for plaintiff ordered the latter to pay certain amount as compensation for the 4th defendant's improvements in addition to the mortgage amount and also directed that defendant to pay plaintiff's costs.

Held (in appeal).—In view of the utterly false allegations of the 4th defendant the lower Court was right in making him pay plaintiff's costs. The argument that plaintiff should not be allowed her costs as she did not deposit the sum due to defendant on the mortgage in Court, did not apply to a case of the present nature.— K. P., 347.

48. One of the grounds on which the defendants in the case appealed was that the suit was barred by limitation. This contention prevailed, the decree of the lower Court was reversed and the suit dismissed as barred by limitation.

As the defendants (appellants) did not take the objection as to limitation in the lower Court, and did not raise an issue in that Court about limitation, the parties should bear their own costs in both Courts.— K. P., [illegible].

49. Court-fee need not be paid on costs generally in all cases, unless the decree as to costs is questioned in appeal independently of any other appeal. Costs generally follow the result of a suit, and when there is an appeal against the decision in the main points involved in the suit, costs cannot be said to form the "subject-matter" in appeal, unless, for any special reason, objection is taken particularly to the order as to costs. The costs of a suit are no part of the subject-matter in dispute. — 1 T. L. J., 388.

50. The third defendant (respondent) in the case who claims her costs and who was unnecessarily made a party to the suit by the first defendant may be fairly allowed half her costs (F. B.).—26 T. L. R., 63.

51. As to the objection as to want of parties (the ground on which the decision of the lower Court was reversed and the case remanded), was not taken in the Court below, and the memorandum of appeal, no order as to costs of the appeal is made.—

52. The respondent (Sirkar) supports the appellants and is therefore not entitled to separate costs.

The Government having already registered the lands (Kandukrishi) in the name of the first defendant after hearing plaintiff's objections, ought not to have sanctioned to plaintiff to institute the suit. But for that sanction, the suit would not have been instituted. The Government was thus partly to blame for the suit. The Government was therefore rightly made to bear its own costs (F. B.).— 26 T. L. R., 184

53. The appeal is dismissed with costs, one set to all the respondents, the apportionment of costs being made in proportion to the values of the properties claimed by each of them.— 27 T. L. R., 92.

54. The appellants also objected to the decree of the lower Court as to costs. It had not been shown that the Judge below has exercised his discretion wrongly in passing his decree relating to costs. This ground of appeal also failed (F. B.).—

55. Plaintiffs put in an objection memo as to costs. The lower Court's view that as they considerably undervalued the improvements on the property, they are not entitled to much consideration in the matter of costs is correct. The objection memo fails and is dismissed with costs.—

56. The special appeal must fail. The fourth defendant respondent's pleader urges that he has been unnecessarily made a party and prays for his costs. As the fourth respondent should not have been made a party to the special appeal, he is entitled to his costs.— 3 T. L. J., 401.

57. The first defendant (the Karanavan) who was ex parte in the High Court is not liable to pay plaintiff's (the next male member of the Tarwad) costs in the High Court, but is liable to pay plaintiff's costs in the Court below.— 30 T. L. R., 10
(= 4 T. L. J., 137).

58. The appeal is dismissed. The respondent has lost on the substantive ground of defence, and therefore each party shall bear the costs of this appeal.—

(=4 T. L. J., 148).

59. The appeal is allowed. The appellant is not allowed a refund of the court-fee paid on the appeal memorandum nor his costs in the High Court as he failed in the Court below to state clearly his defence on the question of res judicata.—

(=5 T. L. J., 289).

60. In providing for the costs of a litigation, the Court has every discretion to allow a party the full Regulation fee or a fraction of it or nothing at all as Vakil's fee. But as in the case of all other instances of discretionary powers vested in Courts, this discretion also has to be exercised judicially and not arbitrarily.

The plaintiff's suit failed entirely owing to his own fault, and there is no reason for holding that the first defendant, the Sirkar, is to be blamed at all in the matter of this litigation. In these circumstances, the lower Court should have exercised its discretion by allowing the appellant his entire costs including the full Regulation fee.

Vakil's fee is to be taxed for the Sirkar even though no Vakil's fee certificate is filed by the Sirkar.

Section 16 of the Vakils Regulation does not apply to cases where the Sirkar Vakil appears on behalf of the Sirkar.

(=6 T. L. J. 216).

61. The costs in the High Court of the second defendant who has been unnecessarily made a party to the second appeal must be paid by the plaintiff.—

(=7 T. L. J., 326).

62. An order rejecting an appeal under Section 521, C. P. C., [=Or XL, r. 10] for failure to deposit costs is neither a decree as defined in Section 2 of the Code, nor an order falling within any of the Clauses of Section 557 [=Section 82 and Or. X.LII, r.1] and is therefore not appealable.—

63. It is usually stated as a rule that an appeal is not to be allowed in respect of costs only. That means that, when the merits of a question have been determined, and when a Court has thought fit to give or refuse costs, in the exercise of its discretion, and in the absence of any settled principle on the subject, there is no appeal for or in relation to those costs. Where the trial Court has not applied its mind at all to the right of the parties to receive an award of costs, and when there has been no real exercise of discretion, or there has been a violation of any established principle, the Appellate Court should interfere. "Where a plaintiff comes to enforce a legal right and there has been no misconduct on his part— no omission or neglect which would induce the Court to deprive him of his costs—the Court has no discretion and cannot take away the plaintiff's right to costs." In other words, a successful party should not be deprived of costs unless he has been guilty of misconduct, omission and neglect; and this is an established principle.— 35 T. L. R., 37.

64. M. owed S. Rs. 500 upon a hypothecation bond of 1075. M. conveyed some among the hypothecated properties in 1082 to plaintiffs 1 to 5 and directed them to discharge the hypothecation debt due to S. Plaintiffs 1 to 5 executed a mortgage in favour of the defendant in 1083 and directed her to pay Rs. 650 in discharge of the debt due to S. S. sued M. for the recovery of his debt and obtained a decree in satisfaction of which he realised in execution, 5716 fanams from M. M. in her turn sued plaintiffs 1 to 5 and present defendant and obtained a decree against the plaintiffs and in execution brought some of their properties to sale. They ultimately raised money from the 7th plaintiff and deposited in Court Rs. 1,398-ch. 13 and got the court sale set aside.

The suit was to recover from the defendant the amount of Rs. 1,398 odd deposited by them with interest at 12 per cent. from the date of the deposit in Court. The lower Court decreed the suit. It was contended in appeal that the defendant was not in law liable to pay to the plaintiffs the costs of prior litigations as damages.

Held.—The defendant was not in law liable to pay to the plaintiffs the cost of the prior litigations as they were not damages which could fairly and reasonably be considered to arise naturally from defendant's breach of contract to pay S. nor such as might reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties at the time they made the contract as the probable result of the breach of it. In the case of non-payment of money, no matter what the amount of inconvenience sustained by the plaintiff, the measure of damages is the interest of the money only; and all other things sustained by him as the result of the breach is remote.— 35 T. L. R., 115 (=9 T. L. J., 106).

65. Costs are a matter for the discretion of the Court; but some reason should have been given for depriving the successful plaintiffs of their costs. No reason is given in the judgment. The objection memo is accordingly allowed with costs and the Sirkar (1st defendant) directed to pay the costs of the plaintiffs in the lower Court.— 36 T. L. R., 53.

66. The decree directed that if the plaintiff deposited in Court a lump sum within a certain date, he should be treated as a subscriber by the defendants in their Chitty and he should be entitled to his costs from the defendants and the defendants should bear their own. Plaintiff deducted the amount due to him as costs and deposited the balance.

Held.—The question does not fall under the provisions of any of the Sections of the Civil Procedure Code, but in equity, plaintiff is entitled, while making the deposit, to take credit for the amount of the costs awarded to him by the decree.— 10 T. L. J., 91.

67. Both parties have advanced false pleas. They will therefore bear their respective costs throughout.— 10 T. L. J., 284.

68. The suit was for redemption of a mortgage; and the general rule in such actions is that the party seeking redemption should pay the costs of the mortgagee unless the latter's conduct has been improper or vexatious.— 12 T. L. J., 181.

69. The obtaining of the leave of the Court by a Receiver in insolvency for filing a suit is a matter between the Court and the Receiver. The Official Receiver prosecutes a suit at his own risk in the matter of costs and cannot charge them on the insolvent's estate if he loses.— 38 T. L. R., 245 (=12 T. L. J., 270).

70. It is a well established principle of law that an appeal in respect of costs only is entertainable when there has been no exercise of discretion, or when a question of principle is involved. Acting on this principle an Appellate Court ought not to interfere with an order relating to costs, unless the order is arbitrary or perverse on the face of it, or unless there has been such a gross mis-exercise of judicial discretion as to render interference necessary.— 13 T. L. J., 3.

71. The ordinary rule is that costs will follow the event.— 39 T. L. R., 78 (=13 T. L. J., 36).

72. The District Court, by a judgment, dismissed an appeal before it for failure of the appellant to comply with an order directing him to deposit the day's costs of the respondent. A decree was also prepared in accordance with the judgment. A second appeal was preferred to the High Court.

Held.—No second appeal lay as there was in law no decree passed by the District Judge in the appeal before him. The order dismissing the appeal was neither a decree as defined by Section 2 of the Civil Procedure Code nor an order falling within Section 557 of that Code [=Or. XLII, r. 1], and was consequently not appealable.— 13 T. L. J., 396.

73. The trial Court has given no sufficient reasons for departing from the ordinary rule allowing costs to the successful party. "In the case of a wholly successful defendant, the Judge must give the defendant his costs unless there is evidence that the defendant (1) brought about the litigation or (2) has done something connected with the institution or conduct of the suit calculated to occasion unnecessary litigation and expenses or (3) had done some wrongful act in the course of the transaction of which the plaintiff complains." In the case, the defendant cannot be said to have rendered himself liable under any one of these conditions. The plaintiff is accordingly ordered to pay the costs of this litigation throughout.— 13 T. L. J., 405.

74. The general rule is that the cost of redemption suits should be borne by the party seeking redemption: and where the suit is rendered necessary by the vexatious and unreasonable conduct of the mortgagee the latter must not only forfeit his costs but also pay plaintiff's costs. "It would be unprofitable to go through the long roll of cases on this question, and I will only point out that a mortgagee has an absolute right to costs, unless it is forfeited by misconduct. It is sometimes said that the mortgagee's claim to costs is a matter of agreement. But this is obviously a fiction, being merely a deduction from the established chancery practice on the subject." The right to add his costs to the security is an indefeasible right of the mortgagee and it can be lost only by his misconduct. The mortgagee who lent his money has the right to get all costs which he incurred as if it is part of the money invested on the security of the property. Under the English Law it appears that a mortgagee has no right of appeal on a mere question of costs, while the disallowance of costs to the mortgagee is appealable as a matter of right.

There are three propositions which are established by decided cases—(1) that a mortgagee has an absolute right to costs unless they are forfeited by misconduct; (2) that if the absolute right is forfeited by misconduct, the costs are in the discretion of the Judge; and (3) that the raising of an untenable defence or a claim of a balance due after the mortgage has been fully paid off, both constitute misconduct by which the absolute right to costs is forfeited. The mortgagee's right to costs is a substantive one and the rule of discretion allowed to the Court comes into operation only on the misconduct on the part of the mortgagee.— 40 T. L. R., 7 (=14 T. L. J., 80).

75. The lower Appellate Court has given no reasons for not awarding costs to the successful respondent. The plaintiff has persisted in suing for a remedy which the Law cannot give him. There is no reason why he should not bear the consequences of failure (F. B).— 14 T. L. J., 168.

76. As the point of law raised in the case is a novel one, no order is made as to costs.— 40 T. L. R., 1 (=14 T. L. J., 197).

77. As the special appellant was not prosecuting the appeal with due diligence, he will pay the special respondent's costs of the special appeal and bear his costs of the same, excepting the fee paid on the memorandum of special appeal which will be refunded to him.— 14 T. L. J., 410.

78. If the defendant had contested the suit solely on the ground on which he succeeded, his claim for costs would have been unanswerable. But he contested the plaintiff's claim on other grounds as well, on which he has been defeated. Therefore it cannot be said that the Judge did not exercise a wise discretion in not awarding him his costs (F. B).—41 T. L. R., 285 (=15 T. L. J., 3).

79. Having regard to the novelty of the question involved, no order is made as to costs (F. B).— 15 T. L. J., 394.

80. As the defendants virtually took advantage of their own fraud and collusion, they are directed to bear their costs throughout. 42 T. L. R., 29 (=16 T. L. J., 10).

31. A certain plot of land was recorded in the Sirkar accounts as waste land available for registry. The defendant applied for and obtained registry of the land as Puthuval. A third party sued the Sirkar and the defendant for a declaration that the land was part of his registered holding and for cancellation of the Puthuval registry. Both the Sirkar and the defendant contested the suit. A decree was passed against them with costs. In execution of that decree, the Sirkar deposited the whole amount of the costs, and then sued the defendant for one-half of the amount so deposited.

Held.—The claim of the plaintiff Sirkar for contribution was unsustainable.

The fact that the amount deposited by the Sirkar was the amount payable on a decree passed against it and the defendant jointly does not by itself conclude the liability of the defendant to pay one-half of it. One judgment-debtor may, without impugning the strength of the decree as between the plaintiff on the one side and himself and his co-judgment-debtor on the other side, plead that, as between himself and such co-judgment-debtor, the latter is liable to discharge the whole decree.

The Sirkar had, by showing this land in its public records as waste land available for registry, held itself out as owner of the land competent to pass a valid title to persons getting registry of the land as Puthuval. The defendant was entitled to act upon that representation and take a registry. If the registry was really incompetent on the ground of the Sirkar having no title and led to a suit by the real owner of the property, the Sirkar surely, and not the purchaser, is responsible for the litigation. Where the Sirkar contests that suit, it must pay the costs decreed to the plaintiff. The purchaser of the property from the Sirkar, when he contests the suit, does so merely to support his derivative title from the Sirkar, the act of the latter having necessitated his being a party defendant to the suit. That circumstance cannot take away the primary liability of the Sirkar for the suit and, consequently, for the costs decreed to the plaintiff in the suit.— 17 T. L. J., 480.

Part II.

The Indian Special Committee in their Report observe as follows:—

"5. The subject of execution is, perhaps, one of the most difficult with which we have had to deal. The present system, in the mofussil at any rate, tends to excessive delay and affords facilities for defeating the claims of creditors. As the same time the creditor often has only his self to blame owing to his own laches is prosecuting his rights. In the Presidency Town the same objections cannot be fairly raised; the system works well; whilst, in the mofussil, the difficulties arise not so much from the machinery itself, as from the defective manner in which it is worked. One of the most fruitful sources of litigation is the setting aside of execution sales, on the ground of irregularity in the publication of the sale proclamation. It is notorious that, in many of these cases, the Court's officer, either through negligence or dishonesty, has not duly published the proclamation, but it is impossible to deal with such cases by any provision in a Code. After a most careful consideration of the subject, we have not seen our way to any very drastic changes in the present system. We have found ourselves unable to accept the somewhat far-reaching proposal of the Committee of 1902 in relation to the execution of decrees by precept; but we are so far in accord with the view expressed by that Committee as to have been able to insert in the Bill a Clause which enables the Court which passed the decree to issue a precept to any other Court to attach property of the judgment-debtor, pending execution in the ordinary course. Beyond this we have felt we should not safely go.

"We anticipate that there will be a substantial saving of time, and consequent expense, from the provision requiring that mesne profits should be ascertained by the Court under the decree itself, and not as now in execution proceedings. * *

"Other amendments deserving notice relate to (1) the power to break open the outer door of the judgment-debtor's dwelling house; (2) the date from which the purchaser's title accrues; (3) oral application for immediate execution; (4) the discretion of the Court in the execution of decrees for the restitution of conjugal rights; (5) execution against partnership property; (6) extended facilities for attaching salaries, and (7) powers to decree-holders to carry decrees into effect at the expense of the judgment-debtor.

"We regard the changes made in relation to execution as calculated to materially assist the judgment-creditor in recovering the fruits of his judgment."

The Committee further on in their Notes on Clauses observe:—"The bulk of the provisions as to execution will be found in the Rules, but the main provisions as to the Courts by which decrees may be executed, the questions to be determined by Courts executing decrees, the limit of time for execution, transferees and legal representatives, procedure in execution, arrest and attachment, the delegation to Collectors of power to execute certain decrees, the distribution of assets and resistance to execution have been retained in the body of the Bill."

Case Law.

(General.)

1. Interest subsequent to decree may be awarded, though not specially provided for in the decree.— 2 T. L. R. App., 1.

[See new Section 31.]

2. The attachment and sale proceedings held in execution of decrees are never considered sufficient to affect the interests of those who are not parties to the decree or the execution proceedings. So far as third parties are concerned, there is no difference between a private sale and a Court sale. (F. B.).— 5 T. L. R., 38.

Ref.—6 T. L. J., 97
Dist.—34 T. L. R., 167.

3. Inasmuch as the decree (sought to be executed) has awarded separate shares to each of the plaintiffs and the interests of the plaintiffs were not joint, any one of them was competent to execute the portion of the decree that related to him separately.

An appeal lay against the order of the Zillah Judge refusing to execute a decree against sureties (who in consideration of the stay of execution of a decree pending the disposal of the appeal preferred against it) had made themselves responsible for the amount of the judgment-debt. 5 T. L. R., App., 7.

4. Under the Civil Procedure Code (Travancore) a judgment creditor is entitled to proceed both against the property and the person of the judgment-debtors.

There is no provision in the Code which authorizes the Court executing the decree, to limit the execution to the property or to the person of the judgment-debtors.— 5 T. L. R. App., 8.

5. The duties of the Civil Court executing a decree are ministerial. Hence, the order of forfeiture passed under Section 288 of the Code (Regulation II of 1087) is specially so, as the Court on plaintiff's default to pay in, the remainder of the purchase money, has no option but to carry, on its own motion, the deposit to the credit of Government. No appeal is allowed against this order. There is nothing in the Code barring the ordinary right of action in such cases, the rule that bars suits brought to question judicial acts of proceedings, not applying to orders under Section 288 of the Code.— 6 T. L. R., 32.

6. No Court is competent by its order to stay proceedings in a Court of equal or superior jurisdiction.—6 T. L. R. App., 1.

7. No application should legally be treated as disposed of until all that could be done upon it has been done, or it has been rejected by a special order of Court.— 8 T. L. R., 156.

Dist.—15 T. L. R., 9.

8. An application for execution of a decree was made more than 3 years after the last application for the same, but within 3 years from the date of the order for warrant, passed upon the last application. Notice was issued to the defendant to show cause why the application should not be granted. No objection having been taken by the defendant, his property was attached, though not sold in consequence of claims preferred by third parties. More than a year after the execution of the warrant of attachment, the defendant filed an objection that the decree was barred at the time of the last application for execution.

Held.—The plea of bar was too late. The defendant not having appealed against the order for attachment, it had become final and the said order, whether right or wrong, determined that the decree was not barred. 8 T. L. R. App., 41.

9. A judgment-debtor's mortgage lien secured by document should, for the purpose of the attachment and sale in execution of the decree against him, be regarded as immovable property, and the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relative to the attachment and sale of such properties should be strictly followed in bringing such lien to sale.— 8 T. L. R. App., 54.

Ex.—20 T. L. R., 165.

10. Where the Court has ordered a process for execution of a decree to issue on an application by the decree-holder, the legal presumption is that the decree was not barred at the date of the order, as it is always the duty of the Court to ascertain whether the execution is barred before passing such an order. The debtor's silence as to limitation only strengthens this presumption.— 8 T. L. R. App., 55.

11. An order rejecting an application for execution precludes the party from making a further application, unless and until that order is legally set aside.—9 T. L. R., 113.

12. An application to the Court which passed a decree to recall the case sent to another Court for execution is a step in aid of execution under Clause 4 of Article 158 of the Limitation Regulation. The duty of the Court which passed the decree is not extinguished simply because it has transferred a copy of the decree for execution to another Court and there is nothing to prevent both Courts executing the decree, provided arrangements are made to protect the judgment-debtor from the risk of being obliged to pay twice over.— 22 T. L. R., 83.

13. The plaintiffs sued as trustees on behalf of an institution to recover monies and other properties in the hands of defendants 1 to 3 who were servants thereof. The suit was compromised by plaintiff and 1st defendant putting in a Razi petition to the effect that defendants 1 and 2 were together to realize certain monies and 1st defendant to pay plaintiffs 1 and 11, a sum of Rs. 95 within 3 months. The Court gave a decree in terms of the compromise. The question having arisen whether the decree may be executed personally against the 1st defendant:

Held.—The decree was executable against the 1st defendant. It clearly gave a relief against him within the meaning of Section 201, C. P. C., [new Section 116 and Or. XX, r. 6] and it may be executed as for a debt due by him.

Where the terms of a decree are ambiguous, the pleadings might be looked at to ascertain the intention of the parties and the Court.

Ambiguous decrees should be interpreted so as to be in accordance with law and so as to advance practicable remedies and in the light of common sense.

An argument drawn from inconvenience is forcible in law and an interpretation best in accord with convenience and justice can be put on ambiguous documents, whether decrees, deeds or statutes.— 3 S. D., 173.

14. Where the decree directed payment of the mortgage money to the 3rd defendant on his giving security, the 1st defendant consented in execution to the abrogation of the order as to security and thereupon the lower Court discharged that portion of the decree which related to the security :

Held (on appeal by the 2nd defendant).—The order of the lower Court was one modifying the decree and no such modification could be made by an execution Court.—

15. A decree cannot be nullified or modified by any agreement made prior to its date, by which the parties contracted that it shall be nullified or modified if it is made (F. B.).

Per Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—It is against public policy to allow some of the parties to a suit to enter into arrangements before decree as to how they will act to modify or nullify the decree in case the terms of the decree awarded such and such reliefs. The Court believes, before passing the decree, that it decided the rights of the parties at the date of the decree, and if a man, ranged as a defendant along with other defendants, and who is apparently fighting the plaintiff just like the other defendants, and praying for costs against plaintiff like the other defendants, were to make agreements with plaintiff that he will not execute any decree for costs which the Court might award in the belief that there was no such agreement, it is almost committing a fraud upon the Court. It was the duty of the party who had entered into such an agreement to tell the Court before it passes the decree that it need not put itself to the useless trouble of considering the question of costs or of awarding costs as between plaintiff and second defendant, and it was (to say the least) unfair to the Court to let it remain in ignorance of that fact.

" If the agreement which was pleaded as having been come to between the parties before the decree was made, be given effect to, it would have the effect of nullifying the decree ; and it seems to us that upon this simple ground the objection could not be entertained. A decree was duly made between the parties, and if they had entered into such an agreement as now alleged it should have been incorporated in the decree. The decree being once made, it must be taken to be conclusive between the parties and the agreement like the one which has been pleaded cannot be given effect to". (29 Cal., 810).— 25 T. L. 16. A decree was passed in favour of plaintiff on 29-10-1081 in the following terms:—"The plaintiff will have a decree establishing the right to maintenance from the first defendant at the rate of 28 Fs. per month. This will be a charge on the ancestral properties of the first defendant and plaintiff's husband's self-acquisitions." On 24-7-1082, the plaintiff applied for execution by attachment of property and by arrest of the first defendant, and claimed 39 months' arrears. The first defendant was arrested and brought before Court on 25-7-1082, when he applied for time to pay up the amount, and time was granted. After several adjournments, the amount was finally paid on 20-8-1082. On 3-7-1086, plaintiff applied for the arrears that accrued since the date of the first application. Defendant opposed the application on the ground that the decree was merely a declaratory one, and no amount could be realised as maintenance in execution of the same. Plaintiff replied saying that the matter was res judicata by reason of the prior successful application for execution. The Munsiff upheld the defence and dismissed plaintiff's application holding that her remedy was by a fresh suit.

Held (On appeal).—There was no res judicata as there was no previous order construing the decree. But as the first defendant had once allowed execution to proceed actively without the slightest objection and had paid the arrears claimed in plaintiff's application of 24-7-1082, he could not, on the principle of estoppel, be allowed to object to the execution of the decree.—

17. A compromise decree provided that the defendant was to pay plaintiff Rs. 81 on or before 30-3-1086, failing which plaintiff was to have a decree for the whole suit amount which was larger than Rs. 81. The defendant, alleging that he tendered the amount (namely Rs. 81) to plaintiff on 28-3-1086, and that plaintiff refused to accept payment, applied on 29-3-1086 to the Court for Chellan for the said amount. The Chellan was, however, issued only on 1-4-1086, on which date the defendant paid the amount into the treasury. Plaintiff applying for execution of the decree for the larger amount, it was contended for the defendant that he (plaintiff) was not entitled to do so under the terms of the compromise decree. The plaintiff replied by saying that he became entitled to the larger amount, as the defendant failed to conform to the terms of the compromise decree.

Held (In second appeal).—As the defendant applied for Chellan on 29-3-1086, i. e., before the last date for payment mentioned in the compromise decree, and as it was established that the defendant had the whole amount with him on that date, there was a valid tender of payment within the date fixed by the compromise decree. Therefore, plaintiff was not entitled to execute the decree for the larger amount.—

18. In a suit instituted against a man subsequent to his death, an ex parte decree was obtained and was assigned to the appellant. On his application, the Court executing the decree held that the decree was void and refused execution. On appeal:

Held.—(1) The Court executing the decree could go into the question whether a decree was passed by a Court having jurisdiction.

(2) The decree was void ab initio in that the Court had no jurisdiction to pass a decree against a person who was dead at the time of suit. The decree was not in any sense a decree at all.

(3) The fact that the heir of the deceased person did not repudiate liability under decree when notice of assignment and of execution were sent did not raise any estoppel against him.— 4 T. L. J., 409.

19. The parties to a suit entered into a compromise to the effect that 40 Parahs of paddy and Rs. 5 were to be paid by the defendant on or before the 30th Dhanu 1086 and that, in default, the plaintiff was entitled to be given a decree for the plaint claim of 395 Fs., and a decree was passed accordingly. On 30-5-1086, the defendant who should have paid 166 Fs. deposited in Court only 137 Fs. which was drawn from Court by plaintiff. On the ground that the full amount had not been paid within the stipulated time, the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree in respect of the balance of 258 Fs. relying on the alternative provision in the decree.

Held.—The decree-holder should be allowed to take out execution only for 29 Fs., the balance, and he should not be allowed to take advantage of the penal clause, inasmuch as it was competent to the Court to relieve against a penalty even though the penal provision was embodied in a decree.

20. A compromise decree provided that the defendants should pay the plaintiff, within one year of the date of the decree, a sum of Rs. 7,000 with interest at 6 per cent. per annum; failing which, the plaintiff was to be at liberty to realise a sum of Rs. 7,630 with interest at 9 per cent. per annum from thé date of the compromise (24-5-1091) by sale of the property belonging to the defendants. Within the stipulated time, however, a sum of Rs. 3,150 alone was paid. The decree-holder, thereupon, applied for execution of the decree on the ground that the judgment-debtors had made default, and claimed to recover the larger amount mentioned in the decree with interest at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum from the date of the decree.

It was contended for the judgment-debtors that the alternative stipulation in the compromise was by way of penalty, and should, therefore, be relieved against.

Held.—The decree-holder was entitled to the larger sum mentioned in the decree with interest at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum from the date of the decree and to realise it by execution, and the Court had no jurisdiction to relieve against the provisions of the decree. Where an agreement has merged in a decree, so that the contractual obligation has been converted into a final command of a Court of Justice, the Court which has to carry out the command has no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon its reasonableness, but has merely to carry it out by means of processes appropriate to the case. Jurisdiction to relieve against a penal stipulation is merely another aspect of the jurisdiction to assess reasonable damages. But, in the case under consideration, the time for assessment of damages had passed, as the suit had ended in a final decree.— 35 T. L. R., *257

The plaintiff should produce a succession certificate within six months, in default of which the suit will stand dismissed with costs."

The time fixed in the decree for the production of the succession certificate expired on 22-9-1094. Various applications for execution were made before and after that date, but the succession certificate was produced only on 30-2-1095.

The lower Appellate Court held that the act of the Court of first instance in receiving the succession certificate on 30-2-1095 and allowing execution to proceed was tantamount to an order condoning the delay in the production of the certificate which the Court was competent to do.

Held.—The execution Court was not competent to extend the time fixed in the decree for the production of the certificate and as it was not produced within the time specified, there was nothing for the decree-holder to execute.

When the Court has no jurisdiction and there is nothing to show that the judgment-debtor was aware of the execution proceedings, the question of estoppel does not arise.— 13 T. L. J., 104.

24. It is no doubt true that the right to get maintenance is a personal right which is neither transferable nor heritable. But where a decree for maintenance has been obtained, the arrears of maintenance up to the date of suit and the future maintenance which accrued due and become payable on the date of the death of the plaintiffs become converted into a debt by the decree. They are personal rights or personal causes of action till the date of the decree. They cease to be such after decree and become heritable and transferable.

The heirs of the deceased decree-holders are entitled to execute the decree not only in respect of the arrears of maintenance due before the date of suit awarded by the decree but also such portion of the amount awarded as future maintenance as becomes actually due on the date of the death of the decree-holder.— 16 T. L. J., 350.

25. Section 270 of the Companies Regulation (I of 1092) applies only to cases where for the realisation of a debt due by the company proceedings are taken against a contributory as such who, under the provisions of Section 160 of the Regulation, is liable to contribute to the assets of the company. The nature and extent of the contribution are defined in Section 160. In those cases there is no personal or separate debt owing by the contributory to the creditor. Section 270 does not apply to a case where a person has obtained a decree not only against the company, but also against a contributory in his individual capacity and proceeds to execute against the latter the personal decree obtained against him.—16 T. L. J., 418.

26. A decree relating to future maintenance ran as follows :—

"അന്യായപ്രകാരമുള്ളതിൽ വാദിയുടെ ജീവനാംശം വകയ്ക്കായി വൃ ഒന്നുക്കു നാലു കോട്ട നെല്ലും മാസം ഒന്നുക്കു ൧൫ പണവും വീതം വാദിക്കു പ്രതിയുടെ പക്കൽ നിന്നും പട്ടിക വസ്തുക്കളിൽ നിന്നും ഈടാക്കാനുള്ള അവകാശത്തെയും പട്ടിക ൩-ാം നമ്പർ വസ്തുവിൽ വടക്കെ കിഴക്കു മൂലയിലുള്ള ഓല മേഞ്ഞ കെട്ടിടത്തിൽ വാദിക്കു താമസിക്കാനുള്ള അവകാശത്തെയും സ്ഥാപിച്ചിരിക്കുന്നു"

The decree was a mere declaratory decree and could not be enforced in execution.

In execution a decree must be construed by its own terms and not by the plaint. Where, however, the decree is ambiguous in its terms, it may be competent to the Court executing it to refer to the pleadings to ascertain its precise meaning.—

27. In suits for redemption, the decree may be treated as being in favour of both parties and it has been held that the mortgagee-defendant is entitled to execute the decree and recover the amount which the mortgagor-plaintiff is directed to deposit in Court before recovering possession. The application by the mortgagee, therefore, to realise any amount that is decreed to be paid to him by the mortgagor as a condition precedent to the recovery of the property is an application in execution. Article 153 of the Limitation Regulation (old) would thus apply to it.— 17 T. L. J., 767.

28. The fact that the first mortgagee has purchased the equity of redemption in Court auction in execution of a decree for sale on his mortgage without making the puisne mortgagee a party to the suit, and has obtained possession pursuant to the sale, does not take away or affect the right of the puisne mortgagee to realise his security by sale of the mortgaged property. His right is not confined merely to redeeming the first mortgage. He may, if he chooses, redeem the first mortgage. But redemption is an equitable right or (in India) a legal right which he may seek to enforce, and not a liability which he may be compelled to discharge.— 42 T. L. R., 420

29. Where, during the pendency of a suit or execution proceedings based on a mortgage, the holder of a money decree brings to sale the mortgaged property, and the same property is re-sold in execution of the mortgagee's decree, the earlier sale does not avail against the subsequent sale, but is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens.

Proceedings in a mortgage suit are not determined by a decree for the purpose of the application of the doctrine of lis pendens. The lis in such a case continues till the decree itself is satisfied (F. B.).—
( = 16 T. L. J., 510).

30. The plaintiff, decree-holder, obtained a decree on a hypothecation of items 1 to 30 executed in his favour by the first defendant. He had made the second defendant also a party to the decree as he had taken a mortgage of the above properties reciting plaintiff's hypothecation debt. The second defendant obtained a decree for the money he paid under his mortgage and purchased items 16 to 30 in execution. It was after such purchase by him that the plaintiff filed the present suit and obtained the decree therein. After the decree the plaintiff assigned his rights to the respondent who after getting himself impleaded as an additional plaintiff moved the Court for the sale of items 16 to 30 in execution.

The second defendant resisted the application and prayed for the sale of these items being postponed till the other items were sold and the sale proceeds appropriated towards discharge of the decree debt. The lower Courts dismissed this application mainly on two grounds, viz., (1) that the second defendant could not be allowed to go behind the decree which makes all the properties liable for the amount thereunder inasmuch as he was a party to the same, and (2) that the equitable relief by way of marshalling now claimed cannot be extended to him as he had notice of the plaintiff's hypothecation debt.

On appeal by the second defendant, a third ground was urged as disentitling the applicant to the above equitable relief, that he cannot claim the benefit of the same by his having become full owner of items 16 to 30 by his auction purchase, and therefore having succeeded to the right, title and interest of the mortgagor over the same.

Held.—The execution Court has power to relieve judgment-debtors of the fraud of decree-holders, despite the provisions of the decree in such matters. The present appellant who has become a full owner of items 16 to 30 of the mortgaged properties is a judgment-debtor under Section 2 (10) who has not been released under the decree. The insistence by the assignee-decree-holder to proceed against items 16 to 30 alone on the ground merely of his right to proceed against any portion of the hypotheca as he chooses, when considered with the circumstances that the other items had been admittedly gifted away by the hypothecator to his near relatives, would justify the inference of fraud, as indicated above.

Under the above circumstances, the execution Court is competent to relieve the appellant against the fraud of the decree-holder by allowing the applicant the right to marshall.

The purpose of the doctrine of marshalling assets is the protection as far as possible of subsequent interests and it must not be applied to the mortgagee's injury. The rule is subject to the qualification that it shall not be applied where it should work any injustice to the prior creditor, or to any other person interested in the security, as for instance, an intervening lien-holder having a superior equity, or where the mortgagee's right to satisfy his claim out of both funds would be in any way impaired or where there is any doubt of the sufficiency of the fund upon which the junior creditor has no claim; or where the prior creditor is not willing to run the risk of obtaining satisfaction out of that fund or where that fund is of a dubious character, or is one which may involve him in litigation to realise.

In the present instance, it has not been satisfactorily pointed out how the assignee —decree-holder would be prejudiced by a direction requiring him to proceed against items 1 to 15. The owners of the equity of redemption so far as those items are concerned are mere volunteers with notice of the mortgage, inasmuch as they have obtained the same under a gift from the original hypothecator.

The principle to be followed in such cases is that, in the absence of any statutory prohibition, Courts in the State, which are also Courts of equity, should take into consideration the equities of the parties and mete out substantial justice by passing appropriate orders in the matters before them. The refusal of the equitable rights claimed by one of the parties before the execution Court, on the ground that the decree in the case is silent as to them would sometimes leads to a travesty of justice. The claim for marshalling had to be properly dealt with only by the execution Court and not during trial, as the latter was not the proper occasion to enquire into the same. What has to be looked into is whether the mortgagee is prejudiced by the marshalling prayed for. If he is not, the equitable reliefs claimed could be granted in spite of the parties claiming them having raised the same during trial, and the Courts' refusal thereof under the decree. Hence the execution Court is competent to allow the appellant to marshall, if on the merits he is entitled to claim it, even where the decree does not provide for the same.

To the contention, that the appellant having had notice of the prior hypothecation bond, he cannot validly claim the right to marshall:

Held.—The question of notice was immaterial in cases of marshalling of securities.

A mortgagee, even if he has purchased the equity of redemption of a portion of the mortgaged properties, has the right of marshalling still available to him.—

32. On the decree-holder applying for sale of the properties under attachment, notice was issued to the judgment-debtor fixing a day for the settlement of the proclamation. The judgment-debtor applied for and got time on two occasions to enable him to state his objections but did not pursue the matter further. As no objections were filed, the proclamation was settled and the date of the sale fixed and the sale held on the appointed day. On the day the sale was confirmed, the judgment-debtor applied under Section 40 for cancellation of the sale on the ground that the properties sold were not liable to be proceeded against for the whole of the decree amount.

Held.—It was not open to the judgment-debtor to raise the plea at that stage as he had failed to urge the same on receipt of the notice of attachment or that relating to the proclamation.

The principle of res judicata is applicable to execution proceedings also and the only circumstance that should be paid special attention to is that the decision sought to be used for this purpose must have been passed after notice to the other side. In applying the principle of res judicata to such cases, the provisions of Section 10 could be referred to. As laid down in Explanation IV to Section 10, any matter which might and ought to have been made a ground of defence or attack should be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially at issue between the parties.—

18 T. L. J., 485.

33. Though an executing Court has a right to construe the decree, it is bound to execute it as it stands and has to confine itself to the four corners thereof. It cannot amend the decree under the guise of interpreting it. The obligations under the decree cannot be varied by the execution Court. Even if a penalty is imposed under the decree, the execution Court has no jurisdiction to relieve the judgment-debtor against the same.— 18 T. L. J., 668.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 726.

34. Though Section 10 which has re-enacted the provisions of Section 9 of the Code of 1065, is not applicable to execution proceedings, the principles embodied therein have, in the interests of the finality of the proceedings, to be applied to execution proceedings also. The only important question that has to be considered in this matter in such cases is that the other party should have had notice of the fact that the question adjudicated upon was fixed for decision on that date. The rule of res jud icata applicable to execution proceedings is not to be confined to matters actually heard and decided, but is also to be extended to those matters that ought to have been raised and which could by implication be taken to have been heard and decided.—

18 T. L. J., 880.

35. Some junior members of a Tarwad obtained a decree for future maintenance charged on Tarwad properties on 24-1-1100. They applied in execution for the realisation of the maintenance for 1102. The first defendant, the Karanavan, had in the meantime on 2-1-1102 filed a suit for partition. He opposed the application for execution, but the lower Court allowed execution to proceed.

The first defendant appealed. After filing the appeal he died. He had gifted his properties including his share in the Tarwad properties to his son. The latter was brought on record as the second appellant.

On behalf of the second appellant it was contended that as the law treated the first defendant as having become separated from the Tarwad on the date of his plaint and as entitled to a definite share from that date, that share should be excluded from the scope of the decree for maintenance.

Held (Overruling the contention).—It might be so and possibly at the time of actual partition of his share by metes and bounds he might claim the allotment to be made on that principle. But until a decree of Court adjusted or modified the charge created by the maintenance decree on all the Tarwad properties, no party could claim to minimise the effect of that decree.— 18 T. L. J., 906.

36. There is no provision of law prohibiting the share of a joint decree-holder in the decree being attached for his debt. It may happen that his ostensible share is not really worth anything; but that is not a matter for determination at the time of the attachment.— 19 T. L. J., 648.

37. The executing Court has to execute the decree as it stands. Though it is within ts powers to construe the decree, it could not relieve the judgment-debtor against a penalty imposed under the decree or vary its terms. In cases where it is ambiguous, it may be convenient to refer to the pleadings.

The executing Court cannot allow execution on the strength of a later pronouncement in another case to which the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor are both parties. The execution of the decree can be allowed only as it stands and no amendments thereto by the execution Court are permissible in the light of events after the decree.— 19 T. L. J., 726.

38. A decree was passed on a compromise made by the parties and it ran thus:—

"അന്യായപ്രകാരം കോടതി ചിലവുംകൂടെയുള്ള മുഴുവൻ പണത്തിൽ വൻ പണം ഈയ്യാണ്ട വൈകാശിമാസം ൫-ാംനു-ക്കകം വാദിക്കു പ്രതികൾ കൊടുക്കുന്നതിനും അവധി ലംഘിച്ചാൽ അന്യായപ്രകാരമുള്ള പണവും അന്യായ തീയതി മുതൽ നാളതുവരെ മാസം ഒന്നുക്കു ൪ ബ്രിട്ടീഷ് രൂപാ വീതമുള്ള വാടകയും കോർട്ടു ചിലവും അതിനു അന്യായ തീയതി മുതൽ നൂററിനു ഒന്നു വീതമുള്ള പലിശയും കൂടി വാദി പ്രതികളെക്കൊണ്ടും പ്രതികളുടെ വസ്തുക്കളിൽ നിന്നും വിധി നടത്തി വിധി നടത്തു ചിലവു സഹിതം ഈടാക്കി എടുത്തുകൊള്ളുന്നതിനും രാജിപ്രകാരം വിധിച്ചു."

Within the time thus fixed the judgment-debtor paid into Court Rs. 112 or 16 Fs, less than the amount which should have been paid. The decree-holder treated this failure to pay the whole amount as a default under the provision and prayed to have the decree executed for the larger amount stipulated. Subsequently, the judgment-debtor paid in the 16 Fs. and made up the deficiency. The Munsiff granted the prayer of the decree-holder, but the District Judge refused it.

The question in special appeal was whether the provision to pay the larger amount on failure to pay the smaller amount is in the nature of a penalty which the executing Court had jurisdiction to relieve against. The District Judge granted relief to the judgment-debtor by invoking the inherent powers under Section 115. The question was also raised in special appeal whether Section 115 can be properly applied to the case.

Held.—An executing Court cannot go behind the decree and canvass its correctness, provided the decree is one passed with jurisdiction. The executing Court has only to enforce it as it stands. Any party to the decree who wishes to question its correctness must have recourse to such means as are indicated for getting decrees set aside or altered. The executing Court is not the authority to be moved for the purpose. The question, whether, if the provision that is complained of were found in a contract between the parties, instead of in a decree of Court, it could not be relieved against as a penalty or whether the time fixed in the decree for the fulfilment of a condition would in a contract between the parties, have been considered as of the essence of the contract, is quite irrelevant at the stage of execution of the decree.

Having regard to the peremptory nature of the provision in the decree, it would be irrelevant to consider whether the failure to fulfil the condition was wilful or not. The bare fact of the non-fulfilment of the condition vests the other party with a right which cannot be taken away by any consideration or the causes that led to the non-fulfilment.

Section 115 does not purport to confer any power: it merely preserves to Courts such powers as they have always had. Unless Courts understand and strictly adhere to the bounds within which the doctrine of inherent power should be invoked, there would be "judicial chaos." The inherent power is to be invoked only where there is a grave injustice which cannot be remedied by recourse to any of the specific provisions of the law. Nor does the Section become applicable in every case where there is no specific remedy. A Court cannot, for instance, act in a matter in which it has no jurisdiction, though it may be satisfied that there has been injustice.

34. The expression "Court which passed a decree," or words to that effect, shall, in relation to the execution of decrees, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context, be deemed to include,—

The executing Court will be travelling beyond its jurisdiction in considering the reasonableness of the decree which it is asked to execute. It cannot do what it has no jurisdiction to do by invoking Section 115. The District Judge was wrong in relying upon Section 115.— 19 T. L. J., 752.

39. A junior member cannot in execution proceedings object to the execution of the decree by the Karanavan, where the decree is in favour of the Tarwad. Even where it is alleged that, if the decree-amount is realised by the Karanavan, he is likely to misappropriate it, it does not justify an executing Court to place restrictions over the usual powers of a Karanavan.

Where a junior member apprehends from the past conduct of a Karanavan, that the latter will misappropriate or mis-apply the sum realised, if execution is taken out, it is always open to the junior member to take those steps that are proper and within his reach to safe-guard the interests of the Tarwad. It is not in execution proceedings however that the misconduct of a Karanavan could be enquired into.—

I. The second Para of Section 586 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"In the same Chapter, the expression 'Court which passed a decree,' or words to that effect, shall, unless there is something repugnant in the context, be deemed to include, where the decree to be executed is passed in appeal, the Court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred, and, where the Court which passed the decree to be executed has ceased to exist or to have jurisdiction to execute it, the Court which, if the suit wherein the decree was passed were instituted at the time of making application for execution of the decree, would have jurisdiction to try such suit."

II. The Indian Select Committee of 1903 which reported on the Civil Procedure Code amending Bill of 1901 said:—"We have substituted the expression 'Court of first instance' for 'Court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred.' Our reason is that, as a matter of practice, the Court of intermediate appeal never executes a decree passed in second appeal."—

A decree obtained in the District Court of Ernakulam was transferred for execution to the Parur District Court. It was objected to that, as the decree was also being executed in the Ernakulam Court, it should not be executed in the Parur Court also at the same time.

Held.—Whether a decree should be executed simultaneously in two Courts is a matter that ought to be left to the discretion of the Court that passed the decree. There is no general prohibition for executing a decree in two Courts simultaneously.—

(b) if such person has not property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree sufficient to satisfy such decree and has property within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such other Court; or

(c) if the decree directs the sale or delivery of immovable property situate outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which passed it; or

(d) if the Court which passed the decree considers for any other reason, which it shall record in writing, that the decree should be executed by such other Court.

(2) The Court which passed a decree may, of its own motion, send it for execution to any subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction.

2. Sub-Sec. 2.—The wording at the end of the corresponding Para 3 of the old Section was :—"for execution to any Court subordinate thereto." The words "of competent jurisdiction" are an addition. "These words have been inserted, as under the old Code the Courts which passed the decree had the power suo moto to transfer their decrees to any Court subordinate to them. The amendment was evidently made adopting the language used in Section 39 of the Indian Code of 1908."— 18 T. L. J., 1001.

Case Law.

1. Plaintiff obtained in Travancore a joint and several decree against eight persons one of whom (the 8th defendant) was permanently residing and carrying on business in the Native State of Cochin and had no property in Travancore. On the plaintiff applying for transfer of the decree to Cochin for execution, it was objected on behalf of the 8th defendant that the plaintiff was not entitled to the transfer as he could execute the decree against the persons who are resident in Travancore and own property therein. The Court of first instance upheld the defence and dismissed the plaintiff's application. On appeal :

Held.—As the decree was a joint and several decree, the plaintiff (decree-holder) was entitled to execute it as against any one of the decree-debtors. The only grounds required to support an application for a transfer of the decree for execution to another Court are those contained in Section 218, C. P. C. If those grounds existed as against any judgment-debtor against whom execution was applied for, the decree-holder was entitled to have the decree transferred as prayed for. To hold otherwise would be to deprive the decree-holder of his just rights.

As in the case, the 8th defendant was permanently residing in Cochin and had no property in Travancore, in view of Clauses (a) and (b) Section 218, C. P. C., the decree-holder was perfectly within his rights to apply for transfer. He was not bound to exhaust his remedies against the persons of the other defendants and their properties situate in Travancore before he was entitled to proceed against the 8th defendant or his properties in Cochin.— 5 T. L. J., 139.

2. The respondent obtained a decree for money ex parte in a British Court against the appellant, a resident of this State, and got the decree transmitted for execution to the Kottayam District Court. After various infructuous applications, the last of which was in Mithunam 1090, the decree-holder got the records re-transmitted to the British Court the same month. An application was then made there but it was held that the decree had become barred. Thereafter, in Makaram 1093, the decree-holder again got the decree transmitted to the Kottayam Court and applied for execution. The debtor pleaded that, as the decree was barred in British India, where it was rendered, it was not enforceable in Travancore.

Held.—A Court to which a foreign decree is sent for execution does not retain its jurisdiction to execute the decree even after the execution has been withdrawn from it or after it has returned the decree to the Court which passed it with the certificate of failure to execute it.

Hence the proceedings taken prior to Mithunam 1090 in the Kottayam Court cannot keep alive what in law had ceased to be before that Court, by reason of its having become functus officio in that respect. When with the formalities required by the law, the decree was transferred again in Makaram 1093, it had ceased to be operative owing to the effect of the limitation law in British India and was not therefore validly enforceable.— 38 T. L. R., 157
(= 12 T. L. J., 287).

3. Per Sankara Pillai, J.—A Munsiff's Court to which a decree is transferred for execution has jurisdiction to execute it though it is passed in a suit the value of which is in excess of the limit of its pecuniary jurisdiction.

Per Varghese, J.—There is nothing in Section 218 to limit the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court to which a decree is sent for execution. It is well-known that a Munsiff's Court can entertain a claim petition in respect of a property much above its pecuniary jurisdiction : it is an exception to the general rule. Similarly it seems that Section 218 confers a jurisdiction which is an exception to the general rule.—

4. In the present state of the law, the more reasonable construction will be to hold that the word "jurisdiction" in Section 36 (2) should be taken to relate to territorial jurisdiction with reference to Section 8 of the Civil Courts Regulation and Sections 16 to 19 of the Civil Procedure Code, and not to the pecuniary limits prescribed by law,—

1. Section 222, C. P. C., confers on a Court to which a decree is transferred the same powers in executing such decree as if it had been passed by itself. There is no provision bestowing upon a Court, to which a decree has been transferred for execution, any of the powers of the Court which passed the decree in matters other than those relating to the execution of the decree. It has no jurisdiction to interfere with the decree in any way even though it thinks the decree in question to be erroneous by reason of its not being in conformity with the judgment or owing to any other reason. The fact that the property, the acquisition of which by the Sirkar gave rise to the suit, is, as a result of re-adjustment of territorial jurisdiction, within the jurisdiction of the executing Court, does not confer upon it jurisdiction to amend the decree.—

Sec. 38-A.

I. This Section was inserted by Section 3 of Regulation III of 1101. It corresponds to Regulation IV of 1061 which was as follows :—

"A Regulation to authorise the execution in Travancore of the decrees passed by the Civil Courts in British India and the Cochin State.

Preamble.—Whereas it is expedient that the decrees passed by the Civil Courts in British India, or by the Civil Courts of the Cochin State should be executed in Travancore, in the same manner as the decrees of Our Civil Courts; We are hereby pleased to enact as follows :—

"1. Our Government may, from time to time, by Notification in the Travancore Gazette,

(a) declare that the decrees of all or of any of the Civil Courts situate in British India or in the Cochin State may be executed in Travancore, as if they had been made by the Courts of Travancore, and (b) cancel any such declaration.

"2. Our High Court, with Our previous sanction, shall be competent to make such Rules, as may be necessary, for the guidance of the subordinate Courts in executing the decrees of the Courts of British India or of the Cochin State."

II. "Before the enactment of Regulation IV of 1061, foreign judgments could not have been, by reason of the operation of a well-known principle of private International law, enforced by process of execution in Travancore. Foreign judgments could have been, before the date of that enactment, enforced in this State only by instituting suits on them. When suits are instituted on foreign judgments, the latter are, by operation of the rule of law already referred to, liable to be impeached on the grounds mentioned in Section 10 of the Civil Procedure Code. To obviate the inconvenience, hardship and delay arising from this, it was apparently thought necessary to give a speedier and more effective remedy than was available by the institution of suits on foreign judgments to the holders of decrees of two foreign States, namely, British India and the Native State of Cochin. Regulation IV of 1061 was accordingly enacted to take the Civil Courts of British India and the Cochin State out of the category of foreign Courts and to confer a new jurisdiction with reference to execution on the Travancore Courts for the benefit of the British Indian and Cochin decree-holders. * * It is conducive to the interests of the three States and the welfare of their subjects, that the Courts in any one of these States should be enabled to execute the decrees of the Courts of the other two States."

"At one time, in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and in British India, foreign judgments were not enforceable except by suit. The method of enforcing such judgments by way of execution was first introduced in the United Kingdom in 1868; in British India in 1882; and Travancore and Cochin followed suit in 1886."—

(=4 T. L. J., 88).

III. The Section 38-A corresponds to Section 44 of the British Indian Code, which is as follows:—

"44. The Governor-General in Council may, by Notification in the Gazette of India, declare that the decrees of any Civil or Revenue Courts situate in the territories of any Native Prince or State in alliance with His Majesty and not established or continued by the authority of the Governor-General in Council, or any class of such decrees, may be executed in British India, as if they had been passed by the Courts of British India."

Case Law.

1. While a mortgagor of immovable property was in possession of the same under a lease from the mortgagee, a creditor of the latter sued him (the parties being residents of, and the property being situate in the Cochin State) in the Anjikymal Zillah Court, obtained a decree against him, and his interest in the usufructuary mortgage, put up to auction and became the purchaser thereof at the Court-sale in 1055, and in 1057, sued the mortgagor, lessee, in the same Zillah Court for the recovery of the sums due under the mortgage and Puravaipa deeds executed to the mortgagee. During pendency of this suit, the territory in which the property in litigation was situate, was awarded to Travancore by the decision of the Arbitrator in the Travancore and Cochin States Boundary Dispute. The decree in the said suit was passed after such territorial transfer. On the creditor (the present plaintiff) seeking to execute it after getting it transferred to the Parur Zillah Court, the defendant, a purchaser of the said property from the heirs of the original mortgagor-lessee, objected to the execution and the objection was allowed. The present suit was instituted to enforce the attachment.

Held.—(1) The questions affecting the validity or otherwise of the sale of the property, when within Cochin territory, under a decree passed by a Cochin Court, should be decided with reference to the law of that country and not the Civil Procedure Code of Travancore: and such sale must be held to be valid in the absence of proof that it was not conducted according to the law of Cochin.

(2) The decree of the Cochin Court against the mortgagor-lessee having been passed after the transfer of the mortgaged land to the Travancore jurisdiction, such decree and the subsequent attachment thereunder were inoperative.

(3) The purchaser's (plaintiff's) claim to recover the land as mortgagee was barred, more than 12 years having elapsed from the date of his suit and the date of the Arbitrator's award.— 13 T. L. R., 27.

Fol.—K. P., 314.

2. The appellant in the case was the holder of a decree of a Cochin Court dated 16-7-1052. The decree was transferred for execution in 1065 under Regulation IV of 1061. After the transfer, applications were made for execution in 1066 and 1068, under Section 228 of the Civil Procedure Code, both of which were granted. These proceedings having proved abortive, the decree-holder put in a fresh application on 27-11-1071. The District Judge rejected the application as barred under Section 228, as fifteen years had elapsed from the date of the Cochin decree.

Held.—The starting point of limitation of a decree transferred from one Court to another is the date of the decree in the original Court and not the date of admission on the execution file of the Court to which it is transferred.

The period of limitation for the execution of a foreign decree transferred to the State must be determined according to the law of this State and not according to the law of the State from which it is transferred.

Although the Rules prescribed under Regulation IV of 1061 say that the procedure in the execution of foreign decrees shall be according to Regulation II of 1037, yet as that Regulation had, since the introduction of Regulation II of 1065, been expressly repealed by the Legislature, the procedure (including the Law of Limitation) in the execution of such decrees in Travancore must be according to the laws for the time being regulating the Civil Procedure of the State.— 13 T. L. R., 207.

3. A decree obtained from the Small Cause Court at Madras was transferred for execution to and was executed by the Quilon Munsiff's Court. After the money was realised in execution, the judgment-debtor filed a suit in that Munsiff's Court for refund of the same as damages and for cancellation of the Small Cause decree. It was contended for the defence that a suit of this nature was not maintainable. The first Court allowed the suit, but the District Judge on appeal eventually dismissed the suit on the ground that a suit for setting aside a decree should be brought in the Court that passed the decree :

Held.—The District Judge was right. The policy of the law is to compel parties against whom a decree of one Court had been, at the instance of that Court, executed by another Court to prefer their objections to the validity of the decree to the Court which passed it, and not to allow Courts of equal or inferior status to sit in judgment over one another ; and this policy would be defeated if the party against whom a decree is passed by one Court is to be allowed to impeach that decree by means of a fresh suit in another Court. A suit of this description for setting aside a decree, if otherwise maintainable, must be brought in the Court which passed the decree or in any Court to which that Court is subordinate, and the Quilon Munsiff was not competent to set aside the decree of the Madras Small Cause Court.

No claim for damages would lie, as the amount had been recovered under a subsisting decree, which not having been set aside, the debt created by it should be regarded as a genuine debt.— 18 T. L. R., 14.

4. A decree was passed by the Trichur Munsiff Court against the appellant, a permanent resident of the Travancore State. The appellant had contested the suit in the Trichur Court, but failed. When the execution of the decree was applied for in the Parur Munsiff Court to which it had been transferred, the appellant resisted execution on the ground, inter alia, that the Cochin Court had no jurisdiction to pass the decree.

Held.—The appellant having submitted to the jurisdiction of the Cochin Court, could not question the jurisdiction of the Cochin Court to execute decree.

A person who had submitted himself voluntarily to the jurisdiction of a foreign Court is not entitled to oppose the execution of that decree by a Court in whose jurisdiction he has property.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—The second word "may" in Regulation IV of 1061 is imperative.

"It is very difficult to believe that the Legislature in passing Act IV of 1061 intended that when the Cochin decree-holder sues upon the Cochin judgment or sues upon the same cause of action again in the Travancore Court, the defendant can prove fraud, incorrect view of Travancore or international law, contrariety to natural justice, &c., but if he wishes at once to execute the Cochin decree, the judgment-debtor cannot attack the decree on any of the above grounds. I think that "international comity" if it did not go so far as to dispense with these conditions in the case of a suit, could not have intended to dispense with them in the case of execution proceedings".— 1 T. L. J., 22.

(=2 T. L. J., 19).
Dist.—29 T. L. R., 204
(=4 T. L. J., 35).

5. One of the points raised in the case before the lower Court on the judgment-debtor's behalf was that the decree passed by the Sub-Court in British Cochin and sent for execution, on the application of the decree-holder, to the Munsiff's Court at Trivandrum, was passed without jurisdiction and was a nullity and it could not therefore be executed in this State. The defendant was a subject of the Travancore State and residing in Travancore, and had also not submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the Cochin Court at the time the decree was passed. The lower Court held that it was not competent to go into the question.

Held.—The lower Court was right.

In the case of domestic decrees, a well understood rule of law is that an executing Court cannot usually question the legality or validity of the decree under execution. Objections to the legality or validity of a decree under execution can usually be entertained only by the Court which passed it. This rule of law applies also to a foreign decree like the one in the case.

The effect of Regulation IV of 1061, the Notification published and the Rules framed thereunder, is to make this rule of law applicable to decrees of the Courts in British India and in the Cochin State, sent to the Courts in Travancore for execution.

The word "may" occurring for the second time in Section 1 of the said Regulation and in the Notification referred to above, is imperative and means "must."

The ordinary rule of International Law that Courts cannot, by their judgments, bind absent foreigners does not apply to the facts of the case.— 26 T. L. R., 207
(= 2 T. L. J., 19).

(= 4 T. L. J., 35)

6. It was not open to a judgment-debtor, in a decree passed by a Civil Court situate in British India or in the Cochin State and sent to a Court in Travancore for execution, to raise, in the executing Court, the objections which would be open to him under Section 10 of the Civil Procedure Code [new Section 12], if a suit were instituted against him in a Travancore Court on a foreign judgment. To maintain otherwise would be to hold that it is in the power of a judgment-debtor of a British Indian or Cochin Court decree sent to Travancore for execution to completely nullify the provisions of Regulation IV of 1061. This certainly could not have been the intention of the Legislature. The observations of Sadasiva Iyer, C. J., in 1 T. L. J., 22 were obiter dicta. (F. B.)

Per Muthunayagom Pillai, J.—When a Travancore Court is asked to execute a British Indian or Cochin decree, the former should enquire if the decree satisfies the conditions specified in Section 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Under the English Judgment Extensions Act of 1868, it has been held that a defendant, proceeded against by the method by execution, could impeach the judgment under certain circumstances. In British India and Cochin, the same ruling has been made.

There is nothing peculiar in Regulation IV of 1061 to indicate that after the passing thereof, the right of the defendant to impeach foreign judgments which existed previously was meant to be extinguished.

The Preamble to the Regulation (IV of 1061) refers only to the manner of execution of foreign decrees. There is nothing in the Regulation prohibiting a party from impeaching the validity of a foreign decree. As for the notifications and rules passed thereunder, they are ultra vires if they go beyond the immediate scope and object of the Regulation.

The remedy by way of execution was intended by the Legislature to be but cumulative with the previous remedy by way of suit. As no exception is made in Section 10 of the C. P. C., in favour of British Indian and Cochin judgments brought up for execution under Regulation IV of 1061, it is clear that the Legislature was not prepared to attach any special sanctity to British Indian and Cochin judgments and treat them as if they were domestic decrees for all purposes.

The view that suits based on foreign judgments are governed by Section 10, C. P. C., but not proceedings in execution of such judgments, would lead to anomalous results.

(=4 T. L. J., 38).

(= 7 T. L. J., 293).

7. For some money alleged to be due to a Cochin Firm from defendant a permanent resident of Kottayam, the Firm sued defendant in the Cochin Munsiff's Court and obtained an ex parte decree against him, and the decree was transferred to the Kottayam Munsiff's Court for execution. In the course of the execution proceedings, the decree-holder also instituted a suit against the judgment-debtor in the Kottayam Munsiff's Court also, for recovery of money on the same cause of action as that on which the Cochin decree was passed. This suit was dismissed after trial on merits. Notwithstanding the dismissal of the suit, the decree-holder moved the Kottayam Munsiff's Court for execution of the Cochin decree. The judgment-debtor objected to the execution of the decree on the following, among other grounds:—

(i) That the Cochin Munsiff's Court had no jurisdiction to pass the decree sought to be executed.

(ii) That the decree was obtained by fraud.

(iii) That the dismissal of the suit by the Kottayam Munsiff's Court barred the execution of the Cochin decree.

Held.—The Munsiff's Court of Kottayam had jurisdiction to investigate the merits of the objections, namely, want of jurisdiction and fraud, raised by the judgment-debtor to the execution of the Cochin decree.

If the defendant was neither a resident in the State of Cochin at the time of the commencement of the suit nor a subject of the Raja of Cochin at the time of the judgment in the action, and if further he did not voluntarily submit to the jurisdiction of the Cochin Court, then the decree passed against him must be treated as an absolute nullity by the Courts of Travancore.

If the decree of the Cochin Court be found to be a valid decree, its effect could not be nullified by the decree passed by the Munsiff's Court of Kottayam on the same cause of action.

Per Raman Menon, C. J.—Prior to the introduction of the changes made by Regulation IV of 1061 and the Rules thereunder, when a suit was instituted on a foreign judgment, it appears to have been open to the defendant to show that the judgment sued on was invalid, either on the ground (1) that the Court which had pronounced it had no jurisdiction to do so; or (2) that it had been obtained by fraud; or (3) that the proceedings in which the judgment had been obtained were opposed to natural justice. Possibly also the defendant might invalidate the judgment by showing that, on the face of the proceedings, it appeared to be founded on an incorrect view of international law in force in the State in which execution was sought, or that it sustained a claim founded on a breach of any law in force there. In short, it would seem to be correct to state generally that whatever objections are declared by the Legislature to be admissible against a foreign judgment produced by a defendant in bar to an action, were equally admissible against a foreign judgment by a plaintiff either to found or to support an action. * * The above defences would still be open to a defendant against whom a foreign judgment which does not fall within the privileged class, is sought to be enforced by means of a suit. But it is contended that, in virtue of Regulation IV of 1061 and the rules framed thereunder, decrees passed by the Cochin and the British Indian Courts, when sent to Travancore for the purpose of execution, assume the character of domestic decrees, and cannot therefore be attacked as invalid in the Courts of Travancore, which, being Courts of execution merely, would be incompetent to entertain such objection. * * But I am unable to accept the position as correct.

The Regulation and Rules authorise execution, in Travancore, of the "decrees passed by the Civil Courts in British India and the Cochin State". The language, if literally construed, would include even decrees respecting land situate in Travancore which, it is certain, our Courts would refuse to execute, until we have some plainer indication of the intention of the Legislature than is found in the general words used by the statute. * * In my opinion, the unqualified language used by the Regulation and the Rules with reference to the decrees that are made executable in Travancore should necessarily be restricted to some extent; and if so, inasmuch as there is nothing in the Regulation itself to show on what principles and in what manner the language should be qualified, it would seem to follow that the Legislature in empowering our Courts to issue execution on Cochin and British Indian decrees, did not intend to take away from us the power we had undoubtedly possessed, prior to the passing of the Regulation to examine foreign decrees when the holders of them applied for our exequatur by means of suits founded on them. In my opinion, the general words of the Regulation can be explained satisfactorily only on the above assumption.

The above view is strengthened by the word "may" in the Regulation which always imports, in my opinion, authority, and not command. It is permissive and not imperative. * * The word "shall" in Rule 1, if meant to exclude the discretion given by the statute, must, in my opinion, be disregarded as being ultra vires. * *

The words "as if they &c." occurring in Clause (a) of Section 1 of Regn. IV of 1061 are controlled by the words "may be executed." In other words, the equivalence is declared merely for the purpose of execution. The above words do not have the effect of converting Cochin and British Indian decrees into domestic decrees, but merely gives them the benefit of all the processes in aid of execution that are available for the execution of domestic decrees. * * The statute merely authorizes us to execute Cochin and British Indian decrees sent to us for the purpose and does not imperatively require us to do so without discrimination (F. B.).— 33 T. L. R., 166 (=7 T. L. J., 293).

8. On the 9th Audi 1087, the assignee of a decree passed by the Calicut Sub-Court against the appellant (judgment-debtor), a permanent resident of this State, and transferred to the Munsiff's Court, Kottayam, for execution, applied to have the judgment-debtor's immovable property attached. Notice was issued to the latter to show cause why the application should not be granted. He did not appear and the application was granted. This was followed up in Kumbhom 1088 by an application for the issue of a proclamation for bringing the attached property to sale. On notice being issued, the judgment-debtor applied for time to enable him to file objections, which was refused. The sale, however, did not take place for want of bidders. In Kumbhom 1089, the assignee-decree-holder applied for arrest of the judgment-debtor and the application was granted. In 1092, the decree-holder again applied to bring the attached property to sale. This application was opposed by the judgment-debtor on the ground that the Calicut Sub-Court had no jurisdiction to pass the decree sought to be executed against him.

Held.—(1) Under the above circumstances, it was not open to the judgment-debtor in 1092 to object to the execution of the decree on the ground that the decree sought to be executed was passed by a foreign Court having no jurisdiction. It is well-established that where a judgment-debtor being called on to dispute, if he wished, or if he could, a certain proposition of right and consequential demand of relief or action by the judgment-creditor, fails in his contention to the contrary, or, at any rate, allowed the judgment to go by default, he is not entitled to have the matter re-opened. Applying that principle to the facts of the case, it will be seen that the judgment-debtor was bound by the former orders permitting execution to be had against him.

(2) The earlier orders passed by the execution Court were not decisions in a former suit but in a proceeding of which the application in which the order under appeal was passed was merely a continuation and were final between the parties. The binding force of the prior orders depends not upon the res judicata Section but upon general principles of law. "If they are not binding, there will be no end to litigation."—

9. According to Rules 2 to 5 framed in pursuance of Section 3 of Regulation IV of 1061, decrees of British Indian Courts are executable in Travancore Courts only if the papers referred to in Rule 1 (whatever the means of transmission, i. e., whether by post, by private messenger or in any other way) reach the Travancore Courts under circumstances which would show that they were sent to the Court concerned by the Court from which those papers were issued.

10. No presumption of jurisdiction exists in cases where it appears from the record that the foreign judgment or decree sought to be enforced through our Courts was given ex parte against a non-resident who is a subject of this State. It lies on the holder of such foreign decree to satisfy our Courts that the decree has been duly or validly obtained, before our Courts can admit to execution or declare executory, his decree. A duty lies on our Courts to examine the validity of the foreign decree before enforcing it directly or indirectly.—

11. An ex parte decree on a promissory note was obtained in the District Court of Trichur which is a Court in the Native State of Cochin by the first defendant in the case, against the second defendant, the head of a Nambudiri Illom of Travancore. The second defendant was a subject of this State and was not resident in the foreign country at the date of the action, but he had some property situate in the foreign country. The decree was transferred to the Parur District Court for execution. To a notice under Section 244 of the C. P. C. [=Or. XXI, r. 20 (1) ] issued to the second defendant to show cause why the decree should not be executed, he did not appear. Then execution was issued against the properties of the Illom and the person of the judgment-debtor. Junior members of the Illom brought the present suit for a declaration that the Illom properties were not liable to be proceeded against in execution of the Cochin decree, making the Cochin decree-holder the first defendant, and head of the Illom, the judgment-debtor in the Cochin decree, the second defendant.

The following main points arose for decision :—

(1) Whether the fact of the second defendant's possession of property in the Cochin State would give the Cochin Court jurisdiction to pass the decree sought to be executed.

(2) Presumption with regard to foreign decrees and whether the circumstances of the second defendant's non-objection to the execution of the Cochin decree, when notice was issued to him, would preclude him in a subsequent proceeding to raise the question of want of jurisdiction.

(3) Whether, even if the second defendant was so precluded, his conduct would bind the plaintiffs also.

Held (Per Cheriyan, J.—Palpu Pillai, J. concurring).—

(1) Possession of property is not sufficient to justify a foreign Court in exercising a general jurisdiction over the person possessing it. Other grounds, such as those mentioned by Dicey in his Conflict of Laws in Rules 83 and 84 must exist. [" Rule 83. In an action in personam in respect of any cause of action, the Courts of a foreign country have jurisdiction in the following cases:-

Case 1.—Where at the time of the commencement of the action the defendant was resident (or present) in such country, so as to have the benefit, and be under the protection, of the laws thereof.

Case 2.—Where the defendant is, at the time of the judgment in the action, a subject of the Sovereign of such country.

Case 3.—Where the party objecting to the jurisdiction of the Courts of such country has, by his own conduct, submitted to such jurisdiction, i. e., has precluded himself from objecting thereto—

(a) by appearing as plaintiff in the action, or (b) by voluntarily appearing as defendant in such action without protest, or (c) by having expressly or implicitly contracted to submit to the jurisdiction of such Courts."

Rule 84.—In an action in personam the Courts of a foreign country do not acquire jurisdiction either—(1) from the mere possession by the defendant at the commencement of the action of property locally situate in that country, or (2) from the presence of the defendant in such country at the time when the obligation in respect of which the action is brought was incurred in that country."]

(2) Since the second defendant had not, before the decree, submitted to the jurisdiction of the Cochin Court and since the decree itself was pronounced in absentum, it is an absolute nullity by International Law.

Whenever a decree passed by a Court in one or other of the foreign States mentioned in Regulation IV of 1061 is sought to be executed in a Civil Court in this State, it is the duty of the latter Court to satisfy itself that the decree in question is a valid decree that can be legally executed in Travancore. It is open to the Travancore Court of its own motion to examine the validity of the decree, even though the judgment-debtor had not raised the objection.

But when in such cases, the judgment-debtor does not raise any objection to the validity of the decree, it is, in the absence of anything on the face of the decree itself, open to the Travancore Court to treat the foreign decree as prima facie valid. It is not necessary in such cases for the execution Court to pass a formal order declaring that, in its view, the decree in question is executable in Travancore. It is sufficient if the subsequent proceedings allowed by the Court give clear indication that, in the opinion of the Court, the decree is one whose execution in Travancore should be permitted.

In this case notice was issued by the Parur Court to the judgment-debtor to show cause why execution should not be granted and it was only on his failure to take advantage of the opportunity so afforded to him that attachment of the Illom properties and warrant for arrest were issued. These circumstances clearly indicate that the Parur Court admitted the decree for execution, and the presumption is that it did so after satisfying itself as to its validity.

If the execution Court decided, though erroneously that the decree was one which ought to be admitted for execution, the judgment-debtor is not entitled to have the matter re-opened afterwards in another and subsequent proceeding. The only remedy of the judgment-debtor is to get the order recognising the decree vacated by appeal or in review. The judgment-debtor, not having done so prior to the institution of this suit, is bound by the order (though erroneous) of the execution Court.

If the notice to show cause against the execution of the decree was not legally served on the second defendant, his remedy would be to get the order of the execution Court reviewed on that ground and not to raise it in a fresh suit like this.

(3) The decree under execution was passed against the second defendant in his capacity as the head of the Illom. The plaintiffs have in this suit no locus standi except as representatives of the Illom. Therefore the plaintiffs are as much precluded as the second defendant himself from raising in this suit objections to the validity of the decree under execution, on the ground that the Court which passed it had no jurisdiction to do so.

But they can resist the enforcement of the decree against the Illom properties on the usual grounds, viz., that the decree was obtained fraudulently or that the debt which formed the basis of the decree was not supported by consideration and family necessity.

Per Sesha Aiyer, J. (dissenting).—

(1) Possession of property situate in a foreign country is insufficient to give the Courts of that country jurisdiction in an action in personam over a subject of that State who was not resident in the foreign country at the date of the action, and who has neither appeared in answer to the process, nor expressly agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of the foreign Court.

(2) The Cochin decree, obtained as it is, against the second defendant who is not a subject of, nor domiciled nor resident in, the foreign country, but belongs to this State, is a nullity according to International Law and must be treated as an absolute nullity by the Courts in Travancore.

There is no presumption that a decree of a foreign Court, whose decrees are declared executory by Regulation IV of 1061 and the Rules thereunder, is valid. The burden is on the decree-holder to prove that the decree is valid and executable in the State.

A decree which is a nullity as having been passed by a Court having no competent jurisdiction continues to be a nullity in spite of the judgment-debtor's failure to impeach it in execution proceedings at the earliest stage; and this so-called acquiescence arising from such failure cannot render the decree valid and enforceable. Proceedings in execution taken upon a foreign decree that is ab initio null and void are a fraud on the domestic Court, and the decree-holder must suffer the risk of those proceedings being declared void at any stage when the Court becomes cognisant of the true legal character of the decree.

Where notice under Section 244 [ =Or. XXI, r. 20 (1) ] of the Civil Procedure Code was affixed to the door of the second defendant's house on the ground that he was absent, it is doubtful if there has been proper service of notice.

(3) Even if there should be estoppel against the second defendant, it cannot extend to the plaintiffs also, because they are suing on behalf of the Illom and they have not been guilty of any conduct which can operate to effect waiver or estoppel.—

12. The appellant obtained an ex-parte decree for money in the Tuticorin Subordinate Judge's Court against the respondent, who is a subject of and is resident in Travancore. The decree was transferred to the Nagercoil District Court for execution; and on the contention of the respondent that the decree was a nullity according to the rules of International Law, the lower Court rejected the application for execution as unsustainable. On appeal to the High Court, it was contended for the appellant that the case fell within the principle that, where there had been a voluntary appearance by the defendant, he could not afterwards be allowed to plead that there was no jurisdiction in the foreign Court to render judgment. For this contention, the appellant relied upon the fact that the respondent had, while the suit was on the file of the Tuticorin Court, executed a Vakkalathnamah to a pleader in Tuticorin empowering him to appear and plead in the cause and that the pleader had in pursuance of the power appeared in the cause, though it was only to say that he had no instructions.

Held.—The decree of the Turicorin Court was one passed in absentem and as there had been no submission to jurisdiction the decree was internationally a nullity.

The cases in which a defendant's appearance may be regarded as amounting to submission to the jurisdiction of the Court are those in which the defendant appears and pleads on the merits; and in those cases, whether or not he disputes the jurisdiction of the Court over him, he invites the Court's assistance in his favour to relieve him from a liability which the plaintiff by his action seeks to rest on him. By thus taking his chance of getting a judgment in his favour, the defendant makes the Court internationally competent to render judgment on the merits and the judgment rendered in these circumstances is binding on him.— 11 T. L. J., 113.

13. The respondent obtained a decree for money ex parte in a British Court against the appellant, a resident of this State, and got the decree transmitted for execution to the Kottayam District Court. After various infructuous applications, the last of which was in Mithunam 1090, the decree-holder got the records re-transmitted to the British Court the same month. An application was then made there, but it was held that the decree had become barred. Thereafter in Makarom 1093 the decree-holder again got the decree transmitted to the Kottayam Court and applied for execution. The debtor pleaded that as the decree was barred in British India, where it was rendered, it was not enforceable in Travancore.

Held.—It is a well recognised rule of law that when the execution of a foreign decree is sought, it is the law of limitation of the executing Court that applies and not the law of the Court that passed the decree.

After the date of the withdrawal of execution and return of records to the foreign Court, certifying the result of execution proceedings, the Travancore Court does not retain its jurisdiction to execute the decree, and the proceedings taken prior to that date could not keep alive what in law had ceased to be before the Court, by reason of such Court having become functus officio in that respect.

When on the date of a subsequent transfer to a Travancore Court for execution, the decree had ceased to be operative owing to the effect of the law of Limitation in British India, there was no subsisting liability under the decree and the decree was not,

(=12 T. L. J., 287).

14. No action lies on an executable judgment, the only remedy being by execution, the principle being embodied in Section 238, C. P. C. [new Section 40]. The decree of a Civil Court in British India becomes executable by Courts of Travancore only when the papers referred to in the Rules passed under Section 2 of Regulation IV of 1061 are transmitted by the Civil Courts in British India to the Courts of Travancore for execution. As long as this is not done, an action on such foreign judgment is the only mode of enforcing such judgment.—

15. The plaintiff, a merchant in Tinnevelly, obtained an ex parte decree against the defendant, a merchant in Trivandrum, in the Tinnevelly Sub-Court on Pattuvaravu accounts. The decree was transmitted to the Trivandrum Principal Munsiff's Court for execution. The defendant objected to the execution of the decree on the ground that he was a Travancore subject and that he had not submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the Tinnevelly Sub-Court. The Munsiff overruled the objection, but the District Judge on appeal upheld the defence. The plaintiff thereupon filed a second suit in the Trivandrum Munsiff's Court for the recovery of the amount due. The defence was that the suit was barred by limitation.

Held.—The time taken in attempted execution in the Travancore Courts of a decree obtained in a British Indian Court which had no jurisdiction should be excluded in computing the period of limitation for a second suit on the same cause of action in Travancore.

Per Varghese, J.—The expression 'civil proceeding' is not confined to a suit; it includes appeals, applications, &c. It is used as opposed to criminal proceeding and administrative proceeding. In paragraph 2 of Section 14 also, the expression 'civil proceedings' is used, and it is made applicable to execution proceedings. The execution proceedings in the Trivandrum Munsiff's Court and District Court come within the language of the Section.

Execution proceeding is a continuation of the original suit and it has no cause of action apart from the cause of action for the suit. In this view it cannot be doubted that the execution proceedings were conducted on the same cause of action as the suit within the meaning of Section 14.

When an execution application is dismissed by the Travancore Court on the ground that the foreign Court had no jurisdiction to pass the decree, such dismissal cannot on that ground be deemed to be a decision on the merits. Such dismissal has to be deemed to be a failure of the proceedings, either 'owing to want of jurisdiction' or 'owing to other causes of a formal nature' under Section 14 of the Limitation Regulation. The language employed in the Section is wider (the Indian Act has the expression 'other causes of a like nature') and includes all causes which are not based on the merits of the claim.—

16. The Dewan of Cochin, acting under the Cochin Regulation, I of 1081, passed an order removing the Swamiyar of the Naduvile Mutt from the headship of the Mutt. The order cannot be regarded as a foreign judgment, and the Swamiyar does not lose his right to represent the Mutt as regards the properties situated outside Cochin.

It is doubtful whether with reference to the applicability of this latter rule, there is a distinction between cases where there was only an exercise of the sovereign prerogative and cases where there is an exercise of jurisdiction under a statute.—

(2) The Court to which a precept is sent shall proceed to attach the property in the manner prescribed in regard to the attachment of property in execution of a decree :

Provided that no attachment under a precept shall continue for more than two months unless the period of attachment is extended by an order of the Court which passed the decree or unless before the determination of such attachment the decree has been transferred to the Court by which the attachment has been made and the decree-holder has applied for an order for the sale of such property.

I. The Notes on Clauses say :—"The provision is new, and is introduced to safeguard the interests of a creditor by giving him a prompt remedy against the judgment debtor."

II. 1. See Note under the heading, Part II Supra, as regards execution by precept.

2. In their Report, the Indian Special Committee further say :—" Though a system of execution based on precepts is in the opinion of the Committee open to grave objection, they think the idea may be utilised for the purpose of enabling a decree-holder to obtain an interim attachment where there is ground to apprehend that he may otherwise be deprived of the fruits of his decree. They have for this purpose introduced Clause 46 into the Bill. They think it expedient to fix a time limit for the continuance of this interim attachment, but at the same time they have empowered the Court to extend the period to meet the exegencies of particular cases.

" After careful consideration they have come to the conclusion that, notwithstanding attachment under a precept, re-attachment on the ordinary application for execution will still be necessary. Though at first sight it may appear a better course to provide that re-attachment shall not be necessary when the issue of a precept is followed by the ordinary application for execution, after careful consideration they have come to the conclusion that it will be safer to require re-attachment, having regard to the agency by which execution is carried into effect."

The Select Committee which sat on the Bill, however, altered the provision as regards re-attachment. They said:—"We think that a decree-holder who has obtained an interim attachment should not be required to re-attach the property if before the determination of the attachment he applies for execution against the property, and we have altered this clause accordingly. There will now be only one attachment."

40. (1) All questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, or their representatives, and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree or to the stay of execution thereof, shall be determined by the Court executing the decree, and not by a separate suit.

Questions to be determined by the Court executing decree.

(2) The Court may, subject to any objection as to limitation or jurisdiction, treat a proceeding under this Section as a suit or a suit as a proceeding and may, if necessary, order payment of any additional Court-fees.

(3) Where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the representative of a party, such question shall, for the purposes of this Section, be determined by the Court.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this Section, a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed and a defendant against whom a suit has been dismissed, are parties to the suit.

Sec. 40 [= S. 238 = S. 47]

I. 1. Section 238 of Regulation II of 1065, the same as Section 244 of the Indian Code of 1882, was as follows :—

"238. Questions to be decided by Court executing decree.—The following questions shall be determined by order of the Court executing a decree and not by separate suit (namely):—

(a) questions regarding the amount of any mesne profits or interest which the decree has made payable in respect of the subject-matter of a suit, between the date of its institution and the execution of the decree or the expiration of three years from the date of the decree ;

(b) any other questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, or their representatives, and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree or to the stay of execution thereof.

Nothing in this Section shall be deemed to bar a separate suit for mesne profits accruing between the institution of the first suit and the execution of the decree therein where such profits are not dealt with by such decree.

If a question arises as to who is the representative of a party for the purposes of this Section, the Court may either stay execution of the decree, until the question has been determined by a separate suit or itself determine the question by an order under this Section."

2. See Or. XX, r. 12, for provisions contained in Clause (a) of the first para and the second para of Section 238.

II. 1. The new Section reproduces Section 47 of the British Indian Code, the only difference being that, in Sub-section (1), the words "or to the stay of execution thereof" are not found in that Code. They were not in the original Bill, but were inserted by the Select Committee. It may be noted that those words were in Section 238 of the old Regulation.

2. In regard to Sub-section (2), the Notes on Clauses say that it "is only a legislative recognition and adoption of the almost universal judicial practice to treat a fresh suit as a proceeding under this Section, and vice versa."

III. "Section 238 of the Code of 1065 interdicts the determination of all questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree is passed or their representatives and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree or to the stay of execution thereof by a separate suit [Vide Clause (b)]. The only exception made with respect to this rule is stated to be where a claim for mesne profits between the date of the institution of the suit and the execution of the decree, in cases where the matter is not dealt with thereunder, is made. This provision is substantially embodied in Section 40, Clause (1), of the Code of 1100. The rule has been made absolute in the later Regulation, for, by the express direction therein that all questions of mesne profits have to be decided under the decree itself, the cases falling within the exception under the prior Regulation could not arise."

19 T. L. J., 649.

IV. In proposing Section 47 in place of the old Section 244 in the Indian Code, the Special Committee in their Notes on Clauses said :—"The Committee have omitted Sub-clauses (a) and (b) of Section 244 of the existing Code because they are strongly of opinion that questions regarding the amount of any mesne profits or interest should be determined by the decree and not in execution. If this view is accepted, it will be possible to exercise an effective control over the action taken by subordinate Courts in dealing with such matters.

"The Committee have re-drafted Sub-clause (3) and made it compulsory on the Court to determine questions arising as to representatives of parties. In their opinion, it is inexpedient that separate suits should be instituted for the decision of such questions. The delay and expense involved are often very great and result in the needless protraction of litigation.

"The Explanation is intended to put an end to a conflict of judicial decisions."

7. Where plaintiffs who had sought for the cancellation of an attachment of property under a decree obtained against a deceased decree-debtor, had admitted that on the death of the decree-debtor, they were made parties to the decree, as the deceased's representatives and had appeared and objected to the decree being executed against them or their Tarwad property:

Held.—The plaintiffs' suit for the cancellation of the attachment, after being made parties to the decree as the representatives of the deceased decree-debtor, is not maintainable under the provisions of Section 238, Clause (b), of the Civil Procedure Code; and, hence, the plaintiffs are debarred from instituting a separate suit to have a matter arising in execution between them and the decree-holder as parties to the decree, decided.— 13 T. In a suit by plaintiff to set aside the auction sale and declare his title and possession or award the value of the property as damages, the Zilla Judge while holding that no separate suit lay for cancelling the sale, awarded damages.

Held.—Mere inadequacy of the price realized at an auction sale is no ground for refusing to confirm the sale and a suit to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud would come under Section 238, Civil Procedure Code (F. B.).— 21 T. L. R., 206.

Held.—The remedy of the plaintiff was by separate suit and not by application under Section 238, C. P. C., as though the plaintiff Karanavan had been impleaded in the suit as the representative of a deceased junior member, the decree having exonerated the Tarwad properties from liability, he (the Karanavan) is not a party to the decree within the meaning of Section 238, C. P. C.

13. Certain properties were taken on mortgage in the name of the mother of the defendants, for the benefit of the Tarwad consisting of the mother and children and whereof the 1st defendant was Karanavan. The mortgagor obtained a decree for redemption against the mother alone. The mother—decree debtor—died soon after execution was sought against her. The first and second defendants were impleaded in execution as the legal representatives of the mother and proceedings were adopted for obtaining delivery of possession of the property. The contention of the legal representatives was that the property in question being Tarwad property and the Karanavan not having been a party to the prior decree the decree could not be executed. In a suit brought by mortgagor for redemption against the mortgagee's Tarwad members including the Karanavan thereof, it was contended that the mortgagor's remedy had been by way of appeal against the prior order disallowing execution and that the order under Sec. 238, disallowing execution of the first decree was a bar to the present suit.

Held.—Though the prior order was one passed under Sec. 238, that order was no bar to the present suit inasmuch as that order only decided that the first decree did not bind the defendant's Tarwad and not that the plaintiff had no right to redeem the properties from defendant's Tarwad. The present suit was one ignoring the first decree altogether and did not want that decree to be referred to at all as establishing any rights as between the parties and hence the latter was no bar.

The defendants having in execution proceedings of the first decree contended that that decree was not binding on the Tarwad was estopped from raising the contention that the former decree was binding on the Tarwad and that the plaintiff's remedy was by way of appeal against the order disallowing execution at their instance.— 23 T. The present suit was for recovery of possession of the property purchased.

Held.—Proceedings by the auction purchaser by virtue of his auction purchase to obtain possession were proceedings relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of Section 238. The mere fact that the decree-holder had become the auction-purchaser did not divest him of his character of decree-holder so as to make any questions arising between himself and the judgment-debtor other than questions between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed. A separate suit was, therefore, barred under the said Section.—

16. Suit by Seshakars of the judgment-debtor to cancel sale of Tarwad property on the ground of irregularity and fraud in the conduct of the sale.

Held (In confirmation of the decree of the lower Court).—The plaintiff was bound to have made his application under Section 238, and a separate suit is barred. Consequently, a suit by a decree-holder—auction-purchaser, who has obtained through Court symbolical delivery of possession of the property purchased by him, for recovery of possession of the same from a person in actual possession of it under a title derived from the judgment-debtor subsequent to the attachment but before the auction-sale in execution of the decree, is not barred under Section 238 of the Civil Procedure Code, even though he could have obtained actual possession under Section 315 [ = Or. XXI, r. 92 ], inasmuch as the proceedings in execution ended with the delivery of formal possession and there was nothing further for the execution Court to do in the matter.

P then petitioned to the execution Court about the interpolations but his petition was rejected. On appeal by P the District Judge agreed with the contentions raised in the petition but dismissed the appeal on the ground that the order passed by the lower Court was not one which fell under Section 238, inasmuch as the execution had already become final.

Held.—The execution of the decree could not be held to be complete until the delivery had been perfected. That could only be when the delivery Kychit and the report had been accepted by the Court, and then only if they were untainted by fraud or collusion, the order appealed against was one passed under Section 238, and was as such appealable.— 30 T. 22. A Marumakkathayam Tarwad was enjoying on lease a property belonging to Government. Under an arrangement for maintenance, the said property was allotted to the plaintiff's branch. Plaintiff sued and obtained a decree for recovery of possession of the property and, in execution of the decree, he was put in possession of the same. After the decree but before the delivery of possession, defendant obtained a fresh lease regarding this property from Government. He applied to the execution Court to re-deliver the property to him on the ground that he held it under a new lease.

Held.—The application of the judgment-debtor for re-delivery of possession of the property was not one under Section 321, [ = Or. XXI, rr. 97, 98 & 100 ], Civil Procedure Code. Nor could it be treated as one under Section 238 of the Code, as the question raised by the appeal was not one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.

"Every question between the parties to a decree about the property which is the subject-matter of the suit is not necessarily a question relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. Such a question must be one in respect to the furtherance 24. Plaintiff sued on a mortgage praying for a decree directing the sale of the mortgaged properties. There were three items of properties covered by the mortgage, but the plaint schedule gave boundaries of only one, though the extent given covered all three. The decree directed the sale of the plaint property and the sale was held in terms of the plaint schedule. Plaintiff, decree-holder, purchased the properties in auction. The mistake as to the boundaries was found out only when plaintiff took steps to obtain possession. He then applied for a correction of the description of the boundaries in the sale certificate so as to include all the three items covered by the mortgage deed. The application was granted. On appeal by the judgment-debtor, it was contended on behalf of the plaintiff, decree-holder, that no appeal lay against the order of the Court below.

Held.—The order passed by the Court below correcting the description of the boundaries in the sale certificate was one under Section 238 and was therefore appealable.

The execution of a decree cannot be said to be complete until the delivery has been perfected, and in the present case the alteration required by the plaintiff was obviously necessary in order to enable him to obtain possession of the properties which he claimed to be entitled to under the sale.

"It seems definitely established that the mere fact that the decree-holder has become the auction-purchaser does not divest him of his character of decree-holder so as to make any questions arising between himself and the judgment-debtor other than questions between the parties to the suit, in which the decree is passed and that a separate suit is therefore barred under the Section."

(2) What actually passed by the auction sale was only the property within the boundaries mentioned in the sale proclamation.

"Though the Court had inherent powers to correct its own mistakes, it had no power to correct the mistake of the parties. That the failure in this case to bring to sale the whole properties mortgaged was due to the plaintiffs' mistake first made in the plaint schedule and thereafter repeated, and therefore the order appealed against was made without jurisdiction.

27. In execution of a hypothecation decree obtained by the former representatives of a Village Samudayam, the plaint property was purchased by one of them on 18-2-1077. The sale was confirmed on 19-3-1077. In Kumbhom 1085, the decree-holder, auction-purchaser, applied for and obtained the sale-certificate. On 26-1-1089, i. e., within 6 years of the application for sale certificate, the present representative of the Samudayam sued to obtain possession of the property. The primary Court treated the plaint in the suit as an execution application and held that the application was within time. The lower Appellate Court, however, held that the application was barred by limitation.

Held (on special appeal).—(1) The plaintiff's application was a matter relating to execution of the decree obtained by the Samudayam to be dealt with under Section 238 C. P. C.

(2) An application for issue of sale certificate is a step in aid of execution.

28. The appellant obtained against his Kanom tenant a decree for arrears of Michavarom and in execution of his decree purchased the Kanom holding at court sale. When he attempted to obtain delivery through Court, he was resisted by the respondent who had, in execution of a hypothecation decree obtained by him against the judgment-debtor some time before the institution of the Kanom suit, purchased the Kanom holding during the pendency of the Kanom suit and obtained possession through Court subsequent to the decision of the Kanom suit.

The appellant moved for the removal of the obstruction.

Held.—(1) The respondent who purchased the Kanom right before the appellant instituted his suit based on a hypothecation bond of a still earlier date, cannot be treated as the representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of Section 238.

(2) Obstruction to delivery may properly be regarded as relating to the execution of the decree.

(3) A decree-holder who is also the auction-purchaser does not for that reason cease to be decree-holder.

(4) A transferee of the interest of the judgment-debtor in order that he may be

29. The defendant held certain properties on Kanom from the plaintiff, and for arrears of Jenmi dues the plaintiff obtained a decree. In execution of that decree the Kanom holding was sold and the plaintiff himself purchased it in 1089, and obtained delivery of possession through Court in Chingom 1095. The present suit was instituted for the recovery of mesne profits for the three years preceding the suit. The defendant contended that the suit was not maintainable by reason of Section 238 of the Civil Procedure Code, that the mesne profits claimed were excessive, and no interest on mesne profits could be awarded.

Held.—The suit did not come within Section 238 as the question involved in the suit did not relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. The plaintiff obtained possession of what he had purchased: that completed the execution of his decree: and the further aid of the Court was not contemplated by any provision of the Code in regard to that decree. He was asking for compensation for a trespass committed by the defendant, and there was no connection between that trespass and the execution of the decree.

Even when the decree was for possession of property, a separate suit for mesne profits accruing between the institution of the first suit and the execution of the decree was expressly saved by Section 238.— 38 T. L. R., 39 ( = 12 T. L. J., 72).

In execution certain properties were purchased by the plaintiffs, decree-holders, and the sales were confirmed. Before delivery, the 3rd defendant objected that the properties attached and sold were Tarwad properties and were not liable for the decree amount.

The decree-holder contended that, after confirmation of the sale, though delivery of the property had not taken place, as the title to the property had vested in the auction-purchaser under Section 313 [new Section 57], the sale could not be set aside at that stage.

Held.—The sale could be questioned.

Per Chatfield, J.—It is clear law that, until delivery of the property has been effected as a result of the sale by Court auction, the Court executing the decree must decide all questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed. Execution of the decree cannot be complete, until delivery of the property has been effected. The mere fact of the decree-holder having become an auction-purchaser under a Court-sale in execution of a decree, does not divest him of his character of decree-holder so as to make any question arising between him and the judgment-debtor other than questions arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree is passed. It is further clear that when a junior member of a Tarwad who has been impleaded as the legal representative of the Karanavan wishes to object to the sale of Tarwad property in execution of a decree obtained against the Karanavan, he should do so by means of an application under Section 238, and not by a separate suit.

Per Sesha Aiyar, J.—A decree-holder who is also the auction-purchaser does not for that reason cease to be decree-holder, and obstruction to delivery of property purchased in Court-auction may probably be regarded as relating to the execution of the decree. The decree-holder having been ex vi termini a party to the cause all along up to the date of sale, there is no reason why the auction sale should be regarded as marking a point of cleavage in his legal character, so as to necessitate his figuring at the time of delivery of possession as somebody else than the decree-holder.

A proceeding in execution cannot be said to be completed, so far as the decree-holder is concerned, in a case of sale until he has obtained the proceeds and benefit of the sale held in execution of his decree, where the purchaser is a stranger or where he is himself the purchaser, until he is put in possession of the property of his judgment-debtor which he has purchased and which represents money.— 38 T. L. R., 291 (=13 T. L. J., 79).

Rel.—13 T. L. J., 514.
Ref.—18 T. L. J., 485.

33. Per Sesha Aiyar, J.—In a case where a party, instead of applying under Section 238 of the C. P. C., wrongly brought a suit, the plaint can be treated as an application under Section 238, when no question of limitation arises.

Understatement of value in the sale proclamation may afford a good ground for an application under Section 308 [ = Or. XXI, r. 87 ].

Such irregularity, though it may not always amount to fraud, may do so on the facts and circumstances of a particular case.

Fraud must be reserved for that which is dishonest or morally wrong.

If the conduct of the decree-holder in connection with the sale can hardly be consistent with good faith and if the obvious effect of his act would be to mislead possible bidders and prevent them from offering a reasonable price, the understatement of value amounts to fraud.

Per Palpu Pillai, J.—Where the plaint not only prayed for setting aside the auction sale but also asked for other reliefs against defendants other than the auction-purchaser and the nature of the reliefs is undoubtedly such that they can be claimed only in a regular suit, it cannot be converted into an application under Section 238.

An understatement of value by itself is not sufficient to justify an inference of fraud. If that were the law, few execution sales would be secure.

Erroneous statements in proclamation schedules are not incompatible with good faith on the part of the decree-holder and do not per se suggest or lead to the inference that he has committed a deliberate wrong to injure anybody.

Any person who is anxious or cares to bid at a Court-sale generally makes himself acquainted with the particulars, value and nature of the property before he does so and is not in the least influenced by the statements in the proclamation schedules.

Per Chief Justice.—A mistake as to price in the proclamation of sale of the value of the properties brought to sale, is an irregularity and may amount to material irregularity in many cases ; but it does not necessarily follow that an auction sale, had in pursuance of that proclamation, is vitiated by fraud.

To amount to fraud, there must be evidence to show that the understatement of value prevented or scared away intending bidders. 13 T. L. J., 462.

34. Objection to attachment by the person impleaded in the place of the deceased Karanavan, judgment-debtor, on the ground that the decree was not binding on the Tarwad must be treated as a petition falling within the scope of Section 238.—

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 627.

35. The question of restoration of excess property delivered in execution is a question relating to execution and an application for relief should be made only to the execution Court. A separate suit is not maintainable. But a subsequent plaint filed may on proper occasion be treated as an execution application.— 14 T. L. J., 134.

36. The question whether the decree-holder has realised in execution anything more than the amount that is actually due to him, is clearly one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.

A decree-holder who has by mistake realised less than what was due to him, by an execution sale, is not precluded from executing his decree for the balance. If the decree-holder is not so precluded, there is no reason, why, in the converse case, a judgment-debtor should not obtain restitution of any amount that is levied from him in excess.

Execution continues even after an auction sale.— 14 T. L. J., 203.

37. Where the Court is misled into recording a satisfaction of a decree by the fraud of the judgment-debtor, an application for execution of the decree on the ground that the certificate of satisfaction is fraudulent, is one that falls within Section 238. It is always competent to a Court to vacate any judgment or order if it be proved that such judgment or order was obtained by manifest fraud.— 14 T. L. J., 218.

38. Where a decree-holder purchases in execucion a share of property common to judgment-debtor and others which, at the time of the purchase, has already been ascertained, such auction-purchaser has no right to institute a separate suit for possession of the property purchased by him in execution but is bound to seek his remedy under Section 238.— 14 T. L. J., 356.

39. To bring an order under Section 238, two conditions are necessary. First, the order should relate to a question between the parties to the decree, and secondly, the order should be one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.

When a person, non compos mentis, is not properly represented in a suit, he cannot be regarded as a party to the decree under Section 238. When the existence of a valid decree is disputed in execution under Section 220 [=Or. XXI, r. 6], the question thereby raised does not come within the purview of Section 238.— 14 T. L. J., 402.

40. The question whether a decree has been adjusted and thus rendered incapable of execution is one which the Court executing the decree is bound to determine in execution under the terms of Section 238.—

41. An execution Court cannot consider the question of the validity of the decree. The decree is final as between the parties until it is set aside in one of the various ways known to law.

The Court has jurisdiction to record a compromise when it is satisfied as to the existence of the compromise, and the decree, though erroneous, will bind the parties until vacated.— 42 T. L. R., 353.

42. The execution Court has jurisdiction to determine the damages on account of waste committed between the date of decree and the date of delivery of the property, as the assessment of such damages would be a matter relating to the discharge or satisfaction of the decree within the meaning of Section 40.

The mere fact that an entry of full satisfaction has been made in execution proceedings could not per se constitute the Courts functus officio, as the Courts have a right to deal with applications, if otherwise maintainable. Such a right could not be said to be non-existent, merely because, as the records stand, nothing remains to be done in execution.—44 T. L. R., 424
(=18 T. L. J., 1280).

43. An investigation into the extent of a debt which is due to the judgment-debtor and attached by the decree-holder in execution of his decree and with respect to which there is a dispute between the decree-holder and the debtor will not fall within the purview of Section 40. If the extent of the debt is not disputed and the same is produced in Court, the same may be allowed to be paid to the decree-holder in execution. In other cases, the decree-holder would have either to get himself appointed as receiver for the collection of the debt in execution or purchase the right under the debt in Court auction and file a suit for the enforcement of the debt.

Section 275 [ = Or. XXI, r. 56 ] does not apply to attachment of debts.—

44. 1. Questions relating to delivery of possession between decree-holder—auction-purchaser and judgment-debtor or his representatives fall within Section 238. From an analysis of the precedents, the law as settled by the decisions of the High Court may be summarised as follows:—

(1) The proceedings in execution could not be taken to be completed till delivery of possession of the property sold in execution is effectively made.

(2) The decree-holder is not divested of his character as such by reason of his becoming the auction-purchaser himself.

(3) All questions between him and the judgment-debtor or his representative relating to the execution of the decree, even after the date of the auction purchase by the decree-holder will fall within the purview of Section 238.

(4) Questions relating to the delivery of possession between the decree-holder—auction-purchaser and the judgment-debtor or his representative will also fall under the above Section. But if such questions arise between third parties and decree-holder—auction-purchaser, Section 238 will not apply.

(5) Section 324 [= Or. XXI, rr. 94, 98 and 100] is controlled by Section 238, and should not be taken as depriving the parties of a right of appeal otherwise available.

2. Even after dismissal of a prior application under Section 317 [=Or. XXI, r. 94] on the ground of his not having come within 30 days as prescribed therein, it is open to the applicant to put in a fresh application for delivery of possession under Section 315 [= Or. XXI, r. 92] ignoring the prior proceedings.— 19 T. L. J., 649.

II. PARTIES AND REPRESENTATIVES.

1. Under Section 267 of the old C. P. C., (Regn. II of 1087), a party to a decree, in execution of which he is dispossessed of his property, has clearly the right of appeal. An assignee of a decree is as much a representative of the original decree-holder as the heirs-at-law, or persons to whom the decree has been lawfully transferred, and no distinction is recognized by law between the assignee of a decree and the original decree-holder.

Where an order is based on a decree which is subsequently reversed in appeal, the proceedings taken thereunder also must fall to the ground, and a fresh suit is unnecessary to recover property transferred under such decree; the Civil Procedure Code does not contemplate the sale of decrees for immovable property (F. B.).— 5 T. L. R., 1.

2. The question of the liability of a puraidom in dispute for the defendant's decree-debt, being one that had arisen in the execution of the decree in a previous suit to which the present parties were parties arrayed on opposite sides as in this suit, and the same question being raised by the plaintiff and decided against him by the Court executing that decree, the only course open to the plaintiff was to have preferred an appeal against that orde under Section 267 of the old Civil Proce ure Regulation, no separate suit to try an determine that same question being pe mitted by law.

Held.—The decree being against his inte est in the property also, i. e., the equity redemption, and he being the decree-debt under the decree, all proceedings under th Civil Procedure Code incidental to ex cution, should be taken against him, in th his exemption from personal liability d not make him less a party to the suit decree or the execution proceedings.— 7 T. L. R., 1

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 627.

3. The question having been refer to a Full Bench whether a suit would lie set aside an order passed in execution p ceedings making the representatives deceased judgment-debtor liable to a dec passed against the debtor personally, on ground that the representatives were possession of assets belonging to the es of the deceased;

Held.—An order passed in an enq held under Section 227 of the Civil Pr dure Code [new Section 43] falls u Clause (b) of Section 238, and thus decree under Section 2 of the Code; therefore, the suit is not maintainable.

The case is distinguishable from the cision reported at 4 T. L. R., p. 72, w the question at issue was the nature o decree-debt, and the decision itself under Section 267 of the old Code of Procedure; while in the present case the liability or non-liability of plaint the decree-debt that was adjudicated by the execution Court.— 11 T. L. I

4. Where money realised in exec of one decree was ordered to be paid holder of another decree:

The order is one as between rival d holders and does not fall under Sectio Such an order does not fall within th "decree" as defined by that Code. No or special appeal lies against such an order and the remedy of the party aggrieved thereby, is a suit for refund of the money wrongly paid under Section 292, Civil Procedure Code [new Section 50].—

5. The question having been referred to a Full Bench whether a regular suit could be instituted by a bona fide purchaser for value, for the cancellation of a sale of property held under a decree which had been satisfied out of Court but the adjustment of which had not been certified to the executing Court under Section 255, C. P. C. [=Or. XXI, r. 2]:

Held (Govinda Pillai, J., dissenting).—A suit does not lie to set aside a Court-sale held under a decree adjusted out of Court, and not certified to the Court (F. B.).—

( = 1 T. L. J., 284).

6. Where the question of the validity of an attachment is one between the parties to the execution and relating to execution, it should be determined under Section 238, Clause (b), and not by a separate suit.—

Appr.—14 T. L. R., 173.

7. The purchaser of a property (sold by the appellants in satisfaction of a decree-debt due by their father) against whom fraud was alleged was not and could not be made a party to the execution proceedings, and the question of fraud or fraudulent preference was therefore a matter which the plaintiff should agitate in a regular suit.—

8. Objections under Section 238 could only be raised in execution by the parties to the decree or their assigns.—

9. A decree granted reliefs separately against each property. The holder of one of the properties deposited in Court the proportionate debt charged upon that property. The Court, in spite of the deposit, sold the very property along with others for the realisation of the remaining portion of the debt. In the appeal preferred by the depositor to cancel the sale as illegal, it was contended by the purchaser that the debt alluded to in Section 288 meant the whole of the decree debt and not a portion of it, that the purchaser not being a representative of any of the parties to the suit. Section 238 would not apply and therefore, no appeal lay in the case.

Held.—The said deposit came within the meaning of "debt" under Section 288 [=Or. XXI, r. 67] and therefore, the sale was illegal.

A purchaser who was not a party to the suit in which the decree under execution was passed was a representative in interest of the judgment-debtor and as such, he was a party to execution under Section 238 and, therefore, the appeal was maintainable.—

10. Plaintiffs 1 to 6, members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad sued for establishing the non-liability of the Tarwad property for attachment and sale in satisfaction of a decree-debt due by their deceased relative. The first plaintiff was alone made the legal representative of the deceased in the execution proceedings and he did not then raise his objection to the attachment. The District Judge, on the authority of the decision in 14 T. L. R., 173, dismissed the suit on the ground that the question of Tarwad liability should be determined in execution of the decree under Section 238 and not by a separate [illegible].

Held.—Plaintiffs [illegible] 6 who had not been impleaded by the decree-holder as legal representatives of the deceased in the execution proceedings were not debarred from bringing a fresh suit for establishing the non-liability of the Tarwad property for sale in satisfaction of the deceased's debt.

The irregularity involved in presenting the objection to the execution of a decree against certain property in the form of an application under Section 238 was not fatal to the validity of the decree actually passed after trial on the merits of the question involved in the objections.— 17 T. L. R., 82.

11. Junior members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad are, in the absence of fraud, bound by a decree obtained against a Karanavan and manager of the Tarwad and they should be treated as parties to the decree-execution and not as strangers, any claim put forward by them being a matter for enquiry under Section 238.

Where a decree has been obtained by fraud practised upon the opposite party by which he was prevented from placing his case before the tribunal which was called upon to adjudicate upon it in the way most to his advantage, then the decree may be set aside; but a simple allegation that a decree is wrong or that the suit or defence was not conducted with due care or diligence or that the evidence adduced was conflicting and unsatisfactory or that there was other available evidence which, if tendered, would have turned the scale to one's favour, cannot be acted upon.—

12. The mortgage interest acquired by a deceased Ezhava was divided between his son and nephew A and C, respectively, by a suit of 1063. D, one of the heirs of the original mortgagor obtained on his death, a decree in 1067, for the partition of the said mortgage and other properties of the family; but pending that suit, D, in anticipation of success hypothecated his moiety to E, who eventually got a decree on the hypothecation deed, attached D's right on the 15th Meenom 1071 and himself purchased the equity of redemption. In the meantime, X, another member of D's branch, sued E for the cancellation of his decree, 5 days after the said attachment and on the 21st Edavom 1071 moved the execution Court to stay the sale proceedings taken out by E and also the District Court to issue an injunction under Section 471, [=Or. XXXVII, r. 1] C. P. C. But these petitions were rejected and the sale to E was confirmed on the 22nd Idem. X, however, got a decree in his favour, declaring that the decree obtained by E and the hypothecation deed upon which it was based were null and void; but in spite of this, E got delivery of the property and certificate of sale on the 17th Kanni 1072. X then sold to Y the right to redeem the property from A, the son of the deceased Ezhava, while E, on the other hand, purchased A's share of the mortgage lien. The suit was by Y for redemption from E. The lower Court dismissed the suit and the District Judge was of opinion that X, the vendor of Y, should have moved the execution Court which executed the decree obtained by E, to set aside the sale under Section 238.

Held.—The Judge was wrong, as neither Y nor his vendor was a party to the said decree and, therefore, the only remedy of Y was a regular suit and not to re-open the question under Section 238.

E's sale right could not stand, since the foundation of it, viz., the decree obtained against D, the heir of the original mortgagor, was set aside, such sale having been subject to the ultimate result of the suit instituted by X another member of D's branch:

Art. 8 of the Limitation Regulation (old) as amended by Section 15 of Regulation V of 1068 excludes from its operation a suit, like this, brought as it was to set aside a sale on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property.

The doctrine of lis pendens did apply to the purchase by E who must be taken to have purchased pendente lite within the meaning of Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act.— 18 T. L. R., 86.

13. In execution of a decree the heirs of a judgment-debtor can raise any pleas against the decree, as if a separate suit had been instituted (F. B.).— 18 T. L. R., 119.

Fol.—7 T. L. J., 450.

14. The representatives of a deceased judgment-debtor who was the Karanavan of a Malabar Tarwad could, in execution of a hypothecation decree, be allowed to resist the sale of the hypotheca on the ground that the debt for which the decree was passed was not binding on the Tarwad (F. B.).

Per Ramachandra Row, J.—There is nothing opposed to sound principle in allowing a question of this sort to be settled in execution. To compel the judgment-debtor's representative to raise his objection in execution proceedings themselves, to the validity of the decree-debt in cases of money decrees pure and simple, and to require him to go to a separate suit for relief if the decree charges the money on any property, appear to be opposed to principle.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—(1) In the matter of procedure, it is better to follow the precedents of this Court in preference to those of other Courts.

(2) Section 238 C. P. C., Clause (b), seems to have been purposely worded in the most general manner by the Legislature in order to allow parties as much as possible to have all their disputes settled in execution provided they could be said to relate to the execution of the decree (F. B.).— 24 T. L. R., 169.

15. A party to the suit who has been exonerated from liability under the decree where his co-defendant alone is made liable is not a party to the decree within the meaning of Section 238, C. P. C.

A suit by the exonerated defendant to cancel an attachment placed on his properties is maintainable.— 2 S. D., 141.

Ref.—13 T. L. J., 514.

16. The decree-holder-auction-purchaser applied to be put in possession of the house purchased by him in execution of a decree. The judgment-debtor objected on the ground that there was nothing to deliver, as the house had already been removed by the purchaser. The Munsiff dismissed the petition. The judgment-debtor applied for a review of the order. The Munsiff dismissed the petition stating that the order was not appealable.

Held.—Questions between parties or their representatives to a decree fell within the provisions of Section 238, and an appeal lay against an order passed under that Section. No fresh suit lay.— 2 S. D., 249.

17. The 2nd defendant obtained a decree against 1st defendant and, after receiving satisfaction out of Court, fraudulently transferred it to the 3rd defendant who in execution against 1st defendant, purchased the plaint property which the 1st defendant had sold to the plaintiff before the Court sale. The suit was for possession under the private sale and cancellation of the Court sale. The question arose as to the admissibility as an admission, under Section 18 of the Indian Evidence Act, of a statement made by the 2nd defendant that the decree had been satisfied, the statement having been made after the 2nd defendant parted with his interest in the decree to the 3rd defendant.

Held.—The statement, though not admissible as an admission under Section 18 of the Evidence Act, was admissible as a prior statement under Section 157 to corroborate the testimony of the 2nd defendant given as a witness in the case.

The contention that the plaintiff as purchaser of the property from the 1st defendant is a legal representative of the decree-debtor and could come in only under Section 238 and not by a separate suit was not maintainable, as the whole execution proceedings were vitiated by fraud and there was no valid attachment.— 3 S. D., 9.

18. The question was whether a succeeding Karanavan brought in as a legal representative was entitled to have the question of the validity of the decree as against the Tarwad enquired into under Section 238, when he found that the Tarwad properties had been ordered to be attached.

Held.—The legal representative could bring a suit, and he could also apply under Section 238. The Tarwad must have one opportunity to contest the validity of the decree against the Tarwad and that opportunity could be availed of either by a petition under Section 238 when the Tarwad property was in danger by an order in execution or by a separate suit. The fact that by adverse possession of a limited interest for 12 years, the decree-holder's right as mortgagee had become absolute against the Tarwad or the fact that the Tarwad members were unable (owing to the lapse of 12 years from the registration of the deed) to come in as plaintiffs to set aside that deed could not prevent them from contending that so far as the remedy against other properties of the Tarwad was concerned, the debt was not a debt binding on the Tarwad, and that question should be gone into on their application properly filed under Section 238.— 4 S. D., 258.

19. Questions relating to execution between one of the parties to the decree and his own representative come within the meaning of Section 238, C. P. C., and have to be determined by the Court executing the decree. Questions, though primarily between the judgment-debtor and the auction purchaser are nevertheless questions between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder, as the latter is liable to refund the purchase money if the sale is set aside, and is thus indirectly interested in upholding the sale.

All applications under Section 308 [= Or. XXI, r. 87] are also applications under Section 238; and similarly all applications in execution where fraud is alleged come under Secti n 238.

A court-sale impeached on the ground of fraud cannot be set aside in the absence of proof that the auction-purchaser was a party to the fraud either primarily or as having purchased with notice of decree-holder's fraud.— 1 T. L. J., 36.

20. R brought a suit against V for redemption of a mortgage. On the death of the latter pending suit, R brought on record N as legal representative in the place of the deceased. As a matter of fact, K was the proper person who should have been impleaded. R obtained decree for redemption and took out execution proceedings. In a suit to set aside the decree and execution proceedings taken thereunder :

Held.—The decree and execution proceedings were binding on K as there was no evidence of fraud or collusion and as the wrong legal representative was made a party to the suit honestly, in ignorance of K's rights. — 28 T. L. R., 141 (=1 T. L. J., 224).

21. Disputes between joint decree-holders inter se do not fall within the purview of Section 238, and orders passed with reference to the rival claims of each to execute the decree without the junction of the other are, therefore, not appealable. The aggrieved party has to seek his remedy by a separate suit.— 2 T. L. J., 5.

22. A decree for redemption of a mortgage was obtained against a Tarwad, the de facto manager alone being a party to the decree. The de jure Karanavan, who was no party to the decree, resisted the execution on the ground, inter alia, that the decree obtained without making the de jure Karanavan a party to the suit was a nullity as against the Tarwad.

Held.—A decree obtained against a de facto manager is not a nullity as against the Tarwad owing to the mere non-joinder of the de jure Karanavan as a party to the suit. But if the de jure Karanavan disputes the validity of the debt in execution, the creditor can proceed with the execution only on proof of the validity of the debt as against the Tarwad. The de jure Karanavan who has been brought on record in the execution proceedings, cannot be referred to a separate suit to establish his objections, as such objections can be considered in execution under Section 238, C. P. C.—

23. A decree had been passed for the recovery of property against the father of M. After the death of M's father, execution was sought against M as his legal representative. M opposed the execution, claiming that the property was in his possession, not in his father's and that he must be paid the value of improvements made on the property before the property could be recovered from him. The Munsiff overruled M's objection on the ground that he, being the legal representative of the decree-holder, was not competent to assert in execution his own rights to the property. The Munsiff's order was upheld by the District Judge.

Held.—When the legal representative of a judgment-debtor is brought on record in execution procedings, an objection by such representative that the property ordered to be recovered by the decree was not held by him as representative of the deceased judgment-debtor but independently of him, was one that ought to be disposed of under Section 238.— 28 T. 24. A, the Karanavatti of a Malabar Brahmin Tarwad assigned in favour of B a decree for future mesne profits obtained by her against a stranger. C and others, junior members of A's Tarwad, brought a suit to set aside the assignment on the ground that it was unsupported by consideration. B contended, in that suit, that the matter was one which ought properly to be enquired into by the Court executing the decree and that no separate suit lay. The Court upholding B's contention dismissed C's suit. The validity of the assignment was then fought out in execution. The execution Court found that the assignment was unsupported by consideration, but upheld it on the ground that mesne profits being movable property, it was competent for A as Karanavatti to dispose of it as she liked. On appeal by C, it was contended by B that no appeal lay and that C's remedy if any was by way of a regular suit.

Held.—Though C's proper remedy was by way of a regular suit, he not being a party to the decree and therefore not being entitled to come under Section 238, C. P. C., yet as the assignee first successfully objected to the maintainability of the regular suit impeaching the validity of the assignment and contended that the matter was one which ought properly to be enquired into in execution, he was now estopped from contesting that the execution Court has no jurisdiction to go into the matter.

'A party who has induced a Court to act without jurisdiction, cannot be permitted when the validity of the order made for his benefit is challenged by way of appeal to take up an inconsistent position and to defeat the appeal by proof that the order was made without jurisdiction'.—

of a common Tarwad property and, in execution of it, V obtained possession through Court. K having died before the execution of the decree, her son M applied to be impleaded as her representative, but the application was dismissed on the ground that it was out of time. P, the grandson of K who had become the Karanavan of the Tarwad, sued the defendant (the successor in title of V) for recovery of the properties, on behalf of the Tarwad, on payment of the mortgage amount. It was contended for the defence that the suit was barred by Section 238, C. P. C., and that the order dismissing the application for impleading the representative operated as res judicata.

Held.—The suit was maintainable. Such a suit may be viewed either as one by the Karanavan of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad to recover certain items of property, on behalf of the Tarwad from a junior member, who obtained possession of them in execution of a decree obtained by him against an alienee of the Tarwad, or as one by the representative of one of the joint decree-holders, for a share in the proceeds of a decree realised by a rival decree-holder.

The suit was not barred by Section 238 Clause (b), C, P. C., which applied only to questions arising between decree-holders and judgment-debtors and not between decree-holders inter se or judgment-debtors inter se.

An order passed in execution of a decree rejecting a petition praying for impleading the legal representative of the decree-holder was not a decree having the effect of res judicata in a subsequent suit.—

26. In execution of a decree obtained against A, the father in an undivided Hindu family governed by the Mithakshara Law, the judgment-debtor's ancestral properties were attached and his sons, who were impleaded as his legal repnesentatives after his death, objected to the attachment on the ground that the property attached was their ancestral property which had come to them by survivorship, that they had not taken it as his heir and that the only remedy of the creditor was to enforce his debt by a fresh suit.

Held.—The question raised was a question between the decree-holder and the representatives of the decree-debtor, and as such fell within the purview of Section 238, C. P. C.— 7 T. L. J., 450.

27. The junior members of a Tarwad have no locus standi to claim the benefit of the provisions of Section 238, unless they are impleaded in execution as representatives of the deceased judgment-debtor.

As no property had been attached in execution of the decree, the application for setting aside the execution proceedings could not be treated as one made under Section 275 [=Or. XXI, r. 56].— 9 T. L. J., 56.

28. The appellant was the holder of a simple money decree, and the respondent was the assignee of a hypothecation decree charged on the plaint property. Both decrees were against the same defendant. The appellant who had obtained an attachment before judgment on the plaint property resisted the respondent when the latter applied for execution of his decree against the property.

The lower Court held that the appellant had no locus standi to resist execution of the decree. Against this order, the appeal was preferred. A preliminary objection was raised by the respondent that no appeal lay against the order as Section 238 did not apply.

Held.—The preliminary objection should prevail. By reason of the attachment before judgment of the property, the appellant could not be regarded as having become the representative of the judgment-debtor, so as to entitle him to resist execution of the decree, and if he could not be regarded as such representative, he had no right of appeal, as Section 238 would not help him.

An attachment did not confer any lien in or right over the property attached in favour of the party placing the attachment. The attachment merely put the property in custodia legis, but did not confer any title on the decree-holder.— 9 T. L. J., 286.

29. If property in the possession of the legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor is attached in execution of the decree and the legal representative objects to the attachment on the ground that the property attached is his own and does not form part of the estate of the deceased, the objection is one under Section 238. The same principle applies when the legal representative claims the property as belonging to the Tarwad and not to the judgment-debtor.

The Courts have been giving the widest possible interpretation to the provisions of Section 238, in order that objections raised in execution of a decree between the parties to the decree and their representatives might be determined under that Section itself and not by a separate suit, if such remedy can be granted without unduly straining the language of the Section.—

30. Where the Karanavan in his representative capacity sues or is sued on behalf of the Tarwad and a decree is made in such suit, the decree must, in the absence of invalidating circumstances and in the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary, bind the Tarwad or enure for the benefit of the Tarwad as the case may be. The junior members are consequently constructive parties to such decree and to the execution proceedings following it. Any benefit secured by the decree may be claimed and any objection to the enforceability thereof against the Tarwad may be raised, by the junior members on behalf of the Tarwad during the pendency of execution proceedings, under Section 238 C. P. C., where it appears that the Karanavan has neglected his duty or has been guilty of fraud (F. B.),—

31. The plaintiff obtained a decree, and in execution of that decree brought to sale and purchased certain properties of the judgment-debtor. These properties were sold by him to the special appellant. Subsequently the decree-holder brought to sale and purchased in court-auction certain properties of the judgment-debtor. On his application for delivery of those properties, the special appellant objected stating that these properties had been included in the properties conveyed under the last sale sannad and the assignment. The Munsiff decided against the special appellant, and the District Judge held that no appeal lay.

Held.—The order of the Munsiff was one passed under Section 238 and therefore appealable.

Delivery being necessary to complete execution and the assignment in favour of the special appellant having been made before such delivery, the assignee occupied the same position as the original purchaser and is the representative of the judgment-debtor.

The dispute is therefore between the representative of the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder.

In the alternative, both the purchasers in court auction may be held to be rival representatives of a judgment-debtor, and even then the order passed falls under Section 238.— 15 T. L. J., 481.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 649.

32. A person who stands surety for the amount that may be eventually decreed against the defendant is a representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of Section 40. All questions between such a person and the decree-holder relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree have to be dealt with under the above provision. No separate suit will lie for a declaration that the bond was void for fraud, undue influence or other vitiating grounds.— 17 T. L. J., 95.

33. In execution of a hypothecation decree, a property belonging to the judgment-debtor was proclaimed for sale. The judgment-debtor then sold the property to the present appellant directing him to discharge the debt due to the decree-holder. The appellant deposited in Court Rs. 1,000 towards discharge of the decree-debt and got some time to deposit the balance. The balance amount not having been paid within the time allowed, the property was brought to sale and purchased by the decree-holder for Rs. 8,220. The decree-holder had already drawn Rs. 1,000 deposited by the appellant, and the balance due under the decree was Rs. 3,000 and odd. After deducting this, the decree-holder deposited in Court Rs. 5,000 and odd. Thereupon, the respondents who were two decree-creditors of the judgment-debtor, applied for rateable distribution. The appellant objected. The Court below overruled the objection and decreed rateable distribution.

Held.—The appellant had no locus standi to file the appeal. Granting for the purpose of argument that he was representative of the judgment-debtor, that did not advance his case in any way. The decree-holder was no party to the appeal. The respondents were also representatives of the judgment-debtor. Thus, the appeal was by one representative of the judgment-debtor against other representatives. Section 238 did not cover such a case. It applied only to questions between judgment-debtors or their representatives on the one side against decree-holders or their representatives on the other, and not to questions between representatives of decree-holders or judgment-debtors inter se. Again, the question in the case did not relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree as required by Section 238.— 17 T. L. J., 298.

34. A junior member of a Tarwad has no locus standi to intervene in execution and object to the execution of a decree obtained against the Tarwad impleading the Karanavan alone as a party defendant. His remedy is by a separate suit.

35. (1) When an Anandaravan is brought in execution of a decree against the Karanavan as his legal representative, the question of the Tarwad liability for the decree-debt should be determined in execution of the decree and not by a separate suit.

(2) (a) Where there has been fraud or collusion or treachery on the Karanavan's part, or (b) when the Court was cheated into believing that the case was fairly fought or that the Tarwad was fairly represented when in point of fact it was not so, or (c) where the Karanavan had not defended properly the former suit because the plaint debt being a personal debt of his, he could not very well himself defend the suit on behalf of the Tarwad though there was no fraud, collusion or treachery, the Tarwad ought to be given an opportunity in a fresh suit to prove that the debt did not exist or was not binding on it, in other words, that the suit was not barred by Section 9 [new Section 10] or Section 238.

There can be no greater negligence or misconduct on the part of the Karanavan than not to appear and contest a suit in which he has very valid defences to make.— 19 T. L. R., 322.

36. The appeal was by certain junior members of a Tarwad who intervened in execution and objected to the decree being executed against the properties of the Tarwad. The junior members took up the position that the Karanavan was a party to the decree not as representing the Tarwad but in his individual capacity. They prayed for the attachment laid on the Tarwad properties being raised. The lower Court declared the attachment valid in regard to a portion of the decree amount.

Held.—No appeal lay from the order. The appellants were not parties to the decree and their application to the execution Court was in the nature of a claim petition, and hence the order was final. It was only when the decree was admitted to be for or against the Tarwad that the junior members could claim to be constructive parties to it.— 19 T. L. J., 521.

37. The expression "representative" in Clause (b) of Section 238 can only relate to those impleaded after decree. Those impleaded before decree will themselves be parties to the suit.

The question whether a party is liable to be proceeded against for realising the amount due under a money decree would clearly fall within the purview of the above Clause.

The same cannot be interpreted as covering only cases relating to properties admittedly held by a representative of the party to the suit, as such. It will also cover cases where the representative sets up a right to the property independently of his character as such representative.—

III. ORDERS UNDER THE SECTION.

1. An order sanctioning or refusing to sanction an assignment of a decree is final, the aggrieved party's remedy being by regular suit.— 9 T. L. R., 209.

2. When the assignment of a decree was not recognised by the execution Court, the only remedy of the assignee is a regular suit for a declaration and establishment of his rights as assignee.

In cases of assignment of decrees, whatever rights the assignor possessed, including the right to enforce execution by a regular suit, must be considered to have passed to the assignee under the deed of assignment, unless the deed embodies the reservation of any particular right to the transferor.— 14 T. L. R., 152.

3. An order passed under Section 238, Clause (c), has all the force of a decree as defined in Section 2, and is appealable as such.— 1 S. D., 349.

4. An order refusing adjournment or granting adjournment of execution sale will be appealable under Section 238, only if the order is passed on an application fought between the parties or their representatives. 2 S. D., 236.

fee prescribed by Clause (1), Schedule I of the Court Fees Regulation, VI of 1087.— 30 T. L. R., 57.

7. A, after filing an appeal in the High Court against a decree of the District Court, applied to the High Court for stay of execution of the decree appealed against and obtained an order directing the lower Court to stay execution on satisfactory security being furnished by him. A subsequently applied to the District Court for the stay of the execution and tendered as security certain immovable properties. The District Judge refused to accept the security and declined to stay execution as prayed for. A appealed to the High Court against this order.

It was contended for the decree-holder-respondent, that no appeal lay against the order appealed against :

Held.—(1) As the question between the parties was whether the security tendered by the judgment-debtor was sufficient so as to make him entitled to claim the benefit of the order of the High Court directing the stay of the execution of the decree, the order appealed against should be treated as an order relating to the stay of execution within the meaning of Clause (b) of Section 238.

(2) The question between the parties was not a merely incidental question or one relating to the way in which the execution proceedings are to be conducted.—

(=7 T. L. J., 276).

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 527.

8. The respondent sought to bring to sale the appellant's property in execution of a decree. The appellant put in application to the effect that a composition had been entered into between the creditors including the respondent on the one hand and himself on the other, and he stated in that application that to bring the composition into effect he required two months, and prayed that the sale be stopped. The Court rejected the application by the order appealed against :

Held.—The order under appeal was only an interlocutory order refusing time, and no appeal lay against an interlocutory order passed in execution.— 38 T. L. R., 236
(=12 T. L. J., 70).

Not appl.—42 T. L. R., 277
( = 19 T. L. J., 491 ).

9. An appeal is competent from an order accepting security as sufficient, as it comes under Section 40.

No distinction can be drawn between orders rejecting the security tendered as insufficient and those accepting the same as sufficient, as both sets of orders relate in essence to stay of execution within Section 40.— 18 T. L. J., 527.

10. The order passed upon the objections by junior members not parties to the decree, to the execution thereof is not an order under Section 40, and is not, therefore, appealable.— 18 T. L. J., 1224.

11. The appellant obtained a decree in O. S. No. 356 of 1095 and in execution brought certain properties to sale and purchased them in court auction. The respondent who had obtained a decree in O. S. No. 790 of 1090, applied in execution of his decree for sale of the same properties and he was allowed to realise from the appellant the amount he (the respondent) would have been entitled to by way of rateable distribution.

Held.—The order did not come under Section 40, and was not appealable. The attaching decree-holder effects the attachment not as representing the decree-holder in the other suit, but in spite of him. Obviously he cannot be the representative of the judgment-debtor in the other suit.—

12. The first defendant in a suit prayed for the cancellation of a delivery Kychit which she alleged had been fraudulently prepared to serve as evidence of delivery to the decree-holder—auction-purchaser of item 2 in the sale proclamation. Her allegation in the petition was that she and the third defendant were in exclusive possession of that property and, as prior to the alleged delivery the Court itself had ordered that delivery of the property should not be given to the auction-purchaser, the action of the Amin was in direct violation of the order of the Court itself. The Munsiff rejected her petition for cancellation. An appeal was preferred to the District Court which allowed her appeal. In special appeal, it was contended that the appeal to the District Court was not competent as the order did not fall within the purview of Section 40.

Held.—The order came under Section 40 and was appealable.

The grievance of the first defendant undoubtedly related to the execution of the decree and the matter arose between the parties to the suit as the decree-holder continued to be a party to that suit after he became auction-purchaser.

The complaint of the respondent might be viewed as one relating to a wrongful dispossession by the act of the Amin or to the creation of a fraudulent court record which might cause serious hardship to her. If, however, she is treated as a co-sharer entitled to joint possession of the property, her petition may be viewed as an application for restitution in respect of the interests of herself and the third defendant. That the existence of a record like the Kychit in question would place her interest in serious jeopardy cannot be denied and it is equally clear that, in purporting to make delivery of this property, the Amin had acted in contravention of the prior order of the Munsiff.

In these circumstances, it is impossible to contend that the order does not fall under Section 40.— 19 T. L. J., 808.

13. Though no appeal lies from an order under Article 164 of the Limitation Regulation as such, such an order will be appealable as it constitutes matter for inquiry and adjudication under Section 40.—

IV. PLAINT TREATED AS APPLICATION.

1. The suit was for recovery of mesne profits due between the date of delivery of property under a revised decree and the date of its re-delivery under the High Court decree reversing the original decree.

Held.—Though the proper procedure is to apply to the execution Court under Section 233, that objection is not fatal to the suit, because the plaintiff having paid institution fees which is more than the fee for an application under Section 233, the suit may be treated as an application under the latter Section.

Where restitution is made under a reversed decree under Section 552, C. P. C., [new Section 108 (1)], reimbursement of mesne profits appropriated under the reversed decree might be ordered.— 16 T. L. R., 41.

2. When suits were brought, instead of applications under Section 238 C. P. C., the Courts have allowed the defect to be cured by treating the plaints as applications under Section 238. But where the plaintiff is culpably careless of his interests and where there is no justifiable means of getting him out of the difficulty which he has created for himself, the defect cannot be allowed to be cured.— 1 S. D., 86.

Ref.—9 T. L. J., 19.

3. In execution of a decree obtained by defendant on a hypothecation of the plaint property by plaintiff's father, the property was proclaimed for sale, and plaintiff was impleaded as the legal representative of her deceased father. She, instead of objecting to the sale under Section 238, C. P. C., brought a regular suit setting up a gift of the hypothecated property.

Held.—Plaintiff ought to have come in under Section 238, and not by a suit.

Plaintiff may be allowed to convert her plaint into an application under Section 238.— 2 S. D., 150.

4. A purchaser from a party to a suit is a 'representative' in interest of the party to the suit, under Section 238, C. P. C.

A suit brought in contravention of the provisions of Section 238 cannot be treated as an application under the Section, as it is an irregularity that cannot be cured under Section 547, C. P. C. [new Section 78].

There is a clear difference between overlooking an irregularity under Section 547 after decree, and directing a Court to try a suit brought in contravention of the express provisions of the Section.

The omission to prefer an appeal within 30 days allowed by Art. 127 of the Limitation Regulation, to the Court having jurisdiction, i. e., Zillah Court is a material error, and the attempt to cure it by a separate suit is not allowable.—2 S. D., 185.

5. Per Sesha Aiyar, J.—In a case where a party, instead of applying under Section 238, C. P. C., wrongly brought a suit, the plaint can be treated as an application under Section 238, when no question of limitation arises.

Per Palpu Pillai, J.—Where the plaint not only prayed for setting aside the auction sale but also asked for other reliefs against defendants other than the auction purchaser and the nature of the reliefs is undoubtedly such that they can be claimed only in a regular suit, it cannot be converted into an application under Section 238, C. P. C.— 13 T. L. J., 462.

Limit of time for execution.

Execution barred in certain cases.

41. (1) Where an application to execute a decree, not being a decree granting an injunction has been made and granted, no subsequent application to execute the same decree shall be granted upon any fresh application presented after the expiration of twelve years from—

(a) the date of the decree sought to be executed, or

(b) where the decree or any subsequent order directs any payment of money or the delivery of any property to be made at a certain date or at recurring periods, the date of the default in making the payment or delivery in respect of which the applicant seeks to execute the decree.

(2) Nothing in this Section shall be deemed to preclude the Court, from ordering the execution of a decree upon an application presented after the expiration of the said term of twelve years, where the judgment-debtor has, by fraud or force, prevented the execution of the decree at some time within twelve years immediately before the date of the application.

Explanation.—Nothing contained in Sub-section (1) shall affect the provisions of Section 7 of the Limitation Regulation.

Sec. 41 [ = S. 223, Paras 3 & 4= Sec. 48 ]

I. Section 48 of the British Indian Code runs as follows :—

" (1) Where an application to execute a decree not being a decree granting an injunction has been made, no order for the execution of the same decree shall be made upon any fresh application presented after the expiration of twelve years from—

(a) the date..................or,

(b) where the decree......the decree.

(2) Nothing in this Section shall be deemed—

(a) to preclude the Court......before the date of the application ; or

(b) to limit or otherwise affect the operation of Article 180 of the Second Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877."

II. Paras 3 and 4 of Section 223 in Regulation II of 1065 were the same as Paras 3 and 4 of Section 230 of the Indian Code of 1882 and were as follow :—

" Where an application to execute a decree for the payment of money or delivery of property has been made under this Section and granted, no subsequent application to execute the same decree shall be granted after the expiration of twelve years from any of the following dates (namely) :—

(a) the date of the decree sought to be enforced or of the decree (if any) on appeal affirming the same, or

(b) where the decree or any subsequent order directs any payment of money, or the delivery of any property, to be made at a certain date—the date of the default in making the payment or delivering the property in respect of which the applicant seeks to enforce the decree.

Nothing in this Section shall prevent the Court from granting an application for execution of a decree after the expiration of the said term of twelve years, where the judgment-debtor has, by fraud or force, prevented the execution of the decree at some time within twelve years immediately before the date of the application."

III. The main changes made in the old Section are :

(1) The words "not being a decree granting an injunction" have been substituted for the words "for the payment of money or delivery of property." Thus the present Section applies to all decrees except decrees granting an injunction.

(2) The words "under this Section" have been omitted.

(3) The words "upon any fresh application presented" have been added.

(4) The words "or of the decree (if any) on appeal affirming the same" in Clause (a) have been omitted.

(5) In Clause (b) The words "or at recurring periods" have been added, and the word "delivery" has been substituted for the words "delivering the property."

Explanation.—This is new.

III. For the first and second Paragraphs of the old Section 223, see Order XXI, Rules 8 and 19.

IV. The old Section 223 had also the following as the last Paragraph, which has been omitted :—

"Notwithstanding anything herein contained, proceedings may be taken to enforce any decree within three years after the passing of this Code, unless when the period prescribed for taking such proceedings by the law in force immediately before the passing of this Code shall have expired before the completion of the said three years."

Case Law.

1. No application presented under Section 196 of the (old) Code, should be treated as disposed of until and unless all the steps which the nature of the assistance sought for in the last column requires, are exhausted, or the application is dismissed for default or otherwise.

The mere passing of an order to issue a process is not disposing of the application within the meaning of this Section. If the judgment-creditor fails to pay the process fees due in respect of any process of execution ordered to be issued within 8 days from the date of the order or within such time as the Court may specially grant, the application shall be struck off the file.—

[Section 196 of Regulation II of 1037 gives the particulars of the Form of application for execution of a decree.]

2. Where an application for transfer of a decree from one Court to another was made within the time prescribed for execution by Section 223 of the C. P. C., but by the time the latter Court was moved to execute the decree, which was done a month after the date of the application for transfer, the period allowed for execution had run out and the lower Court disallowed execution of the decrees as time-barred :

Held.—The application for transfer is a step in aid of execution. The application, the transfer and the application for execution made after the transfer must be considered as parts of one transaction: and therefore, the execution of the decree was not barred.— 11 T. L. R., 183.

3. An application for attachment of properties other than those included in a previous application which is still pending on the file, is not a continuation of the former proceeding, but is a fresh application falling within the provisions of Section 223. The application, in the case, was in no way one in furtherance of the previous application, there being no request in it for the aid or intervention of the Court to carry into effect or enforce the previous application. It was altogether a fresh move to seize in execution an entirely different batch of properties, and it would be extremely bad logic to hold one a continuation of the other.

A fresh application for execution three years after the introduction of the new Civil Procedure Code (Regulation II of 1085), when the decree had become barred under Para 3 of Section 223, would be absolutely barred under proviso to the said Section, unless fraud or force of the defendant is proved.

The effect of the proviso to Section 223 is to save the sudden extinction of the right of decree-holders under the old law by the introduction of a new Code. A defined period was prescribed with a view to restrict the indefinite protraction of the claims established by decrees of Court, and this period could not be extended without fresh legislation.

Section 223, Clause (4), allows an extension of the period of twelve years only when by fraud or force the decree-holder had prevented the execution of the decree at some time within twelve years immediately before the date of the application.

The contention on behalf of the decree-debtor that the objections of the decree-holder that he was prevented by fraud, &c., of the decree-debtor, could not be taken in the High Court, as they were not put forward when the application for attachment was made to the District Court, must be allowed (F. B.).— 12 T. L. R., 8.

4. Where the minor sons of a decree-holder succeeded him before the expiry of the 12 years prescribed by Section 223, C. P. C., but the decree was sought to be executed by them only after the lapse of such period.

Held (following the ruling in 11 T. L. R., 11).—The provisions of the Limitation Regulation being a part of the law of procedure, govern also the provisions of the C. P. C.

Section 8 of the Limitation Regulation II of 1062 as amended by Section 6 of Regulation V of 1068, has suspended the operation of limitation as against the minors during their minority. The fact of the minors being represented by their guardian, did not deprive them of the privilege specially conferred on them by law.—

5. The holder of a decree which was passed in Thye 1055 made an application for issue of notice and also for the arrest of the decree-debtor in 1067, which was granted. He, however, caused only a notice to be issued. A second application was made in 1069 to execute the whole decree. It was contended that the execution was barred:

Held,—The order on the first application being general and limited to a particular request of the decree-holder, the application falls within the language of Section 223, C. P. C.

Semble.—Even if the application of 1076 had been only for notice to issue, the decree sought to be executed by the application of 1069 would be barred under the proviso to Section 223 which limits the right of a party possessing a decree under the old Civil Procedure Code to enforce it, to three years from the passing of the new Code, that is, till the last day of 1068.— 12 T. L. R., 175.

6. A decree-holder who obtained his decree in 1053, applied for execution in 1069. The decree-debtor contended that execution was barred under Section 223. The Munsiff and the District Court in appeal held that execution was not barred.

Held.—Both the Courts below were wrong. As the decree-holder had twice previously applied for execution and had his applications granted, but took no further proceedings in execution, his third application, made fifteen years after the passing of the decree and more than three years after the Code was passed, could not be granted under Section 223. When an application for execution of a decree has been made under the Section and granted, no subsequent application for execution can be granted, if 12 years have elapsed from the date of the decree.— 13 T. L. R., 56.

7. Where an application made in 1067 under the new Civil Procedure Code by a decree-holder for execution of his decree passed in 1037 under the old Civil Procedure Code, resulted in the ascertainment of value of improvements and mesne profits left to be determined by the decree at the time of its execution, and a subsequent application in 1070 for realization of mesne profits was dismissed as having been barred by the lapse of more than 12 years since the date of the decree :

Held.—The period of 12 years mentioned in Section 223 of the Civil Procedure Code (Regulation II of 1065) should be reckoned, in such cases, from the date of the order fixing the amount of value of improvements and profits.

The original decree was undoubtedly an old one, but it was an incomplete one and not capable of execution so as to grant to the plaintiff the whole of the reliefs claimed by him. The value of improvements payable to defendants had to be ascertained, and the aggregate amount of mesne profits payable by defendants had still to be settled. These questions, were, after proper enquiry, settled only in 1067.— 13 T. L. R., 104.

8. The provisions of the Section fixing a period for the execution of decrees is founded upon the same considerations of public policy as the express provisions of the Limitation Regulation.— 13 T. L. R., 207.

9. A obtained a decree against B in O. S. No. 256 of 1059. W, X, Y and Z, the judgment-creditors of A, attached the decree. W, the decree-holder in O. S. No. 61 of 1071, after having had a proclamation of sale of B's property published, presented a petition on the day fixed for sale declining to proceed with the sale. X, Y and Z, represented that, as the result of collusion and fraud between W and B, the former did not proceed with the sale and prayed the Court to conduct the sale at their instance. This prayer was granted by the Court, overruling B's plea of 12 years' limitation under Section 223 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held.—The application of X, Y and Z is but a continuation of the proceedings which are admittedly commenced by W within 12 years from the time when the amount under A's decree became payable. By virtue of the attachment of the decree under Section 270, C. P. C. [=Or. XXI, r. 51], at the instance of the plaintiff's judgment-creditors, these creditors have simply assumed the position of their judgment-debtor (plaintiff). All the judgment-creditors of the plaintiff must be looked upon as one person for every one of them is entitled to carry on execution of the decree in O. S. No. 256 of 1059 on behalf of the plaintiff. So far as the plaintiff is concerned, there is no distinction between one attaching creditor and another. The proceedings commenced by the holder of the decree in O. S. No. 61 of 1071 within twelve years from the time when the amount of the decree in O. S. No. 256 of 1059 became payable, must be taken to be pending till they are determined by the sale of the property attached, although the plaintiff's creditor who initiated them is different from the creditor who wishes to conclude them. It matters very little which of the creditors of the plaintiff conducts any portion of the proceedings for the execution of the decree in O. S. No. 256 of 1059. The acts of the holder of the decree in O. S. No. 61 of 1071 as well as the acts of the holders of other decrees against the plaintiff are the acts of the plaintiff who is the judgment-creditor in O. S. No. 256 of 1079. This being so, the plaintiff is entitled to rely on them to save his claim from limitation. As the defendant's property was attached within the prescribed time by the decree-holder in O. S. No. 61 of 1071 acting on behalf of the plaintiff, and the attachment still continues, the other decree-holders of the plaintiff are competent to carry on the sale on behalf of the plaintiff. The plaintiff's claim was not barred by 12 years' limitation.

As Section 292 C. P. C., [New Section 50] which deals with the claims of rival judgment creditors, points to the conclusion that proceedings taken by any one of the holders of a decree against the same person benefits all equally, the right of A to execute his decree against B was not barred.

Under Section 292, money realised in execution of a decree cannot be claimed exclusively by the creditor who executes the decree but must, in the absence of special equities, be distributed rateably among all the judgment-creditors who apply for execution. This discretion of law fully indicates that the creditor who actually carries on the execution, must be treated as acting on behalf of all the creditors who have signified their intention of claiming payment. While one creditor is actually carrying on the execution, it will not only not serve any useful purpose if the other creditors are required to carry on simultaneously the very same process but will also involve the judgment-debtor in ruinous and unnecessary loss in the shape of execution costs. This consideration seems to have mainly weighed with the Legislature in enacting Section 292. If the defendant's contention be allowed, it will defeat the benevolent object of the Legislature in enacting this Section.— 13 T. L. R., 211.

10. The Limitation Regulation makes no provision for the exclusion of the time taken to obtain a copy of the decree from the period prescribed for the execution of decrees, which is 3 years.

Semble.—The Civil Procedure Code does not require a copy of the decree to be filed with the application for the execution of the decree.— 13 T. L. R., 154.

11. A decree-holder applied for issue of warrant and attachment of property. Only the latter prayer was granted by the Court under Section 223 of the Civil Procedure Code. In due course, however, all further proceedings in connection with the attached properties were stopped. More than three years after that, the decree-holder renewed his application for arrest.

Held.—When the prayer for attachment was granted and that for arrest not, the natural presumption in the absence of anything to the contrary was that the latter prayer was refused and subsequent application for arrest was consequently barred by time.

Section 223 gives the Court a discretionary power to withhold the issue of a warrant. When the Court granted only one of the prayers, it cannot be assumed that it intended to pass an order on the other prayer more than three years after, even though the Judge might say that the matter was left pending.— 15 T. 12. X presented a substantive application in Thye 1070 for sale of certain properties attached in 1066 in execution of a decree obtained by him against Y on the 22nd Purattasi 1061. A claim was preferred and dismissed on the 15th Ani 1070. X repeated his application for execution on the 2nd Ani 1073. Y contended that the latter application for sale having been made more than 12 years after date of decree, was barred by Section 223 of the Civil Procedure Code. The District Judge overruled this contention.

Held.—(1) The Judge was right as the subsequent petition of Ani 1073 was only a reminder and not a substantive application under Section 228 [ = Or. XXI, r. 9 (2) ] which is what is meant by "application" in Section 223.

(2) The three years' bar under Art. 153 of the Limitation Regulation (old) could not be reckoned from the date of attachment as no order cancelling it has been passed under Section 272, C. P. C. [ = Or. XXI, r. 53].— 13 T. L. R., 29.

The application contained, however, no list of the properties as required by law, and that list was put in only on 12-1-1079.

Held.—The application unaccompanied by the list required by law was materially defective and was no application under Section 228 [ =Or. XXI, r. 9 (2) ] and the execution became barred as the list was put in more than 12 years after date of decree.— 20 T. L. R., 255.

14. Plaintiff obtained the decree in question against the defendant on 31-1-1066. The parties entered into an adjustment whereby the decree amount was payable in two instalments and on failure to pay the first instalment, plaintiff (decree-holder) was authorised to apply to Court to have the decree executed in full. This adjustment was filed in Court on 24-7-1078 and was merely recorded without any further order. On application for the execution of the decree on 31-11-1082, the plea of limitation bar under Section 223 of the Civil Procedure Code being raised:

Held.—The word 'recorded' seemed to show that no judicial order giving effect to the adjustment or compromise was made. The Legislature appears to have used the words "recorded" and "filed" in the C. P. C. These words appear to mean simply that the papers may be placed on the record.

As no judicial order was passed on the petition dated 24-7-1078, the twelve years' period of limitation prescribed by Section 223 of the Civil Procedure Code had to be computed from the date of the decree and not from the date of the adjustment petition. More than 12 years having expired from that date on 31-11-1082, the date of the application in question, execution was barred under Section 223.

However, in a prior application for execution made also more than 12 years after the date of the decree and which was allowed by the Court computing the period of limitation from the date of the adjustment petition, the contention that execution was barred under Section 223 not having been raised by the decree-debtor, he was now precluded from raising that contention.

years of the passing of the decree, but died while the subsidiary proceedings were going on. Within four months of his death his legal representative put in a petition in 1082, more than twelve years after the decree, for permission to prosecute the execution application of 1079. The Munsiff dismissed the petition on the ground that the petition which had been put in more than sixty days after the death of the decree-holder was barred, and that under Section 223, the decree could not be executed after twelve years from the date of the decree.

Held.—As the application was to continue proceedings which were pending, and not a fresh application for execution, Section 223 had no application and the twelve years' rule would not be a bar to continuing the execution.— 25 T. L. R., 134.

16. The right of the decree-holder to obtain execution will not be necessarily defeated, if by reason of objections on the part of the judgment-debtor or action taken by the Court or other cause for which the decree-holder is not responsible, final completion of the proceedings in execution initiated under Section 228 [ Or. XXI, r. 9 (2)] cannot be obtained within the period limited in Section 223, C. P. C.

Further applications of the decree-holder to the Court executing the decree to go on from the point, where the execution proceedings had been arrested, and complete execution of his decree, would be applications merely, ancillary to the substantive application under Section 228, and would not be barred by Section 223.— 2 S. D., 46.

17. The decree under execution was passed on 6-10-67. The first application for execution made on 17-10-70 was granted and it was finally struck off for default on the decree-holder's part to file the necessary schedule of property, &c. The 2nd application was confined to the addition of parties only. The 3rd application dated 27-7-1079 was for issue of warrant to arrest the debtor and for delivery of property. The warrant issued was returned unexecuted and the order for delivery of property was also returned unexecuted as the decree-holder was neither present in person nor by deputy to take delivery. On 9-2-80, the 3rd application was struck off for default of prosecution. The next application was made on 10-3-80.

Held.—The application of Thulam 1080 was a substantive application and not a formal one to revive the former one and therefore it was barred under the 12 years' rule contained in Section 223, C. P. C.

A distinction has to be drawn between orders which amount to a judicial determination of the execution petition and those made for the sake of administrative convenience. The test in every such case is whether the Court had taken all necessary actions under the application. If the Court has taken necessary action, it cannot be said that the application was pending.— 3 S. D., 178.

19. An application for the execution of a decree passed on 3rd Makarom 1073, put in on 20th Kumbhom 1086, was rejected by the District Judge as barred. A prior application of the decree-holder, presented on 8th Edavom 1081 for recovery of mesne profits of the property that had been decreed, was granted on 7th Vrischikom 1082, which order was modified by the High Court on appeal on 12th Makaram 1083. The decree-holder did not follow up his application of 1081 but allowed it to be struck off on 18th Dhanu 1082, and no steps whatever were taken for execution of the decree till the application of 1086 was preferred. It was contended by the decree-holder in appeal that, as the defendant opposing his application of 1081 had carried the matter to the Appellate Court, he (decree-holder) could not have executed the decree during that time, and, hence, that period should be deducted.

Held.—The pendency of the appeal did not in any way prevent the decree-holder from executing the decree for mesne profits as determined by the District Court. His application of 8th Edavom 1081 having been once granted, the subsequent application which was more than 12 years from the date of the decree was clearly barred under Section 223 of the Code of Civil Procedure.— 28 T. The application was opposed on the ground that it was barred by Section 223, C. P. C., as it was made more than 12 years after decree.

Held.—The second application was not really a new application, but a continuation of the former proceedings to obtain the sale of the hypothecated property. As it was only for revival and prosecution of the previous application, the Section did not apply. Section 223 is confined to fresh applications.— 5 T. L. J., 324.

22. A hypothecation decree, dated, 2-11-1075, directed recovery of the decree amount by sale of the hypotheca and also from the person of the defendant. On 31-10-1087, the decree-holder applied for execution as against the hypotheca as also by arrest of the defendant, but prayed that process may be issued first as against the property. On this, the Court ordered proclamation to issue. The application was dismissed on 19-11-1087 as tom-tom charges were not paid. On 21-4-1088, the decree-holder again applied for execution. It was contended on behalf of the judgment-debtor that the application was barred under Section 223, C. P. C., as more than 12 years had elapsed from date of decree. The Munsiff upheld the contention and dismissed the application. The District Judge held that the second application was only a continuation of the first, and hence was not barred.

Held (in second appeal).—(1) The decree-holder's application for sale of the hypotheca was granted within the meaning of Section 223, C. P. C., when the Court ordered proclamation to issue, and it was the decree-holder's fault if he did not take the necessary steps in order to enable the Court to proceed to sale : and if the application was dismissed for default of prosecution after the prayer in the application was once granted, Section 223 was a bar to a fresh application made after 12 years of the date of decree.

(2) The order of the Court dismissing the application referred only to the prayer for sale of the hypotheca and did not affect the prayer for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, and therefore, the application of 21-4-1088 may so far as the execution of the decree by the arrest of the judgment-debtor was concerned be treated as a continuation of the application of 31-10-1087.

"The test whether an order striking off an execution application is one made simply for the convenience of the Court, or is one substantially disposing of the application so as to make it fall within Section 223, C. P. C., is to see whether the Court had taken all the necessary action under the application."— 6 T. L. J., 77.

23. A decree which directs the sale of the hypothecated properties in default of payment of money is a decree for money, whether there is in it a direction to pay personally or not. In the case, the decree sought to be executed directed the amount due under hypothecation bond and costs to be recovered from the hypotheca and from the person of the judgment-debtor. The decree is a decree for money, and the provisions of Section 223 are applicable to it.

The sale of properties directed to be sold under a hypothecation decree takes place by the force of the terms of the decree itself and not by virtue of their having been impliedly or constructively attached from the date of the decree as assumed in 5 T. L. J., 324.

It is true that ordinarily an attachment of properties should precede a sale [Section 250 (=Or. XXI, r. 28)]. But it does not necessarily follow that without an attachment there could be no valid sale at all. In the case of decrees similar to the one under consideration, the sale takes place by virtue of the terms of the decree itself, and there is no scope for the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to attachment to come into operation at all. The effect of an attachment is to place as it were an embargo on the properties attached and to put these properties in custodia legis to be subsequently availed of by the attaching creditor, but not to create a lien on them in his favour. In cases like the present, the lien on the properties created by the hypothecation deed is merged in the decree and perpetuated by it and the sale of the properties directed by the decree for the purpose of making that lien available for the decree-holder proceeds by the force of the terms of the decree itself. It has also been held that in cases where an attachment of properties is necessary before they can be brought to sale, a sale without attachment is irregular but not invalid without proof of substantial injury under Section 308, C. P. C. [ = Or. XXI, r. 87].

The hypothecation decree, dated 1-4-1077, directed recovery of the decree amount by the sale of the hypotheca and also from the person of the defendant. On 13-7-1085, that is, within twelve years from the date of the decree, the decree-holder made a substantive application for the enforcement of the decree and prayed therein for the issue of a warrant of arrest to the judgment-debtor and for proclamation and sale of the properties in the schedule to be filed by him. A warrant of arrest was issued accordingly, but was returned unexecuted on the ground that the judgment-debtor was not to be found. On 1-11-1085, the Court directed the decree-holder to produce a schedule of properties for the issue of proclamation. This order was not complied with, and the application for execution was dismissed on 9-11-1085. On 30-6-1091, the decree-holder again applied for execution by issue of notice under Section 244, C. P. C., [ = Or. XXI, r. 20 (1) ] and for the sale of the properties hypothecated. The judgment-debtor opposed the application as time-barred. The District Judge upholding the judgment-debtor's contention, dismissed the application.

Held,—The decree-holder's application dated 13-7-1085 for the sale of the hypotheca had been granted within the meaning of Section 223 of the Code, and it was due to the laches of the decree-holder himself in not pursuing the application that it was dismissed. Therefore, the subsequent application made more than twelve years after the date of the decree was barred (F. B.).— 33 T. L. R., 197 (= 7 T. L. J., 367).

24. The assignee of a decree of the Kuzhithurai Munsiff's Court dated 5-8-1078, applied on 11-3-1090, for recognition of assignment of the decree and for transfer of the decree for execution to the Padmanabhapuram Munsiff's Court. This application was granted on 7-8-1090. On 18-8-1090, the assignee—decree-holder applied to the latter Court for attachment of property and for issue of warrant of arrest, but the application was dismissed on the ground that it was barred by the 12 years' rule. It was contended in appeal that the application dated 18-8-1090 was but a continuation of the prior one dated 11-3-1090 and that therefore it was not barred.

Held.—An application for recognition of the assignment of a decree and for the transfer of the decree to another Court for execution was not an application for execution of the decree. Even if it be so regarded, it contained no prayer as to the mode in which execution was sought, and whatever prayer there was, had been granted, and the subsequent application put in more than 12 years after the date of the decree was barred under Section 223. 33 T. 26. The question for decision was whether the date of the preliminary decree or of the final decree afforded the starting point of limitation for execution of a partition decree.

Held (Per Sesha Aiyar, J., Chatfield, J., concurring).—In partition suits, the only decree that is effective is the final decree and for purposes of limitation time must be made to run only from the date of that decree. The steps taken after the preliminary decree in pursuance to the provisions of Section 381 [=Or. XXVI, rr. 13, 14] are only steps in the granting to the plaintiff of the relief which he has asked for and to which he was entitled in the suit and the final decree passed after the procedure of Section 381 had been followed, supplemented and completed the former decree and by necessary implication embodied in itself the terms of the original decree.— 11 T. L. J., 24.

27. A compromise decree provided that the defendant should pay the plaintiff a certain amount by 30-1-1083 and another amount by 30-1-1084. It then provided that, if default be made in such payment, all the amounts were recoverable with 12 per cent interest from the date of the decree from the defendant and the hypothecated property. The instalments were not paid. After various unsuccessful attempts, the decree-holder on 8-1-96 applied for attachment and sale of the judgment-debtor's properties and this was resisted on the ground of limitation.

Held.—As regards the amount payable on 30-1-1084, execution was not barred, but as regards the other amount payable on 30-1-1083 execution was barred.

The penalty clause in the decree was intended to convey a distributive and not a collective sense and provides for consequences of default of each instalment.

"The policy of the law, especially where the moral justice of the case requires it to do so, is to listen to any fair ground on the plaintiff's part which may take his case out of the statutes of limitation, and, conversely, to welcome the defence of the statutes, where there is a moral right in the defendant to be protected against the claim of the plaintiff; and subject to that, the statutes of limitation must have their full effect given to them.—

29. The decree was a decree for money executable at once against the person of the judgment-debtor, and after two months against the hypotheca. Assuming that Section 223 (b) applies, the money was directed to be paid at once though the remedy against the hypothecated property could not be immediatly availed of. So the period of two months cannot be excluded for the purpose of limitation.

Under Clause (a) of the Section also, the appeal is barred. "The date of the decree" mentioned in the Clause means the date the decree actually bears. The time taken for the preparation of the decree cannot be excluded.— 14 T. L. J., 147.

30. A decree was passed on 17-2-1085. On 15-2-1093, the decree-holder applied to execute the decree by sale of the defendant's properties. The sale was held on 5-10-1093 when it was stopped by injunction issued in another suit. The injunction ceased on 12-12-1097. On the question whether the period between 5-10-1093 and 12-12-1097 can be excluded in calculating the period of limitation for other execution proceedings.

Held.—(1) The decree-holder having been prevented from executing the decree within the meaning of Section 15 of the Limitation Regulation, he was entitled to the exclusion of such time, as he cannot be compelled to follow any other method of execution which is possible but which may or may not prove effective.

(2) Section 15 of the Limitation Regulation controls Section 223, C. P. C. Both are general Regulations and cannot be called special law.— 14 T. L. J., 186.

The period of twelve years' limitation prescribed under Section 223 C. P. C., is controlled by Section 15 of the Limitation Regulation, and the period during which the execution of the decree has been stayed by injunction has to be excluded.

An objection to an application in execution on the ground of bar by limitation ought to be taken at once and if not so taken, must be considered to have been waived; and the judgment-debtor cannot be permitted to raise the plea in a subsequent application filed within time.— 42 T. 33. A judgment-debtor who has not objected to a previous application for execution of which he had notice though it was made after the statutory period of limitation, is estopped from raising the question of limitation upon a subsequent application.

The exception provided in Clause 4 of Section 223 [Sub-rule 2 of new Section 41] is obviously based on the principle that a person should not be allowed to take advantage of his own fraud or act of violence. The term fraud in the provision should be understood in a broad and liberal sense. Evasion of process of arrest has been held to be fraud within the meaning of Section 223.— 17 T. L. J., 538.

Rel.—18 T. L. J., 880.

34. So long as an application for execution has not been finally disposed of, a subsequent application to the Court for taking the same steps as were prayed for in the prior application should be treated not as a fresh substantive application, but only as a continuation of the prior application. That is a principle that is well recognised and has never been questioned. It is in determining what amounts to a final disposal of an application for execution that some difficulty may be felt. As long as no order is passed dismissing or striking off the application, and thus taking it off the pending file, the application is obviously a subsisting one and cannot be said to have been disposed of. Where however, an order is passed striking off or dismissing the application, the further question arises whether the order is one properly passed as a judicial order or improperly and illegally passed so as to be capable of being treated at best only as a ministerial order for the administrative convenience of the Court and not as a judicial order affecting the legal rights of the parties. In the former case the order disposes of the application finally; in the latter case the application continues to be a pending application in spite of the order. In what circumstances can an order striking off or dismissing an execution application be deemed to be a proper judicial order, and when would it be only a ministerial order? There is a large crop of rulings on either branch of the above question. The following conclusions may be drawn from them :—(1) Where for no default of the decree-holder and without notice to him, an order dismissing or striking off his application is passed, it is only a ministerial order and does not finally dispose of the application (18 T. L. R., 208 : 7 T. L. J., 131 : 15 T. L. J., 1 : 31 Mad., 71 : 37 All., 337 : 15 T. L. J., 1 ; A. S. 131 of 1101). (2) Where an order dismissing an application is passed after notice to the party and after hearing him, it is a judicial order disposing of the application ; and (3) Where the application has been granted by the Court and is subsequently dismissed for default of the decree-holder, the order finally disposes of the application (37 T. L. R., 8 : 33 T. L. R., 197 : 1917 M. W. N., 139).

A mis-apprehension is sometimes met with that, unless there is a special order of the Court fixing a time-limit within which the process fee should be paid, the decree-holder cannot be a defaulter for whatever length of time he may have failed to pay it. But such a special order is not always necessary. If there is a general rule of law defining the period within which the payment has to be made to save the application from dismissal, then non-payment within that period clearly constitutes default justifying the dismissal of the application. Civil Circular No. 13 of 1060 fixed that period as eight days.— 17 T. L. J., 774.

35. A decree for recovery of a certain sum of money directed that in case the sale proceeds of items 3 to 8, 11 and 12 in the plaint schedule were found insufficient to discharge the whole of the decretal amount, items 9 and 10 were liable to be proceeded against.

Per Venkatarama Aiyar, J.—So far as the portion of the decree relating to items 9 and 10 was concerned, the execution against which had, been allowed to proceed only if the decretal amount or any portion of the same was found not realisable from the sale of the other items mentioned in the decree, the twelve years' period under Section 223 should be computed only from the date when the remedy against the other properties was exhausted and not from the date of the decree itself.

The expression "date of decree" occurring in Section 223 contemplates a decree which is executable on that date with reference to all its parts, and if the same is not capable of being executed as regards any of such parts, the twelve years' rule provided for under the Section could not be computed from the date of the decree itself with reference to such parts.

It is a well-recognised rule of construction that where the language of a statute in its ordinary meaning and grammatical construction would lead to a manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment or to some inconvenience, absurdity, hardship or injustice, which could not have been intended by the Legislature, a construction may be put upon it which modifies the meaning of the words and even the structure of the sentence.

An application for the issue of a certificate to another Court for transfer of the case for execution to the file of that Court cannot be treated as one for execution such as would admit of a continuation of proceedings thereunder in the Court to which the case may be transferred.— 18 T. L. J., 140.

36. What is prohibited by Section 223 is granting of an application for execution of a decree which is more than twelve years old, if a previous application for execution of the same decree had been made and granted. The Section is not intended to relate to the first application for execution.

The provisions of the Limitation Regulation being part of the law of procedure must govern the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code. Only by giving a restricted meaning to the word "prescribed" in Section 223, viz., that it has reference only to the periods of limitation prescribed by the Schedule annexed to the Act, could it be said that Section 15 of the Limitation Regulation does not control Section 223 of the Civil Procedure Code. Where it is intended to limit the reference to the periods of limitation prescribed by the schedule annexed to the Act, the expression "prescribed by the Schedule hereto annexed", is found, as in Section 4 of the Regulation. In the absence of the additional words "by the Schedule", the expression "prescribed" does not admit of the narrow interpretation put upon it.— 43 T. L. R., 192 (=18 T. L. J., 217).

37. An application for execution praying for attachment of movables was presented on 20-3-1097 within the statutory period of twelve years. No inventory, however, was annexed to the application as required under Section 229 [=Or. XXI, r. 10], but the inventory was put in after the expiry of twelve years from the date of the decree. The question was whether the execution application was not barred.

Held.—The application was barred. The inventory has ordinarily to be treated as a fresh application for execution, and if so treated, is clearly barred by limitation under Section 223.

The presentation of the list cannot be treated as an application for amendment of the original application.

There is no distinction recognised by the Civil Procedure Code between movables and immovables in so far as the annexing to the execution application of a list of properties to be attached is concerned.—

38. The provisions of Section 223, C. P. C., are controlled by the provisions of the Limitation Regulation.

The issue of injunctions restraining execution even partially is sufficient to entitle the decree-holder, to claim exclusion of the time, under Section 15 of the Limitation Act, during which the order is in force. In such cases what has to be looked to is whether, in substance, a restriction has been imposed by any order or injunction on the decree-holder against his executing the decree in any manner he pleases, and if so, whether the same would be operative for purposes of suspension of the period of limitation.

For purposes of limitation, the decree is treated as a whole, and computations in that behalf as regards portions of the decree is not permissible except in the cases set forth in Explanation I to Article 166 of the Limitation Regulation, 1100.

If by reason of an injunction the decree-holder had abstained from applying for the execution of the decree even with respect to a portion to which the injunction did not relate, the provisions of Section 15 of the Limitation Regulation could have been invoked and exclusion of time applied for on that basis.

But the benefit of the above Section could not however be claimed when the decree-holder had himself chosen to waive that right and to apply for execution virtually ignoring the injunction order issued in the matter.

The delaying of execution by frivolous, futile and dishonest objections by the judgment-debtor is "fraud" within the meaning of Section 223, C. P. C.

The evasion of a warrant of arrest issued in execution is also a "fraud". But the mere return of such processes unexecuted on the ground of judgment-debtor not being available, does not constitute "fraud".

Application for extension of time obtained by judgment-debtor, especially when they are granted, cannot be treated as a "fraud."

Where on an execution application, the Court passed on 31-10-1095 the order "Plaintiff to apply to implead defendant's heirs. Adjourned to 8-11-1097," and struck the application off the file on the adjourned date.

Held.—What has to be considered is whether the order of 8-11-1097 effectively disposed of the application or was merely one passed for statistical purposes. The determination of this depends upon the intention of the Court which has to be gathered from the attendant circumstances.

Two conditions may be held to be necessary to be satisfied in making out that a subsequent application is a continuation of the antecedent one.—(1) The previous application should have been dismissed for no fault or default on the part of the decree-holder, and (2) the subsequent application must be similiar in scope and character to the previous one.

As the two above conditions are satisfied in the case, the subsequent application of 1098, is only by way of a revival of the antecedent proceedings. The disposal order of 8-11-1097 does not affect the rights of the decree-holder to bring the legal representatives of the deceased judgment-debtors within three years.— 18 T. L. J., 792.

39. In execution of a decree, an execution application of 17-1-1097 was granted and attachment of properties was ordered on 1-12-1097. Subsequent execution applications for sale were dismissed for default and twelve years elapsed after such dismissal.

On the question whether execution was barred under Section 223 :

Held.—It was not barred. The continuance of the attachment keeps alive the decree, and any further application for sale of the property is not an application for execution as defined in Section 223, but only a step-in-aid of execution which has been commenced and not duly terminated. "It would be contrary to general principle and a senseless addition to all the vexations of delay in the course of procedure to hold that when for any reason, satisfactory or not, the execution of a final decree in a suit fails or is set aside and the proceedings as regards that execution are taken off the file, the whole suit is discontinued thereby and further proceedings for the same purpose are to be considered as taken in the new suit. It can hardly be laid down as a general proposition of law that, because an execution case has been dismissed by reason of no steps having been taken by the decree-holder within a certain time limited to bring the attached property to sale, the attachment that has already been put up on it necessarily falls through. All that can be said of such an order is that the decree-holder not having taken any steps within the time limited for the purpose of bringing to sale the property which had been attached, nothing further could then be done and the execution therefore must discontinue. But it could never have been intended that all that had been done antecedent to the order in question by way of attachment for the purpose of bringing the property to sale must be taken to have fallen through, and the decree-holder should begin again as if in a fresh case." (33 Cal., 666).

The difficulty cannot arise under the Code of 1100, as the dismissal of the execution application would put an end to the attachment also except in cases where the attachment is ordered to continue.—

40. Until a pending execution application has been finally disposed of, it cannot be maintained that any application that may be made to the Court for the better or more convenient carrying out of the steps prayed for in that petition should be treated as a fresh substantive application. No doubt, if the subsequent application prays for execution in a manner not prayed for in the prior application, to that extent it will be a fresh application to which the provisions of Section 223 would apply. Where a pending petition prayed for the execution of the decree by sale of the property, the petition is not exhausted till the Court has done all that has been prayed for in it. The Court is bound to do all that is necessary to effectively satisfy the prayer. If the prayer was for the sale of the properties, it would impliedly include the prayer for all the steps preceding the sale that are prescribed by the Civil Procedure Code. It cannot reasonably be maintained that every step in the process of execution of the decree against the property of the judgment-debtor should be specified in the execution petition and that otherwise the Court need not take such steps. If, therefore, in the pending petition there had been a proper and effective prayer for sale, a subsequent application for attachment of the properties as a preliminary to the sale cannot be treated as a substantive fresh application to which Section 223 will apply.

If the list of properties is put into Court only after the expiry of 12 years, the mere fact that an execution petition containing a prayer for attachment had been filed within 12 years of the decree will not save execution against the properties from the bar of Section 223.

An application by a legal representative would be a proper application in execution for purposes of the limitation law, though

"Section 226 corresponds to Section 233 of the British Indian Civil Procedure Code, Act X of 1877 (also Section 233 of the 1882 Code). This Section did not find a place in Act VIII of 1859. Prior to 1877, there was statutory provision made only with regard to 'application by whom to be made if decree be transferred from original decree-holder to another person' and 'cross decrees.' * * It will thus be clear that the Act of 1859 contained no statutory provisions restricting the rights of any decree-holder by any equity that may exist between himself and the judgment-debtor. Such a restriction was introduced for the first time by Section 233 of Act X of 1877."—
4 T. L. J., 7.

Case Law.

P. K. obtained a decree for money and assigned it to P. P. The latter, in execution of the decree, placed four items of immovable property under attachment. He then assigned the decree to A. A., who sought to bring the attached properties to sale. The heir of the deceased judgment-debtor contended, inter alia, that the first assignee, who was a nephew of the judgment-debtor, had agreed not to take out execution against two out of four items attached, and that A. A., the second assignee, who merely stood in the shoes of the first assignee, was bound by such agreement.

Held.—Section 226 C. P. C. applied only to the equities arising between the original decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, and that it did not apply to such as arise between the assignee of the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor.

The English law recognised two kinds of estates—(a) legal and (b) equitable estate. The English Common law, as it originally stood, declined to recognise several kinds of equitable estates. It was through the aid of the Courts of chancery and the Legislature that transfers of equitable estates came to be recognised, though sparingly at first, but more liberally later on. At common law, "the assignee of a judgment was not regarded as invested with legal title, and therefore, was not competent to sue in his own name." But this rule has now been modified. The English law on the subject is: "Though the assignee takes subject to equities available against the assignor, he is only thereby made liable to equities against the original assignor, not to those available against the intermediate assignor, so that where a liability (such as a set-off) only attaches to the intermediate assignor, the ultimate assignee can maintain his action freed from the equity."

The meaning of the word "every" imports the existence of more than one in a particular class. The term "every transferee" therefore will apply to the successive transferees of the plaintiff—judgment-debtor. Under Section 2, the term "decree-holder" applies not only to the plaintiff—judgment-creditor, but also his transferees. 'The assignee of a judgment takes it subject to all

(2) Where the decree is executed against such legal representative, he shall be liable only to the extent of the property of the deceased which has come to his hands and has not been duly disposed of; and, for the purpose of ascertaining such liability, the Court executing the decree may, of its own motion or on the application of the decree-holder, compel such legal representative to produce such accounts as it thinks fit.

equities, defences and agreements subsisting between the original parties, whether he had notice of them or not, acquiring in this respect no stronger rights than his assignor possessed.' Therefore, an assignee—decree-holder, or in other words, the transferee of a decree, holds the same subject to the equities (if any) which the judgment-debtor might have enforced against the plaintiff, judgment-creditor, and not as against any intermediate assignee—decree-holder, and the term "original decree-holder" in the Section is meant to refer only to the plaintiff, judgment-creditor, and no other.—

Sec. 43 [ = Sec. 227 = S. 50 ]

I. 1. Section 227 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—"227. If a judgment-debtor dies before the decree has been fully executed, the holder of the decree......representative of the deceased.

Such representative shall be liable only to the extent...compel the said representative to produce such accounts as it thinks fit".

2. The above Section was the same as Section 234 of the Indian Code of 1882.

II. In Sub-section (1), the word "satisfied" was substituted for the word "executed" to remove a conflict of decisions.

Case Law.

1. A, defendant, died during the pendency of a suit, and on plaintiff's application B was joined as party in A's place. After decree, plaintiff discovered that B was not A's legal representative and applied to the Court to join C (appellant) as such representative. The Court granted the permission under Section 227, C. P. C.

Held.—Section 227 provides only for representation, in execution, of judgment-debtors who die after decree; and if plaintiff by mistake or oversight failed to obtain a decree against the right party, the mistake cannot be cured in execution.

None of the persons against whom plaintiff obtained the decree died since the date of the decree, and the original first defendant was not a judgment-debtor, i. e., a person against whom a decree is passed. The original first defendant died long before the debt became a judgment-debt.—

2. The question having been referred to a Full Bench whether a suit would lie to set aside an order passed in execution proceedings making the representatives of a deceased judgment-debtor liable to a decree passed against the debtor personally, on the ground that the representatives were in possession of assets belonging to the estate of the deceased:

Held.—An order passed in an enquiry held under Section 227 of the Civil Procedure Code falls under Clause (b) of Section 238, [new Section 40] and thus is a decree under Section 2 of the Code; and therefore the suit is not maintainable.

The only course open to the plaintiffs was to appeal against the order. Not having done so, the order must stand and a regular suit could not be instituted to have it cancelled.

Section 227 prescribes the procedure to be adopted on the death of a judgment-debtor, but does not provide for any order to be passed under it.— 11 T. L. R., 4.

3. Though a son under the Hindu Law is bound to pay his father's just debts from any property he may possess, yet when he is made a party to the decree as representative of his deceased father for purposes of execution, his liability is limited to the extent of assets which may have come to his hands and not duly disposed of.

To ascertain the assets of the deceased, the Court may hold an enquiry.

The purchaser as against whom also fraud is alleged is not and cannot be made a party to the execution proceedings [Section 238 (new Section 40)], and the question of fraud or fraudulent preference is, therefore, a matter which the plaintiff should agitate in a regular suit, if he is disposed and advised to pursue the property in execution of his own decree.— 14 T. L. R., 198.

4. The permission of the Court is not necessary to file an execution petition against whomsoever the decree-holder alleges to be the judgment-debtor's representative.— 23 T. L. R., 214.

5. Section 227 is the Section under which the legal representative of a deceased defendant after decree can be brought on to the record and the Section does not authorise any application by the representative himself but only authorises the decree-holder to make such application. All that is necessary to be done under this Section by the decree-holder is to apply to execute the decree against the legal representative, and if such an application is filed by the Court and any action taken thereon, such as ordering notice to the legal representative so as to entitle the legal representative to appear and contest the application, the legal representative must be deemed to be duly brought on to the record irrespective of the final order on the decree-holder's application.

The term "decree-holder" in Section 227 must be taken to include his assigns and representatives; for this Section comes after Section 225 [= Or. XXI, r. 14] which deals with the transfer of a decree by assignment or operation of law (F. B.).— 23 T. L. R., 219.

6. Where the son of a Mithakshara father is proceeded against as his legal representative in execution of a decree passed against the father and is in possession of the ancestral estate, it lies upon him to account for such property and failure to do so entails personal liability on him to the extent of the property in respect of which he is bound to account.

"The judgment-debtor had only to account up to the full value of the assets he received as legal representative. It is for the decree-holder in the first instance to prove that some assets came to the legal representative, and the onus is then shifted on the latter to show how the assets were applied. Once it is admitted or proved that the legal representative sought to be made liable has come into possession of assets belonging to the estate of the deceased, it is for him to satisfy the Court as to the extent of the assets received and to account for them.

The appellant having failed to satisfy the Court that he had duly applied the property of the deceased, was personally liable to the extent of the property in respect of which he had failed so to satisfy the Court. 35 T. L. R., 35.

7. An ex parte judgment-debtor died and his legal representative objected to the execution of the decree on the ground that the judgment-debtor was not aware of the decree, and that it was fraudulently obtained.

Held.—The contention relating as it did to the validity of the decree and not being one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree could not be gone into in execution proceedings under Section 238. Such a question could only be tried in a regular suit brought for the purpose, as an application in execution assumes the validity of the decree sought to be executed.— 11 T. L. J., 293.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 822.

8. A decree for recovery of immovable property with arrears of rent and costs was passed against three individuals. The second plaintiff—special respondent—applied for execution of the decree. The 13th defendant—special appellant—who claimed the property covered by the decree under two sale deeds executed by the heirs of the 2nd defendant after the passing of the decree, resisted execution. It was contended for the 13th defendant—special appellant—that he was the legal representative of the deceased 2nd defendant within the meaning of Section 227 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that as he (the 13th defendant—special appellant) was not impleaded in the execution application but was only brought in as a party after the lapse of six years from the 2nd plaintiff's attaining majority, the execution of the decree was barred.

Held.—The 13th defendant—special appellant—could not be considered to be the legal representative of the deceased 2nd defendant within the meaning of Section 227. The wording of Section 227, which provided for the execution of a decree against a judgment-debtor's legal representative when the judgment-debtor had died before the decree had been fully executed, showed clearly that the person who claimed to be such legal representative should at least be one against whom the whole of the decree could be executed.

45. (1) Where a decree is passed against a party as the lega representative of a deceased person, and the decree is for the payment of money out of the property of the deceased, it may be executed by the attachment and sale of any such property.

Enforcement of decree against legal representative.

(2) Where no such property remains in the possession of the judgment-debtor and he fails to satisfy the Court that he has duly applied such property of the deceased as is proved to have come into his possession, the decree may be executed against the judgment-debtor to the extent of the property in respect of which he has failed so to satisfy the Court in the same manner as if the decree had been against him personally.

It was quite clear that at any rate so far as the costs awarded by it was concerned, the decree under consideration was not capable of execution as against the 13th defendant. Moreover, the 13th defendant's sales were affected by lis pendens, and 2nd plaintiff—special appellant—was entitled under Section 260 of the Civil Procedure Code [ = Or. XXI, r. 38 (1)] to execute the decree by removing the 13th defendant from the property.— 12 T. L. J., 316.

Case Law.

1. The suit was on a bond executed by a deceased Hindu Makkathayee against his sons as legal representatives. The District Judge gave a decree personally against the defendants.

Held.—The suit being against the defendants as the legal representatives of their father, the proper procedure to be followed was that provided in Section 248, C. P. C.

The plaintiff need not have been called upon before obtaining decree to prove what assets came into defendants' hands, since the decree would simply have been for money to be recovered from the assets of the deceased. The decree should mention that it should be executed as directed by Section 248.

The rule of law governing cases of this kind is that defendants cannot be held liable for anything more than the assets of their father clearly proved to have passed into

2. The plaintiff and the defendants carried on a partnership business in 1075 and 1076. The plaintiff, defendants Nos. 4 and 6 and 12th defendant brought suits, O. S. Nos. 1, 2 and 3 of 1080 respectively for the taking of accounts of the partnership business and for their share of the profits. O. S. Nos. 2 and 3 of 1080 brought by defendants, Nos. 4 and 6 and 12th defendant respectively, abated finally owing to their failure to bring on the record within the time allowed by law, the legal representatives of some of the partners who died during the course of those suits. The plaintiff contended that, as the defendants Nos. 4, 6 and 12 allowed the suits brought by them to abate, the profit and loss should be divided between the remaining partners. The District Judge overruled the plaintiff's contention and decreed the suit allotting shares to defendants Nos. 4, 6 and 12 also. On appeal by defendants Nos. 23 to 27, who are the legal representatives of defendants Nos. 1 and 2, it was urged, inter alia, that the lower Court was wrong in giving a personal decree against the representatives of defendants Nos. 1 and 2, and that no decree could be given in favour of defendants Nos. 4 and 6 as they had allowed the suit brought by them for their share of the profits in the said concern to abate.

Held.—(1) The lower Court was wrong in giving a personal decree against the legal representatives of defendants Nos. 1 and 2.

(2) The abatement of the suit under Section 355, C. P. C., [ = Or. XXII, r. 9 ] had no other effect than that of preventing the then plaintiffs or those claiming under them from suing again on the same cause of action. The Section does not lay down that the title of the said plaintiff or those claiming under him is extinguished by such abatement, or that in any suit brought not by, but against, him, the said plaintiff cannot defend his position or rights by relying on his true title.

A partnership suit is a suit of a peculiar character and the parties to such suits do not stand to each other precisely in the same relation as parties to suits generally. Each of the parties to a partnership suit, however he may be formally ranked, is really in turn plaintiff and defendant, and in both capacities comes before the Court for the adjudication of his rights relatively to the other partners, which the Court endeavours to determine by its decree. Sec. 46 [ = S. 262 = S. 54 ]

Section 262 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"262. Partition of estate or separation of share.—If the decree be for the partition or for the separate possession of a share of an undivided estate paying revenue to Government, the partition of the estate or the separation of the share shall be made by the Division Peishkar and according to the law, if any, for the time being in force for the partition or the separate possession of shares, of such estates."

Case Law.

Section 209 of the Civil Procedure Code (Regulation II of 1087) does not apply to ordinary lands paying revenue to Government. The word "Estate" which occurs in this Section refers to estates like Edappalli, Punnatu, &c. Except in the case of the latter, the Civil Courts have no power to call upon the Revenue Officers to partition lands in execution of decrees. (C. Cir. No. 20 of 1061).— 4 T. L. R. App., 29.

[Section 209 referred to was as follows:— "209. If the decree be for the division of an estate or for the separate possession of a share of an undivided estate paying revenue to Government, the division of the estate or the separation of the share shall be made by the Revenue Officer under the orders of the Dewan according to the rules and customs of the country".]

Provided, fourthly, that, where the decree in execution of which a judgment-debtor is arrested is a decree for the payment of money and the judgment-debtor pays the amount of the decree and the costs of the arrest to the officer arresting him, such officer shall at once release him.

(2) Our Government may, by Notification in Our Government Gazette, declare that any person or class of persons whose arrest might be attended with danger or inconvenience to the public shall not be liable to arrest in execution of a decree otherwise than in accordance with such procedure as may be prescribed by Our Government in this behalf.

(3) Where a judgment-debtor is arrested in execution of a decree for the payment of money and brought before the Court, the Court may inform him that he may apply to be declared an insolvent, and that he will be discharged if he has not committed any act of bad faith regarding the subject of the application and if he complies with the provisions of the law of insolvency for the time being in force.

(4) Where a judgment-debtor expresses his intention to apply to be declared an insolvent and furnishes security, to the satisfaction of the Court, that he will within one month so apply, and that he will appear, when called upon, in any proceeding upon the application or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested, the Court shall release him from arrest, and, if he fails so to apply and to appear, the Court may either direct the security to be realised or commit him to the civil prison in execution of the decree.

(5) Where the judgment-debtor applies for time to enable him to pay the judgment-debt, the Court may leave the judgment-debtor in the custody of an officer of the Court for a specified period not exceeding fifteen days or release him on his furnishing security to the satisfaction of the Court for his appearance at the expiration of the specified period if the decree be not sooner satisfied.

I. Sub-sec. (1)—2nd Proviso—Under the old Regulation, no outer door of a dwelling-house should be broken open. This prohibition has been removed and any outer-door of a dwelling-house may now be broken open to effect the arrest of a judgment-debtor in execution of a decree, provided that the dwelling-house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor and he refuses or prevents access thereto.

The Indian Select Committee of 1909 observed:—"It has been strongly urged in several quarters, more particularly by the Government of the Punjab, that the prohibition against the forcing of an outer-door is an 'inconvenient superstition'. We are of opinion that a warrant of arrest issued by a Court of Justice should receive implicit obedience; and the distinction between warrants, according as they have been issued by Criminal or Civil Courts, seems to be an importation even now foreign to the ideas of the people of this country. We think it both fair and necessary that an order of authority, if resisted, should be carried out by force, and, where the householder objects to having his door broken, he has only to hand over the judgment-debtor or to allow the arresting officer to satisfy himself that the judgment-debtor is not on the premises.– India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

The Indian Special Committee said:—"The object of this Proviso is to prevent vexatious forms of resistance to execution which constantly obstruct decree-holders in the execution of their decrees." See also under Section 54 Infra.

3rd Proviso.—The words "and who according to the customs of the country does not appear in public" occur after the word "judgment-debtor" both in Section 55 of the present Indian Code and in Section 336 of the Code of 1882. These words were omitted in Section 325 of Regulation II of 1065. For reasons, see Section 54 Infra. In the draft Bill of the present Regulation, the above words were put in; but the Select Committee deleted them.

II. Sub-sec. (2).– The Indian Special Committee said:—"This Sub-clause is intended to cover the cases of certain persons or classes whose summary arrest might, as in the case of railway servants, be attended with danger or inconvenience to the public."

III. Sub-secs. (3) and (4).—Though Section 336 of the Indian Code of 1882 contained the provisions embodied in these Rules, they were not adopted when Regulation II of 1065 was enacted. It was then observed:—"The portion of Section 336 of the Code which makes it obligatory on Courts to advise judgment-debtors to seek discharge on ground of insolvency, is omitted as the provisions of Chapter XX (On Insolvent judgment-debtors) being quite unsuited to the circumstances of this country are not re-enacted in the Bill."—

These two Sub-sections ran as follow in the present Indian Code, as enacted in 1908:-
"(3) Where a judgment-debtor......before the Court, the Court shall inform him...... and that he will be discharged......being in force."

"(4) Where a judgment-debtor expresses his intention......he was arrested, the Court shall release him......in execution of the decree."

An Amending Act III of 1921 has substituted the word "may" for "will" in Sub-section (3) and "may" for "shall" in Sub-section (4).

IV. Sub-sec. (5).—The British Indian Code does not contain this Sub-Rule. It was added by the Select Committee who pointed out that the amendment only restored the existing provision on the subject. See Infra.

V. 1. Section 325 of Regulation II of 1065 corresponding to this Rule was as follows:—

"325. Place of judgment-debtor's imprisonment.—A judgment-debtor may be arrested in execution of a decree at any hour and on any day, and shall as soon as practicable be brought before the Court, and his imprisonment may be in the Civil jail of the District in which the Court ordering the imprisonment is situate, or, when such jail does not afford suitable accommodation, in any other place which the Government may appoint for the confinement of persons ordered by the Courts of such District to be imprisoned:

Provided as follows:—

(a) for the purpose of making an arrest under this Section, no dwelling-house shall be entered after sun-set or before sun-rise and no outer door of a dwelling-house shall be broken open. But, when the officer authorised to make the arrest has duly gained access to any dwelling house. he may unfasten and open the door of any room in which he has reason to believe the judgment-debtor is to be found; provided that, if the room be in the actual occupancy of an woman who is not the judgment-debtor, the officer shall give notice to her that she is at liberty to withdraw; and, after allowing a reasonable time for her to withdraw and giving her every reasonable facility for withdrawing, he may enter such room for the purpose of making the arrest:

(b) when the decree in execution of which a judgment-debtor is arrested is a decree for money and the judgment-debtor pays the amount of the decree and the costs of the arrest to the officer arresting him, such officer shall at once release him.

The Court may release from custody any judgment-debtor arrested under this Section if it is satisfied that the further detention of such judgment-debtor will seriously affect his health, on such terms and conditions as it may deem proper. If the Court orders the release on security being furnished, such security may be realized in the manner provided by Section 249.

If the judgment-debtor applies for time to enable him to pay the judgment-debt, the Court may grant him time for a period not exceeding fifteen days. If he furnishes sufficient security that he will appear at the expiration of fifteen days, the Court may release him. If no security be given or accepted, the judgment-debtor may, at his expense, be left in the custody of a peon.

In the case of a surety, such security may be realized in the manner provided by Section 249."

[ Old Section 249 referred to is new Section 109. ]

2. The corresponding Section 336 of the Indian Code of 1882 did not contain the two Paras immediately following Clause (b) in the above Section. In inserting these Paras, it was observed: —"Provisions authorising the temporary release of a judgment-debtor who is dangerously ill or who is trying to raise money to satisfy the decree being desiderata, amendments are made in Sections 325 and 231 so as to legalize the temporary release of the judgment-debtors under the circumstances stated."—

See Section 51 Infra.

VI. "The whole law of arrest of debtors arose out of the ancient vindictive views as to the debtors, the person having to be placed as a slave at the disposal of the creditor till the debt is discharged by service. Even under the humane Hindu law, if the debtor was of the same class or a lower class than the creditor, the debtor is bound to work for the creditor till the debt is discharged. SirHenry Maine speaks of the extraordinary and uniform severity of very ancient systems of law to debtors and the extravagant powers which they lodge with the creditors".— K. P., 455.

Case Law.

1. It is clear from the language of Section 325, Proviso (b), that the Court has jurisdiction to require security for the decree amount from the appellant as a condition precedent to his release. The further question whether such security could be one for the decree amount, is only one as regards the sufficiency of the security. That is a question of judicial discretion and not jurisdiction.

Having regard to the place which Section 325, Proviso (b), Clause (2), occupies in the Code and its object which appears to be to give interim protection to sick persons who are arrested in execution of decrees, all that the decree-holder can insist on in ordinary cases is that the judgment-debtor should be restored to custody when the circumstances which necessitated his release have ceased to exist. This right of the decree-holder would be sufficiently secured in such cases by demanding such security as would be sufficient to secure the personal appearance of the judgment-debtor in Court whenever that is required. To hold otherwise would practically amount to a denial of protection in those very cases in which it is most needed, and would defeat the humane object which the Legislature had in view in enacting this provision.— 15 T. L. J., 355.

2. The accused was standing on mohsul under orders of the Munsiff's Court, Padmanabhapuram. At that time, 15 days' mohsul had expired and with the consent of the decree-holder, the period had been extended by the Court. The accused escaped from such mohsul custody, and was ordered to be prosecuted by the Munsiff, and was convicted by the Second Class Magistrate under Section 224 T. P. C. and Section 589 Civil Procedure Code. On appeal, the Additional District Magistrate acquitted the accused, as he held that there could be no legal custody of a judgment-debtor after 15 days' mohsul had expired.

Held (Upholding the order of acquittal).- The detention of a judgment-debtor in the custody of an Officer of the Court cannot extend beyond the period of fifteen days.

Section 325, C. P. C., provides for the detention of a judgment-debtor in the custody of an Officer of the Court. But reading the penultimate paragraph of Sub-section to that Section as a whole, it is seen that such detention cannot extend beyond the period of 15 days. The main object of the Legislature in enacting the provisions contained in that paragraph is to enable a judgment-debtor to gain time for paying up the decree-debt. It is specially laid down that 15 days' time for this purpose may be granted by the Court. The procedure following this permission is that the judgment-debtor may be released if he furnishes security to appear after fifteen days or that, if he furnishes no security, he may be left in the custody of a peon, the costs of such detention being borne by him. To construe the latter pro vision as authorising an indefinite prolongation of the custody would be to introduce the words "at a time" at the end of the first sentence in the paragraph (F. B.).—

3. The decree-holder applied for attachment of immovable property belonging to third defendant and also took steps for arresting first defendant in execution of the decree. First defendant applied and obtained an order that steps for arrest should be taken only after proceedings against the immovable property of third defendant terminated. The order was passed without notice to the decree-holder. The latter applied for review of the order, and the Court admitted the review and cancelled the order. First defendant appealed. It was contended for appellant that he could not be arrested in execution, as he was exempted from personal appearance under Section 98 and that the lower Court should have exercised the discretion vested in it under Order XXI, Rule 19.

Held.—The scope and purpose of Section 98 do not embrace the arrest of a judgment-debtor in execution of a decree. The appearance referred to in the Section is appearance as a party or a witness in the course of a suit or other proceeding. The provision of the Code relating to the arrest of judgment-debtors is Section 47. It specially provides for the exemption of certain persons and classes of persons from arrest in execution. Therefore, exemption from arrest in execution can be obtained by a judgment-debtor only if he comes within any of the exemptions provided in Section 47 and not on the ground that he is exempted from personal appearance in Court under Section 98.

The object of the provision in Order XXI, Rule 19, is to protect a judgment-debtor being unnecessarily harassed by simultaneous proceedings against person and property. It does not apply to a case where

48. Notwithstanding anything in this Part, the Court shall not order the arrest or detention in the civil prison of a woman in execution of a decree for the payment of money.

Prohibition of arrest or detention of women in execution of decree for money.

49. Our Government may fix scales, graduated according to rank, race and nationality, of monthly allowances payable for the subsistence of judgment-debtors.

Subsistence allowance.

the property proceeded against belongs to one judgment-debtor and the personal process is directed against another.

In a matter left to the discretion of the lower Court, the High Court will not interfere unless there are strong grounds to show that the exercise of the discretion has been so unreasonable as to deserve being characterised as perverse.—

17 T. L. J., 455.

4. Till the order of adjudication, the right of the decree-holder to proceed against the person and properties of the judgment-debtor is not affected; and a judgment-debtor arrested in execution of a decree is not entitled to be released from custody by the Appellate Court before adjudication, by the mere fact that he has filed an insolvency petition.

Even if an application to the Insolvency Court by a judgment-debtor to be released from custody, be construed as one for an injunction, the release of the appellant could not be considered to fall under one of the two classes of cases contemplated in Rule 1 of Order XXXVII, C P. C., being neither a case of a property being in danger of being wasted, damaged, alienated or wrongfully sold in execution nor one of the defendant threatening or intending to remove or dispose of the same. The restraint prayed for could relate only to any act of the party which alone an injunction can prohibit.

The powers of the Insolvency Court are circumscribed by the provisions of the Insolvency Regulation, and Section 47, Clause (3), of the Civil Procedure Code, does not confer any jurisdiction for the release of judgment-debtors in the Insolvency Court.—

Sec. 48 [ = S. 240 = S. 56]

Though there is no express protection for minors from arrest under the Civil Procedure Code, it is necessarily implied.

As the Criminal law declines to hold a minor below the age of seven responsible for his actions, it will be anomalous if there be nothing to prevent that same child being retrospectively made liable when he became sui juris for a civil liability.

Per T. Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—I think that having regard to the implications in some of the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code and the changed spirit of modern Codes, minors and lunatics and idiots were never intended to be made personally liable in civil proceedings instituted through their next friends, except when the Court in very special cases brought by or against minors, orders the minors to be personally liable either unconditionally and immediately or after they attain majority and fail to fulfil certain conditions.— K. Detention and release.

50. (1) Every person detained in the civil prison in execution of a decree shall be so detained,—

(a) where the decree is for the payment of a sum of money exceeding fifty rupees, for a period of six months ; and,

(b) in any other case for a period of six weeks :

Provided that he shall be released from such detention before the expiration of the said period of six months or six weeks, as the case may be,—

(i) on the amount mentioned in the warrant for his detention being paid to the officer in charge of the civil prison, or

(ii) on the decree against him being otherwise fully satisfied, or

(iii) on the request of the person, on whose application he has been so detained, or

(iv) on the omission by the person, on whose application he has been so detained, to pay subsistence allowance :

Provided, also, that he shall not be released from such detention under Clause (ii) or Clause (iii), without the order of the Court.

(2) A judgment-debtor released from detention under this Section shall not merely by reason of his release be discharged from his debt, but he shall not be liable to be re-arrested under the decree in execution of which he was detained in the civil prison.

Sec. 50 [ = Ss. 331 & 332 = S. 58].

I. 1. The corresponding Sections of Regulation II of 1065 are given below :—

" 331. Release of judgment-debtor.—The judgment-debtor shall be discharged from jail,

(a) on the amount mentioned in the warrant of committal being paid to the officer in charge of the jail ; or

(b) on the decree being otherwise fully statisfied ; or

(c) at the request of the person on whose application he has been imprisoned ; or

(d) on such person omitting to pay the allowance as hereinbefore directed ; or

(e) if the judgment-debtor has placed all his property at the disposal of the Court as hereinafter provided ; or

(f) when the term of his imprisonment, as limited by Section 332, is fulfilled ; or

(g) when it is certified by competent medical authority that the judgment-debtor is in a bad state of health and the Court considers that his further detention is highly inexpedient :

Provided that, in the second, third, fifth and seventh cases mentioned in this Section, the judgment-debtor shall not be discharged without the order of the Court.

A judgment-debtor discharged under this Section is not thereby discharged from his debt; but he cannot be re-arrested under the decree in execution of which he was imprisoned."

"332. Imprisonment not to exceed six months: When not to exceed six weeks.—No person shall be imprisoned in execution of a decree for a longer period than six months ; or for a longer period than six weeks if the decree be for the payment of a sum of money not exceeding fifty rupees."

2. Section 341 of the Indian Code of 1882 did not contain Clause (g) found in Section 331. For the object of its insertion, see Note under Section 47 Supra. See under Section 51 for similar provision.

II. For Form of Order for the release of a person imprisoned in execution of a decree, see Appendix E, Form No. 15.

Case Law.

1. A civil debtor committed to jail is entitled to immediate release on payment of the amount of the decree in execution of which the commitment was made. The Officer in charge of the jail is competent to receive payment of the judgment-debt and set the debtor free. He need not wait for the special orders of the Court under whose warrant the debtor was committed to custody. The amount received must be remitted to the Court as early as practicable. The warrant of commitment shall be returned to the Court with the fact of payment endorsed therein (C. Cir. No. 13 of 1061).—

4 T. L. R. App., 24.

2. A judgment-debtor was arrested and brought before the Court ; but the plaintiff not being present to pay batta, he was released. This was irregular, as plaintiff had no notice of the arrest. On a fresh application, the Munsiff refused to grant a fresh warrant on the ground that a judgment-debtor once discharged could not be re-arrested.

Held.—A judgment-debtor is liable to be re-arrested when under the first order he has not been actually imprisoned.

3. A decree was passed in a Small Cause suit for a sum which was less than Rs. 50 on date of decree. In execution of the decree, the judgment-debtor was arrested, and on the day he was committed to jail, the sum due under the decree including interest after decree and execution costs, was more than Rs. 50. The maximum period of imprisonment is only six weeks under Section 332, C. P. C., if the decree is "for the payment of a sum of money not exceeding fifty rupees." On reference by the Small Cause Court:

Held.—The period of imprisonment under Section 332 is determined according to the amount due under the decree on the date on which the judgment-debtor is sent to prison; and such amount is calculated by taking into account the amount due under the terms of the decree and execution costs, if any, allowed by the Court.—

(= 2 T. L. J., 367).

4. A judgment-debtor was arrested and imprisoned in Civil jail in execution of a decree and during the course of his incarceration he put in a petition praying to be released and consenting to be re-arrested and sent back to jail in case he failed to discharge the decree-debt within a certain time. As the decree-holder agreed to the debtor's petition being granted, the latter was released from jail. Subsequently the judgment-debtor having failed to discharge the debt within the specified time, the decree-holder applied for warrant to arrest the debtor.

Held.—The judgment-debtor so released could not be re-arrested.

The rule that a judgment-debtor taken in execution and released at the instance of the creditor cannot be re-taken for the same debt is derived from the common law and was introduced into the Indian Civil Procedure by Section 278 of the Act of 1859. The provision in the Regulation is based on Section 541 of the 1882 Act. Under the common law, a debtor in custody who agrees with the creditor to pay the debt within a date if released and on default to be reincarcerated and being so released does not pay up the debt, cannot be re-arrested. In spite of agreement by the debtor to be re-incarcerated, he cannot be so re-incarcerated, if in fact he was previously released out of custody with the consent of the creditor. A debtor released at the request of the creditor cannot be re-arrested for the same debt. An agreement in violation of this provision cannot be recognised.

As the Court would not have released the decree-debtor but for the consent of the decree-holder, the release was at the request of the latter within the meaning of Clause (c) of Section 331, and therefore, the judgment-debtor was not liable to be re-arrested.

5. Where a judgment-debtor once arrested and put in the Civil jail in execution of a decree had been discharged by the District Judge in his capacity as Superintendent of the Civil jail behind the back of the judgment-creditor, on a medical certificate, on the ground that the judgment-debtor's detention in jail would be detrimental to his life, he could be re-arrested in execution of the same decree.

Section 331, relied upon by the appellant, had no application, because the order of discharge contemplated by, and referred to, in Clause (g) thereof is a judicial order passed by the Court under whose warrant the judgment-debtor had been put in jail or its appellate authorities. There was no such order in the case.— 35 T. L. R., 219.

6. (1) The provisions of Section 331 are not illustrative but exhaustive and the Section cannot be interpreted to mean that a judgment-debtor released from jail under any circumstances whatever could not be re-arrested in execution of same decree.

The Section necessarily implies that the re-arrest of the judgment-debtor under other circumstances is not illegal. The grounds of discharge are the satisfaction of the decree either by payment of decree-amount, or otherwise, the expiry of the term of imprisonment, the inexpediency of keeping him in jail owing to ill-health, the surrender by the judgment-debtor of all his properties under the provisions of Chapter XX (relating to insolvent judgment-debtors), the consent of the decree-holder for the release of the debtor or his neglect to pay the subsistence allowance. In two of the above cases the justification for the detention has been removed, and in one the full term has been served out. In two the release is based on the consent, or is the result of the neglect of duty, on the part of the decree-holder. In the remaining two cases the release is due either to the fact that the judgment-debtor has availed himself of the protection given by the Legislature to insolvent judgment-debtors or to the inexpediency of keeping a sick man in the Civil jail to the risk of his life. In all the above cases there is sufficient justification for the release of the judgment-debtor. In grounds (a) and (b) mentioned in the Section, a re-arrest is out of the question as the decree has been satisfied. In the remaining cases, the Legislature thought it expedient not to harrass the debtor by a re-arrest in execution of the same decree. From this it does not follow that the Legislature meant that a judgment-debtor once arrested and released could not be re-arrested under any circumstances in execution of the same decree. At any Release on ground of illness.

51. (1) At any time after a warrant for the arrest of a judgment-debtor has been issued, the Court may cancel it on the ground of his serious illness.

(2) Where a judgment-debtor has been arrested, the Court may release him if, in its opinion, he is not in a fit state of health to be detained in the civil prison.

(3) Where a judgment-debtor has been committed to the civil prison, he may be released therefrom—

(a) by Our Government, on the ground of the existence of any infectious or contagious disease, or

(b) by the committing Court, or any Court to which that Court is subordinate, on the ground of his suffering from any serious illness:

(4) A judgment-debtor released under this Section may be re-arrested, but the period of his detention in the civil prison shall not in the aggregate exceed that prescribed by Section 50.

rate if that was the intention of the Legislature, the intention should have been expressed in clear and appropriate language.

(2) The Section enumerates in express words in what cases a judgment-debtor once released from jail should not be re-arrested under the decree in execution of which he was imprisoned. Application of the rule against re-arrest to cases other than those stated in the Section would be opposed to the intention of the Legislature. Reason and justice do not require further extension of the rule. The argument that, in the absence of an express provision—that except in the cases mentioned in Section 331, a judgment-debtor discharged from prison may be re-arrested—the rule against re-arrest should be understood as one of an absolute character and that the cases enumerated in the Section should be taken only as illustrative, ignores the rights conferred by law on the decree-holder. Arrest and imprisonment of the judgment-debtor up to a specified period is one of the remedies open to a decree-holder under other provisions of the Code. Express provision of law is necessary for destroying such right and not for re-affirming it. A judgment-debtor discharged from prison is liable to be re-arrested in execution of the same decree except in the cases specified in Clause (a) to (g) of Section 331.—

Property liable to attachment and sale in execution of decree.

52. (1) The following property is liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree, namely, lands houses or other buildings, goods, money, bank-notes, cheques, bills of exchange, hundis, promissory notes, Government securities, bonds or other securities for money, debts, shares in a corporation and, save as hereinafter mentioned, all other saleable property, movable or immovable, belonging to the judgment-debtor, or over which, or the profits of which, he has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit, whether the same be held in the name of the judgment-debtor or by another person in trust for him or on his behalf :

Provided that the following particulars shall not be liable to such attachment or sale, namely :—

(a) the necessary wearing-apparel, cooking vessels, beds and bedding of the judgment-debtor, his wife and children, and such personal ornament as, in accordance with religious usage, cannot be parted with by any woman ;

(b) tools of artisans, and, where the judgment-debtor is an agriculturist, his implements of husbandry and such cattle and seed-grain as may, in the opinion of the Court, be necessary to enable him to earn his livelihood as such, and such portion of agricultural produce or of any class of agricultural produce as may have been declared to be free from liability under the provisions of the next following Section;

(c) houses and other buildings (with the materials and the sites thereof) belonging to an agriculturist and occupied by him ;

(d) books of account ;

(e) a mere right to sue for damages ;

(f) any right of personal service ;

(g) stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of Our Government, and political pensions ;

(h) allowances (being less than salary) of any public officer or of any servant of a local authority while absent from duty ;

(i) the salary or allowances equal to salary of any such public officer or servant as is referred to in Clause (h), while on duty, to the extent of—

(i) the whole of the salary, where the salary does not exceed fourteen rupees monthly;

(ii) fourteen rupees monthly, where the salary exceeds fourteen rupees and does not exceed twenty-eight rupees monthly; and

(iii) one moiety of the salary in any other case;

(j) the pay and allowances of persons to whom the Native Articles of War apply;

(k) the wages of labourers and domestic servants whether payable in money or in kind;

(l) an expectancy of succession by survivorship or other merely contingent or possible right or interest;

(m) a right to future maintenance; and

(n) where the judgment-debtor is a person liable for the payment of land revenue, any movable property which, under any law for the time being applicable to him, is exempt from sale for the recovery of an arrear of such revenue.

Explanation.—The particulars mentioned in Clauses (g), (h), (i) (j) and (k) are exempt from attachment or sale whether before or after they are actually payable.

(2) Nothing in this Section shall be deemed to exempt houses and other buildings (with the materials and the sites thereof) from attachment or sale in execution of decrees for rent of any such house, building, or site.

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"263. Property liable to attachment and sale in execution of decree.—The following property is liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree (namely), lands, houses or other buildings, goods, money, bank-notes, cheques, bills of exchange, hundis, promissory notes, Government securities, bonds or other securities for money, debts, shares in the capital or joint-stock of any railway, banking or other public Company or Corporation, and except as hereinafter mentioned, all other saleable property, movable or immovable, belonging to the judgment-debtor, or over which or the profits of which he has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit, and whether the same be held in the name of the judgment-debtor or by another person in trust for him or on his behalf :

Provided that the following particulars shall not be liable to such attachment or sale (namely) :—

(a) the necessary wearing apparel and bedding of the judgment-debtor, his wife and children ;

(b) tools of artisans, and, where the judgment-debtor is an agriculturist, his implements of husbandry and such cattle and seed-grain as may, in the opinion of the Court, be necessary to enable him to earn his livelihood as such ;

(c) the materials of houses and other buildings belonging to and occupied by agriculturists ;

(d) books of account ;

(e) mere rights to sue for damages ;

(f) any right of personal service ;

(g) stipends and gratuities allowed to military and civil pensioners of Government, and political pensions ;

(h) the salary of a public officer to the extent of—

(i) the whole of the salary where the salary does not exceed ten rupees monthly ;

(ii) ten rupees monthly where the salary exceeds ten rupees and does not exceed twenty rupees monthly ; and

(iii) one moiety of the salary in any other case ;

(i) the pay and allowances of persons to whom the Native Articles of War apply ;

(j) the wages of labourers and domestic servants ;

(k) an expectancy of succession by survivorship or other merely contingent or possible right or interest ;

(l) a right to future maintenance.

Explanation —The particulars mentioned in Clauses (g), (h), (i) and (j) are exempt from attachment or sale whether before or after they are actually payable :

Provided also that nothing in this Section shall be deemed to exempt the materials of houses and other buildings from attachment or sale in execution of decree for rent."

II. In regard to the changes introduced by the new Sections 52 and 53, the Notes on Clauses say :—

"Provisions economically beneficial to agriculturists are introduced, so as to guarantee to such agriculturists, as, in the opinion of the Government, stand in need of protection, that they shall be enabled to cultivate their holdings without any break. These provisions cannot but prove generally beneficent in view of serious, and by no means temporary, problems relating to production of foodstuffs."

III. Sub-Sec. (1), Proviso.—1. Clause (a).—"The exemption of cooking vessels will, it is believed, surely give effect to a practice already more or less accepted between litigants in many parts of the country. Personal ornaments have already been held to be exempt, if forming part of a wife's Stri dhanam, from attachment in execution of a decree against a husband, even though the Hindu law concedes him a personal right of user, but doubts attach to a report exempting the necessary ornaments of a Hindu woman as forming part of her wearing apparel." (Statement of Objects and Reasons, 1901 Amending Bill).—

India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

2. Clause (c).—The British Indian Rule has the words "and the land immediately appurtenant thereto and necessary for their enjoyment" after the words "the sites thereof". The Indian Select Committee of 1903 observed:—"We have somewhat enlarged the wording, though not the principle, of the exemption relating to houses and buildings of agriculturists. The exemption is of little efficacy if the site and the land immediately appurtenant and necessary for enjoyment are liable at any moment to attachment and sale".—India Gazette, dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

The original Bill (Travancore) had the above words, but the Select Committee deleted them.

3. Clause (h).—"It has been held that the expression 'salary' in Clause (h) includes half-pay allowances during absence on sick-leave, and it is thought that, as a matter of public policy, the whole of these should be exempted from attachment." (Statement of Objects and Reasons, 1901 amending Bill).—India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

4. Clause (i) (i).—The original Bill fixed the minimum salary at twenty Rupees, as in the British Indian Code. The Select Committee considered the sum of fourteen rupees as adequate and substituted that figure.

It may be noted here that the Indian Code has been amended by Act XXVI of 1923 which has substituted "forty" for "twenty".

5. Clause (i) (ii) —The original Bill adopted the figures of the Indian Code, namely, "twenty rupees" and "forty rupees". The Select Committee reduced them to "fourteen rupees" and "twenty-eight rupees" respectively.

Act XXVI of 1923 has amended this Sub-clause also of the Indian Code by substituting "eighty" for "forty" in the latter part of the Sub-clause.

6. In the Indian Code, the following Proviso has been added to Clause (i) by Act XX of 1925:—"Provided that where the decree holder is a society registered or deemed to be registered under the co-operative societies Act, 1912, and the judgment-debtor is a member of the society, the provisions of Sub-clauses (i) and (ii) shall be construed as if the word 'twenty' were substituted for the word 'forty' wherever it occurs and the word 'forty' for the word 'eighty'."

IV. Sub-sec. (2).—The original Bill had, as in the Indian Code, the words "and the lands immediately appurtenant thereto and necessary for their enjoyment" after the words "sites thereof", and the words "or land" after the word "site" at the end. The Select Committee deleted them.

Case Law.

1. Held (by a majority).—Where an Amin of the Court wrongfully attaches property not belonging to the debtor, he has no right to hold it as against the true owner, and the latter's removal thereof does not constitute theft, there being no dishonest intention in so doing.

Per Krishnaswamy Rao, C. J.—The Civil Procedure Code distinctly confines attachment and sale to the rights, title and interest of the judgment-debtor in the property. Even the Court cannot order attachment of the property of one who is not the judgment-debtor. The Code provides a procedure for investigation of claims to attached property if preferred. But it does not sanction wrongful attachment. "A sheriff or his officer seizing goods under a writ of execution, is responsible in damages if he takes the goods of the wrong person. If he takes the goods of a stranger, though the plaintiff assures him they are the defendant's goods, he is trespasser; for, he is obliged, at his peril, to take notice whose the goods are."

The office of an attachment is to make specific the general lien which the creditor has upon the property of the debtor. Where the relationship of creditor and debtor does not exist between the person at whose instance the property is attached, and the person whose property is attached, the attachment does not create a lien. In the absence of a lien, the Amin has no right to hold the property against the owners.

Per Kunhiraman Nair, J.—The Amin was entitled to hold the property attached by him even as against the real owners who could not get it back without the consent of the Court to which the Amin is attached and not until the owners establish their claim to the satisfaction of that Court or of some other competent Court in the mode prescribed by law. The Amins are bound to attach the specific property indicated in the inventory annexed to the warrant of attachment and are, by law, responsible for the safe custody of movables attached by actual seizure. They are personally liable for loss of such property whilst in their possession and are liable in damages for breach of the duty imposed upon them by Regulations and Rules. No Amin could be permitted to defend an action against him for loss of attached property by alleging that he, of his own accord, handed the property over to the person whom he considered the rightful owner or that the party claiming to be the rightful owner took it away from him. The system of procedure prescribed by the Regulation does not vest much discretion in the Amins, and there can be little doubt, under the circumstances, that the removal by a third party of property attached and kept by the Amin in his possession and custody is calculated to cause wrongful loss to the Amin. The attachment creates a lien on the property in favour of the Amin for expenses properly incurred in its upkeep or safe custody and to remove the property from his possession without his consent or permission of the Court may deprive the Amin of his lien and cause wrongful loss to him.— 4 T. L. R., 86.

3. (1) A decree of Court is no doubt property that can be attached under Section 189 of the old Civil Procedure Code and it (the decree) falls under the description of "other property" in that Section. The mode of attachment depends upon the nature of the decree sought to be attached: if it is a simple decree for money, the attachment should be made under Sections 221 and 223 (of the old Code). The provisions of these Sections should be strictly complied with to make the attachment complete and legally valid: and if it is a decree for either immovable property, or for money charged on specific immovable property, the attachment should be made according to the provisions of Section 219.

(2) Without a proper attachment according to the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, there can be no valid sale. It has been held that a regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of simple decrees for money, and where there has been no such attachment, any sale that may have taken place is not simply voidable but de facto void.—

4. Compensation awarded to a complainant in a Criminal case is liable to attachment in execution of a decree of a Civil Court. If the amount had been attached in the manner laid down in the Civil Procedure Code, the Civil Court has simply to ask the Magistrate in whose custody the amount is, to remit the same to it for payment to the attaching creditor. The sale of such property is open to objection.—

5. The interests of a junior member of a Marumakkathayom family when its Karanavan de jure and de facto is alive, are not legally fit objects of sale, and are incapable of being separated or defined from those of others—an inchoate and imperfect right incapable of being defined. The sale of that right is therefore the sale of an empty title. Such a thing can harm nobody.—

6. Jenmom rights are liable to be sold in execution of decrees like any other species of property (F. B.).— 8 T. L. R., 6.

7. Where A and B, as the reversionary heirs of C, sued to set aside an attachment of property made by D in execution of a decree, on the ground that the decree-debt was not real, and the Zillah Judge ordered the release of the property from attachment:

Held.—As C possessed a life interest in the attached property, it was capable of attachment and sale; and therefore, the release of the property from attachment was wrong.

Semble: In execution of a decree it is the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor that is sold. What is the extent of the right, title and interest, can be decided only in a suit between the auction purchaser and those who assert that the sale conveyed only a limited interest.

8. Rent due to a widow out of land allotted for maintenance and let out by her to a tenant is not exempt under Clause l of Section 263 of the Civil Procedure Code from attachment for a decree debt.

There is a clear distinction between the general right to maintenance, and the rent due from property given for maintenance. In the case, it was not the former that was attached or even the property given for maintenance, but only a certain sum which was in fact a debt due to her from the tenant which she might or might not apply for her maintenance.— 17 T. 9. The Karanavan of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad has, in his individual capacity, no such interest in Tarwad properties set apart by a family compact for his maintenance as could be legally attached and sold for his personal debts.

Under the family karar, he was to enjoy only the usufruct of the lands in lieu of his claim for maintenance, and he was incompetent to alienate the lands though he was given the option of raising money on the security of a small portion of the land in case of dire necessity.— 19 T. 10. A pension allowed by Government to a retired officer is exempt from liability to attachment, as a pension certificate cannot be transferred and the power to transfer is the test of liability to attachment.

A "stipend" is a settled pay or compensation for services, whether daily, monthly or annual. A pension is a stipend according to the ordinary acceptation of the term.

11. The property allotted to Karanavan for maintenance in a family compact with an express provision against alienation is not liable to attachment for a personal decree for money obtained against him.

The power to transfer is the test of liability to attachment under Section 263.—

K. P., 368.

13. An attachment cannot confer any independent lien in or right over the property in favour of the attaching creditor.

Attachment confers no lien or interest in favour of the creditor, but merely puts the property in custodia legis, available to the decree-holder for realization of his amount in execution proceedings duly taken.

The attaching creditor does not acquire any charge over the property except in the restricted sense that he has a right to proceed in execution against it if no other creditors came forward, and his attachment would prevent the attached interest lapsing by survivorship at his judgment-debtor's death if such interest was an interest held jointly with others.— K. 14. The plaintiff obtained a decree against first defendant and attached certain property, which, on a date anterior to the attachment, had been sold by first defendant and others to defendants 5 and 6. Defendants 5 and 6 preferred a claim and the attachment was consequently raised. Plaintiff sued for a declaration that the sale was a sham and the property was liable to be sold in execution of his decree. It was found that a portion of the purchase-money remained unpaid to the vendors, viz., first defendant and others, and plaintiff was held entitled to execute the decree against the property to the extent of such right. It was contended in second appeal that the vendor's lien for unpaid purchase money was a personal right and was not liable to attachment.

Held.—Under Section 263, C. P. C., all properties, whether movable or immovable, except those specially exempted thereby, were liable to be attached and sold, and consequently, a debt due to the judgment-debtor was liable to be attached and sold. The vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money was a debt with the additional right of proceeding against the property sold, and was therefore liable to attachment and sale in execution of decrees. The lien is not a mere personal right.—27 T. L. R., 102
(= 2 T. L. J., 288).

15. An attachment of future rent is illegal. Mere attachment may not confer title, and the property under attachment is in the custody of the Court; but after all the Court is only a mere stake-holder, and the right to the property attached is governed by the decree under execution.—

16. In execution of a decree, the decree-holder attached a monthly payment allotted to the judgment-debtor for maintenance under an Udampadi executed by him and the other members of his Tarwad. The judgment-debtor contended that this monthly payment is not attachable. The execution Court upheld the defence. The District Judge held against the defence. On appeal to the High Court:

Held.—This monthly payment could not be attached. The judgment-debtor was originally entitled to maintenance from the Tarwad properties. For this maintenance he was entitled to a charge on the Tarwad properties. This right to maintenance does not lose its character as such merely because it has been fixed at a definite sum and secured under a deed.—

19. (1) The statutory prohibition contained in Section 263, Clause (l), of the Civil Procedure Code is restricted in its scope to the attachment and sale of a right to future maintenance. It does not extend to the attachment and sale of arrears of maintenance which have already become payable.

(2) In order to be capable of attachment, there must be in existence at the date when the attachment becomes operative, something which the law recognises as a debt, and not merely something which may or may not become a debt; as soon as the debt has arisen it may be attached, even though it may not be immediately payable. The right to future maintenance, though merged in, and enforceable in execution of, a decree is not something which the law recognises as a debt, but is merely something which may or may not become a debt, having regard to the statutory provision exempting it from attachment.

A decree for maintenance is a right to future maintenance.

The principle underlying the prohibition contained in the Clause appears to be the policy of the Legislature which recognises the necessity of a debtor to keep his body and soul together, as far more important than the right of a creditor to recover the debt due to him.

The statutory prohibition against the attachment and sale of a right to future maintenance applies also to the judgment-debt into which such right has become transformed.— 8 T. L. J., 1.

20. An attaching creditor has the right to redeem a prior mortgage. He has the right to apply for execution of the attached decree—Section 270 [= Or. XXI, r. 51]. He acquires such an interest in the subject-matter of the attachment as would entitle him to be made a party to the appeal preferred against the decree attached—Sections 356 and 551 [= Or. XXII, r. 10 (1) and new Section 85 (3) and Or. XXII, r. 11]. He acquires a right to have the whole of the attached property applied in satisfaction of his debt if no other creditors come forward, and in any case to have a rateable proportion so applied—a right which, if violated (for example by removal of the attached property from the custodia legis) will entitle the creditor to claim damages.—

21. A widowed mother and daughters forming a joint Hindu family effected a partition, and the partition deed provided that the widowed mother should have the usufructuary interest during her life-time in certain immovable properties over which she was to have no power of disposal in any manner. In execution of a money decree obtained against the widow, these properties were attached.

Held,—The attachment was not maintainable. The rights and interests which have been made over to a Hindu widow by the family to which she belongs in lieu of maintenance are outside the category of properties which could be attached and sold in execution of a decree.

Having regard to the proviso in the deed against alienation, the usufructuary interest which the mother took under the deed was one which was personal and over which she had no power of disposal, and consequently it could not be attached and sold in execution of a money decree.—

22. The word "labourers" as used in Clause (j) of Section 263 should be construed in its ordinary sense. The fact that, for purposes of the Public Works Department, certain persons are considered as "day labourers" is no reason for departing from the ordinary meaning of the word "labourer" and for understanding it in a technical sense. The pay of a Maistry of the Public Works Department is not exempt from attachment.

The words "Public Officer" which has been defined in the Civil Procedure Code and embraces every Officer in the service or pay of Government or remunerated by fees or commission for the performance of any public duty, covers the case of a Maistry of the Department of Public Works.— 38 T. L. R., 23 (= 11 T. L. J., 501).

23. There is nothing in the definition of "property" in the Insolvency Regulation which compels Courts to hold that the Tarwad property is the property of the Karanavan or the junior member who has been adjudged an insolvent.

Even though Section 263, C. P. C., employs similar phraseology, the judgment-creditor who enforces his decree against the Tarwad of the Karanavan, seeks to execute the decree not personally against the man named as the judgment-debtor, but against the Tarwad which is made liable for the debt. It is not the Karanavan's right, title and interest in his individual capacity that the decree-holder proceeds against and brings to sale. He claims to attach and sell the Tarwad's right, title and interest in the property.— 40 T. L. R., 212 (= 14 T. L. J., 341).

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 100.

24. Future rents and profits that may become due to a debtor are not attachable in execution of a decree against him. Such attachment is illegal and the plaintiff who bases his claim on the sale following that attachment must fail.— 15 T. L. J., 324.

25. On reference by a Division Bench, a full Bench held,—

Per Raman Tampi & Jacob, JJ.—Where property allotted for maintenance to a member or members of a Nayar Tarwad is improperly alienated and possession thereof is transferred to the alienee, any other member of the Tarwad is entitled on behalf of the Tarwad to recover possession of such property during the life-time of the allottee or allottees (i. e., during the continuance of the maintenance agreement) subject to the condition that the alienee is to be compensated for the improvement, if any, effected by him in the property.

Per Varghese J.—No general rule can be applied for all cases and the nature of the interest taken by the allottee depends on the terms of the family Karar under which the allotment is made.— 42 T. L. R., 406 (= 16 T. L. J., 488.)

26. A vesting order under Section 16 of the Insolvency Regulation can be passed with respect to an interest in Kandukrishi holding.

The provisions of Section 7-A [new Section 8] cannot be treated as a statutory prohibition against the right over Kandukrishi lands being saleable in execution of decrees.

The expression "saleable" occurring in Section 263 has not received judicial construction in Travancore. In British Indian High Courts, the expression "saleable interest" has been taken to refer to interest which could be sold at a compulsory sale, as in execution of a decree, and not denoting interest that could be transferred by means of a private alienation. A general prohibition against private alienations could not bar involuntary alienations such as sales in execution of decrees. This view is in consonance with the rule that provisions of the kind, which virtually deprive litigants of their rights to enforce their claims against the properties of their debtors, and are Partial exemption of agricultural produce.

53. Our Government may, by general or special order published in Our Government Gazette, declare that such portion of agricultural produce, or of any class of agricultural produce as may appear to Our Government to be necessary for the purpose of providing until the next harvest for the due cultivation of the land and for the support of the judgment-debtor and his family, shall, in the case of all agriculturists or of any class of agriculturists, be exempted from liability to attachment or sale in execution of a decree.

therefore of an ex-proprietory nature, have to be construed strictly; and could not therefore be made operative to cases not specifically enumerated therein. Execution proceedings cannot be treated as suits under Section 7-A. As such the insistence of sanction for suits with respect to Kandukrishi lands cannot be extended to execution proceedings relating to them.— 43 T. L. R., 466 (=17 T. L. J., 879).

27. The policy of the Law is that anything belonging to a debtor which is valuable in the sense that he can obtain money by selling it should be liable to satisfy the demands of the creditor whether by attachment or through the working of the Insolvency Laws, unless for reasons of public policy, the Legislature has expressly decreed otherwise. In the case of Kandukrishi lands there is no express prohibition in the Civil Procedure Code against their being taken in execution. No such rights are referred in Section 52.

The rights of an insolvent over Kandukrishi land vest in the Official Receiver, as they are property within Section 2 (d) of the Insolvency Regulation.— 19 T. L. J., 113.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 782.

28. Arrears of maintenance are liable to be attached and sold in execution of a decree against the party entitled to it. The prohibition against transfer is applicable only to future maintenance and not the amount that had already accrued due.

So far as the amount that had accrued due up to the plaintiff's death was concerned, it had to be treated as a debt and the heirs of the plaintiff should be allowed to recover it (F. B.).— 19 T. L. J., 851.

29. The salary referred to in Section 52, Sub-section (1), Clause (l), Proviso (1), (which exempts the whole of the salary where the same does not exceed Rs. 14 monthly), does not lose that character by reason of its not having been drawn for some time after it accrued due. If the amount in question was claimable only as salary at the very outset, the delay in receiving it or the existence of an additional amount for such purpose for subsequent months would not effect any change in its character and justify its being treated as an ordinary debt.

The expression "on duty" in the Proviso refers to the period of accrual of the salary or allowances and not to the time when the attachment is made.— 19 T. L. J., 882.

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"268. Seizure of property in building.—No person executing any process under this Code, directing or authorizing seizure of movable property, shall enter any dwelling-house after sunset and before sunrise, or shall break open any outer door of a dwelling-house. But, when any such person has duly gained access to any dwelling-house, he may unfasten and open the door of any room in which he has reason to believe any such property to be:

II. It may be noted that, in the new Section, the prohibition against breaking any outer door of a dwelling-house has been relaxed. The provision now made authorises the breaking open of the outer door of a judgment-debtor's house. See Note under Section 47.

Those words were in the old Indian Code of 1882, and were adopted in the original Bill which became Regulation II of 1065. But the Select Committee who reported on that Bill omitted them. They said :—"The object of the omission is to obviate difficulties which may arise in practice in the matter of determining as to who do and who do not fall under the class of 'women who according to the customs of the country do not appear in public.' It is deemed due to the sex as a whole, that the consideration contemplated by the Section should be general and not exceptional. No serious harm can arise out of it, while it would shut out all scope for possible violence to decency and delicacy."

I. Sub-section (1) of this Section corresponds to Section 282 of the old Regulation except that, for the words "has been attached" in the old Section, the words "is under attachment" have been substituted.

II. Sub-section (2) is new and decides the conflict of decisions under the Code of 1882, by declaring that the rule in Sub-section (1) is a rule of procedure only and does not affect jurisdiction.

Case Law.

1. The point for consideration was whether first defendant (special appellant) was, in virtue of the sale made in execution of a decree on the file of the Alleppey District Court, entitled to hold the disputed property as against the plaintiff who claimed under a previous sale made in execution of a decree on the file of the Shertallay Munsiff's Court. The judgment-debtor in both the cases was one and the same person.

Held.—The prior sale in execution of a decree must prevail against a subsequent sale is an elementary principle of law.

Although there may be several attachments on a property, the sale in pursuance of any one of them put an end to all the attachments, and the sale proceeds which occupy the place held by the property before sale, are distributed among the several attaching creditors according to their priorities.

The first defendant acquired no rights under the second sale. Under the first sale made in execution of the Munsiff's decree, plaintiff was entitled to the property in dispute.— 8 T. L. R., 119.

2. The question for determination was whether an attachment before judgment would entitle the attaching creditor to sell the property without issuing a fresh attachment after decree, as against a rival decree-holder who applied for attachment subsequent to the first creditor's decree,

Held.—As the order for the first sale was made at a time when there was no conflicting attachment, the sale made in pursuance of that order was legal and efficacious to vest the property in the purchaser.

The judgment-debtor had no interest left in the property at the date of the second sale, and the second purchaser took nothing under the second sale.— 9 T. L. R., 72.

3. Where the decree of a Munsiff's Court and that of a District Court are out against a judgment-debtor, and his immovable property attached in execution of the two decrees and sold in execution of the decree of the Munsiff's Court:

Held.—Under Section 282 of the Civil Procedure Code, the sale by the Munsiff was void as having been made in pursuance of the order of a Court, which had no jurisdiction to direct the sale and realize the sale proceeds of property under attachment by a Court of a higher grade.—

4. A sale by an inferior Court when the subject matter of the sale is also under the attachment of a superior Court is not, ipso facto, null and void, but only voidable under certain circumstances.

In cases where a Court which is ordinarily competent to direct sales of property orders a sale in contravention of Section 282, or in ignorance of the subsistence of attachment of that property by a superior Court, a party seeking to get possession of the property irregularly sold must set aside the sale within the time allowed by law (F. B.).—

5. Sale by the inferior Court in execution of a decree, of property under attachment in execution of the decree of the superior Court is not ipso facto null and void but only voidable, and would become indefeasible by lapse of time, if not set aside in due course of law.

"The decision of the case appears to me to rest upon the well-known distinction between the acts of a Court done without jurisdiction or authority and those done in the irregular exercise of an admitted jurisdiction or authority. I think that the sale by the Small Cause Court (the property was under attachment by the Sub-court at the date of sale and the purchaser had notice of the attachment) falls within the latter category. When property is attached by more Courts than one, each of them has jurisdiction or authority to sell, but Section 285 declares by which of such Courts that jurisdiction should be exercised. If by mistake of law or in ignorance of an earlier attachment or of an attachment in a Court of higher grade, a Court of lower grade proceeds to sell, it is not, I think, deprived of jurisdiction to do so by the provision of Section 285. I have advisedly coupled mistake and ignorance, as the jurisdiction of a Court cannot, it seems to me, depend upon its knowledge or ignorance of facts. If an attachment in a higher Court deprives a Court of lower grade of jurisdiction to sell, the sale must be, I apprehend, invalid whether the Court of lower grade knows of it or not. If the sale is held to be in such cases only irregular, the purchaser will take an indefeasible or a defeasible title according to whether he knows or does not know of the irregularity. If he buys bona fide and without notice, his title will be perfect and he will not be affected by the irregularity of the proceedings resulting in the sale. If he purchases with notice he runs the risk of his purchase being set aside" (22 Bom., 88).—

Diss.—10 T. L. J., 347.

6. Section 282, C. P. C., relates to decrees of Courts in Travancore, and does not embrace within its scope decrees of foreign Courts. The Section applies only to cases where property is attached in

56. Where an attachment has been made, any private transfer or delivery of the property attached or of any interest therein and any payment to the judgment-debtor of any debt, dividend or other monies contrary to such attachment, shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment.

Private alienation of property after attachment to be void.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this Section, claims enforceable under an attachment include claims for the rateable distribution of assets.

execution of decrees passed by several Courts in Travancore.

It is settled law in this State that, where property is under attachment in execution of the decrees of two different Courts, a sale by the Court of lower jurisdiction is irregular but not invalid; and a purchaser will take an indefeasible or a defeasible title, according as he purchases without notice or with notice of the attachment laid by the superior Court.

The general principle is that the title of a purchaser, not himself in fault, cannot be impaired at law nor in equity by showing any mere error or irregularity in the proceedings.— 10 T. L. J., 347.

7. Sections 282 [new Section 55 (1) and 292 [new Section 59] mark two distinct stages of execution and are intended to serve two distinct purposes. They do not conflict with each other, but may be said to be complementary.

The object of enacting Section 282 is to prevent conflicting orders on different claims arising out of attachment of the same property by different Courts. The provision in the Section relates to cases where the property under attachment is not in the custody of any Court. As regards the property under attachment which is in the custody of Court, separate provision is made in Clause (2) of Section 269 [=Or. XXI, r. 50] of the Code, as to which Court should determine questions of title or priority between the decree-holder and any other person, not being the judgment-debtor. All that the Court is competent to do under Section 282 is to determine (1) any claim to property attached in execution of decrees of more Courts than one, and (2) any objection to the attachment thereof.

Section 292 lays down rules of procedure at the next stage of execution and provides how and under what conditions assets realised by sale or otherwise in execution, should be distributed among the decree-holders. The decree-holders who make applications under Section 292 cannot possibly dispute the judgment-debtor's claim to the property sought to be rateably divided. An application under Section 292 is not one for determination of any claim to attached property or of any objections to the attachment thereof.

The conditions entitling a decree-holder to participate in the assets under Section 292 are:—

(a) The decree-holder claiming a share in the rateable distribution should have applied for execution of his decree to the Court which holds the assets realised.

(b) Such application should have been made prior to the realisation of the assets.

(c) The assets must have been realised by sale or otherwise in execution of the decree.

(d) The attaching creditors as well as the decree-holder claiming to participate in the assets should be holders of decrees for payment of money.

(e) Such decrees should have been obtained against the same judgment-debtor.—

1. The corresponding Section in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"273. Private alienation of property after attachment to be void.—When an attachment has been made by actual seizure or by written order duly intimated and made known in manner aforesaid, any private alienation of the property attached, whether by sale, gift, mortgage or otherwise, and any payment of the debt or dividend, or a delivery of the share, to the judgment-debtor during the continuance of the attachment, shall be void as against all claims enforceable under the attachment."

2. The words italicised first have been omitted as being mere surplusage. See Order XXI, Rules 49 and 52. An attachment to render a subsequent alienation invalid must be made in the manner prescribed by the Code.

3. The words "contrary to such attachment" were substituted for the italicised words at the close of the Section, to make it clear that the object of the Section is merely to prohibit alienations contrary to the attachment. The words in the old Section were considered too wide as comprising alienations that could not possibly prejudice the rights of an attaching creditor.

Case Law.

1. First defendant held two decrees for money against 2nd and 3rd defendants—623 of 1056 and 226 of 1057. In execution of the decree in No. 623, 1st defendant attached the property in dispute on 22nd Dhanu 1058, and pending this attachment, 2nd and 3rd defendants sold the property to plaintiff on the 18th Margali, 1061, for the purpose, among other things of satisfying a portion of the decree in No. 623. Subsequent to this private sale to plaintiff, 1st defendant laid another attachment on the same property in execution of his decree in No. 226 and, eventually, obtained satisfaction of his decree in suit No. 623 by sale of other properties belonging to the 2nd and 3rd defendants, the judgment-debtors. The question raised was as to the validity of the private sale made to plaintiff pending the attachment in execution of the decree in No. 623 subsequently discharged by public sale of other properties.

Held.—If a private alienation made pending an attachment in execution of a decree is valid against a subsequent attaching creditor in the event of the decree for which the attachment was made being afterwards discharged, it is equally so as against all subsequent attaching creditors, whether they be the persons who first attached the property or otherwise, and so long as the subsequent attaching creditor does not claim under or through the first attachment, he is not, on the construction of Section 224 of the old Civil Procedure Code, entitled to avoid the prior private sale, and to treat the property as still saleable as the property of the judgment-debtors (vendors).

The accidental circumstance, namely, that the creditor who first attached in execution of one decree is also the holder of another decree, does not alter the rights of the parties. He could not have realised any portion of his second decree, without putting an actual attachment on the property, and he delayed taking out the attachment under the second decree until the private sale had been made. He cannot, any more than a third person attaching the property under his decree, take the benefit of the first attachment made under another and separate decree.—

2. A obtained a money decree against B and C and attached their property. During pendency of the attachment, the property was, for the express purpose of satisfying the decree, sold to plaintiff's vendor who deposited the decree amount in Court. B subsequently contended in the Munsiff's Court that his having suffered incarceration in jail for the decree-debt, must be taken to have completely discharged the debt and was allowed to draw the money before the order was reversed in appeal. A, after the reversal of the Munsiff's order, instead of recovering from B the amount wrongly drawn by him, moved the Munsiff's Court to proceed with the sale of the property, in pursuance of the original attachment. The suit was for a declaration that the property was not liable to sale in execution of A's decree, or to recover the purchase money from A, B and C. It being contended (1) that the original attachment not having been expressly withdrawn by an order of Court, must be considered to be still in force, and (2) that the private sale to plaintiff's vendor having been made during pendency of the attachment, was null and void.

Held.—(1) The attachment of property made in execution of a decree comes to an end the moment the whole amount due under it is paid into Court. The object of an attachment is to compel the debtor to pay up the judgment-debt. After the payment of the debt, the continuance of the attachment would be unjust and meaningless. The law does not require the formal withdrawal of an attachment on payment into Court of the decree-debt, but leaves it to the option of the parties to apply for and obtain the order of withdrawal of attachment.—Section 272 of the Civil Procedure Code [=Or. XXI, r. 53].

(2) Private sales of properties under attachment, are prohibited in the interests of the attaching creditor only (Section 273 of the Civil Procedure Code).

(3) As the purchase money was paid into Court for the benefit of the creditor, the private sale was good and binding on the decree-holder ; and he should have recovered the same from the debtor to whom it was wrongly paid by the Munsiff.

Consequently, the plaintiff's purchase, in the circumstances of the case, entitled him to the declaration sought for.—

Appl.—18 T. L. R., 79.

3. Where a court sale of certain property under attachment was set aside by a Munsiff on an application made by a claimant to such property, and the property was, thereupon, conveyed to plaintiff under a sale by the owners thereof, including the claimant, before a reversal of the Munsiff's order was obtained by the auction-purchaser in appeal :

Held.—(1) The proceedings subsequent to the Court sale having been finally cancelled by the order of the District Court, the purchaser under the Court sale acquired a complete title to the property on the date of sale, and in consequence, the judgment-debtor ceased to have any interest in the property and could, therefore, convey nothing to the plaintiff,

(2) A property having been already under attachment before the sale, the effect of the Munsiff's order setting aside the court sale was simply to leave the property as it was on the date of sale, and any private alienation of the property whilst under attachment is void under Section 273, unless the alienation was made with the consent of the decree-holder and under the express permission of the Court obtained in accordance with the provisions of the Code.

(3) The purchaser not having been a party to the proceedings subsequent to the private alienation to plaintiff, cannot be affected by fraud, if any, in such proceedings.— 13 T. L. R., 50.

4. In execution of a decree the plaint property was attached in Masi 1071. During the continuance of a prior attachment dated 25th Panguni 1066 of the same property and in execution of the same decree, the plaintiff obtaieed a mortgage from the decree-debtor. The decree-holder did not apply for sale for a period of three years from the date of first attachment, and the order cancelling that attachment was passed on his application for sale proclamation after three years, i, e., in Vycausi 1069. The suit was for the cancellation of the attachment of 1071 and the enforcement of plaintiff's mortgage lien.

Held.—The prior attachment was virtually cancelled by the executing Court when it ordered the second attachment.

Though the Munsiff had not expressly passed an order under Section 272, C. P. C. [=Or. XXI, r. 53], cancelling the prior attachment, there could be no doubt that he meant to cancel it when he passed the order of 1069 to get a list of properties and to issue order for attachment. Section 272 requires the executing Court to record with reasons a formal order only for the continuance of a sale attachment, i. e., one more than three years old in which the decree-holder has taken no sale proceedings. The executing Court had power to withdraw the attachment of its own motion without an application by the party interested. The decree-holder without attempting to question the executing Court's order for lists, etc., took out process for the second attachment which was the only one the plaintiff sought to cancel in the suit. The Court having intended to cancel the first attachment as it could do in the absence of special reasons to the contrary, and the decree-holder having understood its order in that light, the first attachment must clearly be taken to have been cancelled by the order of 1069. The question is always of the intention of the executing Court as to whether it did or did not exercise the discretion it undoubtedly has, to cancel or continue the attachment.

The prohibition under Section 273 against alienations during the pendency of an attachment did not apply to the mortgage in question. Section 273 makes alienations of attached property void only as against claims enforceable under the attachment. The decree-holder's claim was clearly not one enforceable under the first attachment which was cancelled. It was enforceable only under the subsequent attachment of 1071, and the melotti to the plaintiff not having been created during the continuance of that attachment was clearly not vitiated by it. It was therefore not invalid because of the attachment which the plaintiff ought to cancel.— 16 T. L. R., 149.

5. The first defendant obtained a money decree against the 2nd defendant and in execution thereof attached the plaint property, which belonged to the latter, on 2-4-1082. No further steps were taken and the execution application was struck off on 23-5-1082. The first defendant again applied for attachment on 4-11-1087, which application was rejected on 12-11-1087. The application for attachment was renewed on 4-7-1088. This application was allowed, and the attachment was duly effected on 30-7-1088. The plaintiff, on the strength of a sale-deed obtained by him on 12-10-1087 from the second defendant, the admitted owner of the plaint property, preferred a claim objecting to the attachment. The claim being rejected, the present suit was instituted for declaration of plaintiff's right and title and for cancellation of attachment &c. The defence contended that the plaintiff's sale was invalid, as it came into existence during the pendency of the attachment laid on the plaint property in 1082.

Held (On special appeal, reversing the the decrees of the Courts below).—The execution Court, by ordering the second attachment, intended to cancel the first attachment, and did really cancel it. If it was intended that the first attachment should continue, the Court would have recorded special orders therefor and ordered its continuance. The earlier attachment being thus non-existent, and the second attachment, the only subsisting one, having been made after the date of the plaintiff's sale, the latter transaction was not a void one.—

8 T. L. J., 382.

6. An attachment effected under the C. P. C., (whether before or after judgment), does not create a charge or lien on the attached property; it only renders void during its continuance any private alienation by the judgment-debtor of the property attached or payment to him of any debt due to him which had been attached in so far as all claims enforceable under the attachment are concerned, in order that the judgment-creditor may avail himself of the further processes mentioned in the C. P. C., for the purpose of realising the fruits of his decree.

In a suit of the plaintiffs against the second defendant on an alleged account, the plaintiffs attached before judgment certain money due to the former by the Sirkar and the suit was eventually decreed. While this suit was pending, the 1st defendant obtained a money decree against the 2nd defendant, and in execution thereof attached the money which the plaintiffs had attached before judgment in the former suit. Notwithstanding the objection of the plaintiff, the money was allowed to be drawn by the 1st defendant on security, being furnished. The plaintiffs on execution of their decree prayed for recovery of the money drawn by the 1st defendant; but their prayer was not granted. The present suit is for declaration that the decree obtained by the 1st defendant against the 2nd defendant is not binding on them (plaintiffs) and for recovery of the money drawn by the 1st defendant.

Held.—The plaintiffs have not, by virtue of their attachment, obtained a lien or charge on the amount drawn by the 1st defendant as to entitle them to maintain a suit for recovery and for this purpose to attach the decree obtained by him against the 2nd defendant. The right to the money could only be acquired by bringing the right of the judgment-debtor (2nd defendant) to it, to sale in pursuance of the attachment made and by obtaining a title thereto.

It is clear from the language of Section 273 that an attachment only renders void, during its continuance, any private alienation by the judgment-debtor of the property attached or payment to him of any debt due to him which had been attached in so far as all claims enforceable under the attachment are concerned. The object of the Legislature in enacting the provisions of Section 273 seems to be that what has been brought into custodia legis should be allowed so to remain uninterfered with by the judgment-debtor or by any other person who has no title thereto, such as a trespasser, in order that the judgment-creditor may avail himself of the further processes mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure, for the purpose of realising the fruits of his decree which object would be defeated by the judgment-debtor disposing of it as he liked or being permitted to receive payment of any debt due to him. If it is deemed that an encumbrance or lien on the property attached is created by the attachment itself, there is nothing to have prevented the Legislature to have said so in express terms. Such charge, if any, would undoubtedly have no operation whatever as against other creditors of the judgment-debtor. If the attaching creditor is to be treated as the owner of an encumbrance or charge on the property, the result would be that when the property is sold in execution, say, subject to three prior encumbrances, the attaching creditor would be entitled to be paid the full amount of his decree-debt—which ex hypothesi has become a charge on the property in consequence of his attachment—before the decree-holders get anything, notwithstanding that these latter may have before the realisation of the assets by the execution sale, applied to the Court for execution of their money decrees. This result would be contrary to the provisions of Section 292, C. P. C., [new Section 59] and is therefore another ground which seems to militate

7. The alienation which Section 273 is intended to prevent is an alienation which, if permitted, would defeat claims legally enforceable under the decree in execution of which the property alienated has been attached. Where, however, an alienation of attached property is made under such circumstances that it in no way interferes with the rights secured by his decree to the attaching creditor, Section 273 is no bar to such alienation.

A sale-deed was executed to plaintiff by all the members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad in respect of certain property, pending an attachment placed on it in execution of a decree obtained by one of the members thereof against another member for a private debt contracted by the latter while a junior not in management. The plaintiff, on the strength of his sale, sued to set aside the auction sale of the same property held subsequent to his sale. The Courts overruled the defence plea of non-maintainability of the suit which was accordingly decreed in favour of the plaintiff. In special appeal by the original decree-holder's assignee (at whose instance the auction sale was brought about) and the auction-purchaser, it was argued that the plaintiff's sale was void under Section 273, as it was executed pending attachment in execution.

Held.—If the decree-debt were the private debt of a junior member, and the property attached for that debt were Tarwad property over which the decree-debtor had no special right, the attaching decree-holder could enforce no legal claim under the attachment. The sale to the plaintiff in no way stood in the way of execution of the decree to the extent of the decree-holder's legal claim, if any.— 38 T. L. R., 288 (=12 T. L. J., *197).

8. In the course of the insolvency proceedings started against an insolvent, his creditors who had, under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, attached his properties before the order of adjudication, claimed preference in the distribution of the insolvent's assets.

Held.—The rights of the creditors must be determined by the provisions of the Insolvency Regulation and not by those of the Civil Procedure Code.— 38 T. L. R., 245 (=12 T. L. J., *270).

9. As the law stands, it has to be held that mere attachment without actual notice to the judgment-debtor is sufficient to invalidate subsequent payments made to the decree-holder of the attached decree contrary to such attachment.—[See Or. XXI, r. 51 re change introduced].— 14 T. L. J., 145.

10. It is well-established that a judicial sale releases a property from all the attachments to which it is subject, the reasons being that there is nothing in the Code to prevent such a sale pending an attachment. Section 273 is directed only against private sales and the attaching decree-holder's rights are sufficiently protected by Section 292 of the Code [new Section 59], under which he is entitled to share in the sale proceeds.

But this rule can obviously apply only to cases where the sale is perfected and is subsisting. If the sale is not confirmed, or if it is set aside after confirmation, it ought not on principle to affect the antecedent proceedings in execution.— 15 T. L. J., 364.

Purchaser's title.

57. Where immovable property is sold in execution of a decree and such sale has become absolute, the property shall be deemed to have vested in the purchaser from the time when the property is sold and not from the time when the sale becomes absolute.

---

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"313. Certificate to purchaser of immovable property.—When a sale of immovable property has become absolute in manner aforesaid, the Court shall grant a certificate stating the property sold and the name of the person who at the time of sale is declared to be the purchaser. Such certificate shall bear the date of the confirmation of the sale, and, so far as regards the parties to the suit and persons claiming through or under them, the title to the property sold shall vest in the purchaser from the date of such certificate and not before: Provided that the decree under which the sale took place was still subsisting at that date."

The provisions of the above Section are embodied with alterations in the new Section 57 and Order 21, Rule 91. The old Proviso has been omitted altogether, and it is no longer necessary that the decree should be subsisting at the time of the confirmation of sale.

II. "The change made in this Section is noteworthy. Title passes not on confirmation of sale, as it now does, but on the sale taking place. It is in harmony with Order 21, Rules 89 and 90, of the British Code, whereby no right is recognised which was brought into existence subsequent to the sale. The sale passes title subject to defeasance on certain grounds, within a short and definite period only, and available to certain persons only. The effect of the existing Code is to confer no title to the auction purchaser, and continue the title in the judgment-debtor, till the sale is confirmed."— Notes on Clauses.

Case Law.

1. When a judgment-debtor's property is sold in public auction in execution of a valid subsisting decree of an Appellate Court and a third party bona fide purchases it, the debtor cannot sue to set aside the sale by reason of the subsequent reversal of the decree upon review, but must look to the judgment-creditor for the value of the property sold.

There is nothing in the Code to support the contention that an auction-purchaser buys property subject to the condition of the sale becoming absolute or void by the Appellate Court's subsequent confirmation or reversal of the decree of the Court of first instance.

It may be argued that natural justice requires the restoration of the property to the judgment-debtor, when the decree which led to the sale is afterwards reversed. Here is a conflict between the interests of the debtor and of the innocent purchaser, and the question is which of these two is entitled to protection. The interests of the purchaser ought to prevail over those of the debtor. If, for instance, the debtor's property is sold, if the creditor is a pauper, and if there is reason to apprehend that, in case of reversal of the decree, money paid to him cannot be recovered from him, the debtor has the power of protecting his interests by applying to the Court that executes the decree to demand security from the creditor—whereas, the auction-purchaser is bound to pay the purchase-money into Court unconditionally, and has no means of protecting himself.— 2 T. L. R., 95.

2. The Court executing a decree is bound to grant a certificate of sale to the purchaser in auction on the sale being confirmed and that without any application from the party.— 3 T. L. R., 65.

3. By his purchase at the court-sale, a person cannot be placed in a position better than that of the original creditor whose rights vested in him under the purchase.— 4 T. L. R., 23.

4. An auction sale of immovable property vests, in the purchaser, the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor, the decrees previously obtained by the latter for the enforcement of his rights on the lands enuring for the benefit of the purchaser.— 5 T. L. R., 1.

5. A purchaser under a sale held in execution of a decree against a Marumakkathayam Tarwad, if not a party to the suit wherein that decree was passed, is not bound to prove either consideration or Tarwad necessity for the debt which formed the basis of the decree, as against subsequent objectors. His title under the purchase is unimpeachable so long as no fraud is proved.— 8 T. L. R., 125.

6. A court-sale of property held while there was a valid hypothecation subsisting thereon, would be subject to the lien created by such hypothecation.—11 T. L. R., 67.

7. Suit by a purchaser of a hypothecation bond at a Court auction, to recover from the obligor and the hypothecated property the amount due under the bond. The Court sale not having been conducted under the procedure applicable to real property and the sale certificate granted to plaintiff not having been registered, it was contended that the sale was ab initio void.

Held.—A hypothecation deed consisted of two obligations—(1) to pay the debt as a simple debt, and (2) the creation of a charge on the real property in the way of collateral security.

The failure to adopt the procedure prescribed for sale of immovable property and the non-registration of the sale-certificate deprived the purchaser of the right to recover the debt as a specific charge on the property hypothecated; but the sale of the bond as movable property, did not invalidate the transfer to the purchaser, of the right to enforce the first obligation, i. e., the right to recover the debt from the obligor (defendant) and his property, as a simple debt.— 11 T. 11. Where A, the mortgagee of immovable property who purchased the equity of redemption of a certain property sold in auction for a decree debt due by B, the mortgagor, omitted to obtain a certificate of sale from Court to evidence his purchase and symbolical possession of the property under Court process :

Held.—The purchaser's title became perfect by the confirmation of the sale by Court. The purchaser being already in actual possession, no symbolical possession need be obtained. The grant of certificate is a duty of Court after confirmation of sale; and there is no provision in the Code requiring the obtaining of certificate by purchaser to complete the sale.— 12 T. L. Held.—The judgment-debtor should remove the house from the garden or sell it to the auction-purchaser.—

17. In the interval between the auction-sale and the confirmation thereof, there is not merely a contract for sale but an inchoate transfer of title which only requires confirmation to perfect it. In a suit by plaintiff to compel the first defendant to remove the materials of the house, wherein it was contended that the house was not liable to be removed, but that the plaintiff should be directed to pay the value of same :

Held.—As the sale and purchase of the house was subsequent to the sale of the house site, the purchaser of the house was not entitled to claim the value of the house from the purchaser of the house site.

When he purchased the house, he had no right to occupy the site of the house and he must be deemed to have intended to purchase and could have purchased only the materials of the house and not also the right to compel the owner of the site to allow the house materials to stand on the site on penalty of the latter being obliged to pay compensation if he does not allow the building to continue to stand on.—

21. The title of an auction-purchaser under an execution sale, whether as against the parties to the suit or against third parties, vests from the date of confirmation under Section 313, and not from the date of the bid.— 2 S. D., 76.

[Vide the new Section and the Notes above].

22. A and B were two hypothecatees of the judgment-debtor. B, the subsequent hypothecatee, obtained upon his hypothecation bond, a decree to which A was no party. In the court-sale that ensued in execution of his decree, B purchased and obtained delivery of possession of the properties. A then filed a suit against the judgment-debtor without impleading B as a party, obtained a decree, brought the judgment-debtor's right in court-auction and purchased it himself. A was successfully resisted by B from obtaining possession of the property. In a suit by A against B for possession of the property:

Held.—The suit was not maintainable. The priority of the two hypothecatees was not to be determined by the priority of their respective deeds, but by the date of sale and recovery of possession.—

3 S. D., 43.

23. It is a recognised principle of law that a purchaser represents the judgment-debtor to the extent of the right, title and interest he had in the property at the date of the sale. This priority of interest is enough to create against the auction-purchaser the same bar by res judicata that would apply to the judgment-debtor under whom he claims (F. B.).— 3 S. D., 61.

24. It is only in respect of immovable properties that formal confirmation and sale certificates are necessary. In the case of movables including debts, the receipt for the payment of the auction price of itself gives absolute title to the purchaser.—See Section 294, C. P. C. [=Or. XXI, r. 74].

A hypothecation right must only be sold as movable property, and no confirmation of sale and delivery of sale certificate is therefore necessary.

Even if the sale ought to have been as immovable property, it has been held that, though there is no formal confirmation and a sale certificate, the unconfirmed sale gives a title to equitable relief to the purchaser on which he can bring a suit. The unconfirmed sale is virtually a sale, and not a mere contract for sale, and the defect of the purchaser's title in such a sale is purely technical.— 3 S. D., 137.

25. The effect of Sections 310 [=Or. XXI, r. 88], 312 [=Or. XXI, r. 90] and 313 is that the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor alone passes to the purchaser at a Court-sale, subject, however, to the condition that the purchaser may recover back his purchase money, when he finds that the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest at all. There is no implied warranty in such sales as there would be in sales by private contract.— 4 S. D., 63.

26. The plaintiff, the court auction-purchaser of judgment-debtor's mortgage rights in the plaint property, having been in his attempt to get possession of the property successfully obstructed by a superior mortgagee and the Court not having removed the obstruction, sued for refund of the purchase money but the lower Courts disallowed the plaint.

Held.—(1) Plaintiff was entitled to no relief as the plaint did not allege that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest at all in the property in which case alone a suit would lie by the auction-purchaser for refund of money.

The Zillah Judge was wrong in his observation that plaintiff should have proceeded against the obstructor, the latter not being a necessary party at all to this suit.

(3) The Munsiff was wrong in saying that the judgment-debtor against whom plaintiff claimed no relief was the person properly liable.— K. P., 263.

27. In execution of a money-decree against the mortgagor of plaint properties, the latter were attached in 1076; but they were sold subsequent not only to the suit by the mortgagees but even to the decree for sale passed therein. Plaintiff who represented the court-auction-purchaser of the rights of the mortgagor brought this suit for the redemption. Defendants represented the mortgagees who were the purchasers in court auction in execution of the mortgage-decree for sale. The Courts below dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

Held (dismissing the second appeal).—Though the attaching creditor is entitled to bring the equity of redemption to sale, yet once the sale in execution of the mortgage decree is allowed to take place and to be confirmed without plaintiff's preventing it by paying the whole amount as per the mortgage decree, the sale in execution of the money-decree becomes useless as the rights of a mortgage-decree-holder who has impleaded all necessary parties to bring the whole property to sale cannot be questioned.— K. P., 584.

28. On the confirmation of the sale by the Court, the auction-purchaser's title to the property becomes complete and the grant of a sale certificate is not necessary to complete such title.

The Legislature makes it the duty of the Court to grant a sale certificate in view to furnish a statutory evidence of the sale. The issue of a sale certificate is necessary before delivery can be obtained in execution, for Sections 315 and 316 [ = Or. XXI, rr. 92 and 93 ] allow the Court to order delivery to be made only after the certificate of sale has been granted.—

In 1079, the plaintiff in execution of a decree against R purchased this property, symbolical possession of the property being given him by the Court in 1082. In 1084, plaintiff sued for recovery of possession of the property alleging trespass by defendants 2 and 3, the widow and son respectively, of P.

Held.—R into whose shoes plaintiff had stepped under his auction-purchase in 1079, not having obtained possession, actual or symbolical, in pursuance of the sale in his favour within 12 years of the date of his auction-purchase, the plaintiff's suit was barred under Article 115 of the Limitation Regulation. The symbolical delivery obtained by the plaintiff was of no avail whatever to him, as defendants 2 and 3 were not parties to either of those suits and could, in no sense, be regarded as heirs of P.—

The vendee did not pay the creditors and the latter were subsequently paid by a third party. The vendor and the vendee claimed the benefit of such payment each to the exclusion of the other.

Held.—The vendee having failed to perform his part of the contract and such performance having since become impossible, he was not entitled to retain part of the purchase money, while keeping in his possession the lands purchased, and he was bound to pay such purchase money to the vendor (F. B.).— 27 T. L. R., 241 (= 2 T. L. J., 393).

31. Delivery of symbolical possession of property, purchased in execution sale, operates to give the person so put in possession a fresh cause of action. Consequently a suit by a decree-holder-auction-purchaser, who has obtained through Court symbolical delivery of possession of the property purchased by him, for recovery of possession of the same from a person in actual possession of it under a title derived from the judgment-debtor subsequent to the attachment but before the auction-sale in execution of the decree, is not barred under Section 238 of the Civil Procedure Code [new Section 40], even though he could have obtained actual possession under Section 315, Civil Procedure Code [= Or. XXI, r. 92 ], inasmuch as the proceedings in execution ended with the delivery of formal possession and there was nothing further for the execution Court to do in the matter.— 29 T. L. R., 166.

32. Plaint schedule property, belonging to the 1st defendant, was hypothecated, in order, to plaintiff, second defendant, third defendant, and another person in 1070, 1073, 1077 and 1080 respectively. In execution of a money decree obtained against the first defendant, the equity of redemption of the property was sold in Court auction and purchased by plaintiff in 1081. The purchase was subject to all the hypothecations except that to third defendant. Subsequently, the last hypothecatee (i. e., of 1080) obtained a decree on his hypothecation, and in execution thereof the property was again sold subject to the hypothecation in favour of the third defendant, and purchased by second defendant, the second hypothecatee. Plaintiff not having enforced his sale certificate, second defendant enforced his and got possession. Plaintiff relinquishing his rights under the court purchase, brought a suit for recovery of his debt by sale of the hypotheca, but his suit was dismissed on the ground that he was not entitled to go back upon his purchase. Plaintiff brought the present suit to recover his debt by sale of the hypotheca or for recovery of possession of property with mesne profits from the date of his purchase. It was contended on behalf of the second defendant that plaintiff was entitled to neither of the reliefs claimed. The Court of first instance held that plaintiff was not entitled to the first relief claimed, and that in regard to the second he was not entitled to recover possession from 2nd defendant, without paying the amount due under the hypothecations, subject to which he had purchased the equity of redemption in court auction in 1081.

Held (on appeal).—The plaintiff was not entitled to recover the amount due under his hypothecation by sale of the hypotheca, as the decision against him in the first suit operated as res judicata so far as that question was concerned.

As the plaintiff was not a party to the decree in execution of which second defendant purchased the property, the court sale in favour of the latter was not binding on the plaintiff.

Second defendant could not be in a better position than the first defendant whose rights he purchased: as first defendant could not resist plaintiff's claim to possession, second defendant likewise could not do so.

Even independently of the first defendant, the second defendant was only the holder of two hypothecation rights, and as the right to be in possession was not one of the rights of a hypothecatee, second defendant could not resist plaintiff's claim to recover possession under his auction-purchase.— 3 T. L. J., 41.

33. Plaintiff who purchased the equity of redemption of certain property, in execution of a decree for money, sued for recovery of the property from defendant who was in possession as mortgagee but who subsequent to plaintiff's Court sale had himself purchased the equity of redemption in Court auction. Defendant pleaded that the Court sale to plaintiff was bad as the plaintiff's decree had been fully satisfied and as there was nothing due to him on the date of the sale in his favour. Plaintiff in reply said that as the defendant's right to have the sale in his (plaintiff's) favour set aside by suit was barred, it was not open to the defendant to set up such a defence as it would virtually enable him to do indirectly what he could not have done directly.

Held.—The defendant was entitled to challenge the validity of the Court sale in plaintiff's favour though it was earlier in date than in his (defendant's) favour, and though his right to avoid it by a suit was barred.

'The defendant in a suit not being an active party seeking the aid of the Court can under certain circumstances set up certain pleas which will not be available to the plaintiff.— 3 T. L. J., 356.

35. As soon as an ex parte decree is set aside, the Court sale held in execution of that decree falls through and any fresh decree, even if subsequently made in favour of the plaintiff, cannot validate such sale.— 34 T. L. R., 163.

36. When once a Court-sale is confirmed, it is the duty of the Court to cause a certificate of sale to be prepared and to execute it for delivery to the purchaser. Sec. 58 [= S. 314 = S. 66]

I. The corresponding Section in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"314. Bar to suit against purchaser buying benami.—No suit shall be maintained against the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of any other person, or on behalf of some one through whom such other person claims.

Nothing in this Section shall bar a suit to obtain a declaration that the name of the certified purchaser was inserted in the certificate fraudulently or without the consent of the real purchaser".

II. In regard to the new Section, the Notes on Clauses say :—

"This Section is far more stringent against claims of benami purchaser than the corresponding Section in the existing Code. Whatever may have been the reasons which led to the practice of making benami purchases, judicial sales should be free from such questionable practice as a benami purchase."

Case Law.

1. A, a certified purchaser of immovable property sold in execution of a decree, mortgaged it to plaintiffs who sued to recover same from the defendants who were in possession. The defendant, the representative of A's Tarwad, contended that the purchase at court-sale by a junior member of his Tarwad, was made on behalf of the Tarwad, and that, therefore the mortgage to plaintiffs was invalid,

Held.—No defendant could set up the plea that a certified purchaser at sale held in execution of decree, purchased not on his own behalf, but benami for another.—

Overruled,—16 T. L. R., 61.

2. Where a plaintiff, an auction-purchaser, who alleged himself to be the benami for second defendant at the time of purchase, had brought a suit under his original purchase, for recovery of property from the first defendant to whom the second defendant had made an assignment of the same:

Held.—The first defendant was not debarred from proving her title to the property as against the certified auction-purchaser, the plaintiff. Section 314, C. P. C., only bars the maintainability of suits brought against certified purchasers.—

Appr.—16 T. L. R., 61.

3. Section 314 which bars a suit against a court purchaser on the ground that the purchase was benami, does not bar a defence alleging the same ground in a suit by such a purchaser (F. B).

The object of the Section is to prevent disputes between the purchaser at an execution sale and a person claiming that the certified purchaser has purchased benami for him, but the Section is confined to a suit brought against the certified purchaser.— 16 T. L. R., 61.

Ref.—2 T. L. J., 380.

4. Section 314 prohibits the institution of a suit against a certified purchaser in court-auction on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of another person; and to put a narrow and forced construction upon the Section will be to defeat its object.— 1 T. L. J., 189.

5. Plaintiff, alleging that in execution of a decree against him, the defendant, at his instance, purchased the plaint and other properties in court auction in pursuance of an agreement entered into before the Court sale, whereby the defendant was to pay himself the amount deposited by him in Court, by private sale of some out of several items purchased in the execution sale, and to reconvey the remaining items to the plaintiff, together with the surplus, if any, of the sale proceeds, and further, alleging that he made the defendant sell some of the properties to a third party, getting the latter to pay the price to defendant, brought the suit to compel defendant to re-convey the plaint items, and for recovery of the balance of proceeds of the sale of the other items left after reimbursement of the amount due to the defendant.

Held.—On the allegations in the plaint the suit was virtually one for a declaration that defendant's purchase was made benami for the plaintiff, and as such, Section 314 was a bar to the maintainability of the suit.— 2 T. L. J., 380.

6. When an auction-purchaser seeks on the strength of such purchase to enforce his right against others in possession, it is open to the latter as defendants to plead that the sale relied on by the plaintiff is invalid and not binding on them. The Limitation Regulation does not stand in their way.— 10 T. L. J., 347.

7. A defence available to a creditor that an alienation by his debtor is voidable on the ground that it was one in fraud of creditors, is, on principle, available to purchasers in auction, of properties alienated in execution of the decree obtained by that creditor (F. B.).— 38 T. L. R., 297 (= 12 T. L. J., 359).

Ref.—16 T. L. J., 453.

8. The plaintiffs claiming to be the owners of the scheduled properties, which they leased to the 2nd defendant, sued for the recovery of the same, alleging that the 2nd defendant had made default in the payment of rent since 1092 and that 2nd defendant in collusion with the 1st defendant persisted in his refusal to execute a renewed pattachit.

The 2nd defendant did not contest the suit. The 1st defendant contended that he was in possession as the auction-purchaser of the property. He traversed the plaint allegations that the bond on which he sued in O. S. 94 of 80 was taken benami in his name on behalf of the plaintiffs, that he instituted the said suit, obtained the decree therein and purchased the property in execution as benamidar.

He also contended that the plaintiffs had no right to claim any relief inasmuch as such claim was repugnant to the provision of Section 314.

The Munsiff found that the 1st defendant was throughout acting only as benamidar for the plaintiffs. He however dismissed the suit, holding that it was barred by Section 314.

On appeal to the High Court:

Held.—Per Chatfield, J.—The question whether the operation of Section 314, is excluded by the fact that the 1st defendant throughout the history of the case acted as benamidar for the plaintiffs is a somewhat difficult one. The authorities do not lay down a highly consistent rule.

Either the Section should be construed as subject to equitable considerations, so that it should not be used to effect a fraud, in which case it will be practically useless or it should be strictly construed irrespective of the result that may follow. On the face of it, Section 314 imperatively prohibits Courts from decreeing suits against the certified purchaser by one who alleges that the purchase was made on behalf of himself.

It is not however necessary to base the decision of this case on such a ground.

Section 314 only prohibits suits in which it is an essential part of the plaintiff's case to show that the purchase was benami for him. Though he cannot file such a suit, the real owner may remain in possession and defend his possession if attacked by others including the benamidar. It is open to him to lease the properties and to sue the lessee for the recovery of them. In the latter case, the lessee would not be allowed to set up the title of the benamidar and if any 3rd party has been allowed by him to enter on the property, he would be in the same position as the lessee under whom he entered.

So considered, the present suit is sustainable.

Per Raman Tampi, J.—Section 314 cannot apply to the case of a purchase made by any one in a representative capacity. For, in the nature of things, judicial persons who are capable of acquiring property cannot make purchases except through agents or representatives, and it is not to be supposed that the Legislature intended to exclude them altogether from the category of purchasers in execution of decrees. By parity of reasoning, where the Karanavan of a Tarwad or the Kartha of a Mitakshara family becomes a certified purchaser, it is open to the Tarwad or family, as the case may be, to claim the property so purchased, despite the fact that the auction-purchaser's name alone is mentioned in the certificate of sale.

This view has been elaborated and its application extended to cases where a junior member claims a share of properties which were found to have been purchased benami by a stranger on behalf of such member's family with money supplied to the certified purchaser for that purpose.

Adopting this principle, the 1st defendant's objection to the maintainability of this suit must be repelled.

In this case, the 1st defendant is not a mere benamidar purchaser. He was benamidar when he took the debt-bond, when he sued on it and obtained a decree and when he subsequently executed it. Till that stage, he was bound in law to account for the money which was the plaintiffs'. In execution, it was open to him to realise the money otherwise than by purchasing the property. Had he so realised the decree debt, the plaintiffs would undoubtedly have been entitled to demand it from him.

If as a certified purchaser the 1st defendant can rely on Section 314, his liability as benamidar decree-holder still remains unaffected and he therefore is bound to pay the plaintiffs the decree-debt, or, in other words, he must surrender the property which he purchased in execution of the decree.

So considered, Section 314 is no bar to the suit.— 14 T. L. J., 493.

9. Section 314 does not cover the case of an agent purchasing on behalf of his principal.

If the principal can ordinarily act through his agent in transactions involving important and valuable interests, and claim for

Distribution of assets.

Proceeds of execution sale to be rateably distributed among decree-holders.

59. (1) Where assets are held by a Court and more persons than one have, before the receipt of such assets, made application to the Court for the execution of decrees for the payment of money passed against the same judgment-debtor and have not obtained satisfaction thereof, the assets, after deducting the costs of realisation, shall be rateably distributed among all such persons :

Provided as follows :—

(a) Where any property is sold subject to a mortgage or charge, the mortgagee or incumbrancer shall not be entitled to share in any surplus arising from such sale ;

(b) Where any property liable to be sold in execution of a decree is subject to a mortgage or charge, the Court may, with the consent of the mortgagee or incumbrancer, order that the property be sold free from the mortgage or charge, giving to the mortgagee or incumbrancer the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold ; himself the benefit of his agent's acts without at the same time disclaiming the liabilities that he may be saddled with by reason of such acts, it does not stand to reason to say that the principal cannot purchase a property in court-sale through his agent. "If the plaintiff does not seek relief merely on the ground that the certified purchaser was a name-lender but relied upon a certain state of facts as establishing certain kinds of legal relations between himself and the certified purchaser which entitles him to rely on those relations as involving and creating effectual legal claims in favour of the plaintiff over the property purchased, he could rely on such facts and circumstances in support of his legal claims."—

---

Sec. 59 [= S. 292 = S. 73]

I. The corresponding Section in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"292. Proceeds of execution-sale to be divided rateably among decree-holders.—Whenever assets are realised by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree and more persons than one have, prior to the realisation, applied to the Court by which such assets are held for execution of decrees for money against the same judgment debtor, and have not obtained satisfaction

(c) Where any immovable property is sold in execution of a decree ordering its sale for the discharge of an incumbrance thereon, the proceeds of sale shall be applied—

first, in defraying the expenses of the sale;

secondly, in discharging the amount due under the decree;

thirdly, in discharging the interest and principal monies due on subsequent incumbrances (if any); and,

fourthly, rateably among the holders of decrees for the payment of money against the judgment-debtor, who have, prior to the sale of the property, applied to the Court, which passed the decree ordering such sale, for execution of such decrees, and have not obtained satisfaction thereof.

(2) Where all or any of the assets liable to be rateably distributed under this Section are paid to a person not entitled to receive the same, any person so entitled may sue such person to compel him to refund the assets.

(3) Nothing in this Section affects any right of Our Government.

thereof, the assets, after deducting the costs of realisation, shall be divided rateably among all such persons:

Provided as follows:—

(a) when any property is sold subject to a mortgage or charge, the mortgagee or incumbrancer shall not as such be entitled to share in any surplus arising from such sale:

(b) when any property liable to be sold in execution of a decree is subject to a mortgage or charge, the Court may, with the assent of the mortgagee or incumbrancer, order that the property be sold free from the mortgage or charge, giving to the mortgagee or incumbrancer the same right against the proceeds of the sale as he had against the property sold;

(c) when immovable property is sold in execution of a decree ordering its sale for the discharge of an incumbrance thereon, the proceeds of the sale shall be applied—

first, in defraying the expenses of the sale;

secondly, in discharging the interest and principal money due on the incumbrance; thirdly, in discharging the interest and principal moneys due on subsequent incumbrances (if any): and fourthly, rateably among the holders of decrees for money against the judgment-debtor, who have, prior to the sale of the said property, applied to the Court which made the decree ordering such sale for execution of such decrees, and have not obtained satisfaction thereof.

If all or any of such assets be paid to a person not entitled to receive the same, any person so entitled may sue such person to compel him to refund the assets.

Nothing in this Section affects any right of the Government."

II. 1. "The object of the Section is to expedite and cheapen the execution of decrees against the same person by adjusting the claims of rival decree-holders without the necessity for separate proceedings." (Statement of Objects and Reasons, 1901 amending Bill).— India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

2. "The object of the Section is two-fold. The first object is to prevent unnecessary multiplicity of execution proceedings, to obviate, in a case where there are many decree-holders, each competent to execute his decree by attachment and sale of a particular property, the necessity of each and every one separately attaching and separately selling that property. The other object is to secure an equitable administration of the property by placing all the decree-holders upon the same footing and making the property rateably divisible among them instead of allowing one to exclude all the others merely because he happened to be the first who had attached and sold the property."— I. L. R., 23 All. 106.

Case Law.

1. A prior sale in execution of a decree must prevail against a subsequent one ; and although there may be several attachments on a property, the sale in pursuance of any one of them puts an end to all the attachments, and the sale proceeds which occupy the place held by the property before sale are distributed among the several attaching creditors according to their priorities.— 8 T. L. R., 119.

2. No appeal lies against an order rejecting the claim of one of several creditors to share in the distribution of assets realized in execution of a decree. The remedy is by a suit.— 9 T. L. R. App., 45.

3. The plaintiff being the first attaching creditor, he was, under the law in force at the date of sale, entitled to be paid first. (F B.).— 11 T. L. R., 13.

4. The term "decree-holder" in Section 308 of the Civil Procedure Code [ = Or. XXI, r. 87] is not limited to the decree-holder who instituted the execution proceedings and took out the process for sale, but may include a decree-holder who is entitled to come in and share in the sale proceeds under Section 292 of the Code.— 14 T. L. R. App., 37.

5. For the purposes of Section 292, assets can be said to be realised only when the whole amount of the sale proceeds is paid into Court.

An application for rateable distribution made to a Court, having at the time no jurisdiction to entertain such application, must be deemed to be one renewed from day to day till it is finally disposed of ; and if before finally disposing of the application, the Court acquires jurisdiction in the matter it can treat the application as valid, and order rateable distribution in compliance with its terms.

The counter-petitioner's application was no doubt presented to a Court that had no jurisdiction at the time of presentation. The Munsiff could have rejected or returned it on the ground of want of jurisdiction. But it was retained on the Munsiff's file.— 2 T. L. J., 97.

6. Assets are realised within the meaning of Section 292 when the proceeds of the sale of movable property are paid by the auction-purchasers to the Amin who conducts the sale, even though the Amin pays them into Court only on a subsequent date. Payment to an Officer of the Court is tantamount to a realisation by Court.

An application for rateable distribution made to a Court having at the time no jurisdiction to entertain the same and pending on its file must be deemed to be renewed from day to day until finally disposed of; and if before its final disposal, the Court acquires jurisdiction in the matter, the application can be treated as having been validly made and rateable distribution ordered in compliance therewith.

An attachment before judgment is not a substitute for an execution application. "It is impossible without specific language justifying it to create a fiction that an attachment before judgment is equivalent to an application for execution of a decree. Section 490 [which corresponds to Section 469 of the Travancore Code—Or. XXXVI, r. 11] which gives validity and effect to the attachment before judgment even after decree for certain purposes does not give rise to the implication that the attachment was made on constructive application for execution of a decree that had not been passed. There is no magic in the word "re-attach" to be found in Section 490. The attachment before judgment is a fact. It does not die with the decree, and all that the Section provides is that when there is a subsisting attachment it is unnecessary to make a second attachment. The Section does not make the application to execute the decree a second application to execute it, because it says re-attachment is unnecessary. The right to rateable distribution is conferred upon every decree-holder who has applied for execution whether the relief claimed by him is the arrest of the judgment-debtor or the attachment and sale of any property or the sale of property already attached before judgment. The subsisting attachment before judgment has its use in invalidating alienations by the judgment-debtor and dispensing with the need of a further attachment before sale without necessitating the fiction after a decree is passed that there was a pre-existing application for execution. We must therefore regard Section 490 as in no way giving countenance to the view that an attachment before judgment presupposes an application for execution." (8 M. L. T. 226).

The amount which the petitioners had spent in bringing the attached property to Court must be deducted from the sale proceeds and paid to him, and the balance only should be distributed rateably.—

7. Per Krishnan Nair, C. J.—No revision lies under Section 568, C. P. C. [new Section 89], where another remedy is provided for in law; and a remedy by way of a suit being provided for in the case of orders under Section 292, no revision lies against such orders.

Where an order of a subordinate Court is declared by the law to be final or conclusive, though in its nature provisional, as subject to displacement by the decree in a separate suit, no revision lies against such orders. The same principle applies to orders under Section 292, which also provides for a remedy by a fresh suit to the aggrieved party, though the word "final" or "conclusive" is not used in the Section.

Per Muttunayagom Pillai, J.—If in passing orders under Section 292, a lower Court has refused to exercise the jurisdiction vested in it by law or, has committed any irregularity in procedure which has produced error or defect in the decision of the case on the merits, it is competent to this Court to interfere with the orders in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction; but it will not interfere, merely because the decision of the Court below is erroneous in law or on the merits, as such errors are best remedied by a separate suit.—

8. In pursuance of an attachment made in execution of a decree obtained by A in the Padmanabhapuram Munsiff's Court, some immovable property was sold by the Munsiff and purchased by the decree-holder. B, a decree-holder in the District Court of Nagercoil had attached the self-same property in execution of his decree. On learning of the sale proceedings in the Munsiff's Court, B petitioned the Munsiff to stay confirmation of the sale till further orders were obtained by him from the District Court.

Held.—Inasmuch as B was not entitled to come in and share in the rateable distribution of assets under Section 292, Civil Procedure Code, he was not the "decree-holder" within the meaning of Section 308 [=Or. XXI, r. 87] of the Code, nor was he a 'person whose immovable property has been sold' and he had, therefore, no locus standi to make an application under that Section.— 28 T. L. R., 143 (=3 T. L. J., 110).

9. The plaintiff and the defendant had each of them obtained a decree against one M, and placed an attachment on M's properties in execution of their decrees. On sale, the plaintiff's application for a rateable share in the assets realised by sale was rejected, and the whole of the money was received by the defendant. On plaintiff's suing for a share, the defendant contended, inter alia, that the suit was barred by limitation as it was brought more than a year after the application was rejected, and that the plaintiff's application for execution not having been pending at the time of realisation of assets, he was not entitled to demand rateable distribution.

Held (Overruling the contention).—(1) The suit was governed by Article 47 [= Article 50] of the Limitation Regulation, and not by Article 9 [= Article 10] or Article 7 [= Article 8]. The suit was not barred.

(2) The application for execution having been for attachment of properties and for rateable distribution, the striking off of the application was a ministerial, and not a judicial act. It must therefore be regarded as pending on the date of realisation of assets.— 3 T. L. J., 260.

10. No appeal lies from an order passed under Section 292, C. P. C.

The object of the Legislature in introducing Section 292 into the Code is manifestly to place all judgment-creditors on the same footing in the administration by the Court of their debtor's estate, provided that they had taken the precaution of invoking the aid of the Court by applying for execution of their decrees in any of the modes prescribed by the Code.

To satisfy the terms of Section 292, there need not necessarily have been an attachment of the judgment-debtor's property prior to the realisation of assets. It is enough if a decree-holder has applied to the Court for the execution of his decree for money against the judgment-debtor as provided in the Section.

Obiter.—If, in passing the order under Section 292, the lower Court refused to exercise jurisdiction vested in it by law or has committed any irregularity in procedure which has led to its passing a wrong order it is competent to the High Court to interfere with such order in revision.— 31 T. L. R., 94.

11. A decree which directs the sale of the hypothecated properties in default of payment of money is a decree for money, whether there is in it a direction to pay personally or not.— 33 T. L. R., 197 (=7 T. L. J., 367).

12. If A holds a decree against two persons X and Y and B holds a decree against one of them X, in so far as the decrees are both decrees against X, they are decrees against the same judgment-debtor, under Section 292.

If the claims of the rival attaching creditors be complicated and cannot be resolved by a summary enquiry and the necessary materials to establish the relative positions of those creditors be absent, the Court can direct the rival decree-holders to establish their respective rights to the amount in Court by instituting suits.

Section 292 relates to procedure only and it does not interfere with substantive rights or the maintenance of a suit, notwithstanding that a party may not have availed himself of its facilities.

The general rule is that the attaching creditors are entitled to receive the money in execution proceedings upon an equitable administration of the property as laid down in Section 292. This Section is a provision for expediting and cheapening the execution of decrees by adjusting the claims of rival decree-holders without the necessity for separate proceedings.

No appeal lies from an order by which the rival decree-holders are directed to establish their rights by suits. In the case, the appeal petition was treated as a civil revision petition.— 10 T. L. J., 275.

13. While the creditors of a firm have a prior claim on the partnership estate, they may come upon the separate property in competition with the separate creditors for payment pari passu of so much of the partnership debt as the partnership estate is insufficient to satisfy.—37 T L. R., 178
(=11 T. L. J., 78**).

14. When money in the custody of a Court is attached, and the attaching Court and the custody Court are the same, the amount can be held to be realised in execution only when there has been an order by the Court for transfer of the money to the credit of the attaching creditor's suit. Where there is no such realisation and where the rival decree-holders apply to the Court for execution of their respective decrees, Section 292 applies.

An order passed in a dispute between rival decree-holders cannot be treated as one falling under Section 238 [new Section 40], and no appeal therefore lies against the order at the instance of either decree-holder.— 37 T. L. R., 305
(= 11 T. L. J., 343**).

Ref.—15 T. L. J., 312.

15. The "date of realisation" is not the date of the confirmation of sale, but the date when the auction amount is fully paid into Court.— 13 T. L. J., 438.

16. For claiming rateable distribution by a decree-holder, his execution petition need not have been pending at the time of the realisation of the assets, if the conditions specifically mentioned in Section 292 had all been satisfied by him.

The conditions a decree-holder should fulfil before he could claim rateable distribution are :—"(a) The decree-holder should have applied for execution of the decree to the Court which holds the assets realised. (b) Such application should have been made prior to the realisation of the assets. (c) The assets must have been realised by sale or otherwise in execution of the decree. (d) The attaching creditors as well as the decree-holder claiming to participate in the assets should be holders of decrees for payment of money. (e) Such decrees should have been obtained against the same judgment-debtor." (11 C. L. J., 69).—

17. The executing Court has no power to enter into and adjudicate on the question of the bona fides of the different decrees in which applications have been made for rateable distribution.

There is no absolute rule that the High Court cannot, under any circumstances, interfere with orders passed under Section 292. Such orders are revisable where the lower Court has exercised or refused to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it by law or has committed any irregularity in procedure which has produced error or defect in the decision of the case on the merits (F. B.).— 42 T. L. R., 22
(= 17 T. L. J., 566**).

Resistance to execution.

Resistance to execution.

60. Where the Court is satisfied that the holder of a decree for the possession of immovable property or that the purchaser of immovable property sold in execution of a decree has been resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession of the property by the judgment-debtor or some person on his behalf and that such resistance or obstruction was without any just cause, the Court may, at the instance of the decree-holder or purchaser, order the judgment-debtor or such other person to be detained in the civil prison for a term which may extend to thirty days and may further direct that the decree-holder or purchaser be put into possession of the property.

I. The corresponding Sections of Regulation II of 1065 were as follow :—

"318. Procedure in case of obstruction by judgment-debtor or at his instigation.—If the Court is satisfied that the obstruction or resistance was occasioned by the judgment-debtor or by some person at his instigation, the Court shall inquire into the matter of the complaint and pass such order as it thinks fit."

"319. Procedure when obstruction continues.—If the Court is satisfied that the resistance or obstruction was without any just cause, and that the complainant is still resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession of the property by the judgment-debtor or some other person at his instigation, the Court may, at the instance of the decree-holder and without prejudice to any penalty to which such judgment-debtor or other person may be liable under the Penal Code or any other law for such resistance or obstruction, commit the judgment-debtor or such other person to jail for a term which may extend to thirty days, and direct that the decree-holder be put into possession of the property."

X who obtained a decree against Y was resisted by T and B in its execution for delivery of property. X moved the Court under Section 317, Civil Procedure Code, [=Or. brought a regular suit to set aside that order and that too was dismissed by the District Munsiff on the ground that his remedy was by appeal and not by a fresh suit. B then on that very date filed a suit for the cancellation of the decree obtained by X as well as the claim order passed in his favour. The Munsiff dismissed the suit as in his opinion it was not maintainable, but the District Judge on appeal took a contrary view and remanded the case to be tried de novo.

Held.—The District Judge was right, as it was under Section 319 and not under Section 320 [=Or. XXI, r. 96], that the Munsiff dealt with and decided the original application of X regarding the resistance and as B was really no party to the proceedings taken on that application.—

2. The execution Court is under the express provisions of the Civil Procedure Code empowered either to determine the claim of an objector under Section 320 [= Or. XXI, r. 96] or dismiss it under certain circumstances without an investigation on the merits (Section 319), and whenever the Court has proceeded under Section 319, the claimant is entitled to have his remedy secured by an appeal against the order of dismissal or to have his claim of right or title judicially determined by means of a regular suit.— 18 T. L. R., 17.

3. A was obstructed in obtaining delivery by T who is the judgment-debtor's brother. The lower Courts rejected the petition of T on the ground that the obstruction was made at the instigation of the judgment-debtor.

Held.—No appeal lay against an order passed under Section 318 rejecting the petition of T on the ground that the obstruction was occasioned at the instigation of judgment-debtor.— 18 T. L. R., 166.

Suits by or against Government.

[Explanation.—Suits by or against the Sreepadam Palace shall be treated as suits by or against Our Government, for the purposes of this Code.]

65. No suit shall be instituted against the Dewan of Travancore, or against a public officer in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity, until the expiration of three months next after notice in writing has been, in the case of the Dewan, delivered to or left at the office of the Dewan, and in the case of a public officer, delivered to him or left at his office, stating the cause of action, the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff and the relief which he claims; and the plaint shall contain a statement that such notice has been so delivered or left.

I. Section 401 of Regulation II of 1065 had no Explanation appended to it. Regulation II of 1070 enacted the following Section:—"7. Suits, appeals and applications by or against the Sreepadom Palace shall be treated as suits, appeals and applications by or against Government." The Explanation to the new Section 64 has been inserted by Section 4 of Regulation III of 1101.

Case Law.

See Sec. 14.—5 T. L. J., 351.

---

I. Section 409 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"409. No suit shall be instituted......... in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity...stating the cause of action and the name and place of abode of the intending plaintiff...; and the plaint must contain a statement...or left.

II. The changes made are that the words "any act" have been substituted for the words "an act", and the words "by such public officer" for the words "by him." The latter is to make it clear that "the qualification in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity' does not relate to the Dewan as well as to a public officer. So, where a suit is proposed to be instituted against the Dewan, notice to him should be given in all cases, whether the act in respect of which the suit is to be brought purports to be done by him in his official capacity or not.

III. In the British Indian Code, the period of notice is two months. In Section 409 of the old Regulation, the period was three months and it is retained in the present Section 65. In substituting three months for two months in the old Section (409), the Select Committee said :—"An extension appears desirable in the interests of Government and of public officers. To arrange for the defence of suits against them necessarily involves departmental references and nothing short of three months can be considered adequate for the purpose."

Case Law.

1. Where the Court orders, during the progress of a suit that the Sirkar should be joined as a defendant, it is not competent to the Sirkar to object to its inclusion on the ground that the 3 months' notice required by Section 409 of the Civil Procedure Code has not been given.

Section 409 has no application to cases where the Court orders, during the progress of a suit, the inclusion of the Sirkar as a defendant, as a necessary party.

The suit was not instituted against the Dewan; but the Court, at the first hearing of the suit, ordered the Dewan to be made a defendant in the exercise of its discretion under Section 28 [ = Or. I, r. 10 (2) ]. Sections 409 and 28 read and construed together seem clearly to allow operation to the former, subject to the provision of the latter which gives a wide discretion to the Court. To construe otherwise would be to limit the exercise of the discretion vested in Courts by Section 28 and to render it impossible to the Sirkar to intervene as a party to any suit.— 8 T. L. R., 122.

Dist.—1 S. D., 37.
Ref.—2 S. D., 266.

2. The three months' notice prescribed by Section 409 must be given to the Sirkar only in suits instituted against the Sirkar; but where the Sirkar was added as a party under Section 28 [ = Or. I, r. 10 (2) ] of the C. P. C., no such notice is necessary.— 17 T. L. R., 168.

3. When a suit for cancellation of a Revenue sale filed in a Munsiff's Court was returned for presentation to the District Court (on the ground that the Sirkar was a necessary party) without making the Sirkar a necessary party and when the same was filed making the Sirkar also as a party and without notice to the Sirkar under Section 409 C. P. C. :

Held.—(1) The suit is not maintainable. Section 409 has no application only where the Court in the exercise of its powers under Section 28, C. P. C., [ = Or. I, r. 10 (2) ] adds the Government as a party.

(2) The Munsiff should have made the Sirkar a party and then returned the plaint, since the element which takes away his jurisdiction is the existence of the Sirkar as a party. Until the Sirkar is put on the record as a party, the Munsiff has jurisdiction, and hence, he should have, before returning the plaint, formally made the Sirkar a defendant.

The act of the plaintiff who did not only not appeal against the Munsiff's order returning the plaint for want of jurisdiction, but submitted to it and presented the plaint with the Sirkar added as first defendant amounted to his institution of the suit, and consequently Section 409 did apply.—

1 S. D., 37.

4. When under the Court's order the Sirkar was added as a party, no notice to the Sirkar is necessary.— 1 S. D., 270.

5. The Sirkar is not entitled to the two months' notice prescribed by Section 409, when it has been added as a party at the instance of the Court, the Section being applicable only to original suits instituted against Government.— 1 S. D., 273.

6. Suit against the Sirkar to raise a revenue attachment placed on plaint properties. The notice issued by plaintiff to the Sirkar under Section 409, Civil Procedure Code, insisted upon the latter releasing the properties from attachment and declared that if the demand was not complied with, a suit against the Sirkar would follow. The lower Court holding that the notice was a conditional one rejected the plaint.

Held.—The notice was sufficiently explicit and it fulfilled the requirements of Section 409.— 28 T. L. R., 236
(=3 T. L. J., 204).

7. Certain moneys (Rs. 8,000 odd) in the possession of 3rd plaintiff was seized by Government as belonging to one V. D. from whom arrears of revenue were due on account of an Abkari farm. Out of the said amount, 3rd plaintiff claimed Rs. 2,000 as belonging to him, and 2nd plaintiff Rs. 6,000 as belonging to her and her mother, 1st plaintiff. The Tahsildar on investigation found Rs. 2,000 belonged to 3rd plaintiff, and released the attachment in respect of that amount. Third plaintiff then gave notice to Sirkar through his Vakil, under Section 409, C. P. C., claiming the whole amount, Rs. 8,000 odd, as his. The suit was then instituted by the three plaintiffs alleging that the amount belonged to 1st and 2nd plaintiffs. The defendant, Sirkar, contended that the suit was bad for want of notice under Section 409, C. P. C., in regard to the claim of plaintiffs 1 and 2. Plaintiffs relied on the notice given by 3rd plaintiff as sufficient for the maintainability of the suit.

Held.—Section 409 required that the notice should contain the name and place of abode of the intending plaintiff and the relief claimed, and as in the case neither the name and place of abode of plaintiffs 1 and 2, nor the relief they claimed as against the Sirkar was mentioned in the notice by 3rd plaintiff, and as such notice was sent only on his behalf, it was not a notice which complied with the provisions of Section 409. The suit was therefore bad for want of notice.

"The object of sending a notice under Section 409 already referred to, namely, that of enabling the Dewan to settle, if he thinks it necessary to do so, the disputed claim with the intending plaintiffs, will be completely frustrated, if it be maintained that a notice which does not contain their names and places of abode is sufficient. The Dewan cannot very well be expected to speculate or ascertain by enquiry who the possible plaintiffs might be. Having regard to the express provisions of Section 409, we cannot hold that the notice which was given on behalf of the 3rd plaintiff alone, fulfils the requirements of the statute, so as to enable the 1st and 2nd plaintiffs to maintain this suit."

[The word "shall" in the Section evidently indicates that the direction contained in the Section is mandatory, rendering the giving of notice a condition precedent to the institution of the suit] (F. B.).—

8. As in the notice issued to the Dewan by the plaintiff under Section 409, no reference was made to the relief regarding the repayment of the money levied, the notice was defective. The plaintiff was, therefore, not entitled to seek that relief in the suit.— 29 T. L. R., 325.

9. The three requisites for a valid notice according to Section 409 are :—

(1) Cause of action, (2) name and residence, and (3) relief sought.

The object of the notice required by Section 409 is to give the defendant an opportunity of settling the claim, if so advised without litigation. A notice is sufficient if it substantially fulfils its object in informing the parties concerned generally of the nature of the suit intended to be filed. In a matter like this, what the Court has to ascertain is whether the object of the Legislature has been substantially and effectively carried out.

Where the plaintiff demanded in his notice a certain amount as compensation, but in the plaint claimed declaration of title and recovery of possession of property, or in the alternative a lesser amount as compensation :

Held.—There was valid notice as regards compensation, but not as regards declaration of title and recovery of possession (F. B.).— 10 T. L. J., 60.

10. A suit was instituted against the Dewan of Travancore for setting aside the decision of the special officer appointed under the old Boundary Regulation (Regulation III of 1058) for settling certain disputes that arose between the plaintiff and the Sirkar. It was dismissed for want of notice to the Dewan of Travancore under Section 409 C. P. C. On appeal :

Held (Per Cheriyan and Sesha Aiyar, JJ.)—Plaintiff's failure to issue the notice was not fatal to the entertainment of the suit, because it would be impossible for the plaintiff to give the requisite notice of three months under Section 409 C. P. C. and bring the suit within two months from the date of the decision of the special officer, as required by Section 26 of the Boundary Regulation.

In order to take the case out of the rule requiring the issue of notice, it must be shown that, humanly speaking, it was impossible for the plaintiff to give a notice and comply with the provisions of the law as required in the Civil Procedure Code and then to launch his suit.

There is another way of looking at the question. The Boundary Regulation is a special enactment, complete in itself so far as it goes, and enacted for the decision of certain classes of disputes in an expeditious manner. Therefore, the Legislature cannot be presumed to have intended that Section 26 of the Boundary Regulation should be controlled by Section 409 of the C. P. C. In a sense the appeal by means of a regular suit as contemplated by Section 26 of the Boundary Regulation is only a continuation of the enquiry before the special officer.

Per Palpu Pillai, J.—The matter is governed entirely by Section 26 of the Boundary Regulation which treats a suit of this kind as an appeal to the Civil Court from the decision of the Settlement officer and requires it to be filed within two months from the date thereof and therefore the provisions of Section 409 C. P. C. cannot apply (F. B.).— 37 T. L. R., 1

11. The suit was instituted by the plaintiff against the Sirkar for the recovery of Fs. 8697 and odd as damages for the defendant's wrongful refusal to issue a pass for transport of certain timber felled by him from certain lands belonging to him. The notice given to the Sirkar under Section

409, C. P. C., contained a statement of the cause of action on which the suit was based. Paragraph 2 of the notice referred to the inaction of the Forest Department in not examining the timber felled by the plaintiff and issuing a pass therefor. It also stated that the plaintiff had already sustained thereby a loss of over Rs. 150 and stood to lose a further sum of Rs. 1000 in future. In paragraph 4 of the notice, it was also stated that a pass should be issued to him at once so as to save him from further loss. Failing these, the plaintiff prayed that he may be given sanction to file a suit against the Sirkar for 'these reliefs.'

The defendant contended, among other things, that no proper notice of suit had been given under Section 409, C. P. C.

Held.—The object of a notice under Section 409, C. P. C., has been held to be to give the Government an opportunity of investigating the alleged cause of complaint and making amends if it thinks fit.

As regards the form of the notice, it would be sufficient if it substantially fulfils its object of informing the party concerned generally of the nature of the suit to be filed. "All that is required is, that it shall be sufficiently clear and explicit to show the ground of complaint, the cause of action. That must not be left in doubt or framed so as to mislead."

Judged by these principles, the notice given in the case is a sufficient compliance with the requisites of Section 409, C. P. C. The words "these reliefs" in the notice are wide enough to embrace the relief for damages claimed in the suit. The prayer for sanction is only an euphemistic form of expression intimating that, in the event of non-compliance with the notice a suit would be filed.— 41 T. L. R., 232 (= 15 T. L. J., 237).

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 541.

12. The provisions of Section 65 are imperative in their nature, the object thereof being to allow the Sirkar, if so advised, to settle the claim without litigation. When objection is taken to the sufficiency or absence of notice, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to make out that the provisions of this Section have been substantially complied with. The insistence of a specific statement that a notice, as referred to above, has been issued under the Section itself would strongly support the above view.— 44 T. L. R., 32 (= 18 T. L. J., 471).

13. The object of a notice under Section 48 of the Municipal Regulation and Section 65 of the C. P. C. of 1100 is to enable the defendant concerned to enquire into the complaint and make amends if considered proper. A provision made with this object cannot avail the other parties to the suit, nor can its aid be invoked by them in cases where the party for whose benefit it is intended does not come forward, or expressly waives it, or conducts himself in such a way as to estop him from putting it forward as a defence.

As regards the right of ordinary Civil Courts of the land to deal with matters where special tribunals have been constituted to deal with them, the rule seems to be that where a discretion which has to be exercised by such tribunals in the disposal of such matters has, as a matter of fact, been exercised by them, the Civil Courts cannot interfere with the same. They cannot substitute their own judgments for those of the tribunal. The ordinary Civil Courts cannot constitute themselves appellate authorities over such tribunals, nor is interference permissible by way of review. Even in cases where the statute makes it imperative on the part of the special tribunal to set forth the reasons for its decision, the above courses cannot be adopted. The circumstance that the ordinary rules of procedure laid down with respect to Civil Courts have not been adopted by the special tribunal will not also justify an interference.

If, however, the tribunal in question refused to exercise the jurisdiction vested in it under the statute or where the express rules of procedure laid down in the statute have not been followed, or where it has not been acting in good faith and listened to both sides, its decision may be considered to be no legal adjudication at all, and consequently Civil Courts can properly take cognizance of such matters.

A reading of the rules under the Municipal Regulation as a whole would indicate that a finality was intended to be attached to the decisions of the Revising Authority. In the matter of the interpretation of the Rules, the powers of the Revising Authority are unfettered. It is not for the Civil Court to decide whether interpretation of a particular rule by the Revising Authority is right or wrong. Even if it is erroneous, the Civil Courts have no jurisdiction to interfere with it.—44 T. L. R., 465 (=18 T. L. J., 1296).

14. The notice of three months which a plaintiff has to give under Section 65 before instituting any suit against the Dewan of Travancore is a notice within the meaning of Section 15, Sub-section (2), of the Limitation Regulation.— 19 T. L. J., 201.

15. It is sufficient if the notice under Section 409 substantially fulfils its object of informing the party concerned generally of the nature of the suit intended to be filed.

The provision is restrictive of the ordinary common law right of the subject, and, as such, in cases of doubt, should be liberally construed in favour of the subject.— 19 T. L. J., 541.

16. Under Section 14 of the Limitation Regulation, in computing the period of limitation for a suit to recover money due under a periodically recurring right, the period of pendency of a suit for the same relief, dismissed for want of notice to Government under Section 409, C. P. C., has to be excluded.— 45 T. L. R., 103.

In regard to the British Indian Code, Section 81 (which is reproduced as Section 66 of the new Regulation), the Indian Special Committee say in their Notes on Clauses :—"The Committee think that the same measure of protection should be afforded to the defendant where Government undertakes the defence as where the Government makes no application for the purpose, and it appears to the Committee that the proper protection should be that the defendant should be exempt from mesne arrest and his property from mesne attachment."

I. These two Sections were inserted by Section 5 of Regulation III of 1101.

67. (1) Where the decree is against the Dewan of Travancore or against a public officer in respect of any such act as aforesaid, a time shall be specified in the decree within which it shall be satisfied; and if the decree is not satisfied within the time so specified, the Court shall report the case for the orders of Our Government.

II. Section 66-A re-enacts the provisions of the Proclamation issued under date the 1st Mithunam 1088/14th June 1913, which ran as follows :—

"Whereas it is expedient to define how the Government of His Majesty the King Emperor of India should sue and be sued in the Courts of Travancore ; We are hereby pleased to enact that the said Government shall sue, and be sued in Travancore, in the name of the Secretary of State for India in Council, and that all pleadings, signed or verified, and all appearances, applications and acts, in any such suits, made or done by any officer or officers, empowered in that behalf with respect to similar suits in the Courts of British India, shall be deemed valid ; and We are further pleased to enact that all such pleadings, appearances, applications and acts, made in the Courts of Travancore prior to the date hereof, shall have the same effect as if this Proclamation was in force at that time."

III. (1) Section 66-B corresponds to Section 6 of Regulation II of 1070, which was as follows :—

"8. The Ruler of any Native State under the suzerainty of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress of India may sue and shall be sued in Our Courts, in the name of his Minister or other Officer, provided that such Minister or other Officer has been recognized by a Notification of Our Government published in Our Government Gazette as the representative of such Ruler.

The recognition made by the aforesaid Notification may have a retrospective effect from such date as may be mentioned in such Notification.

Our Government may, by like Notification, cancel any Notification made under the last two paragraphs of this Section, but not so as to invalidate any proceedings held previous to such cancellation."

In regard to the above Section, it was observed as follows in the Statement of Objects and Reasons :—"4. It being necessary to remove the doubts felt as to the legality, under the present Code of Civil Procedure, of the institution and defence by the Dewan of Cochin, of the suits relating to the property of the Cochin Sirkar, situated in Travancore, Section 5 is drafted on the lines of Section 434 of the British Code as it now stands."

(2) Section 434 of the Indian Code of 1882, referred to above, corresponds to Section 87 of the present Indian Code which is as follows :—

"87. A Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief may sue and shall be sued in the name of his State :

Provided that in giving the consent referred to in the foregoing Section the Governor-General in Council or the Local Government, as the case may be, may direct that any such Prince or Chief shall be sued in the name of an agent or in any other name."

Such decrees to be executed only on immovable property.

67-B. Subject to the provisions of Section 67-A, such decree as is mentioned in that Section shall be executed only against the immovable property, if any, of such Government or Prince situate within Travancore.]

Interpleader.

Where interpleader-suit may be instituted.

68. Where two or more persons claim adversely to one another the same debt, sum of money or other property, movable or immovable, from another person, who claims no interest therein other than for charges or costs and who is ready to pay or deliver it to the rightful claimant, such other person may institute a suit of interpleader against all the claimants for the purpose of obtaining a decision as to the person to whom the payment or delivery shall be made and of obtaining indemnity for himself :

Provided that where any suit is pending in which the rights of all parties can properly be decided, no such suit of interpleader shall be instituted.

Secs. 67-A & 67-B.

I. These two Sections were inserted by Section 6 of Regulation III of 1101.

II. 1. The Sections correspond to Sections 9 and 10 of Regulation II of 1070, which were as follow :-

"9. No decree passed against the Ruler of a Native State under the suzerainty of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress of India or against his Minister or Officer in the representative capacity of such Minister or Officer, shall be executed without the previous sanction of Our Government.

"10. Subject to the provisions of Section 9 of this Regulation, the decree passed against the Ruler of a Native State under the suzerainty of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress of India or against his Minister or Officer in the representative capacity of such Minister or Officer shall be executed only on the immovable property of such Ruler situated in Travancore."

In the Statement of Objects and Reasons, it was stated that these Sections, "based on Clause 3 of Section 433 of the British Indian Code, not only guard against hasty execution of decrees which may happen to be adverse to foreign States, but also facilitate the recovery of sums due by means of correspondence between the Ministers of Travancore and of the foreign States concerned, without resort to coercive measures which, for obvious reasons, ought to be avoided."

2. Section 433 of the Indian Code of 1882 referred to above corresponds to 86 of the present Indian Code, and Clause (3) of the latter runs as follows:—"(3) No such Prince, Chief, Ambassador or Envoy shall be arrested under this Code, and, except with the consent of the Governor-General in Council certified as aforesaid, no decree shall be executed against the property of any such Prince, Chief, Ambassador or Envoy."

Sec. 68 [ = S. 449 = S. 88 = En. Or. 57, rr. 1-2 ]

I. The corresponding Section in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"449. When interpleader suit may be instituted.—When two or more persons claim adversely to one another the same payment or property from another person, whose only interest therein is that of a mere stakeholder, and who is ready to render it to the right owner, such stakeholder may institute a suit of interpleader against all the claimants for the purpose of obtaining a decision as to whom the payment or property should be made or delivered and, of obtaining indemnity for himself:

Provided that, if any suit is pending in which the rights of all parties can properly be decided, the stakeholder shall not institute a suit of interpleader."

II. "In defining the scope of this provision, we have referred to debts and sums of money and other movable property as an indication of the ordinary cases arising under Order LVII, rule 1. At the same time, we find that the procedure here provided has been adopted with great benefit in relation to immovable property held by the Court of Wards in the character of a stakeholder. We accordingly propose to render it clear that the provision is not confined, as has often been supposed, to movable property only." (Indian Select Committee on the 1901 Bill).— India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

III. See Order XXXIV, Infra.

IV. Rules 1 and 2 of Order LVII of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, as amended, are as follow:—

"1. In what cases relief granted.—Relief by way of interpleader may be granted,—

(a) Where a person seeking relief (in this Order called the applicant) is under liability for any debt, money, goods, or chattels, for or in respect of which he is, or expects to be, sued by two or more parties (in this Order called the claimants) making adverse claims thereto:

(b) Where the applicant is a sheriff or other officer charged with the execution of process by or under the authority of the High Court and claim is made to any money, goods or chattels taken or intended to be taken in execution under any process, or to the proceeds or value of any such goods or chattels by any person other than the person against whom the process is issued.

"2. Court to be satisfied on certain points.—The applicant must satisfy the Court or a Judge by affidavit or otherwise—

(a) That the applicant claims no interest in the subject-matter in dispute, other than for charges or costs; and

(b) That the applicant does not collude with any of the claimants; and

(c) That the applicant, except where he is a sheriff or other officer charged with the execution of process by or under the authority of the High Court, who has seized goods and who has withdrawn from possession in consequence of the execution creditor admitting the claim of the claimant under

Case Law.

One B. P., who was an accountant under the Sirkar till his death, had deposited 1400 fs. with the latter as security for his office. On his death, the amount of the deposit was claimed by the first defendant as assignee from B. P.'s Karanavan, and by the second and third defendants as members of B. P.'s Tarwad. The Sirkar instituted an interpleader suit depositing into Court a sum of Rs. 414 and odd only. The plaint alleged that the balance of B. P.'s deposit was due to the Sirkar on account of the deceased's liabilities, and that the 1st defendant on the one hand and defendants 2 and 3 on the other claimed the amount due to the deceased adversely to each other. The defendants, while setting up a rival claim to the deposit, contended that the amount tendered by the Sirkar was not the correct amount and that the interpleader suit was not sustainable.

Held.—The suit was clearly not sustainable as an interpleader suit, as the position of the Sirkar, far from being that of a mere stake-holder, was that of one who had an interest in the subject-matter of the suit to the extent of B. P.'s liabilities, and as the language of the Sections 449 to 452 of the Civil Procedure Code [see Or. XXXIV, rr. 1, 2 and 4] showed that the plaintiff was bound to bring into Court "the thing claimed" by the adverse claimants and not what the plaintiff considered was the amount that might be justly found due to them. *

If there was no dispute between the contending claimants on the one hand and the plaintiff depository on the other, in regard to the amount of B. P.'s liabilities, then it may undoubtedly be said that, with respect to any balance that may remain out of the deposit amount, the Sirkar occupied the position of a mere stake-holder.

"The meaning of interpleader is that the holder of a fund which is claimed by different individuals should not be exposed to harassing litigation; he himself claiming no interest in the fund, and the other persons claiming it not proceeding to litigation with a view to the settlement of their claims. It is so called because it is a bill by a stake-holder, who cannot get the claimants to settle the question between themselves, and who apprehending that he may be exposed to attack from one or the other of them comes to this Court to subject them to interpleader. If they were allowed to proceed against him separately, of course it would be vexatious. The first thing essential to interpleader is that the plaintiff should be a mere stake-holder, and have no interest of his own in the fund. * It is the invariable practice that when there is any question raised by the plaintiffs as to the amount, which is the subject of interpleader, such question prevents the right of interpleader."

"Interpleader is for the purpose of preventing the plaintiff from being sued by two persons at once for the same thing."—

Special Case.

Power to state case for opinion of Court.

70. Where any persons agree in writing to state a case for the opinion of the Court, then the Court shall try and determine the same in the manner prescribed.

Suits relating to Public Matters.

Public nuisances.

71. (1) In the case of a public nuisance, the Dewan or two or more persons having obtained the consent in writing of the Dewan, may institute a suit, though no special damage has been caused, for a declaration and injunction or for such other relief as may be appropriate to the circumstances of the case.

(2) Nothing in this Section shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any right of suit which may exist independently of its provisions.

Public charities.

72. In the case of any alleged breach of any express or constructive trust created for public purposes of a charitable or religious nature, or where the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for the administration of any such trust, the Dewan, or two or more persons having an interest in the trust and, having obtained the consent in writing of the Dewan, may institute a suit, whether contentious or not, in the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the trust is situate to obtain a decree—

This Section enables Government or two or more persons with their permission to maintain a suit without establishing any special grievance."—

2. See Objects and Reasons, Page 13 Supra.

II. The Indian Special Committee observed :—"We have inserted a Clause to enable actions for public nuisances to be brought, with the consent of the Advocate General, irrespective of special damage. It has been represented to us that such a power is needed and we concur in that view."

III. See Section 266 of the Penal Code for the definition of public nuisance.

(g) settling a scheme; or
(h) granting such further or other relief as the nature of the case may require.

---

Sec. 72 [= S. 511 = S. 92 (1)]

I. 1. The corresponding Section 511 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"511. When suits relating to public charities may be brought.—In case of any alleged breach of any express or constructive trust created for public, charitable or religious purposes, or whenever the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for the administration of any such trust, the Dewan acting ex officio, or two or more persons having an interest in the trust and having obtained the consent in writing of the Dewan, may institute a suit in the District Court within the local limits of whose Civil jurisdiction the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the trust is situate, to obtain a decree—

(a) appointing new trustees under the trust;

(b) vesting any property in the trustees under the trust;

(c) declaring the proportions in which its objects are entitled;

(d) authorizing the whole or any part of its property to be let, sold, mortgaged or exchanged;

(e) settling a scheme for its management; or granting such further or other relief as the nature of the case may require.

The powers conferred by this Section on the Dewan may be, with the previous sanction of the Government, exercised also by the Division Peishkar or by such officer as the Government may appoint in this behalf."

2. The above Section was inserted by the Select Committee. They said:—

"The corresponding Section in the British Code is 539. In the Bill as now introduced this was omitted for the following reason: —Its adoption would affect the numerous Pagodas and charities which are now independent of Government control. It may be viewed as a sweeping change and may create consternation in the minds of the people concerned. Cases of the kind contemplated may well be left as hitherto to be dealt with under the general provisions of the Code.

"The majority of the members of the Committee differ from this view. The High Court in the original Bill drafted by them have entered this provision and considered it expedient in the circumstances of this country. The fact that numerous Pagodas and charities exist here makes it all the more necessary that their interests should be duly looked after. The Government ought to be the proper guardian of such interests. A great deal of laxity is known to prevail for want of due and legitimate checks against abuses in this direction. It appears, therefore, necessary that the Dewan should be vested with power to sanction the institution of suits of this class."

II. The difference between this Section (72) and the corresponding British Indian Section is the addition in the latter of the words "or in any other Court empowered in that behalf by the Local Government" after the words "original jurisdiction." Thus Courts subordinate to District Courts may be invested by Government with power to try cases under this Section.

III. 1. The words "public purposes of a charitable or religious nature" have been substituted for the words "public charitable or religious purposes" "to obviate recurrence of the frequent misconception that 'public' is merely co-ordinate with 'charitable' or 'religious'." (Indian Select Committee on the 1901 Bill).— India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

2. Whether contentious or not.—"There has been considerable difference of opinion as to whether Section 539 extends to contentious proceedings. If it does not, then its efficacy is materially impaired, and it is proposed to make it clear that it does apply to contentious suits for the removal of trustees and the recovery of assets from the hands of third parties." (Statement of Objects and Reasons, 1901 amending Bill).— India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

See I. L. R., 20 Cal., 810 and 14 Mad., 186.

IV. "The real object of the special provisions of this Section seems to us to be clear. Persons interested in any trust were, if they could all join, always competent to maintain a suit against any trustee for his removal for breach of trust; but where the joining of all of them was inconvenient or impracticable, it was considered desirable that some of them might sue without joining the others, provided they obtained the consent of the Advocate-General or of the Collector of the District; and this condition was imposed to prevent an indefinite number of reckless and harassing suits being brought against trustees by different persons interested in the trust." (24 Cal., 418: 33 Cal., 789).

Case Law.

1. A, the junior Swamiar of a Matom, sued to remove B, the senior Swamiar, from the management thereof, and to set aside alienations of immovable property made by the latter in favour of C. B and C pleaded that A had no right to sue.

Held.—(1) The Matom being a Brahminical and religious Institution, questions raised in connection with its concern must be decided with reference either to the general principles of Hindu Law, or to any special usage or custom by which its affairs had been hitherto administered.

(2) B could at best be only a trustee; as such, he had no beneficial interest in the property committed to his management. He could not, therefore, encumber or dispose of it; and hence, A was competent to question the alienation made by B and to seek his removal from management.

It is entirely in the interests of religious and charitable institutions that the Law confers on any person who may have some interest, however remote, in their well-being the power of claiming redress in respect of breaches of trust. The institution is the real complainant and the nominal plaintiff is merely the human medium of communication.— 4 T. L. R., 61.

Fol.—11 T. L. R., 102.

2. The management of certain property of a Devaswom vested in the family of A and B. A, the head of the family, assigned this property without any reference to the right of the Devaswom, to R, for his maintenance under an agreement. B a junior member of the family sued to set aside the assignment and to declare the right of the Devaswom to the property.

Held.—(1) Inasmuch as A (though the senior member of the family) was not the manager of the Devaswom, he was incompetent to make the assignment.

(2) Even if A was such a manager, he would be incompetent to give away the property to C, without any obligation to contribute to the expenses of the Devaswom and A could not, therefore, alienate the property.— 5 T. L. R., 27.

3. The Sirkar has the power of interfering in the affairs of public institutions under the control of hereditary trustees, in cases of gross neglect of duty or misconduct, and of assuming the management of such institutions, without recourse to law, if that course is necessary in the interests of such institutions; but such assumption of management will not prejudice the rights of the aggrieved parties to obtain redress for wrongs suffered by them, by an appeal to the judicial tribunals in due course of law (F.B.).— 8 T. L. R., 1.

4. Suit by the representatives of one Church for recovery of another Church and its premises together with the articles used at divine worship therein. Plaintiff's claim rested on a purchase from the members of a family who are alleged to have taken a prominent part in building and endowing the Church sold.

Held.—Materials used in religious worship are, by all systems of law, "extra commercium."

A religious endowment, whether Hindu, Christian or Mahomedan, is inalienable. (F. B.)— 10 T. L. R., 12.

5. (1) A person suing in respect of, or objecting to, alienations of trust property belonging to a religious or charitable institution, must have an interest in the institution (Section 511 of the Civil Procedure Code).

(2) A Christian, though a Venpattom lessee (tenant-at-will) of a Devaswom, could not in any sense be treated as a person having an interest in a Hindu Devaswom to entitle him to impugn before a Court an alienation of property belonging to the institution, by the trustee thereof.— 11 T. L. R., 102.

Ref.—13 T. L. J., 486.

6. (1) An attachment of property forming a chartiable endowment, for satisfaction of a private decree-debt of the trustees charged on the property, was invalid.

(2) The fact that the property has been treated as the trustee's private property, cannot alter its nature and render it alienable for private purposes of the trustee.

That may be a good ground for the removal of the trustee from his office—whether he is a hereditary trustee or otherwise —at the suit of any person or community interested in the upkeep of the charity. Otherwise, trustee of a charitable institution would be permitted to be materially benefited by his own misfeasance or malfeasance and the object of the institution altogether defeated.— 11 T. L. R., 190.

Dist.—5 T. L. J., 405.

7. An Urallan of a Devaswom being incompetent, as a trustee thereof, to enter into contractual relations with the institution cannot take a permanent lease of property belonging to it.

A perpetual lease is an alienation. The fiduciary relationship existing between the institution and the Urallan does not admit of contractual relations between them, for the promisor and the promisee are virtually and legally one person, and the self-interest of the trustee would, as a rule, act prejudicially to the interests of the beneficiary.— 12 T. L. R., 33.

8. A trustee of a religious institution, unlike other trustees, may maintain a suit for the benefit of the beneficiaries without joining them as parties to the suit.

The suit for which sanction is necessary under Section 511 of the Civil Procedure Code must be one against a trustee of the institution and not against trespassers, and it must also be for one of the reliefs specified in Clauses (a) to (e) of the Section.

Where there is an unbroken course of the profession of one faith and adherence to its doctrine and ritual for many years (in this case 50) the worship according to the later profession of the congregation forms the proper object of the trust, whatever may have been the old belief and doctrines (F. B.).— 14 T. L. R., 83.

9. A family arrangement to perform a religious ceremony from the income derived from a particular property does not amount to a trust binding on strangers.— 14 T. L. R., 96.

10. Where the donor of certain properties set apart some of them for common purposes of the family and for the performance of mass for the departed souls of his family until an endowment shall be made to the Church by the purchase of separate property for the purpose for a specified sum out of the properties so set apart, and the heir of the donee alienated the same before making any such purchase as required by the donor :

Held.—As a religious trust was validly created on the properties so set apart, they were liable for the performance of the trust and therefore, their alienation was not valid even though the trust was not fully executed.— 14 T. L. R., 171.

11. Every endowment made to and registered in the name of a Devaswom is in the eye of law regarded as trust property, though no trust may be expressly declared or created by the grantor. A trust property cannot be recovered from a person unconnected with the trust, who has taken possession of it and held it in his own right, repudiating the trust for over 12 years.— 14 T. L. R., 225.

12. A District Judge granted an injunction under Section 472 of the Civil Procedure Code [ = Or. XXXVII, r. 2] in reversal of the order passed by a District Munsiff. On application for revision of the Judge's order :

Held.—As the suit in question was for declaration of a trust the purposes and object of which were not definite enough to warrant a decree for specific performance, the District Judge was wrong in granting the injunction.— 14 T. L. R. App., 23.

13. An Urallan or trustee of a temple cannot purchase property belonging to a temple.

The laws do not provide for an application being made to the Courts to sanction such alienations; and they could not be recognised when made out of Court on the general principle that a trustee cannot deal with the trust property for his own benefit. Section 511, C. P. C., does not authorise the Dewan to interfere in such a case.— 15 T. L. R., 149.

14. The right of management of a religious and charitable endowment is res extra commercium inalienable and indivisible in the absence of any power of appointment vested in the trustees by the terms of the trust or the custom and usage of the institution.

As the plaintiff sued as heir and not merely as one interested, it was unnecessary to consider the question of the bar under Section 511.— 20 T. L. R., 246.

15. The Government has a Melkoima right in all public religious and charitable institutions.— 22 T. L. R., 54.

16. A trustee does not commit a breach of trust if he borrows money from the tenant of the trust property provided the trustee does not make it a source of illicit gain to himself at the expense of the trust estate.

A trustee cannot be allowed to convert what was in fact a loan into a payment of arrears of rent.— 1 S. D., 23.

17. The management of a temple generally depends upon the terms on which it was founded or on rules framed by the founder. In the absence of any such writing or trust deed or deed of management, it depends upon the usage and practice of each particular institution.

[The suit was by the Uralan of the Devaswom to recover the keys of the treasury room from the defendants the hereditary Kysthanakars or to compel them to open the treasury room and allow plaintiff to take the money secured therein.]

The Full Bench observed : - "As the long and protracted litigation between the parties has been the cause of much ill-feeling between the parties, owing to the absence of any scheme formulated either by the founder or by the Courts in any one of the previous suits, regulating the respective duties and rights of plaintiff and defendants, and as it is desirable in the interests of the institution, that its officers and managers should exercise their duties and rights smoothly without coming in conflict with each other, we have, in the exercise of our inherent judicial powers, herein below formulated a scheme of management in regard to its temporal affairs as far as the materials before us warrant us in so doing."—

1 S. D., 44.

18. When a person entrusts property to another for the purpose of feeding 16 Brahmins every Dwadasi day, then that becomes a public charitable trust, and every person of the Brahmin community becomes interested in the due performance of the trust. Section 511, C. P. C., is only an enabling Section and therefore, a suit brought by a person having an interest in a public charitable trust can be maintained even without Government sanction. Section 511, while framed in the public interests, does not deprive persons who have in themselves the right to sue, of that right, nor is any sanction necessary in their case.—

3 S. D., 24.

19. The first plaintiff claiming as head of the Umayorubhagom Matom at Sreevaikuntam to be entitled to appoint, with the concurrence of the desciples of the Umayorubhagom Matom at Therur, suitable persons to the headship of the latter Matom which is said to be subordinate to the Sreevaikuntom Matom, sued, in conjunction with others said to be desciples of the Therur Matom and members of the Vellala and Chetty communities in Travancore and Cochin who acknowledged the head of the Therur Matom as their spiritual Guru, (1) for declaration that the first defendant was not properly appointed to the headship of the Therur Matom and was not competent to be its head, (2) for his removal in case he be found to have been properly appointed, (3) for a declaration that Therur Matom was subordinate to Sreevaikuntom Matom, and (4) for recovery from second defendant of certain properties improperly alienated by first defendant. The defendants denying the rights claimed by plaintiffs contended that the suit was bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action and for want of the Dewan's sanction under Section 511 C. P. C. The Court below upholding the preliminary contentions of the defendants dismissed the suit. On appeal by plaintiffs :

Held.—The suit was not bad for misjoinder of parties or causes of action, and even if it were so, Sections 27 and 42, C. P. C., [ = Or. I, r. 9 & Or. 2, r. 7] did not justify dismissal of the suit.

As the Code of Civil Procedure was prima facie a statute laying down procedure, and substantive right and rights of suit which may be shown to exist independently of the Code could not, in the absence of express words, be held to have been abrogated by its provisions.

Section 511 of the Code was not prohibitory or mandatory, but only cumulative and enabling and had not done away with or affected rights of suit which existed prior to its enactment.

Therefore, if individuals, either in their own right or as representing a community in a suit properly framed under Section 26 C. P. C., [ = Or. I, r. 8 ] could have sued before the passing of the Code, such right of suit was unaffected by Section 511.

The right of worshippers to sue for rectification of the maladministration of a temple existed prior to, and independent of, Section 511 of the Code.

The plaintiffs' communities had the right to maintain the suit, and were properly represented by the plaintiffs in the suit.

The community of the Vellalas and Chetties of Travancore and Cochin were sufficiently well defined to permit some of their number to sue on behalf of the rest with the consent of the Court under Section 26, C. P. C. (F. B.).—30 T. L. R., 91 (=4 T. L. J., 305).

20. When all the trustees of an Endowment are jointly liable to it, it is competent for any one of them to exclusively represent it and to enforce its rights against some of the defaulting trustees alone.

It is not necessary for the plaintiff in such suits to invest himself with a right to sue on behalf of the institution by obtaining the consent in writing of the Dewan.

No limitation applies to a suit brought by a trustee against his co-trustees to make them account for the monies they have received in the course of their management and for recovery of the trust funds found misappropriated by them. Section 10 of the Limitation Regulation (old) will apply to such suits and exempt the claim from the time limits prescribed by the Regulation. (F. B.).— 35 T. L. R., 133 (=9 T. L. J., 134).

21. Though one or two persons might have worked for the establishment of the trust, if it was established with the funds contributed by a community, the members of that community will be regarded as the founders. As such they are interested in the administration of the trust.

Negligence in the administration of the trust, keeping no proper accounts, and appropriating moneys belonging to the trust without any excuse or justification made it clear that the continuance of the trustee was a menace to the trust itself. Even a hereditary trustee is liable to be removed if his continuance in office is likely to endanger the interest of the institution.

Where no copy of the sanction under Section 511 was produced but only the notice issued to the plaintiffs by the Taluk authorities in which the said sanction was communicated to them :

Held.—In the circumstances of the case, this was a sufficient compliance with the requirements of law.— 10 T. L. J., 79.

22. The general rule is that a trustee shall have no allowance for his trouble and loss of time beyond the terms of the trust. But to this general rule there are well recognised exceptions; and among these is the case where the trustee at the time of accepting the trust stipulates for an allowance or remuneration for his services and the allowance is freely made, and it is for the benefit of the estate to get his services. (F. B.).— 38 T. L. R., 137 ( = 12 T. L. J., 137).

23. When several persons join in founding a charitable institution, the trusteeship would under the law vest in all of them jointly, unless some one has been selected as sole trustee. If the founders were divested of their trusteeship, there ought to be clear and cogent evidence of it. The fact that the trust was managed in rotation by the persons who happened to be the eldest members in the family, from time to time,

Regulation III of 1079.

73. Save as provided by the Religious Endowments Regulation, III of 1079, no suit claiming any of the reliefs specified in Section 72 shall be instituted in respect of any such trust as is therein referred to except in conformity with the provisions of that Section.

74. In order to prevent the ends of justice from being defeated, the Court may, if it is so prescribed,—

(a) issue a warrant to arrest the defendant and bring him before the Court to show cause why he should not give security for his appearance, and if he fails to comply with any order for security, commit him to the civil prison ; is not sufficient to show that the other founders ceased to be trustees. It is usual for such trusts to be managed by one of the trustees. The eldest member in actual management may be regarded as the acting trustee ; but he holds the office nevertheless on behalf of all his co-trustees. Even during the turn of each co-trustee, all the co-trustees are entitled, and in fact are bound, to act jointly in matters outside the ordinary routine of management. When the administration of a trust is vested in co-trustees, they all form as it were but one collective trustee, and must execute the duties of their office in their joint capacity.

The powers of management of a trustee are not higher than those of the manager of an infant heir, and he cannot alienate trust-property unless in case of urgent need and for the benefit of the trust.

It is clear law that where there are several trustees all of them should be impleaded in suits relating to the trust.—

24. There is no rule that a scheme decree is in no circumstances executable, and that for enforcing any provision of the scheme, a separate suit is the only course open. Whether it is executable or not depends on the intention of the decree. While generally a scheme decree is declaratory, specific parts thereof may contemplate execution and can be executed.—

Sec. 73 [ = „ = S. 92 (2)]

I. 1. In the original Bill, this Section was, as in the British Indian Code, a Subsection of the previous Section. It was the Select Committee that made it a separate Section.

2. The Indian Special Committee who inserted this provision in the Code, said :—"As a doubt has been expressed in at least one reported decision whether Section 539 is or is not mandatory, the Committee have thought it desirable, in order to settle this question, to introduce Sub-clause (2)."

II. Section omitted.—After Section 92 in the Indian Code, there is a Section (93) which provides for the powers conferred by

(b) direct the defendant to furnish security to produce any property belonging to him and to place the same at the disposal of the Court or order the attachment of any property ;

(c) grant a temporary injunction and in case of disobedience commit the person guilty thereof to the civil prison and order that his property be attached and sold ;

(d) appoint a receiver of any property and enforce the performance of his duties by attaching and selling his property ;

(e) make such other interlocutory orders as may appear to the Court to be just and convenient.

Compensation for obtaining arrest, attachment or injunction on insufficient grounds.

75. (1) Where in any suit in which an arrest or attachment has been effected or a temporary injunction granted under the last preceding Section,—

(a) it appears to the Court that such arrest, attachment or injunction was applied for on insufficient grounds, or

(b) the suit of the plaintiff fails and it appears to the Court that there was no reasonable or probable ground for instituting the same, the defendant may apply to the Court, and the Court may, upon such application, award against the plaintiff by its order such amount, not exceeding one thousand rupees, as it deems a reasonable compensation to the defendant for the expense or injury caused to him :

---

Sections 91 and 92 on the Advocate General (=Secs. 71—73) being exercised, outside the Presidency Towns, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, also by the Collector or by such Officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf.

The original Bill provided similarly for the exercise of the powers of the Dewan by the Dewan Peishkar or other Officer appointed by the Government. But the Select Committee deleted the Section.

Sec. 74 [ = „ = S. 94 ]

I. Clauses (a) and (b)—Arrest and attachment before judgment.—See Order XXXVI.

Clauses (c) and (e)—Temporary injunctions and interlocutory orders.—See Order XXXVII.

Clause (d)—Appointment of Receiver. See Order XXXVIII and Section 44.

II. For case law, see under the orders mentioned.

Provided that a Court shall not award, under this Section, an amount exceeding the limits of its pecuniary jurisdiction.

(2) An order determining any such application shall bar any suit for compensation in respect of such arrest, attachment or injunction.

---

Sec. 75 [ = Ss. 470 & 476 = S. 95 ]

I. The corresponding Sections of Regulation II of 1065 were as follow:—

"470. Compensation for obtaining arrest or attachment on insufficient grounds.—If, in any suit in which an arrest or attachment has been effected, it appears to the Court that such arrest or attachment was applied for on insufficient grounds, or if the suit of the plaintiff fails, and it appears to the Court that there was no probable ground for instituting the suit, the Court may, on the application of the defendant, award against the plaintiff in its decree such amount, not exceeding one thousand rupees, as it deems a reasonable compensation to the defendant for the expense or injury caused to him by the arrest or attachment:

Provided that the Court shall not award under this Section a larger amount than it might decree in a suit for compensation.

An award under this Section shall bar any suit for compensation in respect of such arrest or attachment."

"476. Compensation to defendant for issue of injunction on insufficient grounds.—If it appears to the Court that an injunction which it has granted was applied for on insufficient grounds, or if, after the issue of the injunction, the suit is dismissed or judgment is given against the plaintiff by default or otherwise, and it appears to the Court that there was no probable ground for instituting the suit, the Court may, on the application of the defendant, award against the plaintiff in its decree such sum, not exceeding one thousand rupees, as it deems a reasonable compensation to the defendant for the expense or injury caused to him by the issue of the injunction:

Provided that the Court shall not award under this Section a larger amount than it might decree in a suit for compensation.

An award under this Section shall bar any suit for compensation in respect of the issue of the injunction."

II. 1. The first of the Sections quoted above provided for compensation for wrongful arrest and attachment; and the second for compensation for wrongful injunction. The present Section combines both the above old Sections.

2. The words "by its order" have been substituted for the words "in its decree" in Sub-section (1). The award should be embodied in a separate order, which is made appealable by Section 82.

Case Law.

1. A Court awarding compensation should satisfy itself about the existence of two circumstances, viz., one of the three alternatives enumerated in the first part of Section 78 (Regn. II of 1037) and the want of probable grounds for instituting the suit. [The alternatives were that the attachment was applied for on insufficient grounds, or that the plaintiff's suit was dismissed or that judgment was given against him by default or otherwise.]

The mere dismissal of the suit for default to adduce evidence is not enough to entitle a defendant to compensation.—

Fol.—18 T. L. J., 224.

2. A suit was instituted by the Adhikaris of a Devaswom to restrain the defendant from performing the duties of Santhi in the Devaswom on the ground of his having been dismissed from the office by the manager of the Devaswom. The District Court allowed the suit, but the High Court on appeal dismissed it with costs. The defendant put in an application in execution in the lower Court to recover the costs of the suit and also damages on account of loss of the remuneration suffered by the defendant by his having been prohibited from performing the duties of Santhi by an order of the Court below after it had passed its decree. The District Court allowed the defendant to recover his costs but refused to consider in execution his claim for damages. On appeal :

Held.—The defendant having been deprived of the remuneration for the performance of his duties as Santhi by the enforcement of the decree of the lower Court, he was entitled to be restored to all the benefits of which he was so deprived, when that decree was reversed on appeal.

Section 476 applies to cases where temporary injunctions have been applied for on insufficient grounds and has no application to cases like the present, where the suit itself was to restrain the defendant from performing his duties. The mesne protits or damages recoverable by way of restitution may be considerably more than the sum of Rs. 1,000 which alone could be awarded under Section 476. The defendant was not restrained by a temporary injunction, but by a prohibitory order made in pursuance to the erroneous decree of the primary Court. Section 476 does not apply to the defendant's claim for damages which arose, not by reason of any temporary injunction granted by the trial Court, but because the erroneous decree of the trial Court was reversed by the Appellate Court.

A defendant's right to claim restitution is one which Courts have no discretion to refuse. A decree of reversal by an Appellate Court contains by necessary implication a direction to the Court below to cause restitution to be made of all the benefits of which the successful party in the appeal was deprived by enforcement of the erroneous decree of the Court of first instance.

The fact that the decree of the Appellate Court does not direct restitution is no bar to such restitution being ordered.—

3. Though orders under Section 470 are not made expressly appealable under Section 557 [new Section 82 and Order XLII, Rule 1] as in the case of orders under Section 476, the practice in Travancore appears to have been to allow appeals from orders passed under Section 470.

The amount awarded as compensation under Section 470 should be taken to be a part of the decree, and as Section 512 [new Section 76] provides that an appeal shall lie from a decree or part of a decree, the order awarding compensation is appealable.

Rel.—18 T. L. J., 640.

4. When a matter in controversy has been adjudicated upon and embodied in a decree, it must be treated as a part of the decree and not as an independent order. A distinction has to be drawn between decisions of Court embodied in the decree and cases not so dealt with. Where no compensation has been awarded for wrongful attachment before judgment under Section 470, the refusal to allow any amount on this account need not be embodied in the decree. In such cases, the same will have to be treated as orders independent of the decree, and the appealability or otherwise will then depend upon the same falling within the purview of the various Clauses in Section 557 [= Section 82 and Order XLII, Rule 1]. If they do not so come under such provisions, no appeal will necessarily lie in the nature of the imperative provisions of the above Section. When, however, the award

Appeals.

Appeals from Original Decrees.

Appeal from original decree.

76. (1) Save where otherwise expressly provided in the body of this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie from every decree passed by any Court exercising original jurisdiction to the Court authorised to hear appeals from the decisions of such Court.

---

of a particular amount has been incorporated as an integral part of the decree, in pursuance of the express provisions of the statute, it is doubtful whether it would be proper to hold that it is nevertheless not a part of a decree, against which, in the absence of any provisions in the Code to the contrary, a right of appeal is expressly conferred on the aggrieved party under Section 512 [new Section 76] thereof. A reading of Sections 470 and 557 along with Section 476 cannot warrant a denial of this right, especially as Section 512 distinctly lays down that the right of appeal against a part of the decree would exist unless expressly provided against by any other provision in the Code or any other law for the time being in force.

Events subsequent to the institution of the suit could be taken into account in granting appropriate reliefs to the plaintiff. In appropriate cases, even if such events had taken place after the decree in the primary Court, the same could be considered and relief granted in appeal on that basis.— 18 T. L. J., 640.

5. The express reference to a suit for compensation in Section 75 would indicate that a separate suit would lie for the purpose and that the omission to claim compensation in the suit itself would be perfectly immaterial. The only prohibition laid down is that if the matter had been adjudicated upon in the suit itself by virtue of the provisions above referred to, the questions could not be re-agitated in a separate suit.

In a suit for damages by a plaintiff on account of attachment of plaintiff's outstandings and his arrest before judgment, by the defendant raising fraudulent and malicious pleas, in a prior suit, the absence of proper and reasonable grounds and malice have to be affirmatively made out by the plaintiff. The provisions of Section 75 do not enable one to dispense with the proof of such ingredients, as want of reasonable and probable cause and malice considered essential, ordinarily, in actions for damages.—

Part VII.

The Indian Special Committee in their Report observe as follows in regard to the provisions embodied in this Part :—

"11. Appeals.—As regards appeals from original decrees we have departed but slightly from the existing Code. We have thought it advisable to give legislative sanction to the view that no appeal shall lie from a consent decree, or as to costs, except by leave of the Court; but the most important change is that incorporated in Clause 97, which renders it obligatory upon a party, who considers himself aggrieved by a preliminary decree, to appeal from that decree, at the risk of being precluded from disputing its correctness on an appeal from the final decree. We feel strongly that this is a most useful provision, as tending to that which is most desirable, viz., finality in litigation.

"As regards appeals from appellate decrees, the only substantial departure from the existing Code is the insertion of Clause 103. Experience has shown the desirability of this Clause, the effect of which will be to avoid remands, with their consequent delay and expense.

"As regards appeals from orders a comparison of Clause 104 of the Bill with Section 588 of the existing Code would support a prima facie inference that the right of appeal from Orders had been materially curtailed. But this inference is dispelled on looking at Sub-clause (h) of Clause 104 which allows an appeal from any Order made under Rules from which an appeal is expressly allowed by Rules. We have carefully gone into the question of the cases in which an appeal should be allowed from these Orders and our conclusion is expressed in the Rules themselves."

[Clauses 97, 103 and 104 referred to are reproduced as Sections 77, 81 and 82 respectively of the Regulation.]

Sec. 76 [= S. 512 = S. 96 = Jud. Act, 1873, S. 49]

I. The corresponding Section in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"512. Appeal to lie from all original decrees, except when expressly prohibited.— Unless when otherwise expressly provided by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie from the decrees or from any part of the decrees of the Courts exercising original jurisdiction to the Courts authorised to hear appeals from the decisions of those Courts.

An appeal may lie under this Section from an original decree passed ex parte.

II. Sub-section (3).—1. See Note under Order XXIII, Rule 3, under which consent decrees may be passed.

2. Section 49 of the judicature Act, 1873, provides that "no order made by the High Court or any Judge thereof, by the consent of parties, or as to costs only, which by law are left to the discretion of the Court, shall be subject to any appeal, except by leave of the Court or Judge making such order."

III. See under Order XL.

Case Law.

1. The right of a respondent to take objections at the hearing of the appeal to any portion of the decree under appeal is co-extensive with his right to prefer an appeal from the decree itself.— 5 T. L. R., 120.

2. (1) Though Section 104 [=Or. I, r. 12] of the Civil Procedure Code (old) allows one or more plaintiffs to appear and act for the other or others of them, the presentation of an appeal by one or more of several appellants for the other or others of them is wholly unsanctioned by law. An appeal must be filed in person or by Vakil or by a recognised agent under the provisions of the Code.

(2) An appeal filed by a party improperly added as such and who has not signed the plaint, is bad for defect of parties.— 7 T. L. R., 165.

3. The representative of a party dying after decree and before the expiry of the period allowed for appeal, may present an appeal without previously obtaining permission therefor; and such appeal, when presented, should be registered and proceeded with, the appellant's competency to represent the deceased party being open to be objected to by respondents and to be disposed of by the Court at the hearing of the appeal. If the objection be allowed, the appeal is dismissed. It is only against the dismissal of the appeal that the representative has a right of second appeal. An order refusing a representative to file an appeal is not per se appealable.—9 T. L. R. App., 44.

4. An alienation of property which is the subject of a pending litigation, by a party thereto, will not disentitle him to continue as party in the suit and carry on proceedings. Such alienation is not, strictly speaking, an absolute alienation, as its validity depends entirely upon the result of the litigation. The transferor cannot, therefore, be said to have lost all his interest in the litigation. In the case, the transferor was considered to have sufficient interest in the litigation, and on his appeal, the Judge was competent to consider the whole case.—

5. An appeal by defendant against an ex parte decree can succeed only by showing that the claim is unsustainable legally or on the evidence adduced.—11 T. L. R., 143.

6. Under Section 516 [=Or. XL, r. 4] of the Civil Procedure Code, one of the several plaintiffs or defendants can prefer an appeal against the whole decree only if the decree appealed against proceeds on any ground common to all such plaintiffs or to all such defendants and not to some of the defendants and the plaintiffs on one side and the other defendants on the other. In other words, a colluding defendant or a defendant supporting the plaintiff's case cannot appeal on behalf of the plaintiff.

"It is not competent to certain defendants appealing and making a non-appealing defendant a respondent between themselves, to open out that portion of the case which as between the plaintiff and the non-appealing defendant, has not been appealed against." (F. B).— 13 T. L. R., 93.

7. Where a decree deals only with and decides the disputes between the plaintiffs on one side and defendants as a body on the other and not the disputes between defendants inter se;

Held,— One defendant cannot appeal against other defendants.

The suit was purely between the plaintiffs and defendants 1 to 3. The 4th and 5th defendants were made parties merely pro forma. No relief was claimed against them and none granted by the decree under appeal. In this view, the fifth defendant had no right of appeal. (F. B.).—

8. A suitor shall, on presentation of an appeal, present also the fee payable on it. No appeal shall be filed unless the fee prescribed be paid, and no appeal memorandum which has been presented without the requisite fee shall be valid until the fee is paid. Where an appeal has been received by the Court without any fee having been paid on it through mistake or inadvertance, a Judge may order the fee to be levied, and on the fee being levied, the reception of the appeal shall become valid with retrospective effect.

An appeal memorandum which has been presented without any fee being paid on it must be considered as not legally presented until the fee is paid and the date of presentation must be taken to be the date on which the fee is paid, except in the case provided for in the latter part of Section 17 of the Court fees Regulation.

An appeal memorandum unaccompanied by any fees is not a document of which judicial notice can be taken, except in cases specially provided for by law and the Court is not bound to give notice to the appellant before rejecting such appeal (F. B.).—

12. A suit the value of which was less than Rs. 100 was filed in the Munsiff's Court in 1075, and the appeal to the District Court was filed in Makarom 1077, i. e., after the amending Regulation I of 1077 came into force. It was contended that the procedure in appeal and special appeal should be governed by the amending Regulation and not the old Regulation I of 1057.

Held.—The contention was right and, therefore, the special appeal was not maintainable.

A law which merely alters the procedure may with perfect propriety be made applicable to past and future transactions. "No person has a vested right in any course of procedure. He has only the right of prosecution or defence in the manner prescribed for the time being by or for the Court in which he sues and if an Act of Parliament alters that mode of procedure, he has no other right than to proceed according to the altered mode." "When a new enactment deals with rights of action, unless it is so expressed in the Act, an existing right of action is not taken away. But where the enactment deals with procedure only, unless the contrary is expressed, the enactment applies to all actions whether commenced before or after the passing of the Act."— 18 T. L. 13. In a suit for removal of Karanavan certain distant Koottukars who failed to show a prima facie case of community of interest in the suit Tarwad were made additional defendants in the suit. In the appeal preferred by them impugning the lower Court's finding against their membership, they offered to pay court fees on the total value of the Tarwad properties.

Held.—As no such fees could be levied in appeal from either party, the only course was to leave the question of the rights of the Koottukars for settlement in a separate suit on payment of proper court fees.

To allow at this stage the payment of court fees on the total value of the properties would be inconvenient and irregular—inconvenient inasmuch as after having got the relief for which they brought the suit, the plaintiffs would have now to conduct a suit against another party at their own expense and for a declaration which they never asked for, and irregular inasmuch as the offer is in fact to conduct in appeal a suit of a higher value than in the lower Court to the prejudice of the court fees revenue.—

Held.—Under the amendment made in Section 13 of the Civil Courts Regulation (Section 7 of Regulation I of 1077), the appeal from the decision of the District Munsiff should lie to the High Court direct.—

17. The right of appeal to a particular tribunal is a vested right and such a right cannot be taken away unless by express provision of law. After a decree has been passed in a suit, the litigant cannot be deprived of his right of appeal by a subsequent enactment unless the latter gives retrospective effect expressly to itself.

It is a well-known principle of interpretation that statutes are not to be held to act retrospectively unless a clear intention to that effect is manifested (F. B.).—

18. Two defendants, claiming, independently of each other, some of the properties in dispute, put in a joint appeal, valuing their reliefs separately. They paid also court-fees on the costs of the plaintiff, for which each of them had been liable separately.

Held.— The joint appeal was not proper, and court-fee need not be paid on costs generally in all cases, unless the decree as to costs is questioned in appeal independently of any other reliefs (F. B.).—

19. A District Munsiff, whose small cause jurisdiction extended up to Rs. 50, had on his regular file a suit of the value of nearly Rs. 91. Pending suit, Regulation II of 1084 came into force, by Section 13 (2) of which the small cause jurisdiction of the Munsiff was extended to Rs. 100. The Munsiff, thereupon, transferred the suit from his regular file to the small cause file, and disposed of it as a small cause.

Held (in revision).—The transformation into a small cause of a suit legally instituted as a regular suit was illegal.

So long as Regulation II of 1084 had not expressly, or by necessary implication, made its provisions retrospective, and in view of the language of Section 7 of the General Clauses Regulation, the enactment that applied to the case was the one in force on the date of institution of suits.

The expression "legal proceedings" in Section 7 of the General Clauses Regulation must be taken to include all proceedings in the suit from the date of its institution up to its final disposal.

The right of appeal was inherent in every party to a civil suit as from the date on which it was launched, and whoever lost must be taken to have been vested at the time of the suit with the right of appeal.

Such right could not be taken away, except by express enactment of the Legislature and consequently, the Munsiff was not justified in converting the regular suit into a small cause, so as to deprive the unsuccessful party of the right of appeal, which he had at the institution of the suit. (F. B.).

20. For the purpose of determining the proper Appellate Court in a suit for taking accounts, what is to be looked to, is the value of the original suit, that is to say, the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit. Such amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit must be taken to be the value assigned by the plaintiff in his plaint and not the value as found by the Court, unless it appears that, either purposely or through gross negligence, the true value of the suit has been altogether misrepresented in the plaint.—32 T. L. R., 97.

21. Suit for 350 Fs. being balance of consideration for the assignment of a mortgage right by plaintiff to defendant. The suit was filed first as a Small Cause suit; but under order of Court, it was refiled as an original suit. The Munsiff gave plaintiff a decree. The District Judge, on appeal, dismissed the suit finding that the whole amount of the consideration had been paid. In second appeal, plaintiff contended that the suit though tried as an original suit, was still a small cause suit, and that though the decision of the Munsiff was valid, no appeal lay to the District Court.

Held.—(1) The suit being only for money, and not for specific performance of a contract, was triable as a small cause.

(2) Section 13 of the Civil Courts Regulation merely regulated the procedure to be adopted in the adjudication of certain classes of suits, and did not take away the jurisdiction of the Munsiffs to try them as original causes. Therefore, the decision of the suit by the Munsiff as an orignal cause was valid and operative. The words "shall try" in Section 13 are not conclusive.

(3) That under a strict interpretation of Section 512, C. P. C. and Section 13 of the Civil Courts Regulation, which interpretation was more convenient and conducive to justice, it was the nature of the trial and not of the suit that decided whether an appeal lay or not. Therefore, in the present case, as the suit, though a small cause, was tried as an original suit, the appeal to the District Court was competent.

(4) In spite of the omission of the party to raise the objection to jurisdiction in either of the lower Courts, this Court was bound to hear and consider the objection, as where there is an entire absence of jurisdiction in the lower Courts the objection to it could not be waived by the party, and his failure to take it, could not, therefore, operate to confer jurisdiction.—

(= 6 T. L. J., 101).

22. The plaintiff sued for redemption of a mortgage on payment of the mortgage amount—730 Fs. and the value of improvements—1300 Fs. The District Munsiff decreed the suit awarding the defendant 11,354 Fs. as the value of improvements. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court objecting to the award of improvements to the extent of 8135 Fs. and odd. It was contended that the appeal lay to the District Court notwithstanding that the amount objected to was more than 7,000 Fs.

Held.—Under Section 4, Clause 8, of the Court Fees Regulation, the subject-matter of a mortgage suit, (both original and appellate) for purposes of Court fee, is the principal sum secured by the instrument of mortgage; and under Section 2 of the Suits Valuation Regulation, the value in such, among other, cases of the subject-matter for purposes of jurisdiction is the same as the value for purposes of Court fee. Hence, in an appeal against a mortgage-decree which awards a certain amount as value of improvements to the mortgagee, the forum is to be determined with reference to the principal sum secured by the mortgage deed and not with reference to the amount of the value of improvements that is claimed or whose award is disputed, in appeal (F. B.).—

23. From the decree in a suit of the value of more than Rs. 1,000, an appeal was preferred by the plaintiff-petitioner to the District Court which set aside the Munsiff's decree and remanded the suit under Section 533 of the Civil Procdure Code for retrial. The Munsiff to whom the suit was remanded declined to try and dispose of the suit as, in his opinion, the judgment of the District Court which had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal was not a valid judgment.

Held.—The course adopted by the District Munsiff was illegal inasmuch as it was not competent to him in the face of the remand order to have declined to try and dispose of the suit. Even though the District Judge acted without jurisdiction in entertaining the appeal, the proper course for the defendants (counter-petitioners) to have taken, was to invoke the revisional jurisdiction of this Court to cancel the appellate proceedings. The Munsiff clearly had no jurisdiction to revise the Judge's order and virtually to set it aside.—34 T. L. J., 293.

24. An appeal in respect of costs only is entertainable when there has been no real exercise of discretion by the lower Court or when a question of principle is involved.—

25. The suit was by the foreman of a Chitty against a prized subscriber for recovery of future subscriptions in a lump on the ground that the defendant had defaulted to pay the subscriptions from the 10th drawing. The primary Court allowed the suit holding that the defendant was a defaulter, but the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit holding that the defendant was not a defaulter. In allowing the defendant's appeal, the lower Appellate Court permitted by its decree the payment into Court by the defendant of each future instalment as it fell due. Accordingly, the defendant paid into Court the amount due for the drawings that had already taken place since the date of suit. The plaintiffs gave credit for that amount and preferred this special appeal for the balance of the plaint amount treating defendant as a defaulter. The defendant contended that the plaintiff having taken advantage of the decree which directed the defendant to pay into Court to the credit of the foreman the amount of each future instalment as it fell due, had thereby precluded himself from appealing against that decree on the footing that the defendant should still be regarded as a defaulter.

Held.—The appeal was incompetent, as the appellant could not adopt the order for one purpose and then claim to have it set aside for another purpose. The general principle governing such cases is that a party, who has adopted an order of the Court and acted under it, could not, after he has enjoyed a benefit under the order, contend that it was valid for one purpose and invalid for another.—

(=12 T. L. J., 167).

26. It is a well established principle of law that an appeal in respect of costs only is entertainable when there has been no exercise of discretion, or when a question of principle is involved. Acting on this principle, an Appellate Court ought not to interfere with an order relating to costs, unless the order is arbitrary or perverse on the face of it, or unless there has been such a gross mis-exercise of judicial discretion as to render interference necessary.— 13 T. L. J., 3.

27. Where the interests of the appellants in the subject-matter of the suit are separate and distinct, they cannot be allowed to file one appeal covering their separate interests. Separate appeals ought to have been filed. In the case, the appeal was ordered to be split up into two appeals (F. B.).— 13 T. L. J., 354.

28. In an appeal from an ex parte decree, it is open to the appellant to take the plea that the evidence on record is not sufficient to sustain the decree.

On an appeal from an ex parte decree, there is nothing to preclude the Court from considering whether the ex parte decree should not be set aside for the reason that the appellant has been prejudiced by the procedure adopted by the lower Court. And if it comes to that conclusion, the High Court is competent to set aside the decree and order a retrial.

In so doing, the Appellate Court is not confined to the grounds mentioned in Section 108 [=Or. IX, r. 13].—14 T. L. J., 220.

29. A non-contesting defendant may appeal from a decree made against him; but, by so appealing, he is not relegated to the position of a contesting defendant who is entitled to an adjudication on the merits of the controversy between the parties.

In the case, the first and second defendants accepted the validity of the Munsiff's decree against them, but contended that the basis of the decree was unsound so far as it was acted upon by the District Judge. The defence thus raised was one that could be waived and had been waived in the trial Court. It could not therefore be given effect to.— 15 T. L. J., 322.

30. The Insolvency Regulation, while vesting the property of the insolvent in the Receiver and while forbidding any suit against the insolvent except with the permission of the Court, does not bar a suit by the insolvent.— 15 T. L. J., 373.

31. Objections not specifically taken in the Court of first instance cannot be entertained in appeal.— 15 T. L. J., 427.

32. The provision in Section 3 of the Succession Certificate Regulation for the production of a succession certificate is a general statutory provision which applies to all Courts. No Court, whether trial or appellate, seised of a case can pass a decree in plaintiff's favour till the peremptory requirements of Section 3 are complied with.

The omission to raise the objection about the non-production of a succession certificate in the original Court by the defendant does not prevent him from taking the objection in the Appellate Court.

Section 3 of the Regulation does not permit a conditional decree being passed (for example, that a decree may be given subject to the production of a succession certificate before the plaintiff applies for execution). 16 T. L. J., 134.

Ex. & Dist.—17 T. L. J., 28.

33. In cases of appeals presented after the expiration of the time prescribed by law, a separate written application for excusing delay is necessary for admission of the same under Section 5 of the Limitation Regulation. The omission to make such application does not, however, affect the competency of the Court to excuse the delay, if an affidavit, not supporting an application, discloses grounds sufficient in the opinion of the Court to enable it to admit the appeal preferred after the expiry of the prescribed period.

The provision contained in Section 7, Clause 4 (a) (ii) of the High Court Regulation implies that when the delay in the presentation of an appeal is sought to be excused, the appellant should make an application in that behalf. But the practice of the High Court has been to require an application when an appellant desires to have his delay excused. This rule of practice has become a rule of law. This Rule is not inconsistent with any statutory provision, but is, on the other hand, conducive to the convenience of the Court and the litigant public. However, the Court may, in appropriate cases, excuse the delay if, by affidavit or otherwise, the appellant satisfies it that he had sufficient grounds for not appealing in time (F. B.).

[ In the Order of Reference to the Full Bench, the question involved is discussed with reference to Section 76, Orders VII, r. 11 ; XIX, rr. 2 and 3 and XXI, r. 86 and Rules 3 and 294 of the Civil Courts Guide].

34. The admission of an appeal presented out of time is no doubt within the discretion of the Court under Section 5, Clause 1, of the Limitation Regulation. But the discretion has to be judicially exercised in a sound and reasonable manner and after due consideration of the facts. The test in such cases is whether the discretion has been exercised after appreciation and consideration of all the facts which are material for the purpose of enabling the Judge to exercise a judicial discretion and after application of the right principle to those facts.— 43 T. L. R., 459.

35. The rule of law contained in 16 T. L. J., 134 that the omission to raise the objection about the non-production of a succession certificate in the original Court by the defendant does not prevent him from taking the objection in the Appellate Court, applies only to cases where from the facts admitted or proved a succession certificate is indispensable under the provisions of Section 3 of the Succession Certificate Regulation. Where, however, the applicability of the above Section is doubted and certain other facts are required to be alleged, admitted or proved to enable the Court to treat the subject-matter of the claim as the separate assets of a deceased person, the dictum in the above case is clearly inapplicable, as it is a settled rule of law that questions of law involving facts not alleged or proved cannot be allowed to be set up for the first time in appeal.— 17 T. L. J., 28.

36. "When the time for appealing is once passed, a very valuable right is secured to the successful litigant; and the Court must therefore be fully satisfied of the justice of the grounds on which it is sought to obtain an extension of the time for attacking the decree, and thus perhaps depriving the successful litigant of the advantages which he had obtained."

(2) Section 3 of the Limitation Regulation, however, allows such delays to be condoned for sufficient cause shown. The expression "sufficient cause" occurring in the Section ought to be construed literally so as to advance substantial justice when no negligence in action or want of bona fides is imputable to the appellants. What is sufficient cause must depend upon the circumstances of each case, which circumstances would be different in particular cases. "This discretion ought not to be crystallized as it would become in course of time, by one Judge attempting to prescribe definite rules with a view to bind other Judges in the exercise of the discretion, which the Legislature has committed to them." "The discretion like all other judicial discretions ought, as far as practicable, to be left untrammelled and free so as to be fairly exercised according to the exigencies of each case."

In the circumstances of the case, it was held that the lower Appellate Court did not exercise its discretion improperly in excusing the delay of two days in filing the appeal when it was shown that the delay was caused by the mistake of the Vakil's clerk in computation, and that the appellant bona fide acted upon the advice given by the clerk.

(3) It is an accepted canon of interpretation of deeds that the intention of the parties to a document must be gathered from the words they have used in the document. Where such words are clear, definite and unambiguous, the Court will not be justified in travelling beyond the document to make out that the parties in fact intended something other than what is contained in the document itself. One of the rules to be borne in mind is that "when a deed or other instrument consists of diverse clauses or parts, the law will give to each part its proper office, so as to ascertain and carry out the intention of the parties." The Courts should not allow a construction that reduces one important clause of the document to a nullity. It has also to be borne in mind that effect must be given to every word and clause, if possible, so that nothing should be left devoid of meaning or destitute of force.— 17 T. L. J., 178.

37. A bona fide mistake made by a client owing to the wrong advice of his pleader is "sufficient cause" within the meaning of Section 5 of the Limitation Regulation, and the delay in presenting the appeal arising from such mistske ought, in the ends of justice, to be excused (F. B.).

Per Parameswara Menon, J.—It is a well-established rule of interpretation that statutes of limitation as they are restrictive of the common law right to take legal proceedings must be construed strictly, and that provisions which constitute exceptions to the operation of the enactment must be construed liberally.

The Courts shall not only not be departing from the well-known canons of construction regarding restrictive statutes like the statute of limitation but shall on the other hand be actively furthering the course of justice if they construe liberally the second Clause of Section 5 of the Limitation Regulation.

If the delay in presenting the appeal can be excused on the ground of a bona fide mistake, there is nothing in reason or common sense to differentiate between a mistake of fact and mistake of law, or between the mistake of the party and the mistake of his pleader. A mistake of law is as much a mistake as a mistake of fact, and it is very often extremely difficult, if not impossible, to say whether a particular mistake is one of fact or of law. To hold that the delay in presenting an appeal can be excused only on the ground of a mistake of fact, would be to place an unnatural construction on the language of Section 5 of the Limitation Regulation, a construction which could not have been in the contemplation of the Legislature. If mistakes of law are excluded from the operation of Section 5, the occasion for the exercise of the discretionary jurisdiction vested in a Court of Appeal by Section 5 of the Limitation Regulation will be extremely rare, if ever it arises at all.

Per Venkitaramier, J.—The provisions of the law of limitation, which is a statute which encroaches upon the rights of others, have always to be construed strictly. The defence of lapse of time against a past demand is not to be extended to cases which are not clearly within the enactment, while provisions which give exceptions to the operation of such enactments are to be construed liberally.

The expression "sufficient cause" occurring in Section 5 of the Limitation Regulation has to receive a liberal interpretation so as to advance substantial justice when no negligence or inaction or want of bona fides is imputable to the appellant.

(2) Applying the principle in the 35 T. L. R., 1 case and treating the appeal as validly filed, only when the copy of the decree was filed, the circumstances of the case would warrant the excusing of the delay in presenting the appeal The delay in the filing of the copies of the decree peremptorily required under Section 513 [= Or. XL, r. 1] has, in the case, to be excused (F. B.).— 43 T. L. R., 212 (=17 T. L. J., 356).

38. Section 12 of the Limitation Regulation permits the exclusion of the time taken for obtaining the copies irrespective of the person who applies for the same. The expression 'time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree' occurring in paragraph

2 of the Section cannot be construed so as to restrict the application of this rule relating to exclusion to cases where the appellant himself makes the application.

Per Venkitarama Aiyer, J.—A mere difference of opinion between the High Court and the lower Appellate Court in the matter of the mode in which the discretion to excuse delay in the presentation of an appeal should be exercised cannot justify interference by the High Court with the action of the lower Appellate Court in such matters. If after appreciation and consideration of all the facts material to the disposal of the matter, the lower Appellate Court has exercised the discretion in a particular way, the High Court cannot with propriety interfere with the same.

Per Joseph Thaliath, J.—The appellant who uses a copy of the judgment and decree obtained by another cannot also take advantage of any special circumstances which the other might plead in getting any delay condoned.— 17 T. L. J., 517.

39 The admission of an appeal presented out of time is, no doubt, within the discretion of the Court under Section 5, Clause (1), of the Limitation Regulation. But the discretion has to be judicially exercised, in a sound and reasonable manner and after due consideration of the facts. The test in such cases is whether the discretion has been exercised after appreciation and consideration of all the facts which are material for the purpose of enabling the Judge to exercise a judicial discretion and after application of the right principles to these facts. Where the lower Appellate Court has failed to do so, the superior Court must interfere and exercise their own discretion. 19 T. L. J., 453.

40. An award of Court is a decree and the procedure applying to execution of decree applies. The order of the executing Court refusing to allow an assignee-decree-holder (assignee of the award decree) is appealable.— 19 T. L. J., 602.

41. Section 32 of the Limitation Regulation provides a summary remedy, and therefore, no appeal lies against the decree passed in a suit under that Section. But, at the same time, it is a decree and an appeal lies therefrom under Section 76. There is no provision either in the Civil Procedure Code or in the Limitation Regulation which takes away this right of appeal in regard to a decree under Section 32 of the Limitation Regulation.— 19 T. L. J., 603.

42. Civil Courts cannot entertain appeals from any orders passed by subordinate Courts in the matter of stamp duty or penalty leviable on the instruments produced before such Courts.

Where a document has been improperly rejected by the Judge, the party aggrieved could appeal on the ground that the Judge has committed an error of law in refusing to receive the document in evidence.—

Appeal from final decree where no appeal from preliminary decree.

78. No decree shall be reversed or substantially varied, nor shall any case be remanded, in appeal on account of any misjoinder of parties or causes of action or any error, defect or irregularity in any proceedings in the suit, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.

No decree to be reversed or modified for error or irregularity not affecting merits or jurisdiction.

Sec. 77 [= „ = S. 97]

I. "This Section is new, and is intended to prevent a preliminary decree being questioned after steps are taken up to a final decree and on the appeal against such final decree. When preliminary decrees are sought to be questioned, much expense and trouble might be avoided by an immediate appeal and adjudication."—

Notes on Clauses.

II. In regard to Section 97 of the British Indian Code which is reproduced here, the Indian Special Committee observe in their Notes on Clauses:—"The Committee have inserted an express provision to compel litigants to appeal from preliminary decrees, and have estopped them, on their failure to do so, from raising objections to such decrees in appeals from final decrees. On this point, they accept the unanimous opinion of the Calcutta High Court. They think it unreasonable that parties should allow proceedings to be carried on to their final stage and large costs to be incurred if they intend to rely upon objections which could be taken at an earlier stage."

III. A right of appeal under this Section arises only when a preliminary decree is drawn up.

I. In regard to Section 99 of the British Indian Code, reproduced here, the Indian Special Committees observe :—"The Committee have extended this Clause in order to give the Courts a larger discretion in dealing with irregularities in proceedings, and they have inserted express words to meet the point decided in I. L. R, 26 Bom., 259 and I. L. R., 27 Mad., 80."

II. The corresponding Section in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"547. No decree to be reversed or modified for error or irregularity not affecting merits or jurisdiction.—No decree shall be reversed or substantially varied, nor shall any case be remanded, in appeal, on account of any error, defect or irregularity, whether in the decision or in any order passed in the suit, or otherwise, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court."

III. Misjoinder of parties or causes of action.—See Order I, Rules 1 and 3, and Order II, Rules 3, 4 and 5.

Case Law.

1. The non-payment of stamp-duty not being an irregularity or error which would affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, Section 547 of the Code bars interference by the Appellate Court.—

2. The objection as to want of jurisdiction of the District Court to hear the appeal, was not raised in the special appeal memo, and came rather late. Still, as it affected the jurisdiction of the Court, it was one which the High Court could not overlook under Section 547 of the Code.—

3. As the administration of the trust was vested in the trustees jointly, all the trustees should have been made parties in appeal. Temporary absence in England did not determine the office of such trustee. The appeal as against one alone of the trustees was therefore not maintainable. The omission to implead the other trustees was more than an irregularity. The Appellate Court was bound to see that all necessary parties were before it. The non-joinder was not merely a defect or irregularity. The objection in a suit of this sort goes to the very root of the case.— 1 T. L. J., 203.

Fol.—13 T. L. J., 486.

4. The hearing of a party without notice to the opposite party or his Vakil, after the case is taken up for judgment is, at the most, an irregularity which does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court, and is not, by itself, sufficient ground for reversing a judgment, if, as laid down in Section 547, the merits of the case are not affected by such irregularity.— 3 T. L. J., 215.

5. The plaintiff obtained a money decree against a defendant, and in execution attached his properties. More than a month after such attachment, the defendant applied to set aside the ex parte decree. This application, though made beyond time, was allowed by the District Munsiff. On evidence being adduced by the defendant, it was found that a sum of Rs. 120 had been paid to the plaintiff. On appeal the District Judge concurred with the Munsiff in the finding the question of payment, but allowed the appeal, on the ground that the application to set aside the ex parte having been made at a time when the period of limitation had elapsed, the ex parte decree should not have been disturbed.

Held.—The District Judge was wrong in restoring the ex parte decree on the technical ground that the application was barred. An order setting aside an ex parte is not appealable: but under Section 560 of the Code [new Section 83], if the decree subsequently passed is appealed against, any error, defect or irregularity in the order setting aside the ex parte decree which affects the decision of the case may be set forth as a ground of objection in the memorandum of appeal. It does not necessarily follow that because of such error, &c., the decree must be set aside. Section 560 must be read in conjunction with Section 547. The order setting aside the ex parte decree could not be said to affect the merits of the case.— 31 T. L. R., 233

( = 16 T. L. J., 29).
19 T. L. J., 383.

6. The erroneous admission of a document not duly stamped is an error, defect or irregularity not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, and is, as such, cured by Section 547 of the Code.— 8 T. L. J., 116.

Ref.—13 T. L. J., 485.

7. Reading Sections 547 and 560 [new Section 83] together, it seems to be clear that the plaintiff is entitled to challenge in an appeal presented by him on a decree against him, the validity of the order of the lower Court setting aside the ex parte decree.— 8 T. L. J., 285.

Fol.—35 T. L. R., 30.
Ref.—19 T. L. J., 867.

8. When a remand is made, it is the order of remand that confers jurisdiction on the Court to which the remand is made. The jurisdiction being created by the order of remand is defined and circumscribed by it.

Therefore, where the Court to which the remand is made has admitted evidence not covered by the order of remand and used such evidence in arriving at its findings, the findings returned are invalid in law.—

9. Under Section 14 (2) of the Limitation Regulation the creditor has a valuable statutory right. The defect of omission to give the right, cannot be said to be cured under Section 78 of the Civil Procedure Code, on the ground that the information which might be obtained as a result of the question disallowed by the Court would have no effect on the order of adjudication. The proceedings on an insolvency petition must be regarded as continuing down to the order of discharge (though there is a distinct stage, no doubt, when the order of adjudication is passed), so that ultimately the refusal to give the creditors their statutory right under Section 14 (2) of the Limitation Regulation may affect the merits of the case (F. B.).— 45 T. L. R., 76 (=19 T. L. J., 181).

10. (1) Neither under Section 547 (old) nor under Section 78 (new) could an appellant succeed in appeal on account of an erroneous order setting aside an ex parte decree or restoring a suit dismissed for default.

The words "jurisdiction of the Court" must be strictly construed. Where an application to set aside an ex parte decree is presented before the Court which passed the decree, that Court has jurisdiction to entertain the application, even though it may be in the particular instance its duty to reject the application on some particular ground, e. g., that the application is barred by limitation. A distinction must be drawn between exercise of jurisdiction and existence of jurisdiction. "The authority to decide a cause at all and not the decision rendered therein is what makes up jurisdiction; and when there is jurisdiction of the person and subject-matter, the decision of all other questions arising in the case is but an exercise of that jurisdiction."

(2) An interlocutory order may, in certain circumstances, be the subject of revision, if the matter to which it relates stands by itself and if the ends of justice would be defeated if the power of revision were not exercised.

An order setting aside an ex parte decision by the Court which passed that decision will be interfered with in revision if it is clearly illegal, as no remedy will be available to the aggrieved party if interference in revision is refused.

(3) Where the right to apply to set aside an ex parte decree was barred under the old Limitation Regulation, such right is not revived by the passing of the new Limitation Regulation.

The admission of an application under Order IX, Rule 13, when the same is barred by limitation is such an error as would call for interference of the High Court in revision. It is not a mere case of an exercise of a discretion. The Court has done something which the law does not permit, owing to an erroneous view of the law. The order of the lower Court was set aside, and the application under Order IX, Rule 13, dismissed with costs (F. B.).—

Appeals from Appellate Decrees.

Second appeal.

79. (1) Save where otherwise expressly provided in the body of this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, an appeal shall lie to the High Court from every decree passed in appeal by any Court subordinate to the High Court, on any of the following grounds, namely:—

(a) the decision being contrary to law or to some usage having the force of law;

(b) the decision having failed to determine some material issue of law or usage having the force of law;

(c) a substantial error or defect in the procedure provided by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force, which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the case upon the merits;

(d) the finding of the lower appellate Court on any question of fact material to the right decision of the case on the merits being in conflict with the finding of the Court of first instance on such question.

(2) An appeal may lie under this Section from an appellate decree passed ex parte.

---

Sec. 79 [ = S. 583 = S. 100 ]

I. 1. This Section reproduces Section 100 of the British Indian Code, with the addition of Clause (d) which does not find a place in that Code. The present British Indian Section, again, is the same as Section 584 of the Code of 1882 slightly modified. The latter Section was as follows:—

"584. Unless when otherwise provided by this Code or by any other law, from all decrees passed in appeal by any Court subordinate to a High Court, an appeal shall lie to the High Court on any of the following grounds, namely:—

(a) the decision being contrary to some specified law or usage having the force of law;

(b) the decision having failed.........force of law;

(c) a substantial error.........by this Code or any other law, which may.........upon the merits.

An appeal may lie...........passed ex-parte."

2. The word "specified" in Clause (a) has been omitted by the Indian Special Committee as being in their opinion redundant.

II. 1. As enacted in Regulation II of 1065, the Section corresponding to Section 584 of the Indian Code of 1882, was as follows:—

"553. Second appeals to High Court.—Unless when otherwise provided by this Code or by any other law, from all decrees passed in appeal by any Court subordinate to the High Court, an appeal shall lie to the High Court on any of the following grounds (namely) :—

(a) the decision being contrary to some specified law or usage having the force of law ;

(b) a substantial error or defect in the investigation of the case or in the procedure as prescribed by this Code or any other law, which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the case upon the merits ;

(c) the decision of the lower Appellate Court being in reversal of the decree of the Court of first instance and on a question of fact material to the right decision of the case.

Explanation.—In cases falling under Clause (c), the High Court shall be competent to go into the merits, as if the appeal had been preferred directly against the decree of the Court of first instance."

2. In regard to the changes made in adopting, in the old Regulation, Section 584 of the Indian Code of 1882, the Statement of Objects and Reasons said :—"74. Section 584 is amended so as to give a right of second appeal on facts in cases in which the lower Courts differ in appreciation of evidence. Second (special) appeal is now restricted to points of law. Nothing is more sickening than to hear the Judges of the High Court say 'we feel that the judgment is wrong, but we cannot interfere with it, as it purports to proceed on evidence'. The principle of accepting as correct, the judgment of a single Judge of the Zillah, reversing the decree of a Munsiff, who had the special advantage of watching the demeanour of witnesses while under examination is entirely open to question. The large number of remands which in special appeal, the High Court is obliged to make, owing to the unsatisfactory and arbitrary manner in which appeals are dealt with by some of the Zillah Judges, proves the necessity for the amendment of the law.

"75. An examination of the file of special appeals will show that a majority of them are cases in which the decree of the Court of first instance was disturbed. This circumstance points to the conclusion that, to secure full public confidence in the administration of Civil Justice, it is necessary that the Court of second appeal, should have the power of determining, which of the judgments of the lower Courts should be allowed to stand. It may be that, in a few cases, the evidence is equally balanced and that the second Appellate Court may not find sufficient grounds to reject the view of the Zillah Court. But a large percentage of second appeals relates to real property. The evidence brought in such cases often consists of documentary evidence of a reliable character. There are cases in which oral evidence is strong enough to enable the second Appellate Court to form a right conclusion. The fact that a second appeal lies on facts would act as a check upon hasty and sometimes arbitrary reversals. In support of the amendment now proposed, the opinion of Mr. Justice Collett, whose long experience on the Bench of the Madras High Court, enables him to speak with authority on the subject, may be quoted here with advantage.

'Considering that the Courts in India try Civil suits without the assistance of a jury and that, except in the High Court, only one Judge presides in each Court, it is undesirable that where the judgment of the Court of first instance upon the issues of fact is overruled on regular appeal, there should be no further appeal upon the facts. Without going into any lengthy reasons why this should be, I content myself with appealing to the experience of those acquainted with the system of special appeals, whether it is not so. But if the Court of first instance and the Court on regular appeal have concurred in their view of the evidence, there is then, I consider, a reasonable certainty that a right conclusion has been arrived at. It is not possible in any human system of law to provide absolutely against all miscarriage ; there must be a limit to litigation somewhere and it is a reasonable, and will generally be a safe, restriction after two Courts have concurred in their conclusions upon the facts to limit the right of further appeal to a special appeal on the law of the case. On the other hand, anything short of the concurrence of two Courts upon the facts of a case has, I maintain, been practically proved to be unsafe and unsatisfactory. * * Appellate Courts presided over by single Judges often differ from the Court of first instance on issues of fact, upon grounds that are most unsatisfactory. The High Courts know and feel this perfectly and it is for this very reason that I urge the necessity of altering the procedure as to special appeals and allowing a further appeal upon the facts where the first Appellate Court has differed in its view of the evidence from the Court of first instance.'

The recent legislation in the Punjab and in the native State of Mysore allows a second appeal on facts where the lower Courts differ in their conclusions. That in British India, except in the Punjab, no second appeal on facts is allowed, is not a sufficient reason for allowing the present unsatisfactory state of things to continue here, especially when we know that financial considerations often stand in the way of desired reforms.''

3. For Clause (c) thus enacted, the amending Regulation II of 1070 substituted another Clause (c), which stands as Clause (d) in the present Section 79. The Select Committee who proposed the substitution observed:—

"As the law now stands, no second appeal on facts lies if the decrees of the two courts are concurrent, although the findings may not agree. In a suit brought on a bond, the Munsiff finds that the bond is genuine, but the claim is barred by limitation, the Zillah Judge, on appeal of the plaintiff may overrule the plea of limitation but find against the bond. In the result both the Courts dismiss the suit. The wording of Clause (c) of Section 553 does not admit of a second appeal in the case above put. That the framers of this Clause intended a second appeal whenever there may be conflicting findings on facts, is clear from the Statement of Objects and Reasons published when the present Civil Procedure Code was in the form of a Bill. We have given full effect to this intention in the amendment we have introduced in this Section."

Case Law.

1. A special appeal lies from a decision passed ex parte against a respondent in regular appeal.— 2 T. L. R., 29.

2. When the question raised in the appeal is one of fact and rested for its decision on pure appreciation of evidence on both sides and both the lower Courts have, in the case, concurrently given it against the defendant, it is not open to the High Court in special appeal to permit that question to be raised again in the High Court.— 7 T. L. R., 3.

3. The power vested in the High Court by Clause (c) of Section 558 (of the new Civil Procedure Code) of revising findings of fact in special appeals, cannot be exercised in special appeals preferred against decrees passed by the Zillah Courts before the 1st Chingom 1066, the date on which the said Regulation came into operation. (F. B.).— 7 T. L. R., 113.

4. Generally, objections which are not declared by law imperatively to operate as legal bar to actions, such as limitation, and which may or may not be allowed by Courts in the exercise of discretionary powers vested in them by law, should be taken by the parties interested in doing so, at the earliest opportunity and pressed upon the Court's attention at the different stages of the action. Omission to notice such objections on the part of the Courts when the parties do not urge them, or waive them either by express words or by conduct, would not be a serious irregularity to warrant interference with the final decisions, if otherwise sound.— 9 T. L. R., 17.

5. Objections not raised either in the lower Court or in the special appeal memorandum could not be entertained.—

6. An order rejecting an application for setting aside an ex parte order against a defendant would, in the absence of an appeal against it, debar the defendant from impugning it in second appeal.—

7. The plea of res judicata taken and determined in the original Court may be entertained in special appeal, even though it was not urged in the regular appeal.—

8. The concurrent findings of the Courts below upon the issues raised being based upon evidence, are not open to revision in second appeal.— 11 T. L. R., 170.

9. The defendant having filed no objection to the Munsiff's findings on facts when the plaintiff appealed to the District Court, he was debarred from re-opening the case in special appeal.— 13 T. L. R., 82.

10. Absence of evidence is a question of law, but inadequacy of evidence is not. This being so, concurrent findings of the lower Courts based upon evidence have to be accepted as final.— 14 T. L. R., 31.

11. The finding regarding the existence of a particular custom is not final simply because it is concurrent. Whether the evidence tendered establishes a usage in derogation of the ordinary law, and whether the legal requisites of a valid custom entitled to the recognition of the Courts exist in a particular case is not a question of fact, but one of law fit for the determination of the special Appellate Court.—

12. Where the Appellate Court after taking additional evidence agreed with the finding of the Court of first instance:

Held.—The evidence so taken was not open to re-consideration by the special Appellate Court. The finding became in law, as it in fact was, concurrent and could not be disturbed by the Court of second Appeal under Section 558 of the Code. The fact that the finding of the Court of first instance was partly or wholly based on failure to produce evidence could not make any difference so as to entitle the High Court to go into the evidence. The only test is whether the finding is concurrent or conflicting.—

13. The lower Court's concurrent findings on facts are final so long as they are supported by some evidence. It is not open to the High Court to enter upon evidence when the findings are concurrent, and all that has to be done in such cases is to see that the findings are not arbitrary, and that there is some evidence of a formal kind in support of such findings.—

14. Section 4 of the Suits Valuation Regulation (III of 1068) provides that objections to the jurisdiction of the Court of first instance cannot be considered if not taken in the Court of first instance at or before the hearing at which issues were first framed and recorded. This exception does not cover cases of over-valuation and under-valuation in the Appellate Courts. The High Court therefore had to decide the question whether the District Court had jurisdiction to hear the appeals.— 19 T. L. R., 223.

15. "There is no jurisdiction to entertain a second appeal on the grounds of an erroneous finding of fact however gross or inexcusable the error may seem to be. The finding upon a question of fact is final if the Court had before it evidence proper for its consideration in support of the finding" (18 Cal., 3).

"A second appeal will not lie on the ground that the lower Court has misapprehended the evidence, discarded and not given sufficient weight to other evidence or given weight to other evidence to which it was not entitled."

A clear finding, right or wrong, cannot be interfered with in second appeal unless there is no evidence at all on the record. It is only when a document which is the very basis of a suit is misconstrued by both the lower Courts that the High Court can interfere. (5 Bom. L. R., 956).

The High Court is not in second appeal justified in inferring from an Appellate Judge not having in his findings remarked upon every portion of the evidence that he has excluded it from his consideration.— 3 S. D., 280.

16. The misconstruction of a document which is the foundation of the suit which is in the nature of a contract, or a document of title, is allowed to be a ground of special appeal; but a special appeal does not lie because some portion of the evidence may be in writing and the Judge makes a mistake as to the meaning of it.— K. P., 474.

17. Where the two Courts below concurrently found that the plaint property was the self-acquisition of the deceased husband of the defendant and that defendant was entitled to succeed, the plaintiffs (nephews of the deceased) in special appeal wished to file a fresh record and contended mainly that the onus of proof was wrongly thrown on them :

Held.—(1) According to Sections 558 and 554, C. P. C., [new Sections 79 and 80 ], the fresh document could not be admitted as it was intended to re-open the question of self-acquisition concurrently found by the Courts below.

(2) The onus of proof was not misplaced and there was no ground for the appeal as there were concurrent findings upon a question of fact and as no evidence that had been adduced had escaped attention.— K. P., 485.

18. The question whether facts exist to support the allegation of the absence of reasonable and probable cause is not a question of law. It is not, therefore, open to the High Court to interfere in second appeal with a finding thereon concurrently recorded by the Courts below.— 28 T. L. R., 175.

19. An objection to a suit on the ground that it is one for partial partition is one relating to processual law, and must be decided not according to any rule of Hindu Law but according to the principles of the Civil Procedure Code. The right of the defendant in such a case is not to have the suit dismissed in toto but to insist on the plaintiff including all the properties in the suit and amending his plaint for the purpose.

And hence an objection to the maintainability of a suit on the ground that it is one for partial partition will not be allowed to be raised for the first time in special appeal.— 5 T. L. J., 123.

20. It is always a question of fact whether any given set of circumstances gives rise to an implication either of assent or dissent. In other words, the implication is not one in law but merely a logical inference from facts proved and admitted.

A misconception as regards the correct point of view of an issue, which has entirely vitiated the Judge's appreciation of evidence and the finding he ultimately recorded is a ground of second appeal.— 6 T. L. J., 474.

21. The question whether a valid custom exists or not is a mixed one of law and fact; for though in each case the question has ultimately to be determined upon the evidence adduced the freedom of judgment of the Court in coming to a conclusion is not absolutely unfettered, as the finding has to be arrived at in accordance with certain pre-established rules of law, that is to say, the Court has to see whether the requisites of a legally valid custom which have been laid down by the law have been shown to exist in the particular case, whether the finding is based on evidence which is legally admissible and legally sufficient, and whether the evidence has been brought to the notice of the Court in accordance with fixed rules of law.

If the above rules of law have been complied with, the High Court will not in second appeal interfere with the concurrent findings of the lower Courts as to the existence of the custom in issue in the case, though in a proper case (as for instance when the judgment is based on slender materials), the High Court may hold that it should not be treated as a precedent in future suits.

When it is said that the evidence must be legally sufficient, it is not meant that the evidence on record should be sufficient to induce the second Appellate Court to come to the conclusion that the alleged custom exists: but that it should be such as a reasonable man may, on the strength of it, find in favour of the existence of the custom. If, therefore, there is evidence on record, on which a Judge may reasonably find that the custom alleged in the case exists, then the concurrent findings of the lower Courts cannot be disturbed in second appeal.—

22. The question whether, in the absence of direct evidence, a particular inference or conclusion can be drawn from a certain set of facts is one of law and not merely of facts. From facts found, it is often easy to rule with certainty that a certain legal inference ought or ought not to be drawn. When such a state of fact occurs, the Court in second appeal can and often does correct erroneous conclusions drawn by the lower Appellate Court. In other words, the facts found need not be questioned. It is the soundness of the conclusions from them that is to be questioned and this is a question of law. It is therefore open to the High Court sitting as a Court of second appeal to satisfy itself as to the soundness of the conclusion drawn by the lower Courts upon the facts found by them.— 10 T. L. J., 154.

Appl.—17 T. L. J., 345.
Fol.— 18 T. L. J., 899.

23. A plea, taken in the Court of first instance but abandoned in the lower Appellate Court, could not be raised in second appeal, as it depended on questions of fact.—

16 T. L. J., 143.

24. As regards second appeals, the functions of the High Court are completely circumscribed by Sections 79 and 80 which are intended for the express purpose of securing some measure of finality in cases where the balance of evidence, oral and documentary, arises for decision.

The fact that the High Court would have arrived at a different conclusion upon the evidence, oral and documentary, adduced in the case would not by itself amount to an error of law or procedure within the meaning of Section 79 and justify an interference with the concurrent findings of fact recorded by the primary and first Appellate Courts. If there is evidence to be considered, the decision of the lower Courts, however unsatisfactory they may be when examined, could not be disturbed. No such interference is permissible on the ground of the weakness or meagreness of the evidence. Even when the findings are based upon a misconstruction of certain documents, which are neither documents of title nor embody a contract nor form the foundation of the suit, the findings should not be disturbed. If, however, documents form the basis of the suit, interference could be made. But when the Appellate Court proceeds upon wrong principles or upon an erroneous view as to the burden of proof, or Second appeal on no other grounds.

80. No second appeal shall lie except on the grounds mentioned in Section 79.

Power of High Court to determine issues of fact.

81. In any second appeal, the High Court may, if the evidence on the record is sufficient, determine any issue of fact necessary for the disposal of the appeal but not determined by the lower Appellate Court.

---

when it leaves out of account an important portion of the evidence which may have a material bearing in the decision of the matter, such interference is permissible.—

25. Under Section 553 [new Section 79], concurrent findings of fact would under normal circumstances be final, and the second Appellate Court would not ordinarily be justified in interfering with the same. Of course, if errors of law which would cover errors in appreciation or applying the rules of evidence or the judicial methods of weighing evidence are committed, such findings could be interfered with. The same is also allowed when an important portion of the evidence which has a material bearing in the decision of the matter is left out. No such error or exclusion was made out in the case. The question whether a particular inference or conclusion could be drawn from a particular set of facts would be a question of law within the meaning of Section 553, and therefore a ground for interference in second appeal by the High Court.—

18 T. L. J., 899.

26. A second appeal was preferred against the order of the lower Appellate Court refusing to set aside a sale under Order XXI, Rule 89. A preliminary objection was taken that no second appeal lay. Order XLII, Rule 1, provides for a first appeal against the order and Section 82. Clause(2), expressly prohibits second appeals from orders passed in appeal under that Section. The contention was that as the new Code was not in force on the date of the order by the original Court, the provisions of the new Code did not apply to the case. But before the second appeal was filed, the new Code had come into force, and an enactment which deals with procedure only, unless the contrary is expressed applies to all actions whether commenced before or after the passing of the Act. The second appeal was therefore governed by the law of procedure in force on the date of the appeal and not the Code in force on the date of the order of the original or first Appellate Court. The preliminary objection must therefore prevail.— 19 T. L. J., 406.

27. Pleas which were not put forward in the plaint or at any stage of the suit could not be allowed to be raised for the first time in second appeal.— 44 T. L. R., 11.

This Section reproduces Section 103 as enacted in Act V of 1908. That Act has been amended by Act VI of 1926 which has substituted the words—"which has not been determined by the lower Appellate Court or which has been wrongly determined by such Court by reason of any illegality,

(b) an order on an award stated in the form of a special case ;

(c) an order modifying or correcting an award ;

(d) an order filing or refusing to file an agreement to refer to arbitration ;

Sec. 82 [ = S. 557 = S. 104 ]

I. "It will be seen that several orders which are, at present, made appealable, do not find a place in this Section. The policy is to permit as little interference as possible with the orders passed in the normal course of a suit in its progress up to the decree; and provide for appeals against such orders only as seriously affect the property and liberty of a litigant. Any other interlocutory order may, as provided by Section 84, be made a ground of appeal in any further proceeding that may be taken against the decree." Notes on Clauses.

II. For Section 557 of Regulation II of 1065, see under Order XLII, Rule 1.

III. 1. Section 104 of the Indian Code has the following Clause in addition :—

"(e) an order staying or refusing to stay a suit where there is an agreement to refer to arbitration."

This Clause has been transferred, in the Regulation, to Order XLII, Rule (1), where it will be found as Clause (23).

(b) Act IX of 1922 has added the following Clause and Proviso to Sub-Section (1) of Section 104 of the Indian Code :–

"(ff) an order under Section 35-A;"

"Provided that no appeal shall lie against any order specified in Clause (ff) save on the ground that no order, or an order for the payment of a less amount, ought to have been made."

[For Section 35-A, referred to, see under Section 32].

IV. 1. The adjudications of a Court of law may be divided into two classes--decrees and orders. Orders may be divided into appealable and non-appealable orders. Under the new Code, there is no second appeal from any order, while under the old Code second appeals were allowed in respect of certain orders. Under the definition of decree in the new Code, certain orders are now decrees, such as orders under Sections 40, 108 and 109, Order XXI, r. 2, orders rejecting plaint, orders rejecting appeal as time-barred.

2. Appealable orders are those mentioned in Section 82 and Order XLII, Rule 1.

That appeal was dismissed on the preliminary ground that no appeal lay. On the question whether such appeal lay:

„ (2) [ = — = „ (2)]

I. 1. Section 560 of Regulation II of 1065 corresponds to Sub-section (1) of the new Section and was as follows :—

"560. No other appeal from orders; but error therein may be set forth in memorandum of appeal against decree.—Except as provided in this Chapter, no appeal........ order passed by any Court........; but if any decree be appealed against, any error, defect or irregularity in any such order, affecting ........of appeal."

2. As regards Sub-section (2), the Notes on Clauses said :—"This provision is analogous to the provision relating to preliminary decree, and is enacted for the same reason."

II. The new Section reproduces Section 105 (1) and (2) of the British Indian Code. In Sub-section (1), it will be noted that the word 'such' which occurred in the expression 'in any such order' in the old Code is not now found there. In deleting the word, the Indian Special Committee said that it was done to remove a difficulty which it was creating, as it was contended that the Section applied to non-appealable orders only, a contention, however, that was overruled by the Privy Council (10 Moo. I. A. 340, 413; 12 Moo. I. A., 157).

III. In regard to Sub-section (2), the Indian Special Committee observed :—

"Though the remarks of the Privy Council in Moheshur Sing V. The Bengal Government (7 Moo. I. A., 283) are wide enough to embrace an appeal from an order of remand, the Committee think those orders were probably not in their Lordships' contemplation when they condemned the view that a failure to appeal from an interlocutory order should deprive the person aggrieved of his right to object to such order when subsequently appealing

General Provisions relating to Appeals.

Powers of Appellate Court.

85. (1) Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, an Appellate Court shall have power—

(a) to determine a case finally;
(b) to remand a case;
(c) to frame issues and refer them for trial;
(d) to take additional evidence or to require such evidence to be taken.

(2) Subject as aforesaid, the Appellate Court shall have the same powers and shall perform as nearly as may be the same duties as are conferred and imposed by this Code on Courts of original jurisdiction in respect of suits instituted therein.

from the decree. And the Committee think there are good reasons on the score of delay and expense for treating an appeal from an order of remand as a special case and precluding an appellant from taking, on an appeal from decree, any objection that might have been urged by way of appeal from an order of remand."

"551. Appellate Court to have same powers as Courts of original jurisdiction.—The Appellate Court shall have, in appeals under this Chapter, the same powers, and shall perform as nearly as may be the same duties, as are conferred and imposed by this Code on Courts of original jurisdiction, in respect of suits instituted under Chapter V; and, in Chapter XXI, so far as may be, the words "plaintiff," "defendant" and "suit" shall be held to include an appellant, a respondent and an appeal, respectively, in proceedings arising out of the death or marriage of parties to an appeal.

The provisions hereinbefore contained shall apply to appeals under this Chapter so far as such provisions are applicable."

['This Chapter' referred to is Chapter XXXIX dealing with 'Appeals from original decrees'. Chapter V deals with the 'Institution of suits', and Chapter XXI with the 'Death, Marriage and Insolvency of Parties'.]

Case Law.

1. Parties cannot be allowed in appeal to supplement their pleadings by addition of important averments not thought of in the lower Court.— 4 T. L. R., 26.

2. An attaching decree-holder acquires by his attachment such an interest in the subject-matter of the attachment as would entitle him to be made a party to the appeal preferred against the decree attached.

Section 551 read with Sections 28 [=Or. I, rr. 8 (2), 10 (2) & (3) & 11] and 356 [= Or. XXII, r. 10 (1)] empowers the Appellate Court to make the attaching decree-holder a party in appeal.

An agreement which allows the judgment-debtor to pay the decree amount in instalments is an agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt contemplated in Section 254, Civil Procedure Code. Such an agreement made without the sanction of the Court is void only for execution purposes and not void for all purposes (F.B).

Per Krishnan Nair, C. J.—Under Section 356 any person in whose favour an interest is created or on whom an interest devolves during the pendency of a suit, may be made a party to a suit. Similarly, under Section 551 read with Section 356, a person who obtains an interest during the pendency of an appeal may be made a party to the appeal. The use of the words "death" and "marriage" in the latter part of Section 551 does not restrict the wide powers given under the first part of the Section and confine the power to cases of interest created by death and marriage alone and make it inapplicable to other classes of interest such as those created by assignment or otherwise. In fact interest created by death and marriage are specifically referred to in the Section, but other classes of interest are not excluded either expressly or by necessary implication.

An agreement to give time for the satisfaction of a judgment-debt without the sanction of the Court is void only for execution purposes, and not for all purposes, and a suit based on such an agreement is maintainable. To hold otherwise would be to hold that the Legislature intended to insert a rule of substantive law in a Code which deals exclusively with adjectival law.

No distinction can be made between an agreement which keeps a decree alive and an agreement which does not keep a decree alive.

If consideration be necessary, ready cash payment of a portion of the decree-debt and the certainty of getting a fixed amount regularly every month without the trouble of execution and the uncertainty of being able to realise the decree amount may be regarded as consideration for a relinquishment of a portion of the decree amount and for the consent to pay in monthly instalments.

Per Hunt, J.—An agreement offending against the provisions of Section 254 is void only for purposes of that Section and not for all purposes and is no bar to a fresh suit. The agreement has consideration. The consideration moving from the judgment-creditor was his forbearance to execute his decree, and on the part of the judgment-debtor his guaranteeing payment under the agreement of the amounts therein agreed to be paid.

Per Ramachandra Row, J.—A distinction should be drawn between cases where the decree has been extinguished by the agreement and those where the right to execute the decree has been only suspended. Where the decree is extinguished by the agreement, a separate suit will lie in spite of Section 254. If the agreement did not contemplate the extinction of all remedies under the decree, then in order that it may be used upon, it should be supported by consideration. Though the extinction of the decree is not necessarily the only possible consideration, it is an essential part of the consideration.

Where a decree is capable of execution and it was the intention of the parties to keep it alive, a suit would not lie on the agreement which offends against Section 254. In such a case, a judgment-debtor cannot successfully sue for damages for the breach of the agreement to certify the adjustment to the execution Court under Section 255 [=Or. XXI, r. 2] in the absence of an agreement to that effect. This view does not prohibit the judgment-debtor from recovering money paid but not certified, for the right of action to sue for the recovery of money paid for an existing consideration which has subsequently failed, still subsists.—

3. An application to be appointed guardian of the person and property of certain minors by the husband of one of the minors was opposed by the paternal grand-mother of the minors, and was rejected by the District Judge. On appeal by the applicant, it was contended for him, inter alia, that the Appellate Court had not the power to examine the evidence and itself appoint a guardian, as such power was vested in the District Court alone under the Guardian and Wards Regulation.

Held.—(1) Applications under the Guardian and Wards Regulation, especially when contested, partake of the nature of suits, and the provisions of Section 551 of the Civil Procedure Code, which prescribes the powers of the Appellate Courts are applicable to appeals coming before them under Section 43 of the Guardian and Wards Regulation.

Even in the case of an appeal filed under Section 43 of the Guardian and Wards Regulation against an order of the District Court, where such order admittedly specifically deals with only one of the matters in dispute, and does not deal with any other matters or matters in dispute between the parties, it is not incumbent on the Appellate Court to remand the appeal to the lower Court. It is competent to the Appellate Court itself, where it finds that the evidence on record is sufficient for a disposal of the questions in controversy between the parties and where it does not appear that any evidence was excluded by the lower Court, to decide the questions in dispute forthwith. Sections 546 [=Or. XL, r. 31] and 551 of the Civil Procedure Code must be read along with Section 43 of the Guardian and Wards Regulation.

(2) The words "or Court" occurring in Section 10 of the Guardian and Wards Regulation should be taken to refer not exclusively to the Court of first instance but to include the Court of Appeal as well.

Section 43 of the Guardian and Wards Regulation does not define the extent of the powers of the Appellate Court. The Appellate Court when it hears the appeal is, therefore, competent to make in substitution for the order passed by the inferior Court, such an order as, in its opinion, ought to have been passed by that Court. In other words, if the Appellate Court, when it hears the appeal, is satisfied that A and not B ought to be appointed guardian of the minor, it will be competent for it to appoint A as such guardian.—28 T. L. R., 197 (=3 T. L. J., 154).

6. Suit for redemption of a mortgage of 1062 granted by a Malayali-Brahmin Jenmi. The defence was that the tenure created by the deed was an irredeemable Kanom. The deed did not stipulate for the payment of Adukkuvathu at the time of renewal, but simply provided for renewal at the end of 12 years according to 'established practice' (ഉഠ). The suit was in 1083.

Held (in special appeal).—Though at the hearing of the appeal such additional period had also expired, plaintiff could not get a decree for redemption, as the decree must have reference to the state of things existing on date of plaint, and the plaintiff was not entitled on date of plaint to get the relief he now claimed.— 2 T. Held.—A decree for redemption should be passed.

In exceptional cases a Court may take notice of events which have happened since the institution of the suit and has inherent power to afford relief on the basis of altered conditions.— 13 T. L. J., 407.

8. Plaintiff was a member of the Tarwad of which the second defendant was the Anandaravan. Plaintiff sued to redeem a document in favour of the predecessor-in-title of first defendant. The second defendant contested the suit on the ground that plaintiff as a junior member had no right to sue for redemption in his life-time. First defendant supported the contention and also set up the defence that second defendant had received from him a sum of money for which credit was to be given when a renewal was executed and that he was entitled to at least one renewal for 12 years. The Munsiff dismissed the suit. The District Judge allowed the suit, holding that the death of the second defendant pending the suit gave plaintiff a right to sue and that second defendant had no authority to grant an additional term of 12 years on receipt of Adukkuvathu. In special appeal by defendant, the main question was whether plaintiff was entitled to a decree by reason of the death of second defendant which happened when the appeal was pending in the District Court.

Held.—Plaintiff was not entitled to any relief. The suit was dismissed.

Per Chatfield, J.—The general rule is that the plaintiff must fail in his suit if he cannot show that at the date of the plaint he had a cause of action. It is not enough that during the course of the action, circumstances have so changed as to give rise to a cause of action. The rule is that the decree must have reference to the state of things existing at the date of the plaint and where at that date the plaintiff had no cause of action, no relief could be given to him. But there are exceptions to this rule.

It is in the power of the Court and often it is its duty to take notice of events which have happened subsequent to suit and afford relief on the basis of altered conditions. But there are certain restrictions to this doctrine.

The cause of action should have come into existence during the pendency of the case in the trial Court, as otherwise, a judgment, dismissing a suit as premature, could not be regarded as in any way incorrect, or in the alternative, the point must have been one which was not taken by the opposite party in the trial Court but only in the Appellate Court after a decision has been passed against him. Further it must be clear that the defendant has no defence to the suit except the fact that it is premature. Even within these limits, a Court, though it might have jurisdiction to pass a decree, might very well refuse to exercise that jurisdiction in cases where the original absence of right on the part of the plaintiff to sue was obvious. Neither of the above state of facts existed in the case.

Per Vurghese J.—A Court may take notice of events that happened subsequent to the filing of the suit to make the relief granted appropriate and effective and to shorten litigation. This does not go to the length of saying that the plaintiff who had no right to sue on the date of the suit may be given any relief owing to the change of circumstances which took place after filing of the plaint in the original Court —

9. The suit was for declaration of the plaintiff's title to and possession of the plaint property and for a permanent injunction restraining the defendants from entering upon the same and for other reliefs. Two years after the institution of the suit, plaintiff applied for leave to amend the plaint by the inclusion of a prayer for eviction on the basis of a trespass committed subsequent to the institution of the suit.

Held.—The amendment should be allowed. Even supposing that the prayer for a permanent injunction claimed by way of consequential relief was incompetent and the suit, in the form in which it was originally presented, was bad, the amendment could be allowed.

Events subsequent to the filing of the suit could be taken into account by the Courts in appropriate cases in granting applications for amendments of plaints. Ordinarily such reliefs should not be granted to a plaintiff who had no cause of action at the date of the suit. But the same could, however, be allowed in very exceptional cases in exercise of the inherent jurisdiction in order to grant reliefs rendered necessary by reason of the altered conditions after suit, to make the same appropriate Procedure in appeals from appellate decrees and orders.

86. The provisions of this Part relating to appeals from original decrees shall, so far as may be, apply to appeals—

(a) from appellate decrees, and and effective and to shorten litigation. In the peculiar nature of the case an adjudication on the claim to the above relief was considered necessary for the avoidance of multiplicity of suits and the application treated as deserving exceptional treatment.— 43 T. Fol.—18 T. L. J., 640.

10. If an appeal is preferred and the same comes to be rejected for any of the reasons mentioned in Section 50 [=Or. VII, r. 11], such presentation will be no bar to a fresh appeal, as under Section 551 the principle underlying Section 52 [ =Or. VII, r. 13] is clearly applicable to memoranda of appeals.

In an appeal against the final decree in a partition suit, it is open to the appellant to question the correctness of the preliminary decree or order for partition when no appeal has been preferred therefrom within the time allowed by law.

The rejection of an appeal from a preliminary decree on the ground of non-payment of proper court fee on the appeal memorandum does not operate as a bar to the raising of objections to the decree in an appeal filed from the final decree.

The old Civil Procedure Code recognised preliminary decrees (F. B.).— 44 T. L R., 315 (=18 T. L. J., 996).

"559. The procedure prescribed in Chapter XXXIX shall, so far as may be, apply to appeals from orders under this Code, or under any special or local law in which a different procedure is not provided."

Sec. 87 [ = S. 563 = S. 113]

I. Section 563 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"563. Reference of question to High Court.—If before or on the hearing of a suit or an appeal in which the decree is final, or if in the execution of any such decree, any question of law or usage having the force of law, or the construction of a document which construction may affect the merits, arises, on which the Court trying the suit or appeal, or executing the decree, entertains reasonable doubt, the Court may, either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties, draw up a statement of the facts of the case and the point on which doubt is entertained, and refer such statement with its own opinion on the point for the decision of the High Court."

II. See Order XLIV, Rule 1.

Sec. 88 [= S. 569 = S. 114]

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"569. Application for review of judgment.—Any person considering himself aggrieved—

(a) by a decree or order from which an appeal is hereby allowed, but from which no appeal has been preferred,

(b) by a decree or order from which no appeal is hereby allowed, or

(c) by a judgment on a reference from a Court in non-appealable cases, and who from the discovery of new and important matter or evidence which, after the exercise of due diligence, was not within his knowledge or could not be produced by him at the time when the decree was passed or order made, or on account of some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, or for any other sufficient reason, desires to obtain a review of the decree passed or order made against him, may apply for a review of judgment to the Court which passed the decree or made the order, or to the Court, if any, to which the business of the former Court has been transferred.

A party who is not appealing from a decree may apply for a review of judgment notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal by some other party, except when the ground of such appeal is common to the applicant and to the appellant, or when, being a respondent, he can present to the Appellate Court the case on which he applies for the review."

II. See Order XLV, Rule 1.

Case Law.

1. When the Court thinks there are sufficient grounds for granting an application for a review, notice of such application should be given to the opposite party. If the Court decides to grant the review, an order granting the application with the reasons for granting the same should be recorded.— 1 T. L. R., 49.

2. When a judgment-debtor's property is sold in public auction in execution of a valid subsisting decree of an Appellate Court, and a third party bona fide purchased it, the debtor cannot sue to set aside the sale by reason of the subsequent reversal of the decree upon review, but must look to the judgment-creditor for the value of the property sold.— 2 T. L. R., 95.

3. "It cannot be treated as a universal rule that no point can be raised on an application for a review which has been already discussed and decided on the original hearing of the appeal, or that no new point which has not been raised on the hearing of the appeal, can be argued on the application for review. In each case, the Court to which the application is made must consider and decide whether a review is necessary to correct any evident error or omission, or is otherwise requisite for the ends of justice." (6 B. L. R., 126).—

4. No review lies unless fresh and important matter appears to have been discovered, and no second review lies.— 2 S. D., 249.

5. The plaintiff obtained a decree for money. Before an appeal against it was filed, the plaintiff applied to the Court which passed the decree to review it and award him future interest as well. An appeal was subsequently filed against the decree by the defendant, but was withdrawn. The application for review was subsequently heard and granted, thus awarding future interest as well. In appeal against the decree passed on review, it was contended, inter alia, that the first Court had no jurisdiction to interfere with its decree, as the same has been confirmed in appeal.

Held.—The first Court had jurisdiction. The order of the first Court, passed in the first instance, refusing to entertain the review on the ground of want of jurisdiction, was set aside in revision by the High Court, and the order of the High Court bound the defendant who was a party to the same.—

6. The mortgagee of 5/6th share in an undivided property sued for partition and recovery by metes and bounds of the share mortgaged to him. The defendant having contended, inter alia, that the plaintiff, a mortgagee, was incompetent to sue for partition, the plaintiff applied to amend the plaint so as to include a prayer for recovery of the mortgage amount charged on the mortgaged property. This application was rejected, and the suit also was, after some time, dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff being only a mortgagee was not competent to sue for partition. In the meantime, the order refusing leave to amend plaint was appealed against, and the High Court, in their revisional jurisdiction, set aside that order. The suit had been dismissed before the High Court pronounced decision. The lower Court restored the suit to its file again, revoking the decree dismissing the suit, on the ground that the High Court's decision had the effect of vacating the decree of the lower Court dismissing the suit,—

Held.—(1) The Judge had acted without jurisdiction.

It is clear law that without a petition for review or an order from a superior Court, no Judge has jurisdiction to pronounce fresh judgment when there is already a valid judgment in the case passed by his Court.

(2) The mere presentation of a revision petition against the order of a lower Court did not make it necessary for the Court to stay the proceedings.—31 T. L. R., 61
(= 5 T. L. J., 352).

7. Though the phrase "for any other sufficient reasons" occurring in Section 569 C. P. C. has to be liberally construed, it will not cover allegations imputing to the Court oversight of or in-advertence to questions of fact which in themselves constitute but links in the chain of reasoning.

When the order admitting the review and the second judgment are set aside, the parties are relegated to the position occupied by them before the date of the order admitting the review, and the party who is prejudicially affected, by the setting aside of a judgment based on an order improperly admitting a review, will not be allowed to support such judgment in appeal preferred by his adversary.

The word "shall" in "shall record with his own hand his reasons for such opinion" in Section 572 C. P. C. is mandatory. When the same word occurs more than once in one and the same Section of a statute, the Legislature must be presumed to have used that word in the same sense, unless there is plain indication to the contrary in the context.— 12 T. L. J., 53.

8. There is nothing in Section 569 which would prevent the party aggrieved from presenting a petition for review and asking the Court to give its opinion on a question of law which was not dealt with by the Court through oversight.

The point was urged at the hearing of the case but it was, by oversight, not considered by the Court. This was sufficient reason for granting a review (F. B.).—

9. It is clear law that, where an application for review has been presented by a party to the suit, and an appeal is afterwards preferred from the same decree, whether by the same party or by the other party to the suit, the Court to which the application for review is made is not thereby deprived of jurisdiction to entertain the application. That power, however, exists only so long as the appeal is not heard : for, once the appeal is heard, the decree on appeal is the final decree in the case and the application for review of judgment cannot be proceeded with. If the application for review is granted and a new decree is passed, the appeal cannot be heard and it must be dismissed, because the decree appealed from is superseded by the new decree.

An application for review of judgment may pass through three stages. The Court has, in the first instance, to satisfy itself that the application is based prima facie on grounds contemplated by law and is presented within time to a Judge who has jurisdiction to admit it. If so satisfied, the Court issues a rule to the opposite party to show cause against the application ; while, if not so satisfied, the Court rejects the application forthwith. The next stage is reached when the opposite party appears to show cause. Here, again, the Court may either discharge the rule or make the rule absolute by admitting the application. The third stage is the final one. It is then that the matter is re-opened and heard afresh on the merits. The Court may thereupon either dismiss the application or grant it partly or wholly with reference to the soundness of the grounds urged in support of the review. Very often, however, the distinction between the second and third stages is not observed in practice. The review may be admitted and granted at the same hearing, if the grounds of the application do not necessitate a detailed examination and scrutiny of the record.—

10. The judgment of the High Court passed under the Succession Certificate Regulation is reviewable under Section 88 and Order XLV, C. P. C., like the judgment under the Code.— 18 T. L. J., 65.

11. It is highly essential that there should be a finality in the trial of cases, and the greatest care ought to be bestowed in granting a review, especially on the ground of discovery of fresh evidence, as by any laxity herein the door may be thrown open to all kinds of abuses. "It is so easy to the party who has lost his case to see what the weak part of his case was, and the temptation to try and procure evidence which will strengthen that weak part and put a different complexion upon that part of the case must be very strong." To invoke the aid of this part of the Section [569 corresponding to Or. XLV, r. 1], it is essential for the party to make out clearly (1) that the evidence relied on is (a) new, and (b) important, and (2) that after the exercise of due care and diligence the same (a) was not within his knowledge or (b) could not be produced at the time the decree was passed. The Court disposing of the application for review has to adjudicate specifically upon all the above points. Considering the nature of the provisions contained in the Code, it is doubtful whether a subsequent event could be treated as new matter or evidence within the meaning of this Section (569) for purpose of review. It has to be remembered that the aid of the Court is invoked on the basis that the decision in the case was incorrect as it stood then. In this view, the new evidence or matter contemplated in this provision should necessarily relate to those that were in existence at the date of the decree and not those that came into existence thereafter. The evidence adduced should, besides being new and important, be "such as is presumably to be believed, and, if believed, would be conclusive". The evidence, if adduced, must practically conclude the case and require a decision in favour of the petitioner to be passed in the case. —18 T. L. J., 1175.

12. An application does not lie for restoration of an appeal rejected for non-payment of advance printing charges. The remedy available to the appellant in such a case is that of review.

The Code enables the Court disposing of an appeal to disturb its orders relating thereto only in three sets of cases. In the first place, a right to apply for restoration is allowed under Rule 18 of Order XL in cases of dismissal under Rules 16 and 17 of that Order or under Rule 10 in cases of rejection for default to furnish security for costs. The other remedy provided for is that under Section 88 read with Order XLV, Rule 1, allowing a right of review. This latter remedy will be clearly available to appellants in cases like the present.—

13. Both upon a construction of Section 569 and also on principle, it has to be held that it is undesirable to allow applications for review where compromise decrees are attacked on the ground that consent was obtained through fraud, undue influence or mistake or misrepresentation and that the remedy of the party lies by way of a separate suit.— 19 T. L. J., 643.

14. Orders passed by the trial Court from time to time in purely interlocutory matters, such as the order to examine a witness or to take a plan of the disputed property are not matters subject to review. The provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to reviews apply only to orders which satisfy the definition of an order in Section 2 of the Code. Such an order must be a decision, i. e., decision of a case or any part of a case.

89. The High Court may call for the record of any case decided in any Court subordinate thereto, in which no appeal lies, for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the legality of any judgment, decree or order passed therein and as to the regularity of any proceedings of such inferior Court, and pass such order in the case as the High Court thinks fit.

Sec. 89 [ = S. 568 =S. 115]

I. This Section is the same as Section 568 of Regulation II of 1065.

II. Section 115 of the British Indian Code is as follows:—115. The High Court may call for the record of any case which has been decided by any Court subordinate to such High Court and in which no appeal lies thereto, and if such subordinate Court appears—

(a) to have exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law, or

(b) to have failed to exercise a jurisdiction so vested, or

(c) to have acted in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity, the High Court may make such order in the case as it thinks fit."

The original Bill adopted the above wording, in place of Section 568 of the old Code; and the Notes on Clauses said:—

"Beyond altering the wording of the present Section, and conferring power to interfere when anything is done in excess of jurisdiction, or when there is refusal to exercise jurisdiction, the Section does not confer any new power, or take away any. The Section is as wide as it ought to be."

But the Select Committee considered it better to retain the wording of Section 568 of the Regulation, and substituted that Section for the one in the Bill.

III. It may be noted that Section 622 of the 1882 Indian Code which is reproduced, with little alteration, as Section 115 of the present Indian Code corresponds with Section 568 of the old Regulation. In adopting the Indian Section 622 for Regulation II of 1065, it was observed:—

"Section 622 being somewhat ambiguous and having given room to a conflict of decisions in British India, is re-enacted so as to empower the High Court to revise, in non-appealable cases, proceedings of all the lower Courts as to the legality or otherwise of their proceedings."—S. O. & R., Para 78.

IV. 1. "If there is one power which it is of the first importance that this Court (the High Court) should possess, it is the power of sending for the record in civil cases where no appeal lies. Experience shows that in a very great many such cases grave illegalities and material irregularities in the proceedings of the Courts below exist, and it is essential that in such cases the High Court should have the power of interference." (8 All., 111). Further, it will be remarked that our Section, unlike the British Section 622 gives the same powers of revision in civil cases as are provided in Criminal cases by Section 329 of our Criminal Procedure Code, to correct illegalities and irregularities of procedure.—

2. The language of Section 568 materially differs from that of the corresponding Section of the British Indian Code, viz., Section 622 of Act XIV of 1882 and Section 115 of Act V of 1908. It seems to us that the power conferred under Section 568 of our Code is wider than what is conferred by the corresponding Section of the British Indian Code.— 33 T. L. R., 23.

Case Law.

1. A District Judge granted an injunction under Section 472 C. P. C. [=Or. XXXVII, r. 2], in reversal of the order passed by a District Munsiff. When an application for revision of the Judge's order was made by the first defendant, the petitioner, under Section 568 of the C. P. C., the counter-petitioner opposed it on the ground that the first defendant's remedy lay under Section 475 or 560 [ = Or. XXXVII, r. 4 or new Section 83 (1)], but not under Section 568 of the C. P. C.

Held.—(1) Section 475 could not help the petitioner as the application for cancellation therein intended must, according to the context, be made to the original Court and that Court has no power to cancel the order of the District Court. As to Section 560 if the validity of the order could be brought to the notice of the Appellate Court only when the whole case comes on appeal, the petitioner will be practically remedyless, even if the Appeal Court dismissed the suit on the merits, while on the other hand, the counter-petitioner would practically obtain all the relief that he asks, i. e., the injunction in the plaint without proving his case on the merits.

To prevent grave and irreparable loss, the interference of the High Court under Section 568 was necessary in the interest of justice and the word "case" in that Section would cover an interlocutory order passed during the progress of a suit and the phrase "records of any case" occurring in the same Section would include so much of the proceedings in a suit as related to the interlocutory order.

(2) A District Judge should, before granting an injunction in reversal of a District Munsiff's order, satisfy himself that prima facie the suit was within the cognisance of the District Munsiff.

(3) As the suit in question was for declaration of a trust, the purpose and object of which were not definite enough to warrant a decree for specific performance, the District Judge was wrong in granting the injunction.— 14 T. L. R. App., 22.

2. The Munsiff set aside the orders dismissing two suits for absence of plaintiffs and ordered notices to the opposite parties, though he ought to have previously given such notices as required by the second para of Section 98 C. P. C. [=Or. IX, r. 9]. The defendants thereupon prayed for revision of the said orders.

It is inadvisable to interfere in revision against interlocutory orders in pending suits seeing that such revisions might be rendered useless owing to the ultimate decree being in favour of the parties affected by such interlocutory orders. Again why should the trial of a case be hampered by revision petitions against every interlocutory order when the party affected by such order can raise the contention in the appeal preferred against the final decree? [See Section 560 C. P. C.=New Section 83 (1)].

The purpose with which Section 568, C. P. C., is framed is to get a decision or order rectified by the High Court where there would otherwise be no remedy.

The High Court does not usually interfere in revision even if an irregularity has happened in the lower Court if the net result of the order passed irregularly has been to promote the justice of the case.

In the case, the lower Court in passing orders for the restoration of the suits did not use its discretion so improperly as to induce the High Court to exercise its extraordinary powers of revision.— K. P., 236.

Fol.—30 T. L. R., 68
(= 12 T. L. J., 371).

3. On revision, the High Court ordered that the District Judge's observations which were not necessary for the disposal of the appeal before him should be expunged from the record.— K. P., 271.

4, An application by the petitioner, a Kudiyan, to deposit Michavarom in Court, was opposed by the Jenmi, counter-petitioner. The Jenmi's objections were overruled, and the petitioner was allowed to deposit Michavarom. The Jenmi applied for revision of this decision.

Held.—No revision lay, as Section 31, Clause 4, of the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation gave a right to any party affected by an order passed under that Section to contest the validity of the order by a regular suit.

The current of decisions in this Court has been to hold that where the law has prescribed a particular remedy for any error or irregularity appearing in any order sought to be revised, that remedy ought, as a general rule, to be pursued.

"Where a decree or order of a subordinate Court is declared by the law to be, for its own purposes, final or conclusive, though in its nature provisional, as subject to displacement by the decree in another more formal suit, the Court will have regard to the intention of the Legislature that promptness and certainty should, in such cases, be, in some measure, accepted instead of judicial perfection. It will rectify the proceedings of the inferior Court when the extrinsic conditions of its legal activity have been plainly infringed: but, where the alleged apparent error consists in a misappehension of evidence or misconstruction of the law, intrinsic to the enquiry and decision, it will respect the intended finality and will intervene peremptorily only when it is manifest that by the ordinary and prescribed method an adequate remedy or the intended remedy cannot be had." (7 Bom., 341.)— 2 T. L. J., 280.

5. It is competent for the High Court to revise under Section 568 of the Code of Civil Procedure any illegal or other order of the Land Acquisition officer which he had no authority to pass under the terms of the Land Acquisition Regulation and against which no remedy by way of appeal has been provided by the law, on the ground that the Land Acquisition Officer is a Court subordinate to the High Court within the intendment of Section 568, C. P. C. (C. R. P., 149 of 1088) (F. B.).—

(=4 T. L. J., 238).

6. When a suit is not dismissed on the ground of erroneous valuation, the plaintiff is not entitled to challenge by means of a revision petition the order of the lower Court directing him to pay court fees on the market value of the property which he seeks to recover. Granting for the sake of argument that the High Court is competent under Section 568 to revise an interlocutory order passed by a subordinate Court under Section 10 of the Court Fees Regulation, the order of the lower Court, in the case, did not seem to be so erroneous as to induce the High Court to interfere with it.

6 T. L. J., 60.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 52.

7. Orders rejecting review applications are open to revision under Section 568, C. P. C. The use of the word "final" in Section 575 [= Or. XLV, rr. 7 & 9] does not necessarily imply that the intention of the Legislature should be taken to be that such orders are not liable to be interfered with even in revision. There is nothing in the language of Section 568 to suggest that the powers conferred thereunder should not be exercised in the case of orders passed by subordinate Courts in rejecting review applications presented to them. Section 575 has to be read with Section 568, and so read Section 575 simply bars reviews and appeals and not revisions.

Where an application for review of judgment covers only a portion of the relief claimed in the plaint, the court fee payable on such application should be calculated not on the entire value of the original plaint but only on the relief which would be obtained if the review were granted.— 33 T. L. R., 23.

8. Counter-petitioner, a Mahomedan, applied to the District Judge for permission to sue in forma pauperis. It was opposed by petitioner (counter-petitioner's father's brother) on the ground that he was not a pauper, being entitled to his legal share in some of the properties involved in the proposed suit and he could encumber such share and raise the money requisite for paying the court fees. The District Judge holding that the counter-petitioner who is not in possession of his family properties could not be compelled to pledge his share and raise money, granted permission to sue in forma pauperis. On revision to the High Court, it was contended for the counter-petitioner that the order sought to be revised being an interlocutory order, the High Court was not competent to revise the same.

Held.—The order of the District Judge must be taken to be an adjudication in respect of the matters dealt with thereunder and is therefore properly revisable by the High Court under Section 568, C. P. C.

Palpu Pillai, J.—So far as the enquiry into pauperism which is regulated by the provisions of Sections 388 to 394, C. P. C., [ = Or. XXXIII, rr. 2 to 7 ], is concerned, it must be deemed to be a 'case' within the meaning of Section 568, C. P. C., and it makes no difference for the purposes of revision that the order eventually passed is one rejecting or granting the application.

A pauper being one who is not possessed of sufficient means to enable him to pay the fees prescribed by law for the plaint, the District Judge should dispose of the application after taking evidence as to the sufficiency or otherwise for the purpose of the required court fee, of the properties belonging to the counter-petitioner.

Per Raman Tampi, J.—There is no ground for holding that an enquiry into the pauperism of a petitioner is not in itself a 'case'. In this view, the refusal of an application for permission to sue in forma pauperis is as much a decision as the granting of a similar application and the mere circumstance that the latter event is followed by the registering and numbering of a regular suit does not make it less effectual as a decision of a particular case or the termination of the particular proceeding.

The words 'possessed of sufficient means' ought to be so construed as to cover not merely cases of actual physical possession but also cases of legal possession and undisputed claims. The counter-petitioner's undisputed claims to the properties is in law equivalent to possession of sufficient means to enable him to pay the prescribed Court fees; but the Court below should take evidence and decide as to the sufficiency of such means.— 34 T. L. R., 178.

Ref.—37 T. L. R., 102
Affirmed.—37 T. L. R., 138.

9. Section 568 which provides for revision by the High Court, is very wide in its terms. Under the Section, the High Court can, of its own motion, call for any record for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the legality of any judgment, decree or order passed in any case, and it is not necessary for the exercise of its powers of revision that it shall be put in motion by the party aggrieved.— 10 T. L. J., 172.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 691.

10. Against an award of the Land Acquisition Officer, the claimant applied within the time limited by Section 18 of the Land Acquisition Regulation requiring him to make a reference to the Civil Court under the Section. The objection was both in regard to the extent of the acquisition and the amount of compensation.

Held.—The Land Acquisition Officer should have referred the objection to the Civil Court, and the reference should be made under Section 18 instead of under Section 27 of the Land Acquisition Regulation.

In rejecting an application made under Section 18 of the Land Acquisition Regulation asking for a reference to the Civil Court, the Land Acquisition Officer acts judicially and his order is subject to revision by the High Court.

Strictly speaking, the appellant in the case should have invoked the revisional powers of the High Court when he found that the Land Acquisition Officer made the reference under Section 27, and he could have thus avoided the trouble and the expense of the enquiry before the District Court and the expenses of the appeal in the High Court.— 36 T. L. R., 12.

11. Plaintiff-petitioner's prayer for amendment of the plaint was refused by the Munsiff. He appealed against the Munsiff's order to the District Judge who returned the appeal for presentation to the proper Court. The appeal was accordingly presented to the High Court.

At the time of hearing, the High Court acceded to the appellant's prayer and treated the appeal as a revision petition, having regard to the fact urged that the order of the Munsiff was bad on the face of it and that injustice was likely to be done to the plaintiff if the order was to be left uninterfered with at this stage.—

(= 10 T. L. J., 246).

12. Interlocutory orders may form the subject of revision, if the matter they relate to stands by itself and in which the ends of justice would be defeated if the power of revision is not exercised.

The records had, by an order of the Court, been called for and there could be no doubt that, having regard to the generality of the terms of Section 568, the High Court could pass in such a case any order, whether in regard to fact or law, that it might think proper for the purposes of the justice of the case.

The primary consideration on which the Court will act in the exercise of its revisional powers is whether the ends of justice require its interference in the circumstances of any particular case brought to its notice; and when it has decided that the record should be called for, it is competent under Section 568 to examine the records and make such order as in its view the justice of the case requires.—

13. The High Court can under Section 568, C. P. C., call for the records of a case from a lower Court and expunge unnecessary remarks, even though it was not moved by a revision petition. Even otherwise, the Court has inherent jurisdiction to amend or rectify judgments and orders of inferior Courts, whenever such a course is deemed expedient in the interests of justice and fairness. There is no period of limitation prescribed by any law for the exercise of this jurisdiction and it is not necessary that the Court should require any person to show cause why an appropriate order should not be made.— 14 T. L. J., 183.

14. The assessee was the Imperial Bank of India, Alleppey Branch. The assessment was objected to on the ground that a portion of the income was exempt from taxation, and an appeal accordingly was presented to the Chief Revenue Authority. He confirmed the assessment of the Collector of Income-tax, and refused to state a case for the opinion of the High Court as prayed for by the assessee.

The Sirkar contended that the High Court is not competent to exercise its jurisdiction in the case and that it cannot interfere with the Chief Revenue Authority's decision.

Held.- (1) The proceedings of the Income-Tax Commissioner are judicial proceedings, and the Commissioner is for the purpose of the judicial proceedings a Judge, that is to say, the presiding Officer of a Court, and as such the Chief Revenue Authority is a Court subordinate to the High Court.

(2) The High Court does not act in the exercise of its original jurisdiction when it orders the Chief Revenue Authority to make a reference under Section 50 of the Income-Tax Regulation and the High Court is competent to make such an order when the Chief Revenue Authority rejects the assessee's application in that behalf (F. B.).— 42 T. L. R., 174 (=15 T. L. J., 394).

15. The High Court has jurisdiction to entertain a revision from an order of the Munsiff refusing to accept an application made under Section 27 of the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation to deposit Michavarom and Onakalcha by a person claiming to be the Kudiyan of the counter-petitioner.

Section 568 invests the High Court with a wide jurisdiction over decisions in cases which are not appealable. An application to deposit Michavarom is a case within the meaning of this Section, as the Munsiff has to exercise judicial discretion in granting leave to deposit, and it is certainly not appealable. However, the powers of the High Court should be exercised very sparingly in such cases.— 15 T. L. J., 481.

16. The High Court can interfere in revision with an order passed under Section 98 [= Or. IX, r. 9] or any other order against which an appeal does not lie. There is no hard and fast rule as regards the finality or otherwise of interlocutory orders, and the rule laid down in some of the decisions that the High Court will not interfere is not an absolute rule of law, but a wise rule of practice by which the High Court limits its interference to those occasions in which it is absolutely necessary. Where an interlocutory order is tainted by illegality, if it is one made without jurisdiction or in direct contravention of the provisions of law, it is not proper to say that the High Court should decline to disturb in revision on the single ground that it is an interlocutory order. On the other hand, if the order is merely irregular, the petitioner has his remedy in the fulness of time when perchance the whole case comes up before the High Court on appeal.

The function of the High Court when it exercises its revisional powers is to act in aid of justice.

There are two guiding principles which have to be kept in view :—(1) The power of revision will be exercised to correct gross and palpable errors and manifest illegality, to remedy irreparable wrong and to prevent gross injustice, and when the decision is perverse and there was a conscious or material departure from some rule of law or procedure. (2) The power of revision will not be exercised when equally efficacious remedy is open to the parties by way of appeal or fresh suit. When the remedy is by filing an appeal, it is more quickly obtained than when the remedy is by a fresh suit.

Section 560 [new Section 83 (1)] cannot be a bar to the power of revision under Section 568. Section 560 does not provide for an appeal from the order impeached. It provides a means to attack the order only in an indirect way and the means may not be effective. The remedy by way of objection from the final decree that may be passed is not always available or may be ineffectual. It is possible to think of extreme cases where the special remedy by appeal is inapplicable or ineffectual and the High Court in the exercise of its jurisdiction may interfere in such cases.

The right to impeach the interlocutory order in an appeal against the final decree allowed under Section 560 is illusory because under Section 547 [new Section 78] the Appellate Court will not be justified in reversing or varying the decree or remanding the case on account of any error or irregularity not affecting the merits of the case (F. B.).— 41 T. L. R., 257
(=16 T. L. J., *29).

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 1258.

17. Though the High Court can suo motu examine the propriety of orders of lower Courts in revision, it cannot do so with orders from which appeals are competent.

As an order rejecting an application for amendment of plaint can be attacked in an appeal against the final decree that might be passed in the case under Section 83 (1), the High Court cannot revise such order.— 17 T. L. J., 125.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 52.

18. Under Section 89, the High Court can interfere only if (1) the case has been decided already, and (2) no appeal lies against that decision, and (3) where there has been an irregularity of procedure in the proceedings of the subordinate Court.

Proceedings which are not suits, such as applications under the Religious Endowments Act and the like could be considered to be cases under the Code. But if the proceedings in question relate to suits as ordinarily understood, the expression "cases" has to be taken as synonymous with suits. If a contrary view is taken, interference by the High Court in revision would be practically ousting the jurisdiction of the proper Court of appeal constituted by the Legislature to which has been entrusted the duty of reviewing the decision of the trial Court.

Consistently with the above construction of the word "case," no revision would lie with respect to an order in a pending case. Nor will a revision be competent when the petitioner has the right to impeach such order by means of an appeal or a regular suit. Section 83 (1) permits the error, defect or irregularity affecting decisions in the case to be objected to in appeal.

In order that there may be irregularity in procedure, there must have been a distinct burking of the issue or a refusal on the part of the Court to follow a statute of the Legislature which goes to the root of the case.— 17 T. L. J., 255.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 52.

19. Though orders passed under Section 10 of the Court Fees Regulation cannot be characterised as 'cases', as contemplated by Section 89, the High Court can revise such orders when the ends of justice require it to be done.

The finality contemplated by Section 10 of the Court Fees Regulation cannot be attached to the decision of the class or category under which the case in hand could be brought.

The burden of proving that the market value of the property was not that stated in the plaint but an amount in excess of the same is upon the party alleging it.— 18 T. L. J., 52.

20. Any rule restricting revision can only be meant as a guide to the High Court in exercising its powers of revision which are very wide. In cases where the High Court is satisfied that any order of a subordinate Court is clearly wrong, the High Court may deal with it in revision.— 18 T. L. J., 1253.

Part IX.

1. Sections 90 to 96.—These Sections are new and are necessary to carry out the object of the division of the Code into Rules and Sections. The composition of the Committee set up is such as is expected to bring to bear expert knowledge on the subject, and make the Rules serve the object of all procedure, viz., the speedy rendering of full justice."— Notes on Clauses.

2. The Select Committee in their Report observed :—

"After considerable discussion and mature consideration, we have come to the conclusion that the retention of the part relating to Rules is necessary as it enables the High Court to pass Rules only after they are passed by a Rule Committee consisting of Judges of the High Court and members of the Bar. We are, however, of opinion that the Council should have an opportunity of considering the Rules before they are passed by the Government."

3. The Indian Special Committee's observations also may be quoted.—"12. The distribution of the provisions of the Code between the body of the Bill and the Rules is a matter on which opinions may well differ. The general principle on which we have proceeded has been to keep in the Power of High Court to make Rules.

91. The High Court may, from time to time after previous publication, and subject to the provisions hereinafter in this Part contained, make Rules regulating its own procedure and the procedure of the Civil Courts subject to its superintendence, and may by such Rules annul, alter or add to all or any of the Rules in the First Schedule.

Constitution of Rule Committee.

92. (1) A Committee, to be called the Rule Committee, shall be constituted at Trivandrum.

(2) Such Committee shall consist of the following persons, namely :—

(a) the Chief Justice and a Puisne Judge of the High Court who has served as a District Judge,

(b) two Vakils of the High Court, and

(c) the Head Sirkar Vakil.

(3) The Chief Justice shall be the President of the Committee, and he shall appoint the members of the Committee other than the Head Sirkar Vakil.

(4) Each member of such Committee other than the Head Sirkar Vakil shall hold office for such period as may be prescribed by the Chief Justice in this behalf; and whenever any such member retires, resigns, dies or ceases to reside in Travancore or becomes incapable of acting as a member of the Committee, the Chief Justice may appoint another person to be a member in his stead.

(5) There shall be a Secretary to such Committee, who shall be appointed by the Chief Justice and shall receive such remuneration as may be provided in this behalf by Our Government.

body of the Bill those provisions which appear to us to be fundamental. * * In some cases we have adopted the plan of inserting leading provisions in the Bill, stating in general terms the powers of the Court, and of leaving the details to Rules; in matters of less importance the provisions have been relegated altogether to Rules."

Sec. 90 [ = – = S. 121 ]

Sec. 91 [ = S. 591 = S. 122 ]

The corresponding Section of the old Regulation was as follows :—"591. Power to make subsidiary Rules.—The High Court may, from time to time, make Rules consistent with this Code to regulate any matter connected with its own procedure or the procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature subject to its superintendence. All such Rules shall be published in the Official Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law."

93. Any proposal to annul, alter or add to the Rules in the First Schedule or to make new Rules shall be referred to the Rule Committee. Such Committee shall make a report thereon and the High Court shall before making the Rules, take such report into consideration.

Reference to Rule Committee.

94. The Rules made under the foregoing provisions shall be laid before the Legislative Council. The Legislative Council shall consider and deal with the Rules in the same manner as a Bill presented with the report of a Select Committee.

Rules to be laid before the Legislative Council.

95. (1) Rules made under the foregoing provisions shall be subject to the previous sanction of Our Government.

Rules subject to sanction.

(2) Rules so made and sanctioned shall be published in Our Government Gazette, and shall from the date of publication or from such other date as may be specified have the same force and effect, as if they had been contained in the First Schedule.

Publication of Rules.

96. (1) Such Rules shall be not inconsistent with the provisions in the body of this Code, but, subject thereto, may provide for any matters relating to the procedure of Civil Courts.

Matters for which Rules may provide.

(2) In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the powers conferred by Sub-section (1), such Rules may provide for all or any of the following matters, namely:—

(a) the service of summonses, notices and other processes by post or in any other manner either generally or in any specified areas, and the proof of such service;

---

Sec. 92 [ = — = S. 123 ]

Sec. 93 [ = — = S. 124 ]

(b) the maintenance and custody, while under attachment, of live-stock and other movable property, the fees payable for such maintenance and custody, the sale of such live-stock and property, and the proceeds of such sale;

(c) procedure in suits by way of counter-claim, and the valuation of such suits for the purposes of jurisdiction;

(d) procedure in garnishee and charging orders either in addition to, or in substitution for, the attachment and sale of debts;

(e) procedure where the defendant claims to be entitled to contribution or indemnity over against any person whether a party to the suit or not;

(f) consolidation of suits, appeals and other proceedings; and

(g) all forms, registers, books, entries and accounts which may be necessary or desirable for the transaction of the business of Civil Courts.

PART X.

Miscellaneous.

Exemption of certain women from personal appearance.

97. (1) Women who, according to the customs and manners of the country, ought not to be compelled to appear in public shall be exempt from personal appearance in Court.

(2) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to exempt such women from arrest in execution of civil process in any case in which the arrest of women is not prohibited by this Code.

---

Sec. 97 [ = S. 577 = S. 132 ]

In the second Para of the corresponding Section of the old Regulation, the words "in any case in which the arrest of women is not prohibited by this Code" found in Sub-section (2) did not occur. These are taken from the British Indian Code.

98. (1) Our Government may, by Notification in Our Government Gazette, exempt from personal appearance in Court any person whose rank, in the opinion of Our Government, entitles him to the privilege of exemption, and may, by like Notification, withdraw such privilege.

Exemption of other persons.

(2) The names and residences of the persons so exempted shall, from time to time, be forwarded to the High Court by Our Government and a list of such persons shall be kept in such Court, and a list of such persons as reside within the local limits of the jurisdiction of each Court subordinate to the High Court shall be kept in such subordinate Court.

(3) Where any person so exempted claims the privilege of such exemption, and it is consequently necessary to examine him by commission, he shall pay the costs of that commission.

Where such person refuses to deposit the costs of the commission, the party requiring his evidence shall deposit such costs. The Court may, if satisfied that the evidence of the person is material, order the costs of such commission to be paid by such person to the party concerned and such order shall be executable as a decree.

---

I. Sub-sections (1) and (2) are the same as the first and second Paras of Section 578 of the old Regulation.

The third Para of Section 578 ran thus:—"When any person so exempted......he shall pay the costs of that commission unless the party requiring his evidence pays such costs". This was the wording of Sub-section (3) in the original Bill. But the Select Committee omitted the words italicised, and added to Sub-section (3) the new Para now found therein.

II. Section 133 of the British Indian Code runs thus:—"133. (1) The Local Government may, by Notification in the local Official Gazette, exempt from personal appearance in Court any person whose rank, in the opinion of such Government, entitles him to the privilege of exemption.

(2) The names and residences of the persons so exempted shall, from time to time, be forwarded to the High Court by the Local Government and a list of such persons as reside within the local limits of the jurisdiction of each Court subordinate to the High Court shall be kept in such subordinate Court.

(3) Where any person so exempted claims the privilege of such exemption, and it is consequently necessary to examine him by commission, he shall pay the costs of that commission, unless the party requiring his evidence pays such costs."

III. See Order XXVI, Rule 1.

Case Law.

See Sec. 47.—17 T. L. J., 455.

Arrest other than in execution of decree.

99. The provisions of Sections 47, 49 and 51 shall apply, so far as may be, to all persons arrested under this Code.

Exemption from arrest of persons serving in or with His Majesty's Army.

[99-A. Such persons serving in or with the Army of His Majesty the King, Emperor of India, as Our Government may, from time to time, specify by Notification in Our Government Gazette, shall not be liable to be arrested for debt under any process issued by, or by the authority of, any of the Civil Courts.

Inquiry into complaint of arrest.

99-B. The Judge of any of the Civil Courts may examine into any complaint made by any such person mentioned in Section 99-A or by his superior officer, of the arrest of such person contrary to the provisions of this Code, and may by warrant under his hand discharge such person.

Arms etc., of persons mentioned in Section 99-A not liable to seizure.

99-C. The arms, horses, clothes, equipment, regimental accoutrements and necessaries of any such person mentioned in Section 99-A shall not be seized nor shall his pay or allowances or any part thereof be attached in satisfaction of any decree obtained against him or any person whom he may represent.]

Exemption from arrest under civil process.

100. (1) No Judge, Magistrate or other judicial officer shall be liable to arrest under civil process while going to, presiding in, or returning from, his Court.

(2) Where any matter is pending before a tribunal having jurisdiction therein, or believing in good faith that it has such jurisdiction, the parties thereto, their pleaders, and recognized agents, and their witnesses acting in obedience to a summons, shall be exempt from arrest under civil process other than process issued by such tribunal for contempt of Court while going to or attending such tribunal for the purpose of such matter, and while returning from such tribunal.

---

Secs. 99-A, 99-B & 99-C.

These three Sections reproduce Sections 334, 335 and 336 of Regulation II of 1065. These were inserted by Section 7 of Regulation III of 1101.

Sec. 100 [ = S. 580 = S. 135 ]

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"580. Persons exempt from arrest under Civil process.—No Judge, Magistrate or other judicial officer shall be liable to arrest

(3) Nothing in Sub-section (2) shall enable a judgment-debtor to claim exemption from arrest under an order for immediate execution or where such judgment-debtor attends to show cause why he should not be committed to prison in execution of a decree.

under Civil process while going to, presiding in, or returning from, his Court.

And, except as provided in Sections 252 and 581, where any matter is pending before a tribunal having jurisdiction therein, or believing in good faith that it has such jurisdiction, the parties thereto, their pleaders and recognised agents, and their witnesses acting in obedience to a summons, shall be exempt from arrest under Civil process while going to or attending such tribunal for the purpose of such matter, and while returning from such tribunal."

II. Sub-section (3) has been substituted for the words "except as provided in Sections 252 and 581" found in the second Para of the old Section given above.

III. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons for the 1901 amending Bill, it was observed :—"The wording has been amplified so as to make it clear that the exemption here conferred is not to be regarded as the priviege of the person attending the Court, but rather as that of the Court which he attends. If, therefore, a witness does not believe his attendance to be required or is arrested for contempt, there should be no privilege."— India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

Case Law.

1. The first defendant in his capacity of First Judge issued a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor, and third defendant (process peon) arrested him. Plaintiff interfered, took the debtor and led him to the Court of the Second Judge and obtained therefrom an order of discharge. The Judge ordered discharge on the ground that the debtor was a witness in a case pending before him. First defendant ordered prosecution of plaintiff for contempt of authority, but the Magistrate acquitted him. Plaintiff sued for damages for malicious prosecution against the First Judge and his subordinates.

Held.—It is a well-settled principle of law that no Judge is liable for damages for acts done by him within his jurisdiction, although he may have been actuated by most unworthy motives and malice.

As the arrest was made under the orders of the first defendant, the application for the release of the debtor on whatever ground it may be, must have been made to him. The Second Judge had clearly no power to cancel the orders of the First Judge. The plaintiff's application to the Second Judge and the order of discharge made by the latter were quite irregular and unauthorised.— 4 T. L. R., 26.

14 T. L. J., 168.

3. The privilege accorded by Section 580, C. P. C., extends also to persons who are accuseds in criminal cases. The word "tribunal" used in that Section has to be taken in its ordinary sense, and there is nothing in the language of that Section to denote that persons who are accuseds in criminal cases should not be afforded protection if they satisfy the conditions laid down in that Section.

The policy of the Legislature underlying that Section is that voluntary appearances of parties, their pleaders and recognised agents and witnesses should be encouraged as this would result in speedy justice being administered to the public.— 8 T. L. J., 284.

Fol.—17 T. L. J., 604.

4. The policy of the Legislature underlying Section 100, Clause (2) is that voluntary appearance of the parties, their pleaders and recognised agents and witnesses

Procedure where person to be arrested or property to be attached is outside district.

101. (1) Where an application is made that any person shall be arrested or that any property shall be attached under any provision of this Code not relating to the execution of decrees, and such person resides or such property is situate outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court to which the application is made, the Court may, in its discretion, issue a warrant of arrest or make an order of attachment, and send to the District Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person or property resides or is situate a copy of the warrant or order, together with the probable amount of the costs of the arrest or attachment.

(2) The District Court shall, on receipt of such copy and amount, cause the arrest or attachment to be made by its own officers, or by a Court subordinate to itself, and shall inform the Court, which issued or made such warrant or order, of the arrest or attachment.

(3) The Court making an arrest under this Section shall send the person arrested to the Court by which the warrant of arrest was issued, unless he shows cause to the satisfaction of the former Court why he should not be sent to the latter Court, or unless he furnishes sufficient security for his appearance before the latter Court, or for satisfying any decree that may be passed against him by that Court, in either of which cases the Court making the arrest shall release him.

should be encouraged as this would result in speedy justice being administered to the public.

The fact that a judgment-debtor has been arrested under one decree does not exempt him from arrest under another.—

2. The words "for the purpose of such matter" in Section 580 are very wide and include also attendance for the purpose of giving evidence.

Though as a mere witness, the judgment-debtor was not privileged, he was privileged as a party, defendant in another case, who came to Court for "the purpose of such matter," and under a bona fide belief that his attendance was required for that purpose.—

4 S. D., 355.

I. This Section reproduces Section 136 of the British Indian Code.

II. Sub-sections (2) and (3) of the Section are the same as the second and third paras of Section 585 of Regulation II of 1065. In regard to Sub-section (1), the wording in the corresponding first para of Section 585 is as follows :—

"585. Procedure when person to be arrested or property to be attached is outside the District.—Where any Court desires that any person shall be arrested or that any property shall be attached under any provision of this Code not relating to the execution of decrees, and such person resides or property is situate outside the local limits

102. Where this Code requires or allows anything other than the recording of evidence to be done in writing in any Court, such writing may be in English, but if any party or his pleader is unacquainted with English, a translation into the language of the Court shall, at his request, be supplied to him, and the Court shall make such order as it thinks fit in respect of the payment of the costs of such translation other than the costs of translation of a judgment.

Language of Courts.

103. In the case of any affidavit under this Code—

Oath on affidavit by whom to be administered.

(a) any Court or Magistrate, or

(b) any officer or other person whom the High Court may appoint in this behalf, may administer the oath to the deponent.

---

of its jurisdiction, the Court may, in its discretion, issue a warrant of arrest or make an order of attachment, and send to the District Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such person or property resides or is situate, a copy of the warrant or order, together with the probable amount of the costs of the arrest or attachment."

Case Law.

A Court before which a suit is filed has power to order attachment before judgment, of property situate within the jurisdiction of another Court.

Per the Chief Justice.—In such a case the procedure to be adopted should be that laid down in Section 585, C. P. C.

Even if no express power is given under the Code, Courts have inherent jurisdiction to pass all necessary orders to see that their decrees do not become infructuous ultimately.— 24 T. L. R., 191.

Sec. 102 [ = Secs. 543 & 544 = S. 137 (3)]

I. This Section reproduces Sub-section (3) of Section 137 of the British Indian Code, except that the words at the end—"other than the costs of translation of a judgment"—do not occur in that Code. These words were not in the original Bill, but were added by the Select Committee.

II. Sections 543 and 544 of Regulation II of 1065 were as follow :—

"543. Language of judgment.—The judgment shall be written by the Judge in his own hand in the language of the Court or in English :

Provided that the judgments of the High Court and the District Courts need not necessarily be in the handwriting of the Judges."

"544. Translation of judgment.—When the language in which the judgment is written is English, the judgment shall, if any party so require, be translated into Malayalam, and the translation, after it has been ascertained to be correct, shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf."

Assessors in causes of salvage, etc.

104. (1) In any cause of salvage, towage or collision, the Court, whether it be exercising its original or its appellate jurisdiction, may, if it thinks fit, and shall, upon request of either party to such cause, summon to its assistance, in such manner as it may direct or as may be prescribed, two competent assessors; and such assessors shall attend and assist accordingly.

(2) Every such assessor shall receive such fees for his attendance, to be paid by such of the parties as the Court may direct or as may be prescribed.

Miscellaneous proceedings.

105. The procedure provided in this Code in regard to suits shall be followed, as far as it can be made applicable, in all proceedings in any Court of civil jurisdiction.

---

Sec. 103 [= S. 192 = S. 139]

I. This Section reproduces Section 139 of the British Indian Code which has also another Clause as follows:—"(c) any officer appointed by any other Court which the Local Government has generally or specially empowered in this behalf."

II. 1. The corresponding Section 192 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"192. Oath of declarant by whom to be administered.—In the case of any affidavit under this Code—

(a) any Civil Court or Magistrate,

(b) any officer specially empowered in this behalf by the High Court, may administer the oath of the declarant."

2. The words "or other person" were inserted in Clause (b) of the Rule in the Indian Code, by the Special Committee, "in order to give the High Court power to relieve the Officers of the Courts of the work of administering affidavits in cases in which it may be necessary to do so."

---

---

Sec. 105 [= S. 584 = S. 141]

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"584. Miscellaneous proceedings.—The procedure herein prescribed shall be followed, as far as it can be made applicable, in all proceedings in any Court of Civil jurisdiction, other than suits and appeals.

Admission of affidavits as evidence.—The High Court may, from time to time, make Rules to provide for the admission, in such proceedings, of affidavits as evidence of the matters to which such affidavits respectively relate; and such Rules, on being published in the Official Gazette, shall have the force of law."

II. It may be noted here that Section 584 of the old Regulation was the same as Section 647 of the Indian Code of 1882. The latter Section was later amended by Act VI of 1892 which added the following Explanation:—"Explanation.—This Section does not apply to applications for the execution of decrees which are proceedings in suits."

Case Law

1. Where an appl[illegible] of a decree was post[illegible] for hearing of an o[illegible] was dismissed for default of judgment-creditor's appearance, and a second application was opposed on the ground that, as in the previous application, the burden of proof to rebut the objection was cast on the applicant, its rejection, even though on the ground of default, must be taken to be equivalent to a finding that the objection was valid :

Held.—As the onus probandi did not entirely rest and was not expressly cast by the Court upon the judgment-creditor, and the objectors did not adduce evidence in support of their allegation, the rejection of the first application cannot be taken otherwise than as a dismissal on the ground of default of appearance.

The rejection, for default, of an application for execution of a decree does not, by force of Section 584, debar subsequent applications. That Section does not extend to miscellaneous proceedings all the provisions relating to suits, but only such as can be safely applied to them; and the law expressly recognizes repeated applications for execution.— 12 T. L. R., 155.

2. Section 584 (Paragraph 1), C. P. C., should not be so construed as to make the procedure laid down in Chapter VII, Sections 90 to 104 [=Order IX] of the Code always applicable to all execution proceedings. It is a well-established practice that when an application for the execution of a decree is dismissed for default it is open to the decree-holder to make another application for the same purpose even without following the procedure laid down in Section 98 [ = Or. IX, r. 9]. This one circumstance is sufficient to place one on one's guard against accepting the proposition that the effect of Section 584 is that the provisions in Chapter VII should be adopted in their entirety to all execution proceedings.

...poken of in Section 584 ...ts in the nature of ...gs in probate, guardianship and so forth, and do not include executions.— 35 T. L. R., 75.

3. Section 584, C. P. C., enables the execution Court to apply the procedure laid down in Section 381 [=Or. XXVI, rr. 13 and 14] for the partition of immovable property, when the execution Court is moved to execute a decree for partition.

[It was contended that the decree passed in the suit was only a preliminary decree ascertaining the several parties interested in the schedule properties and their several rights therein, and that the order made in the execution Court was the final decree for the partition of the properties, and that for the purpose of passing this final decree, the Court was competent to follow the procedure prescribed in Section 381. It would be straining to some extent the language of the decree to say that it was merely a preliminary decree ascertaining the rights of the parties. It directs the properties to be divided into equal shares and allows the recovery of one-half of the properties by the plaintiff. Such decrees have been treated as final decrees and proceedings taken thereon for ascertainment of the actual shares by metes and bounds, as proceedings in execution, by the practice of the High Court. How far this Rule of practice is correct, it is not necessary to examine for the purpose of the case. In the case, the decree was treated as a final decree].— 15 T. L. J., 518.

Sec. 106 [ = S. 88 = S. 142 ]

I. This Section reproduces Section 142 of the British Indian Code.

II. Section 88 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—"88. All notices and orders required by this Code to be given to or served on any person shall be in writing, and shall be served in the manner hereinbefore provided for the service of summons."

See Order XLVI, Rule 2.

Sec. 107 [ = S. 89 = S. 143 ]

I. In the British Indian Code, power is given to the Local Government to remit such postage or fee or both, and also to prescribe a scale of Court fee to be levied in lieu thereof.

II. The old Section has at the end the wording—"before the communication is forwarded."

Sec. 108 [ = S. 552 = S. 144 ]

I. The corresponding Section in Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"552. Execution of decrees of Appellate Court.—When a party entitled to any benefit (by way of restitution or otherwise) under a decree passed in an appeal under this Chapter desires to obtain execution of the same, he shall apply to the Court which passed the decree against which the appeal was preferred; and such Court shall proceed to execute the decree passed in appeal, according to the Rules hereinbefore prescribed for the execution of decrees in suits."

II. The new Section is the same as Section 144 of the British Indian Code. In incorporating that Section, the Notes on Clauses said :—

"This is practically new. The existing Section which to some extent corresponds to the proposed Section is Section 552. It assumes that there is jurisdiction to cause restitution. The proposed Section makes it quite explicit."

III. The Indian Special Committee observed in regard to Section 144 :—"The terms of Section 583 of the Code do not justify the practice founded on it, and the Committee have therefore recast the Section so as to bring it into closer conformity with that practice."

IV. "There is a good deal of difference in the wording of the Section from that of Section 552 in the Code of 1065, which circumstance would require the provisions of the present Code in this behalf to be held to be more comprehensive than those of the old Code. In the first place, the present Section has been relegated to Part X under the miscellaneous provisions in the new Code, while under the old Code, Section 552 found a place in the Chapter relating to appeals from original decrees. Further, in the present Section, the Clause "under a decree passed in appeal" occurring in Section 552 has been deleted, and the expression "where and in so far as the decree is varied or reversed" has been inserted instead. The absence of any reference to the class of Courts which make the variation or reversal, dealt with under the Section, would clearly indicate that the provision is intended to be applicable irrespective of its being a superior Court or the same Court itself, in the course of a proceeding by way of review or restoration on setting aside a decree passed ex parte. The effect of the expression "Court of first instance" occurring in the Section cannot militate against the above view. It has to be noticed in this connection that the mode of claiming restitution by means of an application in execution provided for in the old Code has not been adopted in the new Code. As such necessity was felt to prescribe the Court which has to be resorted to for enforcing the right to restitution and with a view to make it comprehensive, and applicable to cases of variation or reversal by the first Court itself, or in appeal, the Legislature laid down that the Courts of first instance should be the Courts where such applications have to be made."—

(=17 T. L. J., 758).

V. It will be seen from a comparison of Section 108 with Section 552 of the old Code that some change of wording has been made. But this change appears rather to be intended to give effect to the decisions previously passed on the subject. The only substantial change in the law is the express direction in Clause (2) of Section 108 that no suit shall be instituted for the purpose of obtaining any restitution or other relief which could be obtained by application under the Section.— 18 T. L. J., 855.

Case Law.

1. The power given to Courts under Section 552, C. P. C., to restore to successful appellants what had been taken from them under the decree appealed against, extends to miscellaneous cases also. Though the provisions of Section 552 are not re-enacted in Section 559 [=Or. XLII, r. 2], the power of restitution in miscellaneous cases is inherent in every Court against whose order an appeal is provided by law.

Every subordinate Court whose order is cancelled by the order of the Appellate Court, is bound to give effect to that appellate order, whatever its own view of the case may be.— 10 T. L. R. App., 7.

2. The suit was for recovery of mesne profits due between the date of delivery of property under a revised decree and the date of its re-delivery under the High Court decree reversing the original decree,

Held.—(1) Where restitution is made under a reversed decree under Section 552, C. P. C., reimbursement of mesne profits appropriated under the reversed decree might be ordered.

(2) In a case like this, although the proper procedure is to apply to the execution Court under Section 288 [new Section 40], that objection is not fatal to the present suit as the institution fee paid for it is more than the fee for an application under Section 238.— 16 T. L. R., 41.

Fol.—17 T. L. R., 32.
Ref.—1 S. D., 86.
2 S. D., 150.

3. The first plaintiff, the Karanavan, and 2nd plaintiff his Seshakaran sued to set aside an agreement executed by the 1st plaintiff in favour of the defendant and for delivery of the pr0perties in the hands of the defendants under the agreement, to the 2nd plaintiff. The District Munsiff decreed for 2nd plaintiff, and, during the pendency of the appeal by the defendant, the 2nd plaintiff recovered the property in execution. The Appellate Court modified the Munsiff's decree by allowing 1st plaintiff recovery of the property. The defendant thereupon applied for re-delivery of properties from the 2nd plaintiff under Section 552 C. P. C.

Held.—Section 552 C. P. C. is a special provision for a party entitled to any benefit (by way of restitution or otherwise) under a decree passed in appeal. It cannot help any party who is not entitled to any benefit under the appellate decree so as to claim restitution.— 1 S. D., 194.

4. When a decree has been reversed or superseded, the remedy may be sought by a new suit for restitution as well as by summary process.

It is difficult to see how an application for restitution is one for execution of the decree. The granting of restitution is not discretionary; and the principle upon which the doctrine rests is that, on reversal or supersession of the decree, the law raises an obligation on the party who received the benefit of the erroneous decree to make restitution to the other party for what he had lost. The principle applies with equal force whether restitution has or has not been directed in the varying or reversing decree; and the Court has an inherent right to order restitution of what has been improperly taken under a wrong order of the Court. An application for restitution not in, or as part of, execution proceedings ought to suffice; and that is the provision now in British India; but that, in the absence of a statutory prohibition, will not render a suit for restitution incompetent.

Where a suit is brought, when an application under Section 233 [new Section 40] C. P. C., should have been presented, the defect may be cured by treating the plaint as an application under that Section.— 9 T. L. J., 19.

5. Where, in execution of a decree against the appellant who was jointly and severally liable with others, the appellant deposited the decree amount in Court and objected by a petition to the payment of the deposit to the decree-holders or, in the alternative, for a refund to him of the same on the allegation that the decree, before execution was sought against him, had been satisfied out of Court by the other judgment-debtors and that the decree-holders without certifying satisfaction of the decree under Section 255, C. P. C., [ = Or. XXI, r. 2] fraudulently sought and obtained execution against him; but the alleged satisfaction was more than sixty days before the present petition, and the lower Court declined to enquire into the same :

Held (by the Full Bench, Sesha Aiyar, J. dissenting) – (1) In view of Section 255, Clause (3) that an uncertified payment shall not be recognised by any Court executing the decree, it was not open to the Court under this Section or Section 238 [new Section 40] to enquire into the plea of adjustment advanced by the appellant after the expiration of 60 days from the date of the adjustment, even though it is alleged that the decree-holders were guilty of fraud in not certifying the adjustment.

(2) The question of restitution did not arise in the case.

Per Raman Menon, C. J.—As regards money payable under a decree, payment by itself will not dissolve the obligation, but only payment in one of the modes or forms indicated in Sections 253 and 255 [ = Or. XXI, rr. 1 and 2 ].

If the Court executing the decree is prohibited from recognising a mere payment as a discharge of the decree, the Court will have to grant and proceed with execution, if the decree-holder should apply for it in spite of payment made to him out of Court.

Where a judgment-debtor omits to initiate proceedings to have the payment made by him out of Court duly recorded as certified, the money thus paid to the decree-holder out of Court may be recovered back as a payment made for consideration which has failed, not by raising a plea of fraud in the execution proceedings or by restitution, but in a separate suit.

Per Palpu Pillai, J.—If the matter in the applicant's petition could not be enquired into under Section 255, C. P. C., it could not be enquired into under Section 238, as the effect of applying the latter Section would be to render the former nugatory.

To invoke the aid of Section 552, for restitution, it must appear that the decree, in execution of which satisfaction was had, was subsequently set aside or that there was an error committed by the Court and apparent on the face of the record.

Per Sesea Aiyar, J.—Section 255 applies only to cases in which the decree is actually pending execution or in which upon reference to the records in Court, it will be seen that the decree has not been satisfied in whole or in part. It will not apply to an instance where, upon the records of the Court, the decree stands satisfied ; and subsequently, no application is made for restitution on the ground that the decree-holder had fraudulently sought and obtained execution by suppressing an adjustment of the decree out of Court.

The question raised in the appellant's petition being one relating to the satisfaction of the decree, the petition may fall within Section 238. Even otherwise, the Court has jurisdiction to entertain and to enquire into the petition.

Where, pursuant to an erroneous order of the Court obtained as the result of fraud practised upon the Court, money had been paid out to a litigant, on an application for restitution, that person can be directed to bring back the money into the Court. The Court has inherent power to direct such restitution.

Section 552 of the C. P. C., is not exhaustive of the cases where, by a summary application, and not by a regular suit, restitution may be sought by a party who, in pursuance of a wrong order of the Court, has had to make payment to a litigant. If a fraud has been committed upon the Court in the application for execution by reason of the false statement made therein by the decree-holder, a Court should not permit a litigant who has obtained a wrong or unjust order, in pursuance of which he has realised money by coercive process, to retain the amount against the party seeking restitution by application to that Court.—

(=9 T. L. J., 430).

6. Where an ex parte decree is set aside and the suit restored to file, the defendant is entitled to claim restitution under Section 108.

Restitution in the Section denotes the restoration to a party of what he had lost under a decree passed against him, which has been varied or reversed on a later date. The Section is not confined to cases where restitution is claimed on the variation or reversal of a decree by a superior Court. Provided the decree is varied or reversed, the Section applies, however the variation or reversal has been effected.

The order of variation or reversal contemplated in the Section need not expressly direct the restitution to entitle the party to claim the same. Such a definite direction is unnecessary, as it is obligatory on the party receiving a benefit under a decree, which has been reversed or varied, to make restitution to the party who has lost thereby. This principle will apply whether restitution has been expressly directed or not. Article 118 of the Civil Court's Guide cannot be interpreted as making such a direction imperative in such cases.—

7. One L. executed a hypothecation in favour of plaintiff of the crops, &c., of his estate as security for certain sums to be advanced. By a subsequent document L. mortgaged the same estate to secure the repayment of another amount to be advanced by the plaintiff. In this second document the mortgagor agreed to execute a further mortgage in favour of the plaintiff on the estate for the amount due under the first document. L, having died without carrying out this agreement plaintiff brought a suit against the executors of L., defendants 1 and 2, and a decree ex parte was passed on 28-6-1097. On 9-11-1097, the plaintiff applied for execution of a mortgage deed. Notice was issued to defendants to appear on 5-1-1098. The defendants not appearing, the Court on 8-1-1098, passed an order fixing the amount of consideration to be entered in the deed. The deed of mortgage was executed by the Court on 12-1-1098. Thereafter, the plaintiffs exercised their right of foreclosure and declared that they had taken possession of the estate "in their own right."

On the application of the second defendant, the orders of 5-1-1098 and 8-1-1098 were set aside, and the second defendant was allowed to put in his objections to the plaintiff's petition of 9-11-1097. Then the question arose whether the plaintiff was bound to restore the possession which he had obtained as a result of exercising his rights of foreclosure under the deed of mortgage executed by the Court on 12-1-1098 and whether Section 108 applied to such a case.

Held.—Section 108 applied to such a case and the plaintiff was bound to restore such possession.

It is true that the suit was not for possession but to enforce the execution of the mortgage. As a result of the orders of the lower Court, which were set aside, it was directed that a mortgage document for a specific amount would be executed by the Court. Such a document was then executed, and the plaintiff relying on that document purported to foreclose the mortgage and take possession in his own right. All these acts flow naturally from the two orders above-mentioned, and could not have taken place but for them. As the parties are entitled to be placed in the position which they would have occupied but for the orders of 5-1-1098 and 8-1-1098, restitution must be ordered of any possession obtained by a natural consequence of those orders. Hence the lower Court must declare cancelled the possession "in his own right" obtained by the plaintiff under the order of the lower Court.

It is the duty of the Court under Section 108 to place the parties in the position which they would have occupied but for such decree or such part thereof as has been varied or reversed.

Enforcement of liability of surety.

109. Where any person has become liable as surety—

(a) for the performance of any decree or any part thereof, or

(b) for the restitution of any property taken in execution of a decree, or

(c) for the payment of any money, or for the fulfilment of any condition imposed on any person, under an order of the Court in any suit or in any proceeding consequent thereon, the decree or order may be executed against him, to the extent to which he has rendered himself personally liable, in the manner herein provided for the execution of decrees, and such person shall, for the purposes of appeal, be deemed a party within the meaning of Section 40:

Provided that such notice as the Court in each case thinks sufficient has been given to the surety.

The duty or jurisdiction does not thereby arise under the said Section. It is inherent in the general jurisdiction of the Court rightly and fairly according to the circumstances towards all parties involved.

Where the person entitled to restitution is in possession either actually or through a servant or agent, he can be given restitution of possession where such possession has passed as a consequence of the decree. Where, however, the decree-holder would have been entitled to exclude the appellant from possession, i. e., where the decree is in possession independently of the appellant, no question of re-delivery of possession can arise.

Just as a suit for restitution can be treated as an application for restitution, similarly an application under Section 108 can be converted into a regular suit after levying the necessary Court fees.—

I. 1. Section 249 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"249. Decree against surety.—Whenever a person has, before or after the passing of a decree in an original suit or in an appeal, become liable as surety for the performance of the same or of any part thereof, the decree may be executed against him to the extent to which he has rendered himself liable, in the same manner as a decree may be executed against a defendant:

Provided that such notice in writing as the Court in each case thinks sufficient has been given to the surety."

2. The Indian Code of 1882, Section 253, did not contain the words "or after" before the words "the passing of a decree" nor the words "or in an appeal" after the words "original suit." The addition of these words were thus explained :—"There is really no good reason for making a distinction between a surety prior to judgment and one after judgment, in respect of the summary procedure. It is, therefore, proposed to make the Section applicable to all those who become sureties after the suit, whether prior or subsequent to the decree. The notice provided for would prevent all dangers of ex parte proceedings. It is also proposed to make orders, affecting sureties, appealable. With these safeguards, no surety could have any reason to complain of the summary procedure. The creditor, who, on the faith of the surety, suspended the execution of the decree, should not in justice be driven to an expensive and fresh suit to establiish his right against such surety."— S. O & R, Para 37.

II. 1. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons on the Indian amending Bill of 1901, it was observed :—"In view of conflicting rulings on the wording of the present Section, it is proposed to make it clear that the summary procedure contemplated by it should apply to suretyships for the performance of any original or appellate decree or for the payment of money under any order of the Court in any suit or proceeding consequent thereto".—

2. The Select Committee on the above mentioned Bill said :—"The provisions relating to the enforcement, by summary process in execution of security given for the performance of a decree or the payment of money should, in our opinion, apply to security given for restitution of property or the fulfilment of conditions."—

IV. For Form of Notice to surety of his liability under a decree, see Appendix I, Form No. 13.

Case Law.

1. An appeal lay against the order of the Zilla Judge refusing to execute a decree against sureties, who (in consideration of the stay of execution of a decree pending the disposal of the appeal preferred against), have made themselves responsible for the amount of the judgment-debt. A surety by his own voluntary act occupies the position of the judgment-debtor. In the same way as orders passed upon questions raised between judgment creditors and debtors are appealable, the orders passed upon points raised between judgment-creditors and sureties are appealable.— 5 T. L. R. App., 7.

2. A surety's liability arises only on the creditor exhausting his remedies against the debtor. Execution against the surety was directed to be suspended until the remedies against the judgment-debtor were exhausted.— 7 T. L. R. App., 48.

Overruled.—3 S. D., 249.

3. The wording of Travancore C. P. C., Section 249 differs from that of Section 253 of the British Code and refers also to sureties after the passing of a decree and even in appeals.

The surety may be summarily proceeded against in execution in the absence of valid objections.— K. P., 96.

4. A creditor does not lose his right to proceed against the surety merely because he applied for warrants against the debtor himself. Section 249, C. P. C., gives the same remedy against the surety as against the principal debtor and the creditor has a right to proceed against both.

The surety bond is not a contract entered with the judgment creditor but an undertaking towards the Court creating a statutory right under Section 249 for the enforcement of which it is not necessary to bring a separate suit. No question of penalty can therefore arise.— 2 S. D., 252.

5. A creditor is entitled to proceed against the surety, without exhausting his remedies against the principal debtor. But the execution Court may in its discretion direct that sales of the principal debtor's property should take place before the properties of the surety are proceeded against when the interests of the creditor would not be jeopardised or make any such other order as may be consistent with the equities of the case in order that the surety's interest may also be protected without exposing the creditor to any unreasonable delay or hardship, as eventual indemnity from loss is the substantial object of the contract of a surety.

Convenience and expediency point to the desirability of leaving the creditor's right unfettered by any absolute rule to proceed against the principal or the surety at his option. It may be that proceedings against the principal may entail delay for various reasons, whereas steps taken against the surety may result in immediate discharge of the debt. And supposing the surety should become insolvent during the interval in which the creditor is engaged in exhausting all his remedies against the principal debtor, of what avail is the collateral security of the guarantee to him? (F. B).— 3 S. D., 249.

6. Plaintiff obtained an ex parte decree which was set aside on defendant's executing a surety bond. Suit again was decreed for plaintiff. Surety applied for discharge before the second decree was passed. The Munsiff discharged him. Plaintiff prayed for a review of the above order. The Munsiff cancelled the order after the passing of the second decree.

Held.—The Munsiff's order cancelling his first order of discharge was right. The surety's right of appeal relates to all orders against him whether they are made before decree or in execution of decree. The words of Section 557 (15) [new Section 82 and Or. XLII, r. 1] do not confine the right of appeal only to orders for execution of decrees against sureties.— 3 S. D., 295.

7. The decree amount deposited by the surety of the judgment-debtor after the latter has been adjudicated an insolvent under the provisions of the Insolvency Regulation, VIII of 1090, cannot be regarded as property or assets of the judgment-debtor so as to disentitle the decree-holder to claim the whole amount in satisfaction of his decree and to compel him to get rateable distribution in company with the other creditors of the judgment-debtor.— 9 T. L. J., 8.

8. In a suit for maintenance, the defendant was arrested before judgment and was released on the surety of the special appellant. The primary Court dismissed the suit, but in appeal it was decreed with costs. The defendant died after the date of the appellate decree. In execution of the decree against the surety, he contended that his liability under the bond terminated with the dismissal of the suit by the trial Court, and that the bond was only for the production of the defendant in Court and that any other stipulation contained therein could not be recognised by Court.

Held.—The proceedings in the Appellate Court are but continuation of the proceedings of the trial Court. The Court of appeal or revision when it comes to a finding of its own really finds what the trial Court should have found if it was acting correctly and legally.

There is no prohibition in Clause (2) of Section 458 [= Or. XXXVI, r. 2] against the surety's undertaking any liability for the claim in the suit in excess of what is required for the purpose of the provision in the Clause. For enforcing in execution the surety's liability under Section 249, the Court has only to look into the terms of the surety's bond irrespective of the occasion

110. Save as otherwise provided by this Code or by any law for the time being in force, where any proceeding may be taken or application made by or against any person, then the proceeding may be taken or the application may be made by or against any person claiming under him.

Proceedings by or against representatives.

111. In all suits to which any person under disability is a party, any consent or agreement, as to any proceeding shall, if given or made with the express leave of the Court by the next friend or guardian for the suit, have the same force and effect as if such person, were under no disability and had given such consent or made such agreement.

Consent or agreement by persons under disability.

for execution of the bond. The appeal was dismissed with costs.— 43 T. L. R., 423.

9. The natural construction to be put upon a surety bond will be that the undertaking of a liability has been agreed to, for the amount under the decree howsoever it might be passed. This would include consent decrees also. In the absence of a specification of the nature of the decree contemplated by the parties in the surety bond itself, it would be improper to import into its terms any restrictions as, that the consent decree passed behind the back of a surety has determined the contract of suretyship or that the benefit of the payment of a lesser sum under the compromise decree and the time provided for therein should be extended to a surety.

Further, a surety bond should be deemed to have been executed to the Court creating obligations to the Court and any agreement between the parties resulting in the compromise decree could not affect such obligations to the Court and therefore discharge the liability of the surety to the Court.

Where under a compromise decree no enhanced liability has been created, the surety cannot be said to have in any way been prejudiced by the same.—

I. See Order XXXII, Infra.

II. Rule 21 of Order XVI of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—

"21. Consent by infant or lunatic as to procedure.—In all causes or matters to which any infant or person of unsound mind, whether so found by inquisition or not, or person under any other disability, is a party, any consent as to the mode of taking evidence or as to any other procedure shall, if given with the consent of the Court or a Judge by the next friend, guardian, committee, or other person acting on behalf of the person under disability, have the same force and effect as if such party were under no disability and had given such consent: provided that no such consent by any committee of a lunatic shall be valid as between him and the lunatic unless

112. Where any period is fixed or granted by the Court for the doing of any act prescribed or allowed by this Code, the Court may, in its discretion, from time to time, enlarge such period, even though the period originally fixed or granted may have expired.

Enlargement of time.

113. Where the whole or any part of any fee prescribed for any document by the law for the time being in force relating to court-fees has not been paid, the Court may, in its discretion, at any stage, allow the person, by whom such fee is payable, to pay the whole or part, as the case may be, of such court-fee; and upon such payment the document, in respect of which such fee is payable, shall have the same force and effect as if such fee had been paid in the first instance.

Power to make up deficiency of court-fees.

I. "This Section is only expressly enacting what the Courts have adopted as a rule of practice."— Notes on Clauses.

II. The Section applies only where time is fixed or granted by the Court for the doing of any act prescribed or allowed by the Code. See Order VI, Rule 18: Order VII, Rule 11: Order VIII, Rule 9: Order XXI, Rule 15: Order XXV, Rule 2: Order XL, Rule 10.

III. Rule 7 of Order LXIV of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, as amended, is as follows:—

"7. Power to enlarge or abridge time.— The Court or a Judge shall have power to enlarge or abridge the time appointed by these Rules, or fixed by any order enlarging time, for doing any act or taking any proceeding, upon such terms (if any) as the justice of the case may require, and any such enlargement may be ordered although the application for the same is not made until after the expiration of the time appointed or allowed. Provided that when the time for delivering any pleading or document or filing any affidavit answer or document, or doing any act is or has been fixed or limited by any of these Rules or by any direction on or under the summons for directions or by any order of the Court or a Judge the costs of any application to extend such time and of any order made thereon shall be borne by the party making such application unless the Court or a Judge shall otherwise order."

Case Law.

Section 112 is applicable only to proceedings antecedent to the passing of the decree. Therefore, where a time-limit is prescribed under the decree, it is not open to the execution Court to extend the time. The aggrieved party has, if at all, to seek to have the time extended by an application for review under Section 88.

Original decrees should be explicit and not call for references to any other documents—Rule 111 of the Civil Courts Guide.— 17 T. L. J., 441.

Sec. 113 [= — = S. 149]

114. Save as otherwise provided, where the business of any Court is transferred to any other Court, the Court to which the business is so transferred shall have the same powers and shall perform the same duties as those respectively conferred and imposed by or under this Code upon the Court from which the business was so transferred.

Transfer of business.

115. Nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the inherent power of the Court to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court.

Saving of inherent powers of Court.

Sec. 115 [ = „ = S. 151 ]

I. "This is an express enactment and recognition of the inherent powers of Courts to do all that may be necessary to achieve the object for which they exist."—Notes on Clauses.

II. "Criminal Courts no less than Civil Courts exist for the administration of justice and Courts of both description have inherent power to mould the procedure, subject to the statutory provisions applicable to the matter in hand, to enable them to discharge their functions as Courts of justice" (15 Cal. L. J., 517). "Section 151 does not lay down any now principle ; it merely embodies a legislative recognition of the inherent power of the Court to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice. This inherent power is in no sense restricted in application to civil cases; it is equally applicable to criminal matters. This power is not capriciously or arbitrarily exercised, it is exercised ex debito justitia to do that real and substantial justice for the administration of which alone Courts exist ; but the Court in the exercise of such inherent power, must be careful to see that its decision is based on sound general principles and is not in conflict with them or with the intention of the Legislature as indicated in statutory provisions" (44 Cal., 816). "One of the first and highest duties of all Courts is to take care that this act of the Court does no injury to any of the suitors and when the expression 'the act of the Court' is used, it does not mean merely the act of the primary Court or of any intermediate Court of appeal but the act of the Court as a whole, from the lowest Court which entertains jurisdiction over the matter up to the highest Court which finally disposes of the case. It is the duty of the aggregate of those Tribunals, if I may use the expression, to take care that no act of the Court in the course of the whole of the Proceedings does an injury to the suitors in the Court" (L. R. 3 P. C., 465).—40 T. L. R., 303 ( = 15 T. L. J., 85).

Case Law.

1. The High Court being a superior Court of record possesses inherent power to punish summarily for contempt of Court and such power is essential to the due administration of justice.

The provisions of the Code of Criminial Procedure on the point are not exhaustive.

The jurisdiction of the High Court to punish for contempt of Courts may be exercised by that Court to protect inferior Courts.

The reason of the rule is that the High Court exercises a vigilant watch over the proceedings of the inferior Courts and successfully prevents them from usurping powers or otherwise acting contrary to law, so that it should possess correlative powers of guarding them against unlawful attacks and interferences with their independence on the part of others (F. B.).— 37 T. L. R., 106.

Ref. – 13 T. L. J., 309.

2. On an appeal from the order refusing to vacate an ex parte decree, the High Court has inherent jurisdiction to stay execution of the decree and that jurisdiction is not ousted by the provisions in the Code dealing with the subject of stay of execution.— 16 T. L. J., 24.

3. The revision petition was by a witness in a Sessions case praying for the expunction of the remarks made against him by the Sessions Judge in his judgment.

Held.—The High Court has inherent powers in criminal cases to make any order that is necessary to secure the ends of justice even when the effective orders of the Courts below are not before it either on appeal or in revision. It follows that the High Court has power to entertain the application and to order the expunction of the remarks made by the Sessions Judge.— 43 T. L. R., 263 (= 16 T. L. J., 624).

4. No provision is made in the Code of Civil Procedure for appeals against orders passed in the exercise of the inherent powers of the Court. No appeal lies against such orders.

In the case, where the primary Court gave a decree for redemption, the lower Appellate Court reversed the decree and remanded the case. It was contended that no appeal lay against the order of remand. The remand, it was contended, could not be treated as one falling under Order XL, Rule 22, as that Rule referred only to a case where the original Court had disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point and the decree was reversed in appeal. But the original Court did not dispose of the case on a preliminary point. But apart from that Rule, the Court could, in the exercise of its inherent power under Section 115 remand a case for retrial.—18 T. L. J., 968.

5. There is no reason why, under Section 115, an inherent power to remand should not exist, as the exercise of it may be frequently called for, owing to contentions not provided for by Order XL, Rule 22, such as where the defendants' evidence has been entirely shut out owing to a mistaken refusal by the lower Court to give an opportunity for adducing it.

Where the order of remand is not passed under Order XL, Rule 22, but under Section 115, no appeal lies; but the High Court will interfere in cases where injury has been caused which cannot be compensated for by the ultimate success.

The practice of the High Court in the matter of revision has been more liberal than in British India. The rule that the High Court will not interfere in revision when an adequate remedy exists otherwise is not an absolute rule of law, but is a wise rule of practice by which the High Court limits interference to those cases where it is absolutely necessary.

An Appellate Court which remands a suit for defect or error in the issues should point out how they are defective or erroneous and specify the issues which are deemed necessary. A general observation that the issues are defective is no proper reason for remand nor is it helpful to the trial Court. Where an order appears on the face of it to have been given by the subordinate Court in abuse of its inherent powers, the High Court will interfere in revision and correct such error.—44 T. L. R., 148 ( = 18 T. L. J., 1007).

6. The revision petition was against an order restoring an appeal dismissed for default. When the appeal came on for hearing, neither the appellant's Vakil nor the Vakil to whom a memo had been given appeared, and hence the dismissal. The Court had closed before a restoration petition signed by the appellant's Vakil could be filed on the very day. There was a delay of 23 days in making a fresh application, due to the fact that the petitioner was a resident of Singapore, and also to delays in postal service caused by floods at land and storms at sea. The lower Court excused the delay, under the circumstances.

Held.—The period of limitation under Article 140 of the Limitation Regulation (old) having expired, there were no exceptional circumstances to have the delay excused under Section 5 of the same Regulation.

The exceptional circumstances which would justify the exercise of the inherent powers of the Court under Section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code, must be something more than mere difficulty or inconvenience, and not merely a desire to evade the effects of the statutory provision.— 19 T. L. J., 236.

7. In the nature of the wording of Section 115, the existence of any other remedy in the matter under the Code should not be taken to preclude the Court from passing appropriate orders where in its opinion the same is considered necessary in the interests of justice or for preventing the abuse of the process of the Court. The question whether this power should be exercised or not will have to be decided on the merits of each case. In deciding it, the Court is at liberty to take into consideration the conduct of the parties, the non-existence of the remedies open to them, and such other matters akin thereto, but if the Court thinks that, in spite of these considerations the error committed is of so gross a character that a rectification thereof is necessary in the interests of justice or that a hearing of the original order undisturbed would result in a palpable abuse of the process of the Court, the inherent power of the Court could be invoked and the rectification of the error could with propriety be made.

The award in excess of the plaint should be viewed as a slip or omission which the Court has a right to rectify suo moto without reference to lapse of time under Section 116.— 19 T. L. J., 691.

Amendment of judgments, decrees or orders.

116. Clerical or arithmetical mistakes in judgments, decrees or orders, or errors arising therein from any accidental slip or omission may at any time be corrected by the Court either of its own motion or on the application of any of the parties.

---

Sec. 116 [Cf. S. 201, last Para = S. 152 = En. Or. 28, r. 11]

I. 1. The last para of Section 201 of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"Power to amend decree.—If the decree is found to be at variance with the judgment, or if any clerical or arithmetical error be found in the decree, the Court shall, of its own motion or on that of any of the parties, amend the decree so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment or to correct such error : Provided that reasonable notice has been given to the parties or their pleaders of the proposed amendment."

2. For the first two Paragraphs of Section 201, see under Or. XX, r. 6.

II. Rule 11 of Order XXVIII of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—

"11. Slip Rule.—Clerical mistakes in judgments or orders, or errors arising therein from any accidental slip or omission, may at any time be corrected by the Court or a Judge on motion or summons without an appeal."

Case Law.

1. The omission by oversight to enter the defendant's Vakil's fees should be corrected.— 24 T. L. R., 228.

2. The appeal by the first defendant in the case was necessitated by a clerical error in the decretal portion of the lower Appellate Court's judgment.

Held.—The appeal was allowed. As the appeal might have been avoided by the first defendant moving the District Court to correct the clerical mistake, instead of going to the High Court to have it done, no order was made as to costs in the High Court.— 4 S. D., 72.

3. The final decree in a case being that of the Appellate Court, the only Court which has jurisdiction to amend that decree is the Appellate Court.

It is the duty of the Court to amend its own decree under Section 201, whenever it is found to be not in conformity with the judgment.

A Court can amend its decree at any time either upon or without any application of any party to the decree and irrespective of the fact that the application for amendment made by the party is out of time.

No appeal lies against an order under Section 201, C. P. C. An order under Section 201 is not a decree, nor is it made appealable under Section 557, C. P. C. [Section 82 and Order XLII, r. 1].— 1 T. L. J., 90.

4. In a redemption suit, the High Court gave a decree for plaintiff. The decretal portion of the judgment ran as follows:—"Plaintiff may recover the plaint properties on payment to the first defendant of the mortgage amount mentioned in Exhibit III." The mortgage amount which the plaintiff was directed to pay was admittedly Fanams 2,000; but it was erroneously stated in the judgment as "the amount mentioned in Exhibit III", which was only Fanams 165. The petitioner (mortgagee-defendant) moved the Court for correcting the mistake, and it was contended on behalf of the counter-petitioner, plaintiff, that the Court had no power to correct it.

Held.—The Court had the power to correct the mistake.

Section 201, C. P. C., read with Sections 551 and 556 [new Sections 85 (2) and 86] had no application; for there was no variance between the decree and the judgment. Nor had Section 509 [new Section 88] any application, because this was not a petition for review. But apart from the provisions contained in these Sections, the Court has inherent power to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice.

Where the Legislature has provided no procedure to be followed in cases which must and do arise, an inherent power exists in Courts for doing what is necessary (15 All., 95). The Court has inherent jurisdiction to amend the plaint and decree (16 Mad, 427). "There is no such magic in passing and entering an order as to deprive the Court of jurisdiction to make its own records true and if an order as passed and entered does not express the real order of the Court, it would be shocking to say that the party aggrieved cannot come here to have the record set right. It appears to me, therefore, that if it is once made out that the order whether passed and entered or not, does not express the order actually made, the Court has ample jurisdiction to set that right whether it arises from a clerical slip or not" (L. R. 30 Ch. D., 239). "Every Court has inherent power over its own records so long as those records are within its own power, and it can set right any mistake in them." Where no specific law exists in any particular case, Courts shall act according to justice, equity and good conscience. In the absence of a statutory provision, the same rule applies to adjective law also.

This order based upon the inherent power of the Court is not inconsistent with the order rejecting as time-barred a review petition put in by the petitioner for a review of the judgment.— 27 T. L. R., 61

5. Where there has been an appeal against the decree of the District Munsiff and a decree has been passed thereon, the District Munsiff has no longer any power to amend his decree and the only Court that has jurisdiction in the matter is the Appellate Court. The fact that only a portion of the decree passed by the Munsiff was appealed against to the District Court and the amendment of the decree sought for related only to the unappealed portion, does not affect the rule of law above laid down.

The point involved was one of jurisdiction and if the Munsiff had in passing the order sought to be revised exercised a jurisdiction not vested in him, such order could not be allowed to stand, though the District Court having jurisdiction may pass the order.— 28 T. L. R., 168**.

(=4 T. L. J., 231).

6. In O. S. 21 of 1078, plaintiff obtained a decree for money against defendant, and proceeded to execute it. Meantime, in O. S. 106 of 1076 a suit for settlement of partnership accounts, wherein plaintiff and defendant were co-defendants, the decree of the District Court directed plaintiff to pay a certain amount to defendant in settlement of mutual claims. Against this decree, two appeals were preferred to the High Court, one by the plaintiff in the latter case (A. S. 349), and the other by the defendants in that case (including the present plaintiff) (A. S. 375), and the High Court, by its preliminary judgment, changed the respective shares of the partners in the business. Pending the final decree fixing the exact amounts due from each to the other, appellant in A. S. 349, who was also a respondent in A. S. 375, died, and his heirs were not impleaded in time, and therefore the appeals abated and were dismissed. The defendant, judgment-debtor in O. S. 21 of 1078, claimed to set off against the debt due by him the amount declared by the decree of the District Court in O. S. 106 of 1076 to be due to him from the plaintiff. The plaintiff contended this could not be done on the ground that the preliminary decree of the High Court had superseded the decree of the Court of first instance. Defendant replied by saying that the abatement and dismissal of the appeals before the High Court nullified the effect of the preliminary decree.

Held [Per Ramachandra Row and Muttunayagom Pillai, JJ. (Krishnan Nair, C. J., dissenting) ].—

The findings in a preliminary judgment in a partnership suit were declaratory orders made in the first instance with the object of forming a basis for further and final proceedings, and that accordingly they were of no avail by themselves as a final adjudication of any of the points in dispute between the parties, unless they were incorporated in the final decree.

The effect of the final dismissal of an appeal was to leave undisturbed the decree of the Court of first instance, which thereby became final in spite of any preliminary judgment that may have been passed in appeal.

The defendant, judgment-debtor in O. S. 21 of 1078, was, therefore, entitled to set off the amount adjudged to him by the decree of the District Court in O. S. 106 of 1076, and the plaintiff was not entitled to rely upon the findings contained in the preliminary judgment of the High Court, which became of no effect after the final dismissal of the appeals by that Court.

Per Krishnan Nair, C. J.—The preliminary order of the High Court in A. S. Nos. 349 and 375 is a final decision on the points in issue between the parties so as to amount to a decree in a suit, and such a decree is final so far as the Court passing it is concerned, and could not be altered, except on review.

The dismissal of the appeals Nos. 349 and 375 in toto was invalid and inoperative, and must be regarded as non-existing in the eye of the law, so far as the matters finally determined in the preliminary judgment are concerned, as after passing the preliminary judgment the Court became functus officio in so far as the matters contained therein were concerned.

The preliminary judgment passed in appeal by the High Court, altering the shares as determined by the District Court, continued to be alive and binding on the parties, and had not been extinguished by the final judgment dismissing the appeals.—

2 T. L. J., 163.

7. Against a partnership decree, two of the partners (plaintiff and first defendant) appealed to the High Court. The High Court passed a preliminary order directing the drawing up of a final decree on certain terms; but before the directions could be carried out, the plaintiff who was appellant in one appeal (and respondent in the other) died, and his legal representative not coming in within time, the appeal was dismissed as having abated and the appeal of the other partner was also dismissed as having abated for the reason that the legal representative of the respondent was not impleaded in time. Fourth defendant, one of the other partners, applying to the District Court for execution of the decree, the legal representative of the first defendant objected that the shares were wrongly mentioned, and applied for correction of the decree. The District Judge dismissed the application on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to correct the decree as the case had been decided on appeal by the High Court. It was contended in appeal before the High Court that, as the appeals were disposed of on the ground that they had abated, there was no adjudication on the merits, and, therefore, the lower Court's decree was left untouched, and that practically the same legal consequences should follow, as if the original decree had not been appealed against.

Held.—The Court below was right in holding that it had no jurisdiction to correct the decree, as the final decree in the case was that of the High Court and the High Court alone had the power to correct that decree.

When the appeals were entertained in the High Court against the original decree, the High Court became seized of the whole case and it is the order or decree of the Appellate Court finally disposing of the appeals that has to be treated as the decree in the case. "When an appeal is preferred from a decree of a Court of first instance the suit is continued in the Court of appeal either in whole or in part according as the whole suit is litigated again in the Court of appeal or only a part of it. The final decree in the appeal will thus be the final decree in the suit whether that be one confirming, varying or reserving the decree of the Court of first instance. The mere fact that a matter is litigated both in the Court of first instance and again though only in part in the Court of appeal cannot convert or split the suit into two, and there can be only one final decree in that suit, namely, the decree of the Court of appeal. If the appeal is against a portion of the decree only and the appeal is dismissed, the decree will be one confirming as a whole the decree appealed against, and the confirmation is not limited to the portion appealed against. If such appeal be allowed the decree appealed against will not be reversed by the appellate decree, but only varied or modified, and confirmed as to the rest, that is, the portion not appealed against." The circumstance that the final disposal of the appeal by the Appellate Court did not result in a decree on the merits does not affect the principle discussed. In cases where appeals preferred against original decrees have been dismissed for default, it is the Appellate Court, and not the original Court, that has the power to amend the decree in the case.

"An appeal need not necessarily end in a decree upon the merits, but may be finally disposed of by orders, and these orders are not the less final than decrees simply because they are liable to be set aside by subsequent proceedings. Until so set aside they are like decrees, which are also equally liable to be set aside by review or other subsequent proceedings, final." (F. B.).—

(= 4 T. L. J., 221).

8. Section 201 of the Civil Procedure Code provides for rectification of decree on the ground of accidental error: and though perhaps, from the language of the Section, it may be contended that, to bring a case under that Section, the error must be clerical or arithmetical only, it is well established, that errors arising in decrees or orders from any accidental slip or omission may also be sought to be corrected by a similar process. Indeed, the Courts have held that, in the exercise of its inherent power, a Court can, as a part of its machinery for the administration of justice, rectify its decrees and orders, not only when they are vitiated by any accidental slip or omission, but even when they do not represent what the Court really intended to pronounce.—

10 T. L. J., 172.

9. An application for correcting the decree so as to bring it into conformity with the judgment is not subject to any rule of limitation. Section 116 has only given statutory recognition to this principle by expressly declaring that the amendment could be made at any time.—

122. In all suits and appeals to which the Edappally Chief is a party, he shall be exempt from personal appearance in Court, and shall be competent to grant a general power-of-attorney; and any person holding such power and declared as such by Notification in Our Government Gazette shall be deemed a recognized agent under this Code and shall have the power to verify plaints and written statements on behalf of the said Chief according to the provisions contained in this Code.

---

provided by Section 94, nothing herein contained shall affect any proceedings prior to decree in any suit instituted or appeal presented before the first day of Chingom 1066, or any proceedings after decree that may have been commenced and were still pending at that date."

Sec. 119 [Cf. S. 3, Para 1 = S. 156]

Sec. 120 [Cf. S. 3, Para 1 = S. 157]

The corresponding Section 3, Para 1, of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"3. Enactments repealed.—The enactments specified in the First Schedule hereto annexed are hereby repealed to the extent mentioned in the third column thereof. But all Notifications published, declarations and Rules made, places appointed, agreements filed, scales prescribed and Forms framed, under any such repealed enactment, shall, so far as they are consistent with this Regulation, be deemed to be respectively published, made, appointed, filed, prescribed and framed hereunder."

Sec. 121 [Cf. S. 3, Para 2 = S. 158]

I. This Section reproduces Section 158 of the British Indian Code.

II. The corresponding Section 3, Para 2, of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"3. Reference in previous Regulations.—When, in any Regulation or Notification passed or issued prior to the day on which this Code comes into force, reference is made to the 'Code of Civil Procedure', or to any other Regulation hereby repealed, such reference shall, so far as may be practicable, be read as applying to this Code or the corresponding part thereof."

Sec. 122 [ = S. 579 = ,, ]

A junior member of the Edappally alias Elangallor Swaroopam sued the defendant, the Senior Rajah for a declaration of his right for an increased rate of allowance. The latter contended, inter alia, that the ordinary Civil Courts of this State were precluded from adjudicating on the private rights and claims of the junior members of his family against the senior Chief.

Held.—The Edappally Chief is not entitled to any exemption from the jurisdiction of the ordinary Civil Courts of this State. The position of the Chief, whatever it may have been in olden days, does not, now that he has ceased for a long time to exercise the rights of sovereignty, differ materially from that of a Zamindar on the East Coast. Suits by and against the Edappally Chief have not been infrequent. The Legislature of the State has, in consideration of the rank and position of the Edappally Chief, exempted him from personal appearance in Courts and conceded to him the privilege of making appearances in Courts through a recognised agent (Section 579), and this fact of itself is sufficient proof of the vesting of jurisdiction over the Edappally Chief in the ordinary Courts. The Chiefs of Edappally have, without interruption, been under the protection of the Sovereigns of Travancore for a very long time, and this protection has been afforded through executive and judicial officers of the State (F. B.).—

THE FIRST SCHEDULE.

ORDER I.

Parties to Suits.

Who may be joined as plaintiffs.

1. All persons may be joined in one suit as plaintiffs in whom any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, where, if such persons brought separate suits, any common question of law or fact would arise.

---

Schedules: "There are 3 Schedules appended to the Code proper, of which the First Schedule is the most important one."

The First Schedule: "This Schedule is divided into 47 Orders and each Order is again divided into Rules. To these are added nine Appendices, containing forms that may be adopted in respect of the several documents mentioned in the Orders and Rules. The forms relating to plaints, written statements and decrees are substantially more than what are now sanctioned by the Circulars issued by the High Court".— Notes on Clauses.

Order I: "This deals with the subject of parties to suits, and does not materially differ from the provision of the present Code. Such changes as have been made are introduced to help bringing before the Court in one suit all the persons whose presence may be found necessary to fully deal with matters in dispute." Notes on Clauses.

Or. I, r. 1 [ = S. 22 = Or. I, r. 1 = En. Or. 16, r. 1 ]

I. 1. Section 22 of the old Regulation, the first sentence of which corresponds to Rule 1, was as follows:—

"22. Persons who may be joined as plaintiffs.—All persons may be joined as plaintiffs in whom the right to any relief claimed is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, in respect of the same cause of action. And judgment may be given for such one or more of the plaintiffs as may be found to be entitled to relief, for such relief as he or they may be entitled to without any amendment. But the defendant, though unsuccessful, shall be entitled to his costs occasioned by so joining any person who is not found entitled to relief, unless the Court in disposing of the costs of the suit otherwise directs."

2. The old Section was the same as Section 26 of the Indian Code of 1882.

II. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Indian amending Bill of 1901, it was observed:—"The present Section corresponds with Or. XVI of the Rules of the Supreme Court before it was amended in 1896, with the omission of the words 'in respect of the same cause of action'. This reference to the 'cause of action' has given rise to some difficulty, for it would appear that the meaning assigned to it in different parts of the Code is not always the same. In England a cause of action means 'every fact which it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove, if traversed, in order to support his right to the judgment of the Court. It does not comprise every piece of evidence which is necessary to prove each fact, but every fact which is necessary to be proved.' It 'has no relation whatever to the defence which may be set up by the defendant, nor does it depend upon the character of the relief prayed for by the plaintiff', but it 'refers entirely to the grounds set forth in the plaint as the cause of action, or, in other words, to the media upon which the plaintiff asks the Court to arrive at a conclusion in his favour'. It is proposed here to omit the reference in question and to use the phrase 'cause of action' in its proper sense only throughout the Code. At the same time the opportunity has been taken to modify and extend the language on the principle underlying the English rule as now amended and judicially explained".— India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

III. The second sentence of the old Section 22, corresponds to Clause (a) of Rule 4 Infra, which Rule should be read with Rule 1. For the provision contained in the third sentence of the old Section, see Section 32 Supra.

IV. A plaintiff is a man who comes to Court seeking a relief or reliefs. Persons who do not claim any relief and say that a third person and not themselves are entitled to relief in a suit can be called "plaintiffs" only by courtesy or as a matter of form.— 23 T. L. R., 146.

V. Rule 1 of Order XVI of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, as amended, is as follows :—

"1. Joinder of plaintiffs.—All persons may be joined in one action as plaintiffs, in whom any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same transaction or series of transactions is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally, or in the alternative where if such persons brought separate actions any common question of law or fact would arise; provided that, if upon the application of any defendant it shall appear that such joinder may embarrass or delay the trial of the action, the Court or a Judge may order separate trials, or make such other order as may be expedient. And judgment may be given for such one or more of the plaintiffs as may be found to be entitled to relief, for such relief as he or they may be entitled to, without any amendment. But the defendant, though unsuccessful, shall be entitled to his costs occasioned by so joining any person who shall not be found entitled to relief, unless the Court or a Judge in disposing of the costs shall otherwise direct."

The above Rule (as amended) is intended to "facilitate the joinder of plaintiffs in one action in cases where (1) the right to relief claimed by them arises in each of their cases out of the same transaction or series of transactions, and where (2) some common question of law or fact arises. In order to bring a case within the Rule both these conditions must be complied with, and if they are not the Rule does not justify the joinder of several plaintiffs."— Yearly Practice, 1926.

Case Law.

1. New parties could not be brought in, in special appeal (in the last stage of the case). If the plaintiffs have no locus standi in the suit, i. e., if the plaintiffs are not entitled to sue at all, the person really entitled to sue cannot be allowed to become plaintiff and the suit proceeded with. This will be a novel procedure unknown to any Civil Code.— 5 T. L. R., 19.

2. (1) A suit brought jointly by some of the partners of a firm, for settlement of accounts and distribution of assets, is not bad for mis-joinder. As, until the final settlement of accounts, the unity of interest as partners continues, it is not strictly logical to say that the interest of any particular partner is distinct from that of his co-partners. There is no objection in principle to some of the partners jointly suing for settlement of accounts and distribution of their assets. Section 22 of the Civil Procedure Code authorizes the joinder of all persons as plaintiffs in whom the right to any relief claimed is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally, or in the alternative, in respect of the same cause of action; and the granting of relief as he or they may be entitled to.

(2) In such a suit, all the partners are necessary parties, either as plaintiffs or defendants, those in possession of partnership assets and who are bound to render accounts occupying the position of plaintiffs, and the others, that of defendants.

(3) Sections 209 and 210 of the Civil Procedure Code [ = Or. XX, rr. 15 and 16 ] contemplate the passing of preliminary orders in suits for account. If, on taking such accounts, it is found that the receipts of plaintiff exceeded what is due to him in respect of his advances and profits, the final decree should direct him to refund to the defendant the excess he (plaintiff) has drawn. Such final decree determining the rights and liabilities of all the partners, will be capable of execution at the instance of any partner (whether plaintiff or defendant) to whom money may be due.—

3. Where a District Judge ruled, differing from the Munsiff, that the plaintiff, the Pattola of a Samooham, is competent to sue for recovery of property on behalf of the Samooham:

Held.—(1) The relative position of Pattola and Samooham being that of a servant and master, the former cannot sue on behalf of the latter without their authority, express or implied, it being a procedure wholly unauthorized by law.

(2) Even if there be an admission on the defendant's part as to the plaintiff's authority or competency to sue, the plaintiff cannot maintain the suit on the face of the decided unwillingness of the Samoohakars to sue.

(3) Inasmuch as the plaintiff persistently prosecuted the suit despite the objections of the Samoohakars, the costs of suit should be met from plaintiff's private funds and not from those of the Samooham.—

4. In a suit by plaintiffs to recover value of properties of which they were plundered by the defendant and in some of which the plaintiffs were jointly and in the others severally interested, the defence was one of mis-joinder of plaintiffs and distinct causes of action.

Held.—The suit was not bad for misjoinder.

The decision of the question turns upon the construction of Sections 22 and 27 (= Or. I, rr, 1 & 9] and upon the interpretation to be placed on the expression "cause of action." The expression "cause of action" is not used in its comprehensive or elastic but in a restricted or limited sense "so as to include the fact constituting the infringement of the right but not necessarily also those constituting the right itself, so that the qualification implied in the words in respect of the same cause of action will be satisfied if the facts which constitute the infringement of the right of several plaintiffs are the same, though the fact constituting the rights upon which they base their claim to that relief in the alternative may not be the same." (22 Cal. 838).

Even if the elastic meaning of "cause of action" is adopted, the suit would not be opposed to the principles of Section 22 and 27, C. P. C.— 14 T. L. R., 185.

5. (1) A Karaima Samudayam as such cannot sue as plaintiff to cancel an alienation of Devaswom property without the consent and against the will of the Ooralars.

(2) Such a Samudayam may sue tenants for rents and renewal fees where such power is vested in him by the usage of the particular Devaswom, such power being recognised on the ground of implied delegation.

Section 22 shows that a plaintiff must be one in whom the right to relief is alleged

Power of Court to order separate trials.

2. Where it appears to the Court that any joinder of plaintiffs may embarrass or delay the trial of the suit, the Court may put the plaintiffs to their election or order separate trials or make such other order as may be expedient.

---

to exist in the same manner as a defendant must be one against whom the same right exists [Section 24 (=Rule 3)]. The proprietary right to a Devaswom and its properties is vested in the Ooralars; and Samudayom is a manager subject to the supervision of the Ooralars. The so-called proprietary right of the Karaima Samudayam is confined only to the tenure of his office as Samudayam just as in the case of a Karaima Shanty or priest. Both the ordinary and Karaima Samudayam are deeply interested in the proper conservation of the Devaswom properties. Nevertheless, the former by virtue of his hereditary office can have no more rights than the latter to interfere with the properties of the Devaswom to a greater extent than is allowed to a mere manager in the absence of an express or implied contract empowering him to represent the Devaswom (F. B.).— 18 T. L. R., 129.

Fol.—8 T. L. J., 214.

6. Suit for declaration that a sale deed, alleged to have been executed by 1st plaintiff in favour of the defendants, and which had been compulsorily registered, was a forgery and for recovery of the plaint properties taken possession of by the defendants on the strength of that sale. The 2nd plaintiff was the daughter of the 1st plaintiff, and there was an averment in the plaint that some of the properties in the suit had been made a gift of by the 1st plaintiff to the 2nd plaintiff. The District Judge, holding that because in regard to some of the properties a gift deed was alleged to have been executed by the 1st plaintiff to the 2nd plaintiff, the suit was bad for mis-joinder of causes of action, returned the plaint for amendment.

Held.—There was no mis-joinder of causes of action.

For the declaration of title sought for in the plaint and for the sustaining of the gift alleged in favour of the 2nd plaintiff, it was equally necessary that the sale in favour of the defendants referred to in the plaint should be set aside.— 28 T. L. R., 148.

7. A Samudayam cannot maintain a suit for recovery of Devaswom property and arrears of rent without consulting the Ooralars. A Samudayam may sue for rent only when such a power has been vested in him by the usage in the particular Devaswom.— 8 T. L. J., 214.

8. A benamidar can bring a suit in his own name without bringing on record the real owner who, though not a party to the litigation, is fully affected by the rules of res judicata. In such a suit it is open to the real owner to apply to be joined in the action.— 10 T. L. J., 338.

Who may be joined as defendants.

3. All persons may be joined as defendants against whom any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, where, if separate suits were brought against such persons, any common question of law or fact would arise.

Or. I, r. 3 [= S. 24 = Or. I, r. 3 = En. Or. 16, r. 4]

I. 1. Section 24 of the old Regulation, the first sentence of which corresponds to this Rule, was as follows :—

"24. Persons who may be joined as defendants.—All persons may be joined as defendants against whom the right to any relief is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative, in respect of the same matter. And judgment may be given against such one or more of the defendants as may be found to be liable, according to their respective liabilities, without any amendment."

2. The old Section was the same as Section 28 of the Indian Code of 1882.

II. The second sentence of the old Section 24, given above, corresponds to Clause (b) of Rule 4 Infra, which Rule should be read with Rule 3. Order II, r. 3 should be read subject to this Rule.

III. Rule 3 reproduces the corresponding Rule in the British Indian Code. In regard to the latter, the Indian Special Committee observed :—" The Committee realize that the words " in respect of the same matter " in Rule 3 have given rise to great difficulty, and they think it advisable to follow the wording of the English Rule and to omit them."

IV. Rule 4 of Order XVI of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows :— "4. Joinder of defendants.—All persons may be joined as defendants against whom the right to any relief is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally, or in the alternative. And judgment may be given against such one or more of the defendants as may be found to be liable, according to their respective liabilities, without any amendment".

Case Law.

1. The assignor being liable to account to the assignee on the failure of the claim founded on the assignment, his inclusion as defendant is not bad for mis-joinder.

The assignor, in the case, is not in the position of a perfect stranger and his inclusion, although not legally indispensable, is not altogether erroneous. He has an interest in the result of the suit and there is no provision of law prohibiting the inclusion of a peron in his position as a defendant. Reason and logic point to the conclusion, that in many cases the fact of the assignor being a party to the suit brought by the assignee would check unnecessary litigation. The modern tendency of decisions and legislation is to discourage pleas of mis-joinder. Further, the plea was not taken in the Court below. As a rule all such formal objections ought to be taken before the settlement of issues, as they are capable of amendment.— 3 T. L. R., 16.

2. A purchaser of properties had agreed to pay a portion of the purchase money to a creditor of the vendor, but the creditor having declined to accept payment from the purchaser, the vendor himself paid the money due to the creditor. A suit was brought for recovery of the unpaid portion of the purchase money from the purchaser who was dead at the time the plaint was filed. When the death was ascertained, plaintiff impleaded 2nd defendant (the purchaser's son) as the legal representative of the deceased.

Held.—The suit should have been thrown out, and the Court was wrong in having allowed plaintiff to substitute another in the place of the defendant and continue his action.

Strictly speaking, as soon as it was proved that a man impleaded as defendant was dead at the time the plaint was filed, the Court ought to refuse to proceed further in the suit and should leave it to the plaintiff to begin de novo against the person against whom alone he can legally move.

"Where an action is commenced in the name of a dead man, his representatives cannot be substituted as plaintiffs," and a defendant also cannot be substituted for a man who was impleaded as defendant after his death. The Setions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to the bringing in of legal representatives of deceased parties are applicable only where the death takes place pending the suit, and not where, even before suit, the party supposed to be impleaded had died.

The appeal, however, was proceeded with, as if the 2nd defendant was originally impleaded as a party. The second defendant did not put forward the objection in the lower Court, and in the special appeal that ground was not definitely taken. The defendant having found his way on to the record as defendant, it is best to leave him there and treat him as if properly before the Court. To do otherwise, at this stage of the proceedings would put all parties to much expense and cause delay.—

Affirmed.—17 T. L. J., 158.

3. When the summons to the defendant was returned with the endorsement that he was dead before the suit was instituted, the suit should be thrown out. Plaintiff should not be allowed to substitute another and continue his action. Section 49 old [= Or. VI, r. 17 and Section 117] is not applicable.

2 S. D., 59.

Appl.—36 T. L. R., 117.

4. Suit by a sub-mortgagee against his mortgagor, the first mortgagee, for recovery of money personally and from the property mortgaged, and for recovery of property mortgaged from strangers who committed trespass upon it while he was in possession under the sub-mortgage :

Held.—There is no provision in the Code allowing distinct causes of action against distinct sets of defendants, that is to say, causes of action in which the defendants are not all jointly interested to be united in the same suit.— 2 S. D., 258.

5. The suit was for arrears of rent paid formerly to Sirkar by defendant but remitted in 1076 under a Royal Proclamation. Defendant contended that, in spite of the alleged Proclamation, the Sirkar claimed rent from defendant who was compelled to pay it to the Sirkar. The District Judge directed that the Sirkar should be made a party :

Held.—The Sirkar was a necessary party. The Sirkar appears to have collected the Varom on the ground that the Varom claimed did not fall under any of the denominations mentioned in the Proclamation. The plaintiff claimed on the strength of an alleged remission by the Sirkar, and the Sirkar denied having made any such remission. The Sirkar is interested in the decision of the question, and without the Sirkar as a party to the suit, this question could not be finally adjudicated.— 3 S. D., 293.

6. Where the plaintiff sued to recover arrears of Thiruppuvarom from the defendant at the old rate and the latter contended inter alia that, as the Sirkar had reduced the rate since 1072, the plaintiff could not claim it at the old rate for the period subsequent to the reduction, the lower Court entered judgment in favour of defendant :

Held.—In such a suit, according to the wording of Section 24 C. P. C., and to prevent further litigation concerning the same matter [Section 38=Or. II, r. 1], the Sirkar was a necessary party.

Section 38 makes it imperative to frame the suit as far as practicable in such a manner as to afford ground for a final decision upon the subjects in dispute to prevent further litigation concerning them. To carry out the object of that Section, it would be highly necessary to implead the Sirkar in the case.— K. P., 481.

7. In a suit for redemption by one sharer alone, all the co-sharers must be made parties.— K. P., 496.

8. An attaching creditor has no such interest in or lien on the mortgaged property as would entitle him to be impleaded as a party to the mortgagee's suit.

An attachment confers no lien or interest in favour of the creditor but merely puts the property in custodia legis available to the decree-holder in execution proceedings duly taken.— K. P., 584.

9. Per Raman Tampi, J.—The prayer of the plaintiff virtually amounted to one for a mandatory injunction directing the Sirkar to enter the plaintiff's name in the Thandaper and to levy the Sirkar tax from him. Such a prayer could not be granted in the suit to which the Sirkar was not a party.— 35 T. L. R., 221.

10. The Karanavan of a Tarwad brought a Dhana Nischaya Pathrom into existence, whereby he asserted among others that the properties to which it related were his self-acquisitions. He alienated several items of properties on foot of that deed. After his death, plaintiffs sued for declaration of the right and title of the Tarwad to the properties and for recovery of them from the alienees. It was contended that the suit was bad for multifariousness.

Held.—The suit against all the alienees was in respect of the same matter and, therefore, not bad for multifariousness.

Under Section 22 [ = Or. I, rr. 1 & 4] of the Code, joinder of plaintiffs is allowed when the relief is claimed in respect of the same cause of action; while under Section 24 joinder of defendants is permitted when the relief is sought in respect of the same matter. By using the less definite expression 'in respect of the same matter', the Legislature obviously intended that joinder of defendants should not be confined to cases where relief was claimed in respect of the same cause of action. The words 'in respect of the same matter' are wider than the words 'in respect of the same cause of action'. If so, the scope of Section 24 must be wider than that of Section 22. Having regard to the provisions of the Code, a suit against several defendants will not be bad for mis-joinder, if the suit, although in respect of different causes of action against different defendants, is in respect of the same matter. The object of Section 24 seems to be to avoid multiplicity of suits if it could be done, without embarrassment to any of the defendants. The title of the alienees, in the case, and other defendants was derived from the Karanavan, and it would stand or fall with the failure or success of the plaintiffs' claim against the Karanavan. The infringement of the plaintiffs' right by the Karanavan was the real cause of action; and in any event, the suit against all the defendants was in respect of the same matter.— 10 T. L. J., 72.

11. The suit was to compel the defendants to accept the renewal of a Kanom. The defendants denied the Kanom and also contended that part of the property alleged

4. Judgment may be given without any amendment—

Court may give judgment for or against one or more of joint parties.

(a) for such one or more of the plaintiffs as may be found to be entitled to relief, for such relief as he or they may be entitled to;

(b) against such one or more of the defendants as may be found to be liable, according to their respective liabilities.

Defendant need not be interested in all the relief claimed.

to be comprised in the Kanom did not belong to the plaintiff but was waste land registered as Pandarapattom by the Sirkar in their favour.

At the instance of the defence, the District Court ordered the Sirkar to be impleaded as an additional defendant. On appeal:

Held.—The Sirkar was not a necessary or desirable party to the suit.— 11 T. L. J., 87.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 153.

12. The suit was for declaration of the right to future maintenance and recovery of arrears of maintenance by a junior member of a Nair Tarwad.

Held.—In a suit of this nature, all the adult members of the Tarwad are necessary parties.— 16 T. L. J., 545.

13. The suit was for a renewal of a Kanappattom and for recovery of arrears of Michavarom and renewal fees. The defendant contended that the property had been registered as Pandarapattom and that he was enjoying the same under the Sirkar, and that the Sirkar should be impleaded as a party to the suit. One of the issues raised was whether the property was Jenmom property as defined in the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation or Pandarapattom property.

Held.—The Sirkar was a desirable party, though not a necessary party. As the defendant had sought to have the Sirkar impleaded without unnecessary delay, the Sirkar might be impleaded as an additional defendant (F. B.).— 19 T. L. J., 153.

Rule 6 of Order XVI of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—"6. The plaintiff may, at his option, join as parties to the same action all or any of the persons, severally or jointly and severally, liable on any one contract, including parties to bills of exchange and promissory notes."

Case Law.

Where a hypothecatee, plaintiff, purchased a moiety of the property hypothecated to him from one of the two hypothecators in discharge of one-half of the debt with interest thereon, and sought to recover the other moiety of the debt from the other hypothecator, defendant, by sale of the remaining moiety and the latter pleaded that he could not be sued alone and that the splitting up of the liability was improper and illegal:

Held.—Section 43 of the Contract Act, which is applicable to the case, provides that "when two or more persons make a joint promise, the promisee may, in the absence of express agreement to the contrary, compel any one or more of such joint promisors to perform the whole of the promise." Reading this Section with Section 25, C. P. C., it is clear that the plaintiff had the option to sue one or more or all of the persons who had made themselves jointly and severally liable under a contract made with him. The non-joinder of the defendant was not fatal to the suit; and the plaintiff was at liberty to recover the other moiety.

It is not for a debtor to say that the suit against him for money should be thrown out because some other person is jointly and severally liable with him to the plaintiff on the same contract. It is the plaintiff's own look-out to see what remedy he should seek, and if he chooses to sue one of his several debtors the suit is not bad or unsustainable for reason of the non-joinder of the other debtors. The Court which tries the suit has the discretion to order the other debtors also to be brought on the record as parties if, in its opinion, their non-inclusion is likely to prejudice the debtor actually sued in the matter of contribution or in any other way.— 13 T. L. R., 53.

I. 1. In Sub-Rules (1) and (2), the words "or for the benefit of" occurring after the words "on behalf of" are new, not found in the corresponding Sections of the old Regulation.

2. The word "persons" has been substituted for the word "parties" throughout Sub-Rule (1), "as the more appropriate expression". (Indian Select Committee on the 1901 amending Bill.)

II. Rule 9 of Order XVI of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1888, is as follows:—"9. Where there are numerous persons having the same interest in one cause or matter, one or more of such persons may sue or be sued, or may be authorised by the Court or a Judge to defend in such cause or matter, on behalf or for the benefit of all persons so interested."

Case Law.

1. Suit on behalf of a charitable institution whose management is vested in a particular community of a particular locality, to set aside certain alienations of property appertaining to the said Institution, made by the cash-keeper thereof (defendant in the suit). The suit is preferred by the Gramanies who hold a power of attorney which authorizes them to represent 83 out of 200 members of the community.

Held.—As the defendant holds his office by virtue of his appointment thereto by the whole community, the suit as against him started under the authority of a minority of the community, is bad for non-joinder of the necessary parties. In a suit of the kind, all the members of the community should be made parties to the proceedings, either as plaintiffs or defendants:

The fact of the Gramanies who are the supervising and controlling authority of the Institution, being themselves members of the community, cannot cure the defect of party in the suit.

The suit was instituted before the passing of Regulation II of 1065. The old Code (Regulation II of 1037) did not contain a provision similar to Section 26. To make the decree in the suit which was brought under the old law, binding on the whole community, every member has to be made a party to the litigation. This procedure, besides being tedious, might fail to secure the object in view, by the unintentional omission of one or two members from the list of additional parties. The most convenient course for the plaintiffs would be to bring, if necessary, a fresh suit under the provisions of Section 26 (F. B.).— 11 T. L. R., 23.

2. Section 26 of the Civil Procedure Code has no application to cases of Malabar Tarwads.— 11 T. L. R., 112.

3. Plaintiffs, who are appointed Kizhi and Pattola respectively of a Samuham by the president of its managing committee, without consulting any members thereof, sued to recover a sum of money due to the Samuham under a bond. The contention of defendants is that the plaintiffs were incompetent to sue on behalf of the Samuham.

Held.—The Kizhi and Pattola being only servants of the institution, cannot be accepted as its legal representatives authorized to sue under Section 415, C. P. C., [Or. XXIX, r. 1] unless expressly constituted as such by the members. The Kizhi and Pattola being themselves members of the Samuham, may sue on its behalf, but subject to the provisions of Section 26. In such case, the Court of first instance should give notice to all the members of the Samuham before trying the suit.— 12 T. L. R., 145.

4. The original suit was by a Metropolitan and two priests for a declaratory decree that the 2nd defendant is not competent to appoint priests to officiate in the Kayankulam Church and for an injunction against the 1st defendant prohibiting him from exercising the office of priest in the said Church. Certain persons calling themselves the Yogakars and Kystanakars of the Church applied to the Court that they and other parishioners should be made parties to the suit. The District Judge ordered the issue of a notice regarding the institution of the suit to all persons having an interest in it. The plaintiffs appealed against that order.

Held.—As the parishioners would be seriously affected by decision in favour of the plaintiffs, the District Judge's order was right.

Third persons who have an interest in the suit are entitled to be made parties, and the Court should not confine itself merely to the questions arising between the parties on the record.— 15 T. L. R. App., 1.

Ref.—18 T. L. R., 222.

5. Section 26, C. P. C., is merely an enabling Section and the permission of the Court may be given after the institution of the suit so as to have a retrospective effect.

The lower Courts have ignored the effect of the petition for issue of notice under Section 26. The lower Courts observe that nothing was done, but it appears from the records that on notice was published in the Court-house, cutcherry and in the village. It should as a matter of fact also have been inserted in the Government Gazette.— 4 S. D., 49.

6. The beneficiaries and worshippers of a temple have independently of Section 511, Civil Procedure Code, [new Section 72], a right of suit against the trustees, individually for infringement of individual rights and as a body for malversation and removal of trustees. In the latter case the whole body is competent to sue through some of them with the consent of the Court under Section 26.

The community of Vellalas and Chetties in Travancore and Cochin, though consisting of an indefinite number of persons, is sufficiently well defined to permit some of their members to sue under Section 26, with the consent of the Court on behalf of the rest (F. B.).— 30 T. L. R., 91 ( = 4 T. L. J., 305).

7. Suit by cashier and accountant of a mosque belonging to the Mahomedan inhabitants of a particular village against the Sirkar for recovery of certain tank beds alleged to have been sold by Sirkar to the other defendants. The plaintiffs did not take any steps under Section 26, C. P. C. to give notice of suit to the villagers. In the course of the suit and on the application of the plaintiff, a third person alleged to be the Jenmi of the plaint property over which the mosque had only a Kanom right was impleaded as third plaintiff. On behalf of the Sirkar, two preliminary objections were raised to the maintainability of the suit, viz., that as the provisions of Section 26, were not complied with, 1st and 2nd plaintiffs were not entitled to maintain the suit on behalf of the villagers, and that as regards the third plaintiff, he could not maintain the suit as no notice under Section 409 [new Section 65] had been served upon the Sirkar. The District Judge upheld these contentions and dismissed the suit. On appeal by first and second plaintiffs :

Held (upholding the decision of the Court below).—As the suit was one on behalf of the mosque belonging to the villagers, the endowment must be duly and properly represented either by the whole body of villagers or by persons who in civil proceedings have the right to represent the institution.

The villagers were not on record either actually or constructively, the necessary procedure under Section 26, C. P. C., never having been taken or sought to be taken either in the Court below or in the Appellate Court.

Therefore, the suit was not maintainable in its present form.

Apart from Section 26; C. P. C., the plaintiffs 1 and 2 by themselves had no right to represent the mosque as the offices of cashier and accountant did not necessarily, or even usually, carry with them the right to institute suits of the present description especially when, as in the present case, there was a general manager for the institution. The institution in which the right to sue was alleged to exist was not duly represented on record. The 3rd plaintiff had no community of interest with the villagers who own the mosque, his only connection with the subject-matter of the litigation being the Kanom interest. His junction therefore could not cure the defect. Nor could he carry on the suit in his own right for the reason that he had omitted to give the requisite notice to the Sirkar.

The notice of suit sent by plaintiffs 1 and 2 would not enure to the benefit of the 3rd plaintiff as Section 409 [new Section 65] expressly laid down that the name and place of abode of the intending plaintiff should be clearly stated in the notice.—

(=6 T. L. J., 1).

8. Omission to apply for permission to sue under Section 26 of the Civil Procedure Code is not by itself ground for dismissing the suit. That Section is permissive, and in no way prohibitive in its terms ; and besides, it deals only with procedure and does not affect substantive rights. When, however, objection is taken by the defendants, the suit can proceed only on such leave being obtained.

Permission under Section 26, Civil Procedure Code, may be asked for and granted after the institution of the suit, as the granting of leave under the Section is not made a condition precedent.

In the case, the necessary notice had been given under Section 26, though a formal order permitting the plaintiffs to sue in a representative capacity had not been obtained. The plaintiffs should have been directed to rectify the error in procedure, and neither side would have been prejudiced by such direction.— 10 T. L. J., 69.

9. No suit shall be defeated by reason of the mis-joinder or non-joinder of parties, and the Court may in every suit deal with the matter in controversy as far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it.

Mis-joinder and non-joinder.

9. The leave of the Court under Section 26, C. P. C., may be granted after the institution of the suit.

Though legally it is not essential to obtain leave before the suit is filed and the necessary leave may be obtained afterwards, yet the proper course is undoubtedly to file the suit with permission, and the lower Courts will be well advised if they adhered to it.

In the case, along with the plaint which itself disclosed the fact that the suit was brought as a representative suit on behalf of the plaintiffs and other parishioners similarly interested like the plaintiffs, a formal application for permission was made and notice of the institution of the suit was given in the Gazette as required by Section 26. The former order granting permission was recorded only on the date of final argument. No doubt, the use of the word "sue" in the Section includes the whole suit and every thing done in the suit, and consequently would seem to imply that leave should be given before any thing is done in the suit; but it cannot be contended that, when that is not done, the matter should not be set right afterwards.—

10. Where a trust is partly of a public nature and partly private a suit relating to it cannot be sustained in the absence of sanction under Section 511 C. P. C., [new Section 72] or permission of the Court under Section 26 C. P. C.— 10 T. L. J., 251.

11. It is not necessary that the permission to sue under Section 26 should be one given in express words. It is sufficient if it is gatherable from the proceedings that such permission was given. The granting of the leave under the Section is not a condition precedent.

Persons conducting a suit on behalf of themselves and others with the leave of the Court obtained under Section 26, can enter into a compromise so as to bind those whom they represent, and there is no difference between the powers of the representatives in the original litigation and in appeal. The sole question in such cases would be whether the compromise was unreasonable, fraudulent or dishonest, so as to entitle the members of the class to repudiate the action of the representatives.

"When the terms of the adjustment have been settled by an arbitration award out of Court, the parties may agree to have a consent decree. In such a case, the true position appears to be that the Court will not look at the arbitration proceedings, but only at the consent terms, as it makes no difference whether these terms have been arrived at by agreement between the parties acting by themselves or have been settled by a third party chosen by them." (15 Bom., 245).

In this view of the law, the so-called "award" in the case may be acted upon as a compromise, on which a valid decree may be based.— 16 T. L. J, 501.

I. Sub-Rule (1) of Rule 10 corresponds to Section 23 of Regulation II of 1065. The old Section has the words (1) "at any time" in place of the words "at any stage of the suit", and (2) "commenced through a bona fide mistake" in place of the words "instituted through a bona fide mistake". The words "or persons" occurred after the words "any other person" in the old Section.

II. Paras (1) to (3) of Section 28 of the old Regulation, which correspond to Sub-Rules (2) and (3) were as follow :—

"28. Court may dismiss or add parties.—The Court may, on or before the first hearing, upon the application of either party, and on such terms as the Court thinks just, order that the name of any party, whether as plaintiff or as defendant, improperly joined, be struck out; and the Court may at any time, either upon or without such application, and on such terms as the Court thinks just, order that any plaintiff be made a defendant or that any defendant be made a plaintiff, and that the name of any person, who ought to have been joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, or whose presence before the Court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, be added.

Consent of person added as plaintiff or next friend.—No person shall be added as a plaintiff, or as the next friend of a plaintiff, without his own consent thereto."

III. 1. Sub-Rule (4) corresponds to Section 29 of the old Regulation which was as follows:—

"29. Where defendant added, plaint to be amended.—Where a defendant is added the plaint, if previously filed, shall, unless the Court direct otherwise, be amended in such manner as may be necessary, and an amended copy of the summons shall be served on the new defendant and the original defendants."

2. In regard to the amendments made, the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the 1901 amending Bill said :—"The words 'previously filed' have been omitted as unnecessary and the insertion of some words is proposed with the object of investing the Courts with a discretion in the matter of requiring the service of an amended copy of the plaint where, for instance, the amendment is of trivial importance and is made in the presence of the defendants."—

IV. In the British Indian Code, Rule 10 has also a Sub-Rule (5) as follows:—

"(5) Subject to the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, Section 22, the proceedings as against any person added as defendant shall be deemed to have begun only on the service of the summons."

A similar provision was made in the original Bill. But the Select Committee deleted it as "it was considered unnecessary to change the existing law in this respect."

V. The object of this provision (Section 28 old) is to avoid multiplicity of suits so far as the matter prayed for in the action is concerned. The Court has in each case to decide, with reference to the particular facts of the case, whether the presence of the person concerned is necessary to effectively adjudicate on the matter sought for, i. e., whether he is so much concerned in the same as to require him to be placed on record so as to make 'the determination complete and to quiet the question.' The principle underlying this provision is thus explained:—'All persons materially interested in the subject-matter ought generally to be parties to the suit, plaintiffs or defendants, however numerous they may be, so that the Court may be enabled to do complete justice by deciding upon and settling the rights of all persons interested, and the orders of the Court may be safely executed by those who are compelled to obey them, and future litigation may be prevented.' The general rule regarding joinder of parties requires all persons to be impleaded who have an interest in the subject-matter of a suit; and such interest should be an existing one. Further, the interest should be such as would directly make the decision in the action affecting him. If, however, embarrassment or inconvenience will be brought about, the application will have to be refused. "To bring persons on to the record, whose interests are not identical with either plaintiff or defendant, necessarily complicates the proceedings, and greatly impedes the progress of the suit. This disadvantage very frequently outweighs the advantages arising from finality of litigation, which is, upon the whole, the best justification for bringing in fresh parties. This alone ought to make the Courts of first instance very careful in the exercise of the power granted by the Section."—18 T. L. J., 671.

VI. Rules 2, 11 and 39 of Order XVI of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, are as follow:—

"2. Where an action has been commenced in the name of the wrong person as plaintiff, or where it is doubtful whether it has been commenced in the name of the right plaintiff, the Court or a Judge may, if satisfied that it has been so commenced through a bona fide mistake, and that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute so to do, order any other person to be substituted or added as plaintiff upon such terms as may be just."

["To bring a case within this Rule, it must be shown (1) that the action was commenced in the name of the original plaintiff by mistake and (2) that the substitution or addition is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute. The mistake may be either one of fact or of law."—

Yearly Practice for 1925.]

"11. No cause or matter shall be defeated by reason of the mis-joinder or non-joinder of parties, and the Court may in every cause or matter deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it. The Court or a Judge may, at any stage of the proceedings, either upon or without the application of either party, and on such terms as may appear to the Court or a Judge to be just, order that the names of any parties improperly joined, whether as plaintiffs or as defendants, be struck out, and that the names of any parties, whether plaintiffs or defendants, who ought to have been joined, or whose presence before the Court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the cause or matter, be added. No person shall be added as a plaintiff suing without a next friend or as the next friend of a plaintiff under any disability, without his own consent in writing thereto. Every party whose name is so added as defendant shall be served with a writ of summons or notice in manner hereinafter mentioned, or in such manner as may be prescribed by any special order, and the proceedings as against such party, shall be deemed to have begun only on the service of such writ or notice."

"39. The Court or a Judge may require any person to be made a party to any action or proceeding, and may give the conduct of the action or proceeding to such person as he may think fit, and may make such order in any particular case as he may think just for placing the defendant on the record on the same footing in regard to costs as other parties having a common interest with him in the matter in question."

VII. A defect in the frame of the suit, pointed out as a preliminary objection to it and cured by the plaintiff by ready compliance with the Court's order passed without demur on behalf of the defendant, could not be permitted to be relied upon in appeal to defeat the judgment on merits against him.

No objection to a suit on the ground of mis-joinder or non-joinder of parties should be allowed to defeat a claim. The Court before which the suit comes has ample powers of rectifying such defects by bringing in the proper parties or by excluding the unnecessary parties.

Preliminary technical objections ought to be taken at the earliest opportunity by the party interested in taking it and should be considered and disposed of by the Court without unnecessary delay, so that the plaintiff might not be prejudiced in his claim by lapse of time; and when they are once taken and disposed of, the party affected by the decision should, without loss of time, protest against such decision either by representations to the Court which made it or by an appeal to the higher Court, if by law an appeal is allowed; otherwise, the party should be taken to have allowed the decision to remain unquestioned.

The plaintiff could not, at every stage of the litigation, be called upon to answer a preliminary objection to the frame of the suit or to support an interlocutory order of the original Court disposing of an objection.

Case Law.
(Sec. 23.)

1. The non-joinder of a person as party to a suit cannot be allowed to defeat a claim and is a mistake which the Court has plenary powers to rectify. Even if the suit was instituted in the name of a wrong person as plaintiff, as contended in the case, and that act was due to a bona fide mistake, it was in the power of the Court to have allowed that mistake to be corrected as soon as it came to its knowledge. In the case, the institution of the suit by the first plaintiff who was not one altogether unconnected with the convent but one next in rank to the superior (2nd plaintiff) was but a bona fide mistake, as apparent from the facts. The 2nd plaintiff was therefore rightly brought as party on the objection of the defendant (Vide Section 23 which was only an amplification of Section 63 of the old Regulation).— 9 T. L R., 138.

2. (1) No appeal is provided by law against orders under Section 23, C. P. C.

(2) Where the suit was originally instituted by a person who had no right to do so, when it appears that the institution was due to a bona fide mistake, the Court has power under Section 23 C. P. C., to substitute or add the names of any person who ought to have been joined as a plaintiff.—
9 T. L. J., 148.

Case Law.
(Sec. 28.)

1. Where a plaintiff sues a wrong man, it is not the business of the Court, to bring in the right one.— 1 T. L. R., 77.

2. An undivided member in possession of common and joint property of the family may maintain a suit in his own name or on behalf of the whole family in respect of such property.

This is one of procedure rather than of substantive law. The general rule in equity undoubtedly is that all persons are to be made parties either as plaintiffs or defendants who are either legally or equitably interested in the subject-matter and result of the suit, but this rule has its exceptions. In several cases it has been held that when the right and interest of a joint and undivided family is in issue, their interests may be taken to have been sufficiently represented by one of the members acting bona fide, either as plaintiff or defendant in the suit.

3. A executed a bond to B for a certain sum of money. B assigned over the bond to C. C sued A alone for the recovery of the amount with interest under the deed of assignment. At the request of A who averred that the bond was executed by him for the price of goods purchased for the purpose of a joint trade carried on by him and D, the latter was added by the Court as 2nd defendant. D denied A's allegation of joint trade and his liability for the debt. The Zillah Judge held both A and D jointly liable.

Held.—The suit being simply for money due to C under the express terms of a bond executed by A, D cannot, by any stretch of language, be said to be a person "entitled to or claiming some share or interest in the subject-matter of the suit," nor is he a person likely to be affected by the result within the meaning of Section 61 (Regulation II of 1037).

A personal decree for money against A can, in no way, affect D (A's partner in trade) even supposing such partnership to exist.— 7 T. L. R., 8.

4. Section 409 C. P. C., [new Section 65] has no application to cases where the Court orders during the progress of a suit, the inclusion of the Sirkar as a defendant, as a necessary party. The suit was not instituted against the Dewan; but the Court at the first hearing of the suit, ordered the Dewan to be made a defendant, in the exercise of its discretion under Section 28. Sections 409 and 28 read and construed together seem clearly to allow operation to the former, subject to the provision of the latter which gives a wide discretion to the Court. To construe them otherwise would be to limit the exercise of the discretion vested in Courts by Section 28 and to render it impossible to the Sirkar to intervene as a party to any suit.— 8 T. L. R., 122.

5. The suit was to recover money due under a hypothecation bond, by sale of the interest of 1st and 2nd defendants in the hypothecated property. Defendants 3 to 5 were made parties on their own application, as they claimed portions of the hypothecated property under titles adverse to 1st and 2nd defendants. The question having arisen in appeal by the 5th defendant as to whether, in the circumstances of the case, his admission as a party was right.

Held (Kunhiraman Nair, J. dissenting).—Section 63 of the (old) Code of Civil Procedure clearly requires the person who has any right to the property in dispute in a pending suit, to be made a party to such suit to enable him to protect his interests, and therefore, the appellant (5th defendant) was entitled to be joined as a party.

Per Kunhiraman Nair, J.,—The Section simply permits the Courts to let in, as additional plaintiffs or defendants, persons who in addition to being the claimants to the subject-matter of the suit, are likely to be prejudicially affected by the result of the suit, and it is no authority for bringing in as additional parties any body and every body who may happen to claim the property in suit as his or their own by purchase or otherwise. To bring persons upon the record whose interests are not identical with those of either plaintiff or defendant, necessarily complicates the proceedings and greatly impedes the progress of a suit, and the Courts in Travancore, with their experience of the litigious character of the bulk of the public, should be very careful in the exercise of the power granted by the Section and should not bring in the intervenors, unless they (the Courts) are quite satisfied that the intervenors would be prejudiced by the result of the suit.

Cosby, J.—I construe the words "or who claims some share or interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and who may be likely to be affected by the result" which occur in Section 63 of the Civil Procedure Regulation (II of 1037) to refer to not only such persons on whom the result of the suit would be legally binding, but to all persons whose interest in the subject-matter of the suit is such that their absence from the suit is likely to cause them material injury. * *

The 5th defendant claimed No. 8 property as his own, not adversely to the plaintiff, but adversely to defendants 1 and 2. If the plaintiff obtains a decree against defendants 1 and 2, and the 5th defendant be not a party to the suit, the decision will certainly not bind him; but it may seriously affect his possession and enjoyment. The plaintiff may at any moment execute his decree and attach the 5th defendant's property and bring it to sale. Is the 5th defendant to be excluded from the suit, and the plaintiff to have a decree which would place the defendant's possession in constant peril which might lower the value of his property and which he could not get cancelled in so far as it affects him until the plaintiff chooses to execute it when probably he (defendant) may have to fight out his right to the property in the Courts for years?

Krishnaswamy Rao, C. J.—The object of Section 63 is to prevent multiplication of litigation in respect of one and the same property and to save judicial proceedings from being brought into disrepute by the collusion and fraud of the parties. It is one thing to say to a plaintiff to wait until his rights are actually invaded as the law should not be set in motion so long as there is a chance of an appeal to it becoming unnecessary; but it is quite another thing to refuse to hear the person who complains that, in the litigation pending before the Court, attempts are being made to deprive him of his property under the color of law and to practice a fraud upon the Court.

[Section 63 of Regulation II of 1037 was as follows:—"If it appear to the Court at any hearing of a suit that all the persons who may be entitled to, or who claim some share or interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and who may be likely to be affected by the result, have not been made parties to the suit, the Court may adjourn the hearing of the suit to a future day to be fixed by the Court, and direct that such persons shall be made either plaintiffs or defendants in the suit as the case may be. In such case, the Court shall issue a notice to such persons in the manner provided in this Regulation for the service of a summons on a defendant."].

6. It is only in cases in which the rights of intervenors to bring the suit are not disputed that they can be made plaintiffs. The proper course when such right is disputed, is to make them defendants.—

9. Section 28 of the Civil Procedure Code gives ample powers to the Court to join additional parties to the suit at any time, if the Court finds it necessary to do so, in order to enable it effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit.

In the case, the order for making the additional parties was made, after the case was finally heard.— 13 T. L. R., 144.

10. Plaintiff sued first defendant to recover property leased out to him. The lease was admitted and found genuine and 1st defendant in possession. Instead of giving a decree against first defendant, the Judge gave a decree to him and defendants 2 to 4 who were made parties to the litigation on the first defendant's allegation that they were in possession of the land.

Held.—The lower Court should not have brought in defendants 2, 3 and 4 as parties and tried all the pleas of title raised by the defence. Even after the written statements were filed, the plaintiff did not pay institution fees on the value of title and thereby seek to convert the suit into one of title. The Judge below considered questions of title as incidental to the lease on which plaintiff based his claim. Incidental expressions of opinion on questions of title should, as a rule, be avoided as it not only serves no useful purpose but also causes great waste of public time and judicial energy. As the plaintiff never claimed any relief against defendants 2 to 4, their inclusion in the decretal part was wrong.

As the special frame of the suit did not permit of the introduction of defendants 2 to 4 into the suit, their inclusion was wrong. If, at the time of the execution of the decree, the plaintiff finds that the property was not in the possession of the first defendant, and defendants 2 to 4 obstructed him in taking possession of the same, he should follow the procedure laid down in Sections 317, 320 and 321 of the Civil Procedure Code [= Or. XXI, rr. 94, 96, 97, 98 and 100]. With a view to simplify the execution of the decree, those who have no interest in the question actually raised by the plaint should not be brought on the record especially when such a course is likely to convert the suit of one character into another. As the scale of Court fees varies according to the nature of the litigation and the valuation of a suit for purposes of jurisdiction is mostly regulated by the Court Fees Act, the Courts cannot be too careful in allowing the introduction of new parties, which may have the effect of not only changing the nature of the litigation but also affecting the jurisdiction of the Courts. If, in the case, the plaintiff had been required to pay institution fees on the value of his title, which was disputed by defendants 2 to 4, the suit would be beyond the jurisdiction of the Munsiff.— 14 T. 12. The right possessed by L to receive Michavarom payable on the plaint properties was sold by his hypothecatee Q who assigned his right to R in 1068. The same properties were sold in 1060 under a decree obtained by another against L and certain items of them were purchased by T and certain others by another who sold them to B. R sued to recover from T and B the Michavarom of the plaint property payable to L in whose place R claimed to stand by virtue of the court-sale of 1065 and the assignment of 1068.

Held.—As T and B were not made parties to the suit, in the execution of the decree of which Q purchased the plaint property and assigned his rights over it to R, the decree could not bind T and B.— 14 T. L. R., 162.

13. Under Section 28 of the Civil Procedure Code, any person whose presence before the Court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, must be added as parties.

Where one of the two daughters of a Hindu Makkathayam father brought a suit for the cancellation of a sale of a paternal property by her mother and the other sister (2nd defendant) against the latter and the vendee, and the District Judge found that the sister who joined in the execution of the sale was unnecessarily made a defendant in the suit:

Held.—The view taken by the District Judge was bad in law owing to defect of parties. The cause must be proceeded with, after making the said sister a defendant in the suit.

It is plain that the presence of the 2nd defendant in the case is necessary "to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit", as pointed out in Section 28. "Is it meant by these words that a person not originally impleaded is to be made a party only if the questions raised in the suit cannot otherwise be completely and effectually determined between the parties to the suit or is it meant completely and effectually determined so that they shall not be again raised in that or in any other suit between the parties to the suit or any of them and third parties? To accept the more restricted interpretation involves the addition of words which we do not find in the Section, viz., between the parties to the suit, and there can be few, if any, questions which cannot be determined between the parties to the suit one way or the other, and of which the determination, if they be material, will as between the parties to the suit, not be final. On the other hand, the interpretation warranted by the terms would enable the Court to avoid conflicting decisions on the same question which would work injustice to a party to the suit and finally and effectually put an end to litigation respecting them", (5 Mad. 52).—

Held.—As a Mahomedan widow who is also a sharer of her husband's estate like any of his other heirs could bind that estate including the estate of her minor daughters, if, being in possession of the whole estate, she defended bona fide the suit brought for such debts, the daughters (the plaintiffs) must be bound by the decree and the execution sale.— 15 T. 16. The original suit was by a Metropolitan and two priests for a declaratory decree that the 2nd defendant is not competent to appoint priests to officiate in the Kayenculem Church and for an injunction against the 1st defendant prohibiting him from exercising the office of priest in the said Church. Certain persons calling themselves Yogakars and Kysthanakars of the Church applied to the Court that they and the other parishioners should be made parties to the suit. The District Judge ordered the issue of a notice regarding the institution of the suit to all persons having an interest in it. The plaintiffs appealed against that order:

Held.—As the parishioners would be seriously affected by a decision in favour of the plaintiffs, the District Judge's order was right.

17. Where a District Judge dismissed a suit for declaration of title and cancellation of Patta issued by the Settlement Department on the sole ground that the Sirkar was not made a party to it:

Held.—The Judge was wrong as the Sirkar is not a necessary party to suits for declaration of title to land as between private parties. The mere insertion in the plaint of a relief for the cancellation of a Patta which is not essential for the declaration of the plaintiff's title for which the suit was brought, is no ground for the dismissal of the suit.— 16 T. 21. In a suit for removal of Karanavan, certain distant Koottukars who failed to show a prima facie case of community of interest in the suit Tarwad were made additional defendants in the suit. In the appeal preferred by them impugning the lower Court's finding against their membership, they offered to pay Court-fees on the total value of the Tarwad properties:

Held.—As no such fees could be levied in appeal from either party, the only course was to have the question of the rights of the Koottukars, for settlement in a separate suit on payment of proper Court-fees. "To bring parties on to the record whose interests are not identical with either plaintiff or defendant necessarily complicates the proceedings and greatly impedes the progress of the suit. by him and in the suit for redemption of the mortgage, contended inter alia that the mortgagor is not entitled to recover the Puthuval land.

Held.—As the mortgagor agreed to pay the assessed tax, the Sirkar was not a necessary party. "It stands to reason that the Sirkar is a necessary party in suits where its rights are called into question. Where however the dispute lies between private parties claiming the registry of Puthuval lands and the Sirkar's right to assess the property is admitted by both parties, the Sirkar's participation in the suit is unnecessary."— 20 T. Held.—The Sirkar is a necessary party: there is no privity of contract between plaintiff and defendant.

The lower Court in the case held the plaint suit in its present form would not lie and returned the plaint for amendment and presentation to the proper Court by making the Sirkar a party. Held.—(1) The Sirkar is a necessary party.

33. Plaintiff, a mortgagee, created a sub-mortgage upon the mortgaged properties. Without impleading the sub-mortgagee as a party, he brought a suit for the recovery of money upon the mortgage-bond. The defendant pleaded discharge which was disbelieved. The Munsiff, however, dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff should have made the sub-mortgagee also party to the suit and that it was too late for the Court to make the sub-mortagee a party on its own motion, as the plaintiff by his default to appear as a witness and to mention the sub-mortgage in the pleadings, has forfeited his claim to any such indulgence.

Held.—(1) On the finding that the plea of discharge was false, the sub-mortgagee ought to have been made a party to the suit by the Court. In the interests of justice, the plaintiff should be allowed an opportunity to add the sub-mortgagee as a party. In the face of the finding, the question is whether the discretion given to the Court to add parties should not be exercised in furtherance of a just claim merely because the claimant has been guilty of even wilful default. There cannot be two answers to this question.

(2) For the plaintiff's default, the suitable punishment will be to saddle him with the costs of the opposite party occasioned by such default and that will be the costs of the appeal, the costs of the lower Court following the decision on the merits.—

The 13th defendant claimed to be added as a party on the ground that the Udampadi and the suit are mere tricks to recover the property whose title has vested in his family on account of the failure of the plaintiff's Tarwad to execute a decree for redemption. The District Judge granted the prayer.

Held.—The Civil Procedure Code gives the Court the necessary power to add such a party as defendant.

In mortgages, the ordinary rule has been held to be that a plaintiff mortgagee cannot be allowed so to frame his suit as to draw into controversy the title of a third party, who is in no way connected with the mortgage and who has set up a title paramount to that of the mortgagor and mortgagee. But the ruling appears to be based upon considerations relating to the scope of a mortgage suit which is only to cut off the equity of redemption and bar the right of the mortgagee and those claiming under him. But on actions for ejectment the persons who have a right to defend are persons named in the writ and any person who is in possession by himself or his tenant.—

39. Plaintiffs sued for redemption of a mortgage and joined as defendants the mortgagee and also A and B, persons in possession of the mortgaged property. A and B contended that the property mortgaged was not the plaint property but a different one and that they were in possession of the plaint property under a sale from a stranger C who was therefore made an additional defendant. The Court upholding the defence dismissed the suit. On appeal the District Judge ordered the removal of A, B and C from the record on the ground that they had been improperly impleaded in the suit and decreed the suit.

Held.—As A and B were made defendants by plaintiff himself and C was made an additional defendant without any demur from the plaintiff, the plaintiff could not subsequently be allowed to object to the presence of A, B and C on the record, and the lower Court acted wrongly in removing them from the record.

Quaere.—Whether persons who set up paramount title to the mortgaged property are necessary parties to a suit for redemption of the property.—29 T. L. R., 85 (=3 T. L. J., 367).

40. In view of the fact that the plaintiff claims under an agreement from the defendant's co-owners or partners, it is better they should be added as parties in order that any decree that may be passed may bind them.— 30 T. L. R., 116 (=4 T. L. J., 342).

41. Every junior member in a Marumakkathayam Tarwad is not an essential party to a suit for the removal of the Karanavan of the Tarwad.— 30 T. L. R., 251.

42. In cases where it is thought that the Sirkar should be made a party, the Munsiffs' Courts should implead the Sirkar as a party, and then return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. Mere direction to implead the Sirkar as a party would not justify the return of a plaint.— 5 T. L. J., 351.

43. Plaintiff, alleging that the plaint property formed part of a garden registered as Puduval in his name, but that the Pattah therefor had been erroneously given to the defendant, sued for declaration of his title over the plaint property and for setting aside the Pattah granted to the defendant. The defendant contended that the plaint property formed part of a garden registered in his (defendant's) own name and that the Pattah was not liable to be set aside. The Court of first instance decreed the suit. On appeal by the defendant, the District Judge, holding that the Sirkar was a necessary party to the suit, set aside the Munsiff's decree and remanded the suit under Section 533, C. P. C. for impleading the Sirkar.

Held.—Though the Sirkar might have been made a party so as to bind it by a decree and prevent future litigation, it was not a necessary party to the suit.

In the case, there had been two registries one in the name of either party.— 31 T. L. R., 9.

44. Plaintiff, a sub-partner, brought the suit after dissolution of the major partnership asking that accounts of the major partnership should be taken and the amount due to the partner, whose sub-partner the plaintiff was, should be ascertained.

Held.—The members of the major partnership were necessary parties to the suit.— 32 T. L. R., 211 (=7 T. L. J., 32).

45. If the plaintiff merely sues for arrears of maintenance, the suit, though one for maintenance, does not differ in character from an ordinary suit to recover debt, and all members of the plaintiffs' Tarwad are not necessary or even proper parties to such a suit.

If, on the other hand, the prayer in the suit is to create a perpetual charge of maintenance on the Tarwad properties at a specified rate, other members who are equally interested in having their own interests as well as the interests of the Tarwad safeguarded, have the right to contest the claim and see that a fair and equitable arrangement is come to.— 8 T. 46. It is competent to a Court, at any stage of the proceedings, either upon or without the application of a party, to order that the name of a party improperly joined be struck out.

The fundamental principle underlying the rule relating to the joinder of parties is "that all concerned in the demand ought to be made parties in equity. Not all concerned in the subject-matter, respecting which a thing is demanded, but all concerned in the very thing which is demanded, in the matter petitioned for, in the prayer of the bill, or in other words, in the object of the suit."

Per Raman Tampi, J.—The word "may" used in the first sentence of Section 28 ought to be interpreted with reference to the context and "the particular provisions or the general scope and objects of the enactment conferring the power." In the absence of any provision depriving the Courts of the power to act suo moto in the matter of striking out the name of any party to the suit, I am clear that such power may be validly exercised. * * Section 28 contains an enabling provision which may be availed of by the parties at certain stages of the suit, but which may be given effect to by the Court at any time consistently with equitable and just considerations. * Though the Court acted in the case on the motion of the plaintiff, its order may be upheld as one made in the exercise of its own inherent jurisdiction.—

11 T. L. J., 278.

47. It is clear law that where there are several trustees all of them should be impleaded in suits relating to the trust.—

13 T. L J., 486.

48. In a suit for declaration of right to future maintenance and recovery of arrears of maintenance brought by junior members of a Nayar Tarwad, all the adult members of the Tarwad should be impleaded as parties. Section 25 of the Nayar Regulation does not militate against this rule as it was enacted in order to protect strangers seeking relief against the Tarwad and to safeguard the interests of the Tarwad as a whole.

So long as a Nayar Tarwad remains impartible and joint the main right of each individual member thereof is the claim to share in the profits of the Tarwad property by demanding separate maintenance. A fair equitable adjustment of this right is impossible or at least practically difficult unless the adult members of the Tarwad are given an opportunity of contesting the claim.— 40 T. L. R., 11

(= 14 T. L. J., 90).

Fol.—14 T. L. J., 310.

16 T. L. J., 545.

49. In cases where the plaintiff seeks for a declaration of his right to get and the grant to him of a specific amount as future maintenance as against the Tarwad, all the adult members of the Tarwad should be made parties.

The right of every member of a Tarwad to be maintained out of the Tarwad properties is an individual right, and a fair and equitable adjustment of this right is impossible, or, at least, practically difficult, unless the adult members of the Tarwad are given an opportunity of contesting the claim for declaration put forward in the suit.

The above view does not go against the provisions of Section 25 of the Nayar Regulation (of 1088). The words "no decree shall bind a Tarwad unless it be obtained in a suit against the Karanavan as such, etc." occurring in Section 25 would appear to indicate that the provisions therein were meant to apply only to those suits which could be brought against the Karanavan of a Tarwad not only as such, but otherwise also, i. e., independent of and without reference to his position as Karanavan, and were not intended to govern those suits which cannot be brought against a Karanavan except as such or which could be brought against him only as such. A suit by a junior member for a declaration in respect of future separate maintenance falls within the latter description of suits italicised.— 14 T. L. J., 310.

50. The suit was for recovery of arrears of rent in respect of a land leased to the defendant by the plaintiff under a lease deed. The defence was that the land was leased by the plaintiff and another co-sharer and that the plaintiff's share of the rent was paid to the plaintiff and the co-sharer's portion of the rent to him. Both the lower Courts decreed the plaintiff's suit. In special appeal, the defendant contended that the person referred to as the plaintiff's co-sharer should have been impleaded as a party to the suit and the defendant allowed to prove that his share of the rent was paid to him.

Held.—A lessee cannot be allowed to set up the title of an alleged co-sharer of the lessor, as to do so would be to defeat the fundamental principles of estoppel as enacted in Section 116 of the evidence Act.

A person taking a lease from one of several co-sharers cannot dispute his lessor's exclusive title to receive the rent or sue in ejectment. The person referred to by the defendant as the plaintiff's co-sharer is not a necessary party to the suit.—

51. The original plaintiff having died, his daughters were impleaded as his legal representatives. On a subsequent date, the defendants petitioned that these petitioners (the daughters) had been wrongly brought on record. The Court, holding that the suit had abated on the death of the original plaintiff, directed the removal of the petitioners from the array of parties.

Held.—The order directing the abatement of the suit was virtually a decree and was therefore appealable as such. The order, in so far as it directed the removal of the petitioners from the array of parties fell within Section 28, C. P. C., and was appealable. The revision petition was therefore incompetent.— 15 T. L. J., 226.

52. It is true that Section 28 gives the Court very wide discretion to add parties at any stage of the proceedings. The term "questions involved in the suit" in Section 28 does not include any claim which can possibly be put forward by any body to the property involved in the suit. The words imply that the defendant to be added must be a defendant against whom the plaintiff has some cause of complaint which ought to be determined in the action and it was never intended to apply where the person to be added as a defendant is a person against whom the plaintiff has no claim and does not wish to prosecute any.

The mere fact that a preliminary decree had been passed does not by itself prevent the Court, from exercising its jurisdiction to add parties, under the second paragraph of Section 28, but such parties should not be added unless it is necessary in order to enable the Court to adjudicate on all the questions involved in the suit which words do not mean all the questions relating to the property involved in the suit.—

53. The plaintiff claiming to be the direct Seshakaran of the deceased Karanavan of a Tarwad and on the strength of an Udampadi executed in his favour by the deceased Karanavan sued for the recovery of the amount due under a promissory note executed by the defendant in favour of the deceased Karanavan. The defendant contended inter alia that as the amount under the note was advanced out of the Tarwad funds, the Karanavan of the Tarwad at the time of suit was a necessary party.

Held.—(1) The addition of the Karanavan of the Tarwad and the senior Anandaravars of the various branches, if any, as party defendants in the suit, was essential for effectually and completely adjudicating upon all the questions relating to the reliefs claimed in the plaint.

(2) The omission to press the objection against non-joinder specifically raised in the written statement could not amount to a waiver of the objection. Even if the objection on the ground of non-joinder had not been specifically taken by the defendant, the statutory provision (Section 28) clearly empowers the Court to remedy this defect, if in the peculiar nature of the case the same is considered necessary.

The power conferred by the statute is discretionary, but is widely exercised even though the addition of new parties may add new issues. But if the plaintiff objects and serious embarrassment or inconvenience will be caused to him, the addition should not be effected. On the one hand, the Courts have to bear in mind that the plaintiff as the dominus litus should have his discretion untrammelled to decide, whom all he should fight with, to obtain the reliefs he claimed and that the 'questions involved in the suit' contemplated in the statutory provision refer only to those with regard to the right set up and relief claimed on the one side and denied or withheld on the other. The necessity of avoiding a multiplicity of suits and preventing the defendant from being harrassed by other suits for the identical relief claimed in the suit should not also be ignored.— 43 T. L. R., 434.

54. It has been consistently held that, in suits for the enforcement of the rights under purchases, either at a private sale or a Court sale of Chitty dues, from a prized subscriber, all the unprized subscribers are necessary parties as they have a lien over the Chitty assets. The Chitties Regulation has not altered the law on this matter, as the legal rights and liabilities springing up from the relationship of the foreman and the prized and unprized subscribers in the Chitty concern, contained in the Regulation are substantially the same as those formulated in the precedents of the High Court before the Regulation was enacted. Under Section 28, C. P. C., a distinction is sometimes drawn between 'necessary' parties and 'proper' parties so far as actions are concerned. 'Necessary' parties are those without whom no decree at all can be rendered, while 'proper' parties are said to be those whose presence renders the decree more effectual, i. e., those by whose presence the decree becomes a complete determination of all the questions which can arise and of all the rights which are connected with the subject-matter of the controversy.

In the matter of applications by intervenors, the Courts have to scrutinise the allegations regarding the necessity of impleading the parties concerned, and if the application in question is opposed, they should unhesitatingly reject the same, unless they are satisfied that having regard to the cause of action alleged, and the relief claimed, there could not be a properly constituted suit without them on record. It will also have to be borne in mind in this connection that the plaintiff being generally the dominus litus, he should not be compelled to fight against some other litigant not of his own choice, and whose presence on record, is not required by a positive rule of law, or seek for a determination of questions which would not arise in the nature of the right set up and the reliefs claimed by him.

55. As regards the parties who have to be on record in suit based on mortgages, the Courts have to be governed by the general provisions relating to joinder of parties contained in the Civil Procedure Code, the Court having the power to implead such persons whose presence on record is in its opinion necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit (Order I, Rule 10). A mortgage suit should be complete by itself, so as to ensure a final adjudication of all the questions involved and have the same settled once for all, with a view to avoid multiplicity of suits.

All persons having an interest either in the mortgage security or in the right of redemption are required to be joined, as parties to suits relating to mortgages. Puisne mortgages could sue for foreclosure or sale without the prior mortgagee on record, and the prior mortgagees need not be impleaded by them in suits for redemption of subsequent mortgages.

In actions by prior mortgagees to enforce their mortgages, the subsequent encumbrancers are necessary parties as they are persons interested in the equity of redemption. The latter cannot be concluded by proceedings taken behind their back. Two fundamental principles should be borne in mind in determining who all should be parties to actions of this kind; firstly, the mortgagee must be deemed to seek for the sale of the mortgagor's interest in the property as it stood on the date of the mortgage, and secondly, where there are more mortgagees than one, the holder of the last one has the right to redeem the earlier mortgages. In this view, the subsequent encumbrancers are clearly interested in the issue of the suit and therefore have to be brought in as parties, if an effective and final adjudication is required. A decree obtained by a prior mortgagee without the puisne encumbrancers on record will not per se be void and unenforceable against the parties thereto.

It is a well recognised rule of law that decrees and orders and the proceedings held with reference to, or in pursuance of, the same can bind only the parties thereto. This rule is clearly applicable to actions in enforcement of mortgages as well. If puisne encumbrancers are left out in such decrees their rights will remain unaffected. The subsequent encumbrancer cannot by any stretch of argument be said to have been represented by the mortgagor in the prior suit so as to constitute such a privity of estate between them as to make the decree valid and binding upon the former (F. B.).

56. The suit was by certain junior members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad for maintenance out of the Tarwad properties. They had impleaded all persons who, according to them, were the adult members of the Tarwad. The 8th defendant, the Karanavan, also conceded that the plaintiffs and defendants were the only members of the Tarwad. The petitioners came forward as members of another Thavazhi of the Tarwad and prayed to be impleaded. Both the plaintiffs and the defendants denied their status and protested against their intervention in the suit. The lower Court refused the petition of the intervenors.

Held (in revision).—The petitioners were not necessary parties to the suit. Their introduction into the suit would virtually change the nature of the suit and necessitate the decision of complicated questions outside the case of both the plaintiffs and the defendants, which neither of them wanted to be raised. It was good to avoid multiplicity of suits, but it would be futile to expect to shut out all future litigation. All that should be attempted was to avoid further litigation regarding the matters involved in the suit—that was to say, matters which were in dispute between the plaintiffs and the defendants. "To bring persons on to the record whose interests are not identical with either plaintiff or defendant, necessarily complicates the proceedings and greatly impedes the progress of the suit. This disadvantage very frequently outweighs the advantages arising from finality of litigation, which is upon the whole the best justification for bringing in fresh parties.— 19 T. L. J., 195.

57. In a mortgage suit, the title of a third party paramount to that of the mortgagor and mortgagee cannot be enquired into, and such third party cannot be added as a party to the suit. It does not matter who raises the paramount title and who puts forward the objection.—

Conduct of suit.

11. The Court may give the conduct of the suit to such person as it deems proper.

Appearance of one of several plaintiffs or defendants for others.

12. (1) Where there are more plaintiffs than one, any one or more of them may be authorised by any other of them to appear, plead or act for such other in any proceeding; and in like manner, where there are more defendants than one, any one or more of them may be authorised by any other of them to appear, plead or act for such other in any proceeding.

(2) The authority shall be in writing signed by the party giving it and attested by two witnesses and shall be filed in Court.

(3) It shall be lawful for the Court in any particular case to require the party who is alleged to have executed the authority above mentioned to appear before it and admit the execution of the authority or to issue a commission to ascertain whether such authority is genuine. The cost of issuing the commission shall be paid by the party who produces the authority. If the alleged executing party fails to appear before the Court, or the cost of issuing the commission be not deposited within the time fixed, the Court may refuse to act on such authority.

(Sec. 29.)

Section 29 of the Civil Procedure Code says imperatively that "unless the Court directs otherwise," "the plaint shall be amended in such manner as may be necessary" when a defendant is added. However, this is not a fatal objection [Section 547, C. P. C. (new Section 78)]. The plaint ought to be amended by addition or substitution of appropriate reliefs, when defendants are added.— 22 T. Sub-Rule (1) is the same as in the British Indian Code.

Sub-Rule (2).—The words "and attested by two witnesses" do not occur in that Code.

Sub-Rule (3).—This is not found in that Code.

II. Sub-Rule (3) and the words in Sub-Rule (2) above mentioned were inserted in Regulation II of 1065, by the amending Regulation II of 1070. The Select Committee who made the additions observed:—

Objections as to non-joinder or mis-joinder.

13. All objections on the ground of non-joinder or mis-joinder of parties shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and, in all cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement, unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen, and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived.

"Section 3 of the amended Bill is new. It clearly defines the procedure to be adopted in the case of a Power-of-Attorney produced by one of the parties, in the event of the Court entertaining any doubt as to its authenticity. The responsibility and liability of the party not appearing before the Court and the validity of the decree passed against him depend upon the genuineness of the authority. Even under the law, as it now stands, the Court may exercise the power which, by the new Section, we propose to confer on them. But the advantage of a clear provision on the point, which will remove all causes of doubt, has induced us to enact this Section."

Case Law.

1. (1) Though Section 104 of the Civil Procedure Code (old) allows one or more plaintiffs to appear and act for the other or others of them, the presentation of an appeal by one or more of several appellants for the other or others of them is wholly unsanctioned by law. An appeal must be filed in person or by Vakil or by a recognized agent under the provisions of the Code.

(2) An appeal filed by the party improperly added as such and who has not signed the plaint, is bad for defect of parties.

Section 104 of Regulation II of 1087 was as follows:—["When there are two or more plaintiffs any one or more of them may be authorized to appear, plead and act for the other or others of them; and in like manner, when there are two or more defendants, any one or more of them may be authorized to appear, plead and act for the other or others of them: provided that the authority shall in all cases be in writing, and shall be filed in the Court; when so filed, it shall be as effectual to all intents and purposes as if the person so authorized to appear, plead and act, were a pleader of the Court."].— 7 T. L. R., 185.

2. The authority under Section 31, C. P. C., must be in writing signed by the party giving it, attested by two witnesses, and must be filed in Court. The Section read as a whole clearly shows that such authorisation must be effected before the act is done by the person authorised.—

---

Or. I, r. 13 [= S. 30 = Or. I, r. 13]

I. Section 30 of the old Regulation was as follows:—

"30. Time for taking objections as to non-joinder or mis-joinder.—All objections for want of parties, or for joinder of parties who have no interest in the suit, or for mis-joinder as co-plaintiffs or co-defendants, shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity, and in all cases, before the first hearing, and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived by the defendant."

II. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons for the 1901 amending Bill, it was observed:—" An exception should be made of cases in which the ground of objection arises subsequently, as, for example, where, after the first hearing and before decree, a co-parcener, remainderman or reversioner is born, or a female party is married to a stranger to the suit."— India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

Case Law.

1. As a rule, all formal objections to a suit such as mis-joinder, &c., ought to be taken before the settlement of issues as they are capable of amendment. No effect should be given to the plea of mis-joinder as it was not taken in the Court below. The assignor being liable to account to the assignee, on the failure of the claim founded upon the assignment, his inclusion as co-defendant is not bad for mis-joinder. The modern tendency of decisions and legislation is to discourage pleas of mis-joinder.—

3 T. L. R., 16.

2. The suit was by junior members of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad to remove defendant from his office of Karanavan. There were other junior members who had not been impleaded. On this ground, the case was remanded by the Judge. In appeal, it was contended for the defendant that all members of the Tarwad are essential parties to a suit for removal of Karanavan and that the suit could not go on in the absence of any of the members, and that Section 30 which deals with waiver of an objection as to mis-joinder or non-joinder of parties does not apply to the case of parties so essentially necessary to the suit that it cannot be maintained without them.

As to the argument founded on the alleged inapplicability of Section 30, it means that where by the substantive law the right of suit resides in a certain person or in certain persons jointly, another person or a few of those persons alone cannot maintain the suit. Though generally, objections as to mis-joinder or non-joinder in all such cases may not be within Section 30, it may be pointed out that even in some such cases, as in the case of joint promisors, joint promisees and trustees, objections as to non-joinder have been held to be waived because they were not raised at the earliest possible opportunity. The rule of procedure does nothing more than provide that certain rules of substantive law can only be enforced or given effect to in a particular way or under particular limitations.

Obiter.—It is a safe maxim for a Court of appeal to be governed by that an objection which, if taken, might have been cured and which has not been taken in the Court below, shall not be taken in the Court of appeal.—

30 T. L. R., 251.

3. In a suit for redemption of a mortgage, the defendants Nos. 2 and 3, were made parties on the ground that they have trespassed into a portion of the mortgaged premises during the currency of the mortgage. These defendants denied the trespass and contended that the plaint lands belonged to the Sirkar as unregistered waste. The first defendant-mortgagee admitted the mortgage. The Munsiff allowed the suit. On appeal, it was contended for the first time by the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 that the Sirkar was a necessary party. The District Judge accepting this contention, reversed the Munsiff's decree and remanded the suit with directions to make the Sirkar a party to the suit.

Held.—(1) As the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 had not obtained any title to the land from the Sirkar, the latter was not a necessary party.

(2) The objection for want of parties not having been taken by the defendants 2 and 3 before the first hearing should be deemed to have been waived by them. No doubt, under Section 28, C. P. C., [ Or. I, r. 10 (2) and (3) ], the Court is invested with plenary powers in the matter of adding at any time parties whose presence before it may be necessary in order to enable it to completely and effectually settle all the questions involved in the suit. The presence of the Sirkar as a party on the record is not necessary for the disposal of the case.—

ORDER II.

Frame of Suit.

Frame of suit.

1. Every suit shall, as far as practicable, be framed so as to afford ground for final decision upon the subjects in dispute and to prevent further litigation concerning them.

Suit to include the whole claim.

2. (1) Every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action; but a plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of any Court.

Relinquishment of part of claim.

(2) Where a plaintiff omits to sue in respect of, or intentionally relinquishes, any portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished.

Omission to sue for one of several reliefs.

(3) A person entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action may sue for all or any of such reliefs; but if he omits, except with the leave of the Court, to sue for all such reliefs, he shall not afterwards sue for any relief so omitted.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this Rule, an obligation and a collateral security for its performance and successive claims arising under the same obligation shall be deemed respectively to constitute but one cause of action.

the defendant in favour of the deceased Karanavan. The defendant contended, inter alia, that as the amount under the note was advanced out of the Tarwad funds, the Karanavan of the Tarwad at the time of the suit was a necessary party.

Held.—The addition of the Karanavan of the Tarwad and the senior Anandaravars of the various branches, if any, as party defendants in the suit, was essential for effectually and completely adjudicating upon all the questions relating to the reliefs claimed in the plaint.

The omission to press at the time of the settlement of issues the objection against non-joinder specifically raised in the written statement could not amount to a waiver of the objection. Even if the objection on the ground of non-joinder had not been specifically taken by the defendant, Section 28 (2) [ = Or. I, r. 10 ] empowers the Court to remedy this defect, if in the peculiar nature of the case the same is considered necessary.— 43 T. L. R. 434.

I. 1. The corresponding Section 39 of the old Regulation was as follows:—

"39. Suit to include whole claim.—Every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action; but the plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of any Court.

Relinquishment of part of claim.—If a plaintiff omit to sue in respect of or intentionally relinquish any portion of his claim, he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so omitted or relinquished.

Omission to sue for one of several remedies.—A person entitled to more than one remedy in respect of the same cause of action may sue for all or any of his remedies; but if he omits (except with the leave of the Court obtained before the first hearing) to sue for any of such remedies, he shall not afterwards sue for the remedy so omitted.

If a plaintiff omits to include in the plaint any portion of his claim, or to ask for any of the remedies to which he is entitled (in cases in which he is entitled to more than one remedy), the Court may, at or before the first hearing, allow him to amend the plaint so as to include the portion of the claim or the remedy so omitted.

For the purpose of this Section, an obligation and a collateral security for its performance shall be deemed to constitute but one cause of action.

A lets a house to B at a yearly rent of rupees 1,200. The rent for the whole of the years 1881 and 1882 is due and unpaid. A sues B only for the rent due for 1882. A shall not afterwards sue B for the rent due for 1881."

2. In regard to the fourth para, it was observed in the Statement of Objects and Reasons:—"A new para has been added to Section 43 (Indian Code) to provide against the danger of a plaintiff losing his rights altogether on account of an omission which, in many cases, is the result of ignorance. It simply enables the plaintiff to amend his plaint with the permission of the Court, and in no way affects the main principle of the Section, viz., that there should be no multiplicity of litigation in respect of one and the same matter."

II. The Illustration has been amplified so as to state more fully the principle formulated.

"The Illustration to the present Section, whilst embodying a most necessary rule of practice, is in direct conflict with the Section itself, and is intelligible only if the latter is construed as requiring the joinder of successive causes of action arising out of the same contract and existing at the time of the institution of the suit." (Objects and Reasons, 1901 Bill).— India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt V.

Case Law.

1. A party is bound to bring forward his whole case in respect of a matter in litigation and open to him upon the points for decision in the suit. He cannot abstain from relying upon, nor abandon, a ground of claim, which is in question and proper for consideration and decision in the suit, and afterwards make it a fresh cause of a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter.— 7. T. L. R., 171.

2. Plaintiff sued her husband (defendant) to recover the plaint land, under a registered agreement alleging that she was ill-treated by the defendant. The latter denied the ill-treatment and averred that the plaintiff could not claim the land as he was ready and willing to maintain and house her according to the terms of the agreement. The Munsiff decreed in favour of the plaintiff. The Zillah Judge, on appeal, held that the Munsiff had no jurisdiction to try the suit, as the value of the whole field (of which the property sued for is 3/4) exceeded Rs. 500; and as ill-treatment was not proved, the suit for possession of the land was not maintainable. He accordingly dismissed the suit. On appeal:

Held.—Although plaintiff might have, under the terms of the agreement claimed possession of the whole field, she chose to give up her claim to 1/4 of it, and claimed only 3/4. Section 39 gave her the option of doing so. As the value of the 3/4 did not exceed Rs. 500, the suit was within the jurisdiction of the Munsiff.—

3. The suit was for the principal and balance of interest due under a bond, the date of payment fixed in the bond being 5-5-1072. The defendant, admitting the execution of the bond, pleaded absence of consideration, and also that plaintiff having sued defendant on 25-10-1072 for interest due on the bond up to that date, without suing for the principal he was barred from bringing the present suit for the principal, by Section 39, C. P. C.

Held.—The bar by Section 39 was fatal to the plaintiff's suit and it was rightly dismissed by the District Judge.

As the claims for both interest and principal arose from the same cause of action and as there was no special and distinct agreement for payment of interest as distinguishable from the principal and Section 39 of the Civil Procedure Code requires a plaintiff to include in the same suit the whole of his claim arising out of the same cause of action, the plaintiff could not be allowed to split his claims; and therefore, the second suit for the principal was not maintainable.

"One of the reasons for the prohibition is that the defendant be not put to unnecessary vexation, and one test is whether the same evidence and the same arguments apply in the two cases (9 Mad., 279).

"The real principle which runs through all the cases is that if the several items which make up the claim are of the same nature and form part of the same course of dealing so as to pass under the same discription and form part of one transaction, they must be considered as one cause of action and must be joined in one suit, though they may have arisen out of several contracts" (12 Cal., 339). In the case, at the date of the plaintiff's prior suit, both the interest and the principal became but one debt, and both formed parts of one transaction.

Where the whole cause of action has arisen for the plaintiff, he cannot be allowed to split his claims; and this rule is founded on considerations of public policy. It may be different where the two demands arise under different contracts, e. g., where the covenant to pay interest is different and distinct from that to pay the principal and the right to demand the principal may not have accrued with the right to interest. There the general rule may be excluded by the special contract of the parties and the two claims may not be strictly said to arise from the same cause of action. In the case, there was no special and distinct agreement for payment of interest as distinguished from the principal.— 14 T. L. R., 88.

4. An immediate reversioner to immovable property has two rights of action. The one is to sue to have an encumbrance which is likely to injure his rights if not impeached in time, declared invalid; and the other is to sue for possession when his title accrues to hold the property. The plaintiff's prior suit was for a declaratory decree only; and he could not then sue for recovery of the property. As he could not include the present claim in the prior suit, Section 39 did not apply.— 15 T. L. R., 3.

5. A suit for possession is not barred under Section 39 of the Civil Procedure Code on the ground that there was no prayer for possession in the prior suit for a declaration of plaintiff's title alleging that he was in possession. The plaintiff might have honestly thought that he was in possession when he brought the prior suit, and because in pursuance to the finding of the Court therein he had stated in the plaint in the subsequent suit that he was dispossessed, it is not to be inferred that he knew of the dispossession when he brought the prior suit, or that he voluntarily abandoned the right to seek possession.—

6. The principle on which Section 39 of the Civil Procedure Code proceeds is that when the whole cause of action has arisen to plaintiff, he cannot split up his claims and make any election as to suing for one portion at one time and for the other at another time.

In a hypothecation bond it was provided that the interest fixed at a certain rate for the sum borrowed thereunder should be paid annually and receipts taken and that the principal and the balance of interest, if any, should be paid in a lump sum whenever the hypothecatee needed the same. The hypothecatee sued first for the interest which accrued up to a certain date, stating in his plaint that he reserved to himself the right to sue for the principal at a subsequent date, and brought another suit for the principal and balance of interest. It was contended that the second suit was barred by Section 39, as at the prior suit the plaintiff had a complete cause of action for the principal and interest:

Held.—The principle on which Section 39 proceeds is that where the whole cause of action has arisen to plaintiff, he cannot split up his claims and make any election as to suing for a portion at one time and for the other at another time. In a suit like the present, where there was a distinct agreement in the bond for payment of interest as distinguished from the principal and consequently the causes of action for principal and interest were practically distinct, Section 39 could not operate as a bar.—

7. A Jenmi sued his tenant for Adiyanthram fees and obtained a decree; but as he then failed to claim the renewal fees which were at that time due under the same Kanom document, he brought a subsequent suit for the same.

Held.—As both the fees were customary fees which sprang from the same Kanom letting and formed remedies in respect of the same cause of action, a subsequent suit by the Jenmi for the renewal fees due at the time of the prior suit was barred by Section 39.

A cause of action is defined to be the right and the infringement of that right. That in the case will depend upon the question whether Adiyanthram fees will form a separate contract from the agreement to pay renewal fees. They both spring from the original Kanom and are inseparable rights. It is evident from the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation that Adiyanthram fees falls under the head of customary dues which are incidents to a Kanom. Whether the right to sue be for renewal fees or for Adiyanthram fees, they both spring from the letting, and the cause of action is the same. 19 T. L. R., 59.

8. The Karanavan of a Malabar Tarwad sued certain junior members for a declaration of his right to the properties in their possession, for cancellation of certain alienations made in respect of some of them and for recovery of the same and it was decided that a declaration should be granted to the plaintiff and that the rest of the suit should be dismissed without prejudice to the plaintiff's right to recover the property in respect of which declaration was granted in the event of the Karanavan making suitable provision for the maintenance of the defendants—juniors. The Karanavan subsequently sued the defendants for recovery of possession of the properties and some other properties not included in the prior suit. It was contended that, so far as the latter properties were concerned, the suit was barred under Section 39.

Held.—The defendants' contention was right as the cause of action in the two suits was the same. The true test in such cases is whether the claim in the new suit was in fact founded on a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation in the former suit (F. B.).— 21 T. L. R., 159.

9. In a suit by some of the junior members of a Malabar Tarwad for cancellation of a sale deed and recovery of possession of Tarwad property which had been improperly conveyed away by a Karanavan in favour of his son, a decree was passed setting aside the sale, the prayer for recovery of possession having been refused in pursuance of the law prevailing at the time. In a subsequent suit for recovery of possession of the property by a succeeding Karanavan of the Tarwad who was not a party to the prior case :

Held (by the majority of the Full Bench, Govinda Pillai, J. dissenting).—Under Article 121 of the Limitation Regulation, the cause of action arose from the date of the decree cancelling the sale.

Per Govinda Pillai, J.—Adverse possession as against the Tarwad having commenced from the date of the sale, a decree in a suit merely declaring title cannot disturb the adverse possession which had begun before its institution or check the statutory bar of limitation. The mere pendency of a suit does not place the property sued for in the possession of the Court so as to check limitation bar.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—A declaratory decree, which establishes that a vendee who has got the juridical possessio naturalis has no right or title to the possession and that such rights are vested in the vendor, quashes all the legal effects of the juridical possession of the vendee till that date and makes him on the date of the decree a mere detainer of the disputed property, his detention till then being of no effect as against his opponent's right on that date, the civil possession of the property as against the vendee having been established.

If a particular relief out of several reliefs arising from the original cause of action could have been given in the former suit on that cause of action and was so given the remedy is only by execution. But if it could not have been so given in the state of the law as it prevailed at the time of the first suit, there is nothing to prevent a fresh suit for that relief based on the rights as declared by the matter of record.

Per Padmanabha Iyer, J.—The decree in the prior case (refusing to give possession of the disputed property) having been passed only against some of the junior members of the Tarwad, does not operate as res judicata against the other members who have joined in the institution of the subsequent suit.

The previous possession of the vendee which was adverse to the Tarwad became superseded by the decree declaring the title of the Tarwad. As a complete record and title deed of the highest kind for the Tarwad, the decree must be given the same legal consequences as an admission of title by the vendee himself.— 22 T. L. R., 157.

10. A leased his lands to B for a term of six months and put B in possession. On the date of the lease, A also entered into an agreement with B to sell the lands to him on his paying a certain sum of money before the expiry of the lease and providing for a right of re-entry in case of failure to pay the same within the time fixed. B having defaulted to pay, A sold his lands and his rights as lessor to C. C sued B for rent for the six months' period and for mesne profits and damages for subsequent wrongful occupation. Subsequently C brought a fresh suit against B for possession, mesne profits and damages for waste. B resisted the claim on the strength of the agreement for sale and urged that the separate suit for possession was barred by Sections 39 and 40, C. P. C.

Held.—(1) As the wrongful detention of property was the cause of action to support the claim for possession as well as the claim for mesne profits, a suit for one of the two claims to the exclusion of the other barred a second suit for the omitted relief.

The bar under Section 39 was one provided by law on the grounds of public policy to discourage piecemeal litigation by litigious individuals.

Notwithstanding that on a technical ground, plaintiff is punished with future inability to sue for possession on account of his having omitted to sue for possession in the former suit, his title persists and it might support further suits for mesne profits for continued detention of the lands by defendant from him.

(2) Executory contracts to convey lands gave no title to the lands, but only a claim in personam against the person who agreed to convey.

(3) When a suit for possession of the property would not lie, no legal injury could be said to arise from waste to the trees or the property so as to form the basis for the award of damages for such waste, though a claim for damages for past wrongful detention of the land could be allowed as the title subsists (F. B.).— 23 T. L. R., 248.

11. A transferred his right under a document to B and C each of the latter being given a distinct half share. B filed a suit for his one-half share and the suit was compromised. Subsequently C filed a suit for his one-half share. It was contended that Section 39 C. P. C., was a bar to the suit.

Held.—Section 39 C. P. C., did not apply, as the plaintiff in the prior suit was different from the plaintiff in the present suit, and each had clear and specific rights.— 1 S. D., 135.

12. In execution of a mortgage-decree, A, the decree-holder, purchased the properties mortgaged, but delivery of possession was successfully resisted by the co-heirs of the mortgagor under a partition decree obtained after the mortgagee. A brought a suit for possession of some of the properties under the mortgage deed, on the ground that the mortgage was binding on the properties, and was allowed a lien on those properties proportionate to their value. A brought a second suit for a similar proportionate lien on the other mortgaged properties, which he omitted to include in the prior suit.

Held.—The suit was barred by Section 39, C. P. C.

If an owner of immovable property has a mortgage lien on which he means to rely, he is bound to make such lien also a ground of attack in his suit, and, if he fails to do so, a second suit based on it will be barred under Explanation II of Section 9 [new Explanation IV, Section 10] which involves the same principle as Section 39.

The omission of an alternative relief which the plaintiff not only might but ought to have claimed in the prior suit bars a second suit to enforce the same. It comes under the head of "claim," inasmuch as it was one which, if made, the Court had no discretion to refuse.— 2 S. D., 157.

13. A Jenmi's claim for renewal fees as well as that for arrears of Michavarom and Aravakasom in respect of the same Kanom demise are reliefs arising from one and the same cause of action and a subsequent suit for one of the reliefs will be barred if a prior suit had been brought for the other without including it.

Where two suits for reliefs arising out of the same cause of action are filed simultaneously, only one of them can be dismissed under Section 39. To dismiss both the suits of plaintiff on account of bar under Section 39 will be inequitable.— 3 S. D., 107.

14. The plaintiff, the owner of a moiety of a mortgaged property, first sued to set aside a sale of the entire property, including plaintiff's share, executed to the mortgagee by the owner of the remaining moiety. The suit ended favourably to the plaintiff. The plaintiff brought the present suit to redeem his moiety. On the contention, inter alia, that the suit was barred by Section 39, as the plaintiff should have included the prayer for redemption in the prior suit:

Held.—Section 39 did not apply, and the suit was not barred.

The whole question turns upon what was really the foundation for the cause of action. The test appears to be whether the infringement of a right which gave a cause of action in a former suit forms the basis of the action brought in a second suit; in other words, should the relief claimed in the second suit really form part and parcel of the cause of action in the former suit.

In the case, the cause of action was distinct. In the former suit, the plaintiff sought to set aside a sale, on the ground that his co-mortgagor had no right to sell what did not belong to him, namely, plaintiff's half-share in the property. The plaintiff merely wished to remove the cloud upon his title, and he succeeded. He was content to let the property remain as it was, and even though the mortgagee in possession was acting in defiance and therefore adversely to his interest, he cannot be compelled to sue before his own time: besides it is open to question, whether he would not have offended the provisions of Section 40 (Order II, Rule 4) for mis-joinder of causes of action, had he attempted to do so.— 1 T. L. J., 278.

15. Plaintiff leased the plaint property orally to defendant for an annual rent of Rs. 90. In a suit for arrears of rent a decree was given for plaintiff in spite of defendant's denial of the lease. A second suit by plaintiff for subsequent arrears of rent was also decreed. The present suit was for arrears of rent and for recovery of possession of the property leased. The defendant contended that inasmuch as he denied the lease in the first suit, his subsequent possession of property became wrongful and that the plaintiff should have included the claim for the recovery of the property in the second suit. The District Judge gave a decree for rent but disallowed the prayer as to recovery of possession of the property.

Held.—The decision in the first suit must be given the same effect as an admission of plaintiff's title by the recalcitrant lessee, and must be treated as in effect restoring the parties to their original position as land-lord and tenant. As there was no open denial of the land-lord's title thereafter, the possession of the defendant was not wrongful on the date of the second suit.

As the defendant's possession was not wrongful, plaintiff was not bound in the second suit to ask for the recovery of the property also. The plaintiff was therefore entitled to claim the property in the present suit which was not barred by Section 39.— 28 T. L. R., 51

16. The plaintiff who had taken two half tickets in defendant's chitty, alleging that the one was prized and the other unprized, sued for the prize amount in regard to the prized half-ticket. The Court of first instance found on 16-11-1034 that the Chitty scheme collapsed in 1032, and that both the half-tickets were unprized and gave plaintiff a decree for the amount he had actually paid for both the tickets up to the date of the collapse. On appeal, the decree was substantially confirmed on 4-3-1036. On second appeal, the High Court held that the suit having been only in respect of a half and not in respect of the full ticket, the decree of the lower Court awarding the amount subscribed for the full ticket was untenable, and accordingly set it aside on 15-4-1037, so far as the second half of the ticket was concerned. Thereupon, the plaintiff instituted a suit on 29-4-1037 for recovery of his paid-up subscriptions for his second half-ticket. The defendant's contentions were that the Chitty having collapsed in 1032, the suit filed in 1037 was barred by limitation and that the plaintiff not having sued formerly for the return of his subscriptions for the second half-ticket as well, he was barred subsequently from doing so under Section 39 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Held.—The objection based on Section 39 of the Procedure Code was untenable. The basis of plaintiff's former suit was his allegation that he had prized the first half-ticket; his present suit was in respect of the unprized other half-ticket. The causes of action for the two suits were distinct. Hence there was no bar interposed by Section 39.— 31 T. L. R., 80 (= 5 T. L. J., 255).

17. A bond fixing a specified time for payment, however, provided that on failure by the obligee to pay interest on a certain date the obligee was entitled to claim the amount of the principal debt also. Default was made in the payment of interest on the due date. After some time, the obligee brought a suit for recovery of the arrears of interest alone and got a decree. In a subsequent suit for recovery of the principal debt, it was contended for the defendant (obligor) that the suit was barred under Section 39, C. P. C., as the claim for recovery of the principal debt arose out of the same cause of action as that for recovery of interest and plaintiff ought to have included the former claim in his first suit for interest.

Held.—The suit was not barred under the provisions of Section 39, C. P. C.

Even on the assumption that the plaintiff had the option to claim both the principal and interest on the date of the former suit, he had the option to waive the larger alternative right to demand the principal and to elect to abide by the primary terms of the document: and it was clear from the plaint in the former suit that plaintiff had as a matter of fact waived his right to enforce the alternative claim.— 6 T. L. J., 283.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 315.

18. The suit was by a Samooham, as owner of the plaint property, to recover possession thereof from the defendants. The defendants contended that the suit was barred under the provisions of Section 39, C. P. C., inasmuch as such a relief was not claimed in a prior suit brought by the Samooham to cancel a sale executed for the plaint properties by a former "Kizhi" of the Samooham in favour of the defendants. It was proved that the Samooham knew when the first suit was brought that possession had passed to the vendee and yet refrained from seeking recovery of possession, and that the first suit ended in a decree in favour of the Samooham cancelling the sale.

Held.—Accepting the defence contention, the suit was barred under the provisions of Section 39 of the C. P. C.

The provisions of Section 39 clearly illustrate the policy of the Legislature to prevent parties being harrassed by multiplicity of suits and lay down that, if a portion of the claim in respect of the cause of action is not included in the first suit, or if all the remedies in respect of the same cause of action are not sued for in the first suit, and the leave of the Court before the first hearing is not obtained for reserving the seeking of such remedies for the future, no fresh suit for the omitted portion of the claim or for the remedies not sued for would lie. Having regard to the unambiguous language in Section 39, the question for decision should be answered against the special appellant, for the cause of action on which the prior suit was brought was the improper act of the 'Kizhi' in executing the sale impeached in that case and putting the vendee in, or allowing the vendee to take, possession of the plaint properties. There could be no doubt that the Samooham which claimed the setting aside of the sale in that suit was entitled to seek in the same suit the remedy by way of recovery of possession, for both of these remedies were in respect of the same cause of action.—

8 T. L. J., 386.

19. Provision was made in a Purakkadom that the money due thereunder would be paid along with the amount due under a prior hypothecation bond. The question arose whether a subsequent suit on the Purakkadom was barred by a prior decree obtained on the hypothecation bond.

Held.—The causes of action in the two suits are different and the prior suit on the hypothecation bond does not operate as a bar to the subsequent suit on the Purakkadom.— 8 T. L. J., 493.

20. The suit was instituted for principal due under a hypothecation bond and for arrears of interest. In 1087, the plaintiff had filed O. S. 19 for interest which accrued due for 3 years after the bond. It was contended that the present suit was barred under Section 39 C. P. C. by the suit of 1087, as the cause of action for the recovery of the principal had also arisen at the time of the latter suit.

Held.—It was not so barred, as the causes of action for the interest and the principal under A were distinct. The word 'the' in the phrase 'the cause of action' in the first clause of Section 39, C. P. C., indicates that the Section only applies to cases where the whole of the claim is comprised in the same cause of action and not to cases where it includes distinct causes of action as in this case.— 14 T. L. J., 51.

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 815.

21. A hypothecation bond, executed on 6-1-1086, provided that interest at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum was to be paid in 3 annual instalments of Rs. 18 per instalment on the 20th Thulam, Kumbhom and Mithunom respectively, that the bond amount was to be discharged on 6-1-1089 and that if default was made in the payment of any one instalment of the interest, such interest was to be recoverable separately.

No interest was paid and the plaintiff filed a suit on 10-8-96 to recover the arrears of interest accrued till then, though the principal amount had also become due before that date. Interest due up to 10-8-96 was decreed to him.

The plaintiff instituted the present suit to recover the principal amount due under the hypothecation bond, and balance of interest from 10-8-1096.

The defendants raised the contention that Section 39, C. P. C. barred the present suit as the plaintiff ought to have included the claim for the principal amount also in his former suit.

Held.—According to the bond, the whole of the amount due, including the arrears of interest and the principal amount, became due on 6-1-1089. The bond did not provide for payment of instalments of interest separately on 6-1-1089. Before that date, the plaintiff could have sued separately for the arrears of interest accrued due till then; but once that date was passed there was nothing in the bond to show that the interest continued to be recoverable separately thrice a year. The whole of the arrears of interest and the principal amount became due on the date fixed for the discharge of the bond.

Hence Section 39 barred the plaintiff's present suit for the principal amount due as he omitted to include this claim in the suit of 1096. "Where cause of action, which gives occasion for and forms the foundation of the suit, enables a man to ask for larger and wider relief than that to which he limits his claim, he cannot afterwards seek to recover the balance by independent proceedings."— 41 T. L. R., 236

22. The plaintiff had certain claims against her brothers the defendants in the suit. The matters in dispute were referred to arbitration and an award was made. The award was that defendants should execute a mortgage of immovable properties for Rs. 800 in favour of the plaintiff. As the defendants did not comply with the terms of the award, the plaintiff applied to the Court to have the award filed under Section 504 C. P. C., [=Or. XXXIX, r. 20]. A decree was drawn up in terms of the award on 13-12-1095 and it was satisfied on 27-7-1097. Neither the award nor the decree mentioned anything about interest on Rs. 800.

The suit was brought by plaintiff to get interest at 12 per cent. on the sum of Rs. 800 from date of award to date of satisfaction of decree. The Munsiff dismissed the suit entirely. On appeal the District Judge allowed interest from date of decree to date of satisfaction, but disallowed interest from date of award to date of decree. On second appeal by the plaintiff against the decision of the District Judge in so far as it disallowed interest prior to the date of the decree, it was contended by the defendants that Section 39, C. P. C., barred such suit.

Held.—Section 39 was no bar to such suit. Proceedings under Section 504, C. P. C., should not be taken as suits so as to attract the provisions of Section 39.—

23. The plaintiff brought the suit in 1098 to redeem the suit property on the footing of a mortgage of 1048. Though the suit was instituted after the expiration of the statutory period of fifty years from the date of the mortgage, the plaintiff claimed to be in time by reason of the first defendant's acknowledgment of the mortgage in a prior suit of 1084 for recovering arrears of Michavarom on the same property. The ground of exemption stated in the plaint was that, though the period of limitation to sue for redemption of the mortgage had expired in 1092, the plaintiff was entitled to fresh start for limitation from 30th Thulam 1084 by reason of the defendants' acknowledgment in writing on that date. The suit was allowed by the primary Court, and its decree was confirmed in appeal with slight modification. The first defendant in second appeal against the above decree contended that the suit was not maintainable as the ground upon which exemption from limitation bar was claimed was not correctly or specifically stated in the plaint as required by the last Clause of Section 46 [=Or. VII, r. 6] and that the suit was also barred under Section 39, as the plaintiff omitted to include in the prior suit the prayer for redemption of the mortgage.

Held.—To determine whether a suit is barred under Section 39, Clause (1), the test is whether the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from the cause of action in the earlier suit, and, if the answer be in the affirmative, the subsequent suit is not barred, even though it might have been open to the plaintiff to unite the two causes of action in the same suit. To ascertain if the cause of action is the same in the two suits, the Court has to look to the facts which constitute the cause of action. Where such facts are in the exclusive possession of the defendant, and he does not choose to place them before the Court, he cannot be heard on the contentions.

The object of the Legislature in requiring the ground of exemption from limitation to be stated in plaint where the suit is filed after expiry of the period of limitation, is obviously to enable the defendant to meet it in his defence and at the trial. Where the statement on the point made in the plaint was sufficiently intelligible to the defendant who has answered it in his written statement without taking any exception to its sufficiency or otherwise, the above object has been substantially achieved.

Objection based on plaintiff's failure to set out in plaint the ground of exemption from limitation or on its defect must be taken in the trial Court and it should not be allowed to be raised for the first time in the Court of final resort.—

(=18 T. L. J., 313).

24. The suit was for recovery of the principal and interest due on a hypothecation bond which contained the following covenants—(1) that the obligor would pay interest at one per cent. per mensem in two half-yearly instalments on the 25th Thulam and the 25th Medom every year, (2) that the obligor would repay the principal five years after the date of the document and discharge the mortgage debt, (3) that in case of default in the payment of interest at any one instalment, the obligee was at liberty to realise the principal and arrears of interest before the expiry of the term of five years. The plaintiff had sued on the hypothecation bond for interest in a prior suit, reserving his rights to sue subsequently for the principal and had obtained a decree.

It was contended for the defendant that Section 39 barred the present suit.

Held.—(1) The suit was competent. Where there were no distinct covenants relating to the payment of the principal and interest, a suit for interest alone will bar a subsequent suit for the principal. But where there were distinct covenants relating to the payment of the principal and interest, the plaintiff might enforce the covenants relating to the payment of the interest without losing his rights to his subsequently suing for the principal. In the present instance there were distinct covenants relating to the payment of the interest by two half-yearly instalments and of the principal five years after the date of the document.

(2) The contention of the defendant based on the third covenant in the hypothecation bond, that when default was made in the payment of any one instalment of the interest, the whole principal and interest became due even before the expiry of the term of five years, and therefore, as the whole amount due was not claimed in the prior suit the part not claimed should be regarded as having been given up, was also unsustainable. In the prior suit, the plaintiff had expressly sued for the interest reserving his rights to claim the principal later. No objection was raised in the written statement filed by the defendant. It might be regarded, therefore, as a case where subsequent to the default, the plaintiff had demanded and the defendant had agreed to pay that amount which would have been due if there had been no penalty provided for the default.—
18 T. L. J., 315.

25. It may be taken as settled law that where there is a special and distinct agreement for payment of interest as distinguished from the principal, a suit can be maintained for the interest alone, as the cause of action therefor may be treated as distinct. The question in each case would therefore be, whether the terms of the document sued on are such as to denote a distinct agreement for the payment of interest.

Where a hypothecation bond covenanted to pay interest every year and to pay the principal after the expiry of a period of five years from the date of the bond together with any interest that may then be due:

Held.—The cause of action for the principal accrued only at the end of five years, while the cause of action for each year's interest accrued at the end of the year. It was thus clear that the agreement for the payment of interest was distinct from the agreement to pay the principal, and the difference in the time of accrual of the right to demand them necessarily made the cause of action distinct.—18 T. L. J., 894.

26. The plea of relinquishment based on Order II, Rule 2, cannot apply to execution proceedings, as such proceedings cannot be treated as suits within that Rule.

The only bar that could with propriety be considered permissible to be raised in such cases will be where the application of the principle of constructive res judicata by way of analogy is possible.

The modification referred to in Article 309, Civil Courts' Guide, may be with respect to the whole or a part of the decree. [The Article requires appellate decrees, where they modify the decrees of the lower Court, to be self-explanatory].—

Or. II, r. 3 [ = S. 41, Paras 1 & 3
= Or. II, r. 3
= En. O.18, r. 1 ]

I. Sec. 41, Paras 1 and 3, of the old Regulation, was as follows :—

"Subject to the Rules contained in Chapter II and in Section 40, the plaintiff may unite in the same suit...... causes of action in the same suit."

"When causes of action are united......at the date of instituting the suit, whether or not an order has been made under the second paragraph of this Section."

[Chapter II deals with the place of suing. For the old Section 40, see Rule 4 and for the second paragraph of Section 41, see Rule 6, below.]

II. This Rule is to be read with Rules 4 to 7 of this Order and with Rules 1 and 3 of Order I.

III. Rule 1 of Order XVIII of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—
"1. Subject to the following Rules of this Order, the plaintiff may unite in the same action several causes of action, but if it appear to the Court or a Judge that any such causes of action cannot be conveniently tried or disposed of together, the Court or Judge may order separate trials of any of such causes of action to be had, or may make such other order as may be necessary or expedient for the separate disposal thereof."

Case Law.

1. All formal objections to a suit, such as mis-joinder, &c., ought to be taken before the settlement of issues. The assignor being liable to account to the assignee, on the failure of the claim founded upon the assignment, his inclusion as co-defendant is not bad for mis-joinder. He has an interest in the result of the suit, and there is no provision of law prohibiting the inclusion of a person in his position as a defendant. Reason and logic point to the conclusion that in many cases the fact of the assignor being a party to the suit brought by the assignee would check unnecessary litigation. The modern tendency of decision and legislation is to discourage pleas of mis-joinder.— 3 T. L. R., 16.

2. Where several causes of action are joined together, each of which is within the jurisdiction of a Munsiff's Court, but the entire claim exceeds its jurisdiction, the Zillah Court is not incompetent to try such suit (F. B.).— 3 T. L. R., 31.

3. A suit was brought by certain junior members of a Tarwad to set aside a mortgage granted by their Karanavers and also to set aside a decree and attachment thereunder was said to be irregular on account of mis-joinder of causes of action:

Held.—(1) The language of Section 41 of the Code of Civil Procedure being very wide, the suit was not vitally defective because of the joinder of the two causes of action, inasmuch as the suit was brought in the interests of the Tarwad and both reliefs claimed concerned Tarwad property, although it might have been more convenient to separate the reliefs demanded in the plaint and divide the causes of action into two suits.

(2) In a suit to set aside a decree and attachment thereunder where the Karanavars are not plaintiffs, the making them defendants is not fatal to the suit, provided it could be shown that there was neglect of duty or collusion on their part. A Full Bench in S. A. No. 194 of 1063, held 'If the circumstances of the case show that by making the Karanavan defendant, the plaintiff meant to charge him with neglect of duty or collusion, the fact that the plaint contains no distinct charge against the Karanavan is not per se sufficient to non-suit the plaintiff'.— 13, T. L. R., 128.

4. In a suit by plaintiffs to recover value of properties of which they were plundered by the defendant and in some of which the plaintiffs were jointly and in the others severally interested, the defence was one of mis-joinder of plaintiffs and distinct causes of action.

Held,—The suit was not bad for mis-joinder.

'Cause of action' used in Section 26 C. P. C. (British), is not used in its comprehensive or elastic but in a restricted or limited sense "so as to include the fact constituting the infringement of the right but not necessarily also those constituting the right itself, so that the qualification implied in the words in respect of the same cause of action will be satisfied if the facts which constitute the infringement of the right of several plaintiffs are the same, though the fact constituting the rights upon which they base their claim to that relief in the alternative may not be the same and that as the plaintiffs complained of the same wrongful act of the defendant and as they claimed the same relief, the case came within Section 26 C. P. C." (22 Cal. 833). [ Section 26 = Or. I, r. 1.]

The full value of the chattel at the time of the conversion was the measure of damages.— 14 T. L. R., 185.

5. The suit was for possession of a land purchased by plaintiff at a Court sale held in execution of a decree or for recovery of the purchase money in the event of its being found that the judgment-debtor had at the date of plaintiff's purchase, no saleable interest in the property. It was contended that the claim for land and the claim for purchase money arose out of two distinct causes of action and therefore, the suit could not be maintained. The District Judge returned the plaint to the plaintiff for amendment by withdrawing one of the two prayers in the plaint on the ground that the suit was bad for mis-joinder of causes of action.

Held.—Although two reliefs are prayed for in the alternative, yet as those reliefs arise out of the same right, the suit is not bad for mis-joinder of causes of action.

The joinder of claims for alternative reliefs is sanctioned by Section 24 C. P. C. (old) [ = Or. I, r. 3 ]. The joint effect of Sections 24, 27 and 41 is to enable a plaintiff to bring a suit with a prayer for alternative reliefs when such reliefs are claimed in respect of the same subject-matter, the power being reserved in the Courts to direct the separate trials of such claims if they could not be conveniently proceeded with in the same suit. In the case, the main question for the trial is simple, and the claim for alternative relief depends entirely upon the result of the trial of the main issue as to the validity of the court-sale in plaintiff's favour and does not need a separate trial. The cause of action is the right of the plaintiff as a court-purchaser and the infringement or violation of that right, and though distinct reliefs are prayed in the alternative, those reliefs flow from and arise out of the same right. It cannot be said that there is here a joinder of two distinct causes of action diametrically opposed to each other, if the term, cause of action, is to be taken in its widest sense. The decisions of the British Indian High Courts do not lay down a rule of universal applicability in cases like the present, but the rules framed by the English Supreme Court of Judicature Act of 1873 favour the view taken. Rule 5 provides that it shall not be necessary that every defendant shall be interested as to all the reliefs prayed for or as to every cause of action included in any proceeding against him, while Rule 7 provides that "where the plaintiff is in doubt as to the persons from whom he is entitled to redress, he may join two or more defendants to the extent that the question as to which, if any, of the defendants and to what extent, may be determined as between all parties.' Convenience and practice alike demand the adoption of the principles of these Rules by the Courts.—

6. The last member of a Marumakkathayam Tarwad executed a mortgage of plaint properties in favour of the plaintiff on 31-2-1069. The deed was duly registered and handed over to plaintiff. The mortgagor died in the same year. In a suit instituted on 31-2 1081 for recovery of the properties from defendants 1 and 2 who were alleged to be trespassers, the 1st defendant contended that certain portions of the plaint properties were not in his possession but in the possession of another. Therefore that person was added as 3rd defendant on 29-3-1083. The contesting defendants 1 and 3 urged that the suit was not maintainable as the mortgage in favour of plaintiff was not supported by consideration and also because the suit was vitiated by mis-joinder of parties and causes of action, the defendants being in possession of separate portions of the plaint properties. The 3rd defendant further contended that, as she has been added as a defendant more than 12 years after the date of mortgage, the suit was barred by limitation.

Held.—The cause of action of the plaintiff suing in ejectment not being affected by the title under which the defendants in wrongful possession may seek to justify their possession and the plaintiff being entitled to claim recovery of possession of the whole land, all persons who oppose him in the enforcement of that right are concerned in his cause of action and are necessary parties to the suit, and therefore the suit was not bad for mis-joinder of parties and causes of action.— 23 T. L. R., *150.

7. A leased his claim to several items of land on his title as purchaser at a court-sale. B, C and D dispossessed him of a major portion of the said items. E dispossessed him of the remaining portion. All these claimed to hold under titles created by members of the family whose rights A purchased at the court-sale.

Held.—A's causes of action are not distinct, and therefore, there was no mis-joinder. The validity of the plaintiff's purchase was impugned by the defendants and the case was one which could be conveniently tried at one and the same time.

A suit against all the defendants who were interested severally in respect of separate portions of the property mortgaged under a mortgage-bond was held not bad for multifariousness (7 Cal. 739).—
1 S. D., *39.

8. The reliefs claimed by the plaintiff in the original plaint were based upon different documents, against different persons and upon different causes of action. It was held that it was illegal to join different causes of action in the same suit against the different parties, where each has a distinct and separate interest (21 W. R., 206).
1 S. D., *309.

Only certain claims to be joined for recovery of immovable property.

4. No cause of action shall, unless with the leave of the Court, be joined with a suit for the recovery of immovable property, or to obtain a declaration of title to immovable property except—

(a) claims for mesne profits or arrears of rent in respect of the property claimed or any part thereof;

(b) claims for damages for breach of any contract under which the property or any part thereof is held; and

(c) claims in which the relief sought is based on the same cause of action:

Provided that nothing in this Rule shall be deemed to prevent any party in a suit for foreclosure or redemption from asking to be put into possession of the mortgaged property.

9. The suit was by a sub-mortgagee against his mortgagor, the first mortgagee, for recovery of money personally and from the property mortgaged on the one hand, and for recovery of property mortgaged from strangers who committed trespass upon it, while he was in possession under the sub-mortgage.

Held.—There is no provision in the Code allowing distinct causes of action against distinct sets of defendants, that is to say, causes of action in which the defendants are not all jointly interested, to be united in the same suit.— 2 S. D., 258.

10. Under Section 41, C. P. C., the plaintiff may unite in one suit even at the very beginning several causes of action against the same defendant or set of joint defendants. The provisions in paras 2 and 3 of Section 41 and in Sections 42 and 43 however as to separate trials under certain circumstances of the different causes of action and as to the power of the Court to compel plaintiff to amend the plaint so as to constitute it into several plaints in distinct suits, &c., clearly point to the conclusion that such a single suit really consists of several separate suits brought at the same time and consolidated for the purpose of convenience and despatch of business.— 3 S. D., 218.

11. Suit for declaration that a sale-deed alleged to have been executed by first plaintiff in favour of the defendants and which had been compulsorily registered, was a forgery and for recovery of the plaint properties taken possession of by the defendants on the strength of that sale. The second plaintiff was the daughter of the first plaintiff, and there was an averment in the plaint that some of the properties in the suit had been made a gift of by the first plaintiff to the second plaintiff. The District Judge holding that because in regard to some of the properties a gift deed was alleged to have been executed by the first plaintiff to the second plaintiff, the suit was bad for mis-joinder of causes of action, returned the plaint for amendment.

Held.—There was no misjoinder of of action. The facts which accordir plaint constitute an infringeme right of plaintiffs 1 and 2 in the same. A suit for recovery of possession of certain property by A (as heir of K) and B as purchaser of a portion of the property from A, was held to be maintainable and not bad for mis-joinder of causes of action (33 Cal., 367). 23 T. L R., 148.

ORDER III.

Recognized Agents and Pleaders.

Appearance, etc., may be in person, by recognized agent or by pleader.

1. Any appearance, application or act in or to any Court, required or authorised by law to be made or done by a party in such Court, may, except where otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, be made or done by the party in person, or by his recognized agent, or by a pleader duly appointed to act on his behalf :

the merits of the case. The Judge asked the Vakil to amend the plaint by withdrawing the suit as against any one defendant against whom there existed a distinct cause of action. No formal order was passed by the Judge on the subject, and the amendment in the mode suggested was not the proper thing to be done in the case. Separate trials of the several causes of action should have been directed in the manner provided by Section 41, and it was further for the defendant to apply under Section 42, before any evidence was recorded, for an order confining the suit to such of the causes of action as might be conveniently disposed of in one suit.— 1 S. D., 39.

[For Section 42, see Rule 7 Infra].

Or. II, r. 7 [ Cf. S. 42 = Or. II, r. 7 ]

Section 42 of Regulation II of 1065 is given below for comparison. Section 43 of the same Regulation which has been omitted is also subjoined for reference :—

"42. Defendant may apply to confine suit.—Any defendant alleging that the plaintiff has united in the same suit several causes of action which cannot be conveniently disposed of in one suit may, at any time before the first hearing, or, where issues are settled, before any evidence is recorded, apply to the Court for an order confining the suit to such of the causes of action as may be conveniently disposed of in one suit."

"43. Court on hearing application may exclude some causes and order amendment.—If, on the hearing of such application, it appears to the Court that the causes of action are such as cannot all be conveniently disposed of in one suit, the Court may order any of such causes of action to be excluded, and may direct the plaint to be amended accordingly, and may make such order as to costs as may be just.

Every amendment made under this Section shall be attested by the signature of the Judge."

Or. III, r. 1 [ = S. 32 = Or. III, r. 1 ]

In the corresponding Section 32 of Regulation II of 1065, the words "to a suit or appeal" occur before the words "in such Court."

Provided that any such appearance shall, if the Court so directs, be made by the party in person.

Recognized agents.

2. The recognized agents of parties by whom such appearances, applications and acts may be made or done are—

(a) persons holding powers-of-attorney, authorising them to make and do such appearances, applications and acts on behalf of such parties;

(b) persons carrying on trade or business for and in the names of parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance, application or act is made or done, in matters connected with such trade or business only, where no other agent is expressly authorised to make and do such appearances, applications and acts.

---

Case Law.

1. That the recognised agents of parties, residing out of the jurisdiction of the Court, are entitled to make applications and appearances on behalf of their principals, without themselves being made formal parties to the case, is clear law.—

6 T. L. R., 90.

2. A recognised agent coming under Clause 2 of Section 15 (Regulation II of 1037) cannot prosecute a suit in his own name. But a defect of this nature which does not affect the jurisdiction of the lower Court or the merits of the case, cannot justify a dismissal of the suit. In the case, the objection to the formal defect was taken for the first time in the High Court in appeal. It is, therefore, nothing but fair that the plaintiff should be allowed a reasonable time, to make his principal formally a party to the suit, though the plaintiff (the agent) may conduct it as a recognised agent under Section 15 of the Civil Procedure Code.

[Clause 2 of Section 15 of Regulation II of 1037 was as follows :—"Persons carrying on trade or business for and in the name of parties not within the jurisdiction of the Court in matters connected with such trade or business only, where no other agent is expressly authorized to make such applications or appearances"].— 8 T. L. R., 30.

3. Three items of property belonging to defendants 1 and 2 were charged by the decree in the case. The 3rd defendent having obtained a mortgage of item 2 from the 2nd defendant, the 3rd defendant was made a party to the suit. Subsequently, in execution of the decree, item No. 3 was sold in court-auction. The 3rd defendant deposited the decree amount into Court and applied to set aside the auction sale under Section 307-A [Or. XXI, r. 86]. The auction purchaser objected on the ground that the 3rd defendant had no locus standi to make such application.

Held.—Even assuming that the 3rd defendant was acting as the agent of the 2nd defendant (as to which there was no evidence in the case), the application could not be regarded as having been made by the 3rd defendant in that capacity, as it was unaccompanied by any writing to show that he was a recognised agent as defined under Section 38, C. P. C., [Or. III, r. 2] empowered to make an application under Section 32.— 13 T. L. J., 373.

Case Law.

1. A Muktear of the Dewan of Cochin sued in his own name to compel the Kanapattom tenant of a Devaswom to take renewal. The Devaswom had its own Ooralers and was in evident management by the Cochin Sirkar.

Held.—(1) The Muktear had no right to sue on behalf of the Cochin Sirkar in his own name by virtue of the Power-of-Attorney given him by the Dewan of Cochin.

The general maxim of law delegatus non potest delegare applies to all cases of delegated authority. Where, however, the act to be done is one of a personal nature, i. e., where the delegatee is to derive the benefit of the act, there seems to be no objection to such delegation; but in all other cases, unless expressly empowered by statute or approved of by moral necessity, delegation is prohibited.

A trustee cannot delegate his office, which is one of personal confidence, in the absence of express authority so long as he remains a trustee. He may however in case of moral necessity do so. This would not however protect a trustee who employs an improper agent for the purpose in question. So also where personal skill is required, or in the cases of powers of appointment. In the one case, personal skill is the essence of the delegation, and in the other, a personal confidence and trust in the donee of the power to exercise it with discretion and judgment falls within the maxim delegatus non potest delegare. Neither for like reasons, can an agent or judicial officer delegate the authority conferred on him.

It was urged on behalf of the plaintiff that, according to Section 8 of Regulation II of 1070 [new Section 66-B], the Dewan being the representative of the Rajah of Cochin, he must be treated as the principal, inasmuch as he sues in his own name, and hence he may as principal delegate his authority under Section 38 [Or. III, r. 2]. This would be unduly extending the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code in force. A representative suing in his own name as principal is at best an agent of the real principal. The agent may not, as a rule, depute another person to do that which he has undertaken to do. The reason of this rule and its limitations are thus stated. "As a general rule, no doubt, the maxim delegatus non potest delegare applies so as to prevent an agent from establishing the relationship of principal and agent between his own principal and a third person, but this maxim when analysed merely imports that an agent cannot without the authority from his principal devolve upon another obligations to the principal which he has himself undertaken personally to fulfil and that inasmuch as confidence in the particular person employed is at the root of the contract of agency, such authority cannot be implied as an ordinary incident to the contract."

Service of process on recognized agent.

3. (1) Processes served on the recognized agent of a party shall be as effectual as if the same had been served on the party in person, unless the Court otherwise directs.

(2) The provisions for the service of process on a party to a suit shall apply to the service of process on his recognized agent.

Appointment of pleader.

4. (1) The appointment of a pleader to make or do any appearance, application or act for any person shall be in writing, and shall be signed by such person or by his recognized agent or by some other person duly authorised by power-of-attorney to act in this behalf.

(2) Every such appointment, when accepted by a pleader, shall be filed in Court, and shall be considered to be in force until determined, with the leave of the Court, by a writing signed by the client or the pleader, as the case may be, and filed in Court, or until the client or the pleader dies or until all proceedings in the suit are ended so far as regards the client.

(3) No Government Pleader shall be required to present any document empowering him to act on behalf of Our Government.

(4) Notwithstanding the termination of all proceedings in the suit so far as regards the client, the appointment of a pleader shall, unless otherwise provided therein or determined by the death of the client or the pleader or by revocation in accordance with the provisions of Sub-rule (2) of this Rule, be deemed to authorise

---

The agent under Section 83, C. P. C., having no independent rights cannot delegate his authority. He may however leave the conduct of litigation in the hands of a recognised pleader, in which case he is presumed to instruct such pleader and to be exercising that control in the management of the affairs of his principal with which he was specifically entrusted.

(2) As there were Ooralers in the Devaswom and the Cochin Sirkar was in management as agent of the Ooralers, the said Sirkar could not maintain a suit in spite of the Ooralers. A mere manager is simply an agent of the Ooralers and could not maintain a suit in opposition to and against the will of his principal (F. B.).—

Service of process on pleader.

5. Any process served on the pleader of any party or left at the office or ordinary residence of such pleader, and whether the same is for the personal appearance of the party or not, shall be presumed to be duly communicated and made known to the party whom the pleader represents, and, unless the Court otherwise directs, shall be as effectual for all purposes as if the same had been given to or served on the party in person.

ORDER IV.

Institution of Suits.

Suit to be commenced by plaint.

1. (1) Every suit shall be instituted by presenting a plaint to the Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf.

(2) Every plaint shall comply with the Rules contained in Orders VI and VII, so far as they are applicable.

Register of suits.

2. The Court shall cause the particulars of every suit to be entered in a book to be kept for the purpose and called the Register of Civil Suits. Such entries shall be numbered in every year according to the order in which the plaints are admitted.

ORDER V.

Issue and Service of Summons.

Issue of Summons.

Summons.

1. (1) When a suit has been duly instituted, a summons may be issued to the defendant to appear and answer the claim on a day to be therein specified:

Or. IV, r. 2 [= S. 54, last Para = Or. IV, r. 2]

I. The last Para of Section 54 of the old Regulation was as follows:—"Register of suits.—The Court shall also cause the particulars mentioned in Section 46 to be entered in a book to be kept for the purpose and called the Register of Civil Suits. Such entries shall be numbered in every year according to the order in which the plaint is admitted."

[For Section 46 referred to, see Order VII, Rules 1 and 2, and 4 to 6.]

II. See Order VII, Rule 9, for the other Paras of Section 54.

III. For Form of Register of Civil suits, see Appendix I, Form No. 14.

Case Law.

Neither the provisions of the Civil Courts' Guide nor the Rules framed under the Insolvency Regulation warrant the treatment of the applications for annulment under Section 36 of the Insolvency Regulation as Original suits. The unjustifiable treatment of the applications as plaints and numbering thereof as suits would not constitute the decisions in the cases decrees within the meaning of Section 2 (2) of the Civil Procedure Code.— 45 T. L. R., 869.

Provided that no such summons shall be issued when the defendant has appeared at the presentation of the plaint and admitted the plaintiff's claim.

(2) A defendant to whom a summons has been issued under Sub-rule (1) may appear—

(a) in person, or

(b) by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit, or

(c) by a pleader accompanied by some person able to answer all such questions.

(3) Every such summons shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints, and shall be sealed with the seal of the Court.

Copy or statement annexed to summons.

2. Every summons shall be accompanied by a copy of the plaint or, if so permitted, by a concise statement.

Or. V, r. 1 [= S. 60 = Or. V, r. 1]

I. The corresponding Section of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"60. Summons.—When the plaint has been registered, and concise statements required by Section 54 have been filed, a summons may be issued to each defendant to appear and answer the claim on a day to be therein specified,

(a) in person, or

(b) by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit, or

(c) by a pleader accompanied by some other person able to answer all such questions.

Every such summons shall be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints, and shall be sealed with the seal of the Court :

Provided that no such summons shall be issued when the defendant has appeared at the presentation of the plaint and admitted the plaintiff's claim."

II. For Section 54 of the old Regulation referred to above, see Order IV, Rule 2, and Order VII, Rule 9.

III. See also Section 25, Supra.

IV. For Forms of Summons for disposal of suit and for settlement of issues, see Appendix B, Forms Nos. 1 and 2.

Case Law.

The defendant in a suit has a right to be allowed the minimum time prescribed under Article 632 of the Civil Courts' Guide between the date of the service of process as shown in the return of the process-server and the date of the first hearing.

The provisions of the Civil Courts' Guide have the force of law, as they have been enacted under the Rule making powers conferred on the High Court under Section 591 (new Section 91), C. P. C.—

(2) Where the Court sees reason to require the personal appearance of the plaintiff on the same day, it shall make an order for such appearance.

No party to be ordered to appear in person unless resident within certain limits.

4. No party shall be ordered to appear in person unless he resides—

(a) within the local limits of the Court's ordinary original jurisdiction, or

(b) without such limits but at a place less than fifty or (where there is railway or steamer communication or other established public conveyance for five-sixths of the distance between the place where he resides and the place where the Court is situate) less than two hundred miles distance from the court-house.

Summons to be either to settle issues or for final disposal.

5. The Court shall determine, at the time of issuing the summons, whether it shall be for the settlement of issues only, or for the final disposal of the suit; and the summons shall contain a direction accordingly:

Provided that, in every non-appealable case, the summons shall be for the final disposal of the suit.

II. The above was the same as Section 70 of the old Indian Code of 1882 from which it was adopted. The Indian Select Committee which sat on the Bill of 1901 proposed the present provision. They said:—"We have abridged this provision because, while the defendant should certainly produce all documents in his possession or power in so far as he relies on them in support of his case, it seems to us unreasonable to require him to produce any document merely because it may relate to the merits of the case for the plaintiff."—

Procedure when defendant refuses to accept service or cannot be found.

17. Where the defendant or his agent or such other person as aforesaid refuses to sign the acknowledgment, or where the serving officer, after using all due and reasonable diligence, cannot find the defendant, and there is no agent empowered to accept service of the summons on his behalf, nor any other person on whom service can be made, the serving officer shall affix a copy of the summons on the outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain, and shall then return the original to the Court from which it was issued, with a report endorsed thereon or annexed thereto stating that he has so affixed the copy, the circumstances under which he did so, and the name and address of the person (if any) by whom the house was identified and in whose presence the copy was affixed.

---

Or. V, r. 17 [ = S. 76 = Or. V, r. 17]

I. Section 76 of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"76. Procedure when defendant refuses to accept service or cannot be found.—If the defendant or other person refuses to sign the acknowledgment, or if the serving officer cannot find the defendant, and there is no agent empowered to accept the service of the summons on his behalf, nor any other person on whom the service can be made, the serving officer shall affix a copy of the summons on the outer door of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resides and then return the original to the Court from which it issued, with a return endorsed thereon or annexed thereto, stating that he has so affixed the copy and the date on, and the circumstances under which, he did so."

II. The new Rule reproduces that in the British Indian Code; and some of the changes made in that Code are thus explained.

1. The words "after using all due and reasonable diligence" have been inserted to give effect to the rulings to the effect that the serving officer is bound to use deligence.

India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

2. "In this country many houses have nothing which, without a stretch of language, can be described as 'outerdoors.' In such a case, any other conspicuous part of the house should be sufficient.— Ibid.

3. In regard to identifying persons or houses, it was observed that "on the whole it would seem expedient to provide in the return endorsed on the summons for, at least, one identifier whom the Court or the parties can call as a witness in case of a dispute with respect to the sufficiency of service."— Ibid.

4. The words "(if any)" have been inserted because "the Code should not render absolutely illegal the service of process without an identifier."—India Gazette dated 21-3-1903, Pt. V.

Case Law.

1. The mode of service contemplated by Article [illegible] of the Limitation Regulation is one where the party served accepts the notice and duly signs the acknowledgment,

Where the party refuses to sign the acknowledgment and the service is, accordingly, effected under Sections 76, 77 and 78 of the Civil Procedure Code, it cannot be said that there is "service personally of the notice," within the meaning of the above said Article.— 34 T. L. R., 174.

Fol.—37 T. L. R., 290
(=12 T. L. J., 262).
Ref.—18 T. L. J., 992.

2. Mere temporary absence of the person to be served with the writ is not to be regarded as sufficient to justify the process-server resorting to substituted service, as by affixing the summons to the door. Section 76 of the Civil Procedure Code is intended for cases in which the writ of summons should be affixed in the way required by that Section after a proper attempt has been made to find the defendant. It is the duty of the peon entrusted with the process to make reasonable efforts to find out the person to be served. When a serving officer finds a defendant to be away temporarily from home and knows where he is, it is not good service of summons under Section 76 if he thereupon does nothing more than fix the summons to the outer door of the house, but he must make further efforts to effect personal service. Whenever it is practicable, the service of summons must be in person, and it is only when reasonable grounds exist for believing that the defendant is keeping out of the way to avoid service or for other reasons personal service cannot be effected, that substituted service should be ordered or effected. The object of the service of a summons (other than substituted service) is that the defendant may have information of the institution of the suit in due time before the day fixed for the hearing. In order that substituted service may be declared to be due service under Section 78 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court must be satisfied that the defendant may, from the circumstances, be considered to be aware that the writ is out against him.—

(=10 T. L. J., 314**).

3. The mode of service of notice contemplated in Article 136 of the Limitation Regulation is the one where the party served accepts the notice and duly signs the acknowledgment. Where the party refuses to sign the acknowledgment and consequently the service is effected under Sections 76, 77 and 78 of the Civil Procedure Code, there is no "service personally of the notice" within the meaning of that Article.—

37 T. L. R., 290
(=12 T. L. J., 262**).

4. A substituted service of summons under Section 76 (old) is not a personal service within the meaning of Article 149 of the Limitation Regulation (1100).

Where the serving officer fails to affix the summons as required by Section 76 such omission renders the service improper.

A preliminary objection was taken to the maintainability of the appeal on the ground that the decree sought to be set aside and restoration prayed for was passed in a Small Cause suit. Under Section 6, the provisions relating to appeals against orders refusing to set aside decrees passed ex parte have not been declared applicable, and as the objection was well founded, the appeal was treated as a revision petition as prayed for.— 18 T. L. J., 992.

5. The service of summons as contemplated by Order V, Rule 17, can be effected when the defendant cannot be found after the serving officer had used all due and reasonable diligence to find out the defendant. What he is expected to do in this matter is to go to the place or places and at the time the defendant can be reasonably expected to be present; whether such reasonable efforts have been made in a particular case will have to be decided with reference to the facts of that case.

The temporary absence which would justify the resort to the provisions of Rule 17 would be absence for a reasonably short period after which the defendant's return could, with a certain amount of certainty, be expected.

Endorsement of time and manner of service.

18. The serving officer shall, in all cases in which the summons has been served under Rule 16, endorse or annex, or cause to be endorsed or annexed, on or to the original summons, a return stating the time when and the manner in which the summons was served, and the name and address of the person (if any) identifying the person served and witnessing the delivery or tender of the summons.

Examination of serving officer.

19. Where a summons is returned under Rule 17, the Court shall, if the return under that Rule has not been verified by the affidavit of the serving officer, and may, if it has been so verified, examine the serving officer on oath, or cause him to be so examined by another Court, touching his proceedings, and may make such further inquiry in the matter as it thinks fit; and shall either declare that the summons has been duly served or order such service as it thinks fit.

Where the defendant had gone to a different place altogether and where no definite information is had as to the time of his return, it would be anamalous to hold that the process-server should await his return for an indefinite period and effect the service of the writ personally. Nor is it possible for him to follow him to any other village, where he is not in possession of information as to the exact place where the defendant could be found.

The residence required to be specified in the plaint under Clause 5 of Rule 9 of the Civil Courts Guide has reference to his permanent place of residence and not places where he had gone with intent to return back to such permanent place of residence.

Or. V, r. 18 [= S. 77 = Or. V, r. 18]

I. This Rule reproduces Section 77 of the old Regulation with the addition at the end of the words "and the name and address .........tender of the summons." as in the British Indian Code. See Note under previous Rule.

II. For From of Affidavit of process-server, see Appendix B, Form No. 10.

Or. V, r. 19 [= S. 78, Para 1
= Or. V, r. 19]

I. The words "If the return under that Rule.........if it has been so verified" are an addition to the old Section taken from the British Indian Code.

II. There is no provision in the Code of Civil Procedure relating to the service of a fresh summons on a minor defendant on his attaining majority. On the other hand, it would seem that it is for the defendant who has attained age to apply to the Court to discharge the guardian.

"When an infant attains full age during the proceedings, he is entitled to put in a new defence ; but if he takes no steps within a reasonable time after coming of age, he will be bound by what has been done during his infancy."— 16 T. L. J., 499.

Substituted service.

20. (1) Where the Court is satisfied that there is reason to believe that the defendant is keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding service, or that for any other reason the summons cannot be served in the ordinary way, the Court shall order the summons to be served by affixing a copy thereof in some conspicuous place in the Court-house, and also upon some conspicuous part of the house (if any) in which the defendant is known to have last resided or carried on business or personally worked for gain, or in such other manner as the Court thinks fit.

Effect of substituted service.

(2) Service substituted by order of the Court shall be as effectual as if it had been made on the defendant personally.

Where service substituted, time for appearance to be fixed.

(3) Where service is substituted by order of the Court, the Court shall fix such time for the appearance of the defendant as the case may require.

Service of summons where defendant resides within jurisdiction of another Court.

21. A summons may be sent by the Court by which it is issued, either by one of its officers or by post to any Court (not being the High Court) having original jurisdiction in the place where the defendant resides.

Or. V, r. 21 [ = S. 81, Para 1 = Or. V, r. 21 ]

I. The first Para of Section 81 of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"81. Service of summons when defendant resides within the jurisdiction of another Court and has no agent to accept service.—If the defendant resides within the jurisdiction of any Court other than the Court in which the suit is instituted, and has no agent resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the latter Court empowered to accept the service of the summons, such Court shall send the summons, either by one of its officers or by post, to any Court having original jurisdiction at the place where the defendant resides, by which it can be conveniently served, and shall fix such time for the appearance of the defendant as the case may require."

II. For Form of Order for transmission of summons for service, see Appendix B, Form No. 6.

22. The Court to which a summons is sent under Rule 21 shall, upon receipt thereof, proceed as if it had been issued by such Court and shall then return the summons to the Court of issue, together with the record (if any) of its proceedings with regard thereto.

Duty of Court to which summons is sent.

23. Where the defendant is confined in a prison, the summons shall be delivered or sent by post or otherwise to the officer in charge of the prison for service on the defendant.

Service on defendant in prison.

Or. V, r. 22 [ = S. 81, Para 2 = Or. V, r. 23 ]

I. The wording at the end of the second Para of Section 81 of the old Regulation is :—" to the Court from which it originally issued, together with the record (if any) of service."

II. For Form of record to accompany returns of summons of another Court, see Appendix B, Form No. 9.

Or. V, r. 23 [ = Ss. 82 & 83 = Or. V, r. 24 ]

I. 1. Sections 82 and 83 of the old Regulation were as follow :—

" 82. Service on defendant in jail.—If the defendant be in jail, the summons shall be delivered to the officer in charge of the jail in which the defendant is confined, and such officer shall cause the summons to be served upon the defendant.

The summons shall be returned to the Court from which it issued, with a statement of the service endorsed thereon, and signed by the officer in charge of the jail and by the defendant.

Such endorsement may be accepted as proof of service."

" 83. Procedure if jail be in different District.—If the jail in which the defendant is confined is not in the District in which the suit is instituted, the summons may be sent by post or otherwise to the officer in charge of such jail, and such officer shall cause the summons to be served upon the defendant, and shall return the summons to the Court from which it issued, with a statement of the service endorsed thereon, and signed as provided in Section 82.

Such endorsement may be accepted as proof of service."

2. In the Indian Code of 1882, the corresponding Sections 87 and 88 did not contain the words "Such endorsement ........ service." The additions were made to empower the Courts to act upon the report of the jailor who could not, without considerable risk and inconvenience, attend the Court to prove the service of summons in each case."— *S. Service where defendant resides out of Travancore and has no agent.

24. Where the defendant resides out of Travancore and has no agent in Travancore empowered to accept service, the summons shall be addressed to the defendant at the place where he is residing and sent to him by post, if there is postal communication between such place and the place where the Court is situate.

Service on civil public officer or on servant of local authority.

25. Where the defendant is a public officer or is the servant of a local authority, the Court may, if it appears to it that the summons may be most conveniently so served, send it for service on the defendant to the head of the office in which he is employed, together with a copy to be retained by the defendant.

Service on soldiers.

26. Where the defendant is a military officer or a soldier, the Court shall send the summons for service to his commanding officer together with a copy to be retained by the defendant.

Duty of person to whom summons is delivered or sent for service.

27. (1) Where a summons is delivered or sent to any person for service under Rule 23, Rule 25 or Rule 26, such person shall be bound to serve it, if possible, and to return it under his signature, with the written acknowledgment of the defendant, and such signature shall be deemed to be evidence of service.

Or. V, r. 24 [= S. 84 = Or. V, r. 25]

1. The corresponding Section 84 of the old Regulation had (1) the words "duly registered" after the word "post"; and (2) the words "or service may be effected in such other manner as the Court may determine" after the word "situate" at the end of the Section.

2. In regard to the words "or service &c." it is noted that the Indian Code of 1882 did not contain them. They were added in the old Regulation in view to "confer upon the Court the power of giving special directions as to the mode of service of summonses in cases where the prescribed methods are found insufficient to procure the service of summons."— S. O & R, Para 15.

Or. V, r. 25 [= S. 407 = Or. V, r. 27]

I. Section 407 of the old Regulation was as follows:—

"407. Service on public Officers.—Where the defendant is a public Officer, the Court may send a copy of the summons to the head of the office in which the defendant is employed, for the purpose of being served on him, if it appear to the Court that the summons may be most conveniently so served."

II. For Form of Summons, see Appendix B, Form No. 8.

Or. V, r. 26 [= S. 447 = Or. V, r. 28]

(2) Where from any cause service is impossible, the summons shall be returned tothe Court with a full statement of such cause and of the steps taken to procure service, and such statement shall be deemed to be evidence of non-service.

Substitution of letter for summons.

28. (1) The Court may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, substitute for summons a letter signed by the Judge or such officer as he may appoint in this behalf, where the defendant is, in the opinion of the Court, of a rank entitling him to such mark of consideration.

(2) A letter substituted under Sub-rule (1) shall contain all the particulars required to be stated in a summons, and, subject to the provisions of Sub-rule (3), shall be treated in all respects as a summons.

(3) A letter so substituted may be sent to the defendant by a special messenger selected by the Court, or in any other manner which the Court thinks fit; and where the defendant has an agent empowered to accept service, the letter may be delivered or sent to such agent.

ORDER VI.

Pleadings generally.

Pleading.

1. "Pleading" shall mean plaint or written statement.

---

Or. V, r. 27 [ = Ss. 82, 83, 447 = Or. V, r. 29]

I. Section 447 of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"447. Service on officers and soldiers.—When an officer or a soldier is a defendant, the Court may, in its discretion, send a copy of the summons to his Commanding Officer for the purpose of being served on him.

The officer to whom such copy is sent, after causing it to be served on the person to whom it is addressed, if practicable, shall return it to the Court with the written acknowledgment of such person endorsed thereon.

If from any cause the copy cannot be so served, it shall be returned to the Court by which it was sent, with information of the cause which has prevented the service."

II. For the old Sections 82 and 83, see Rule 23 Supra.

III. For Form of Summons, see Appendix B, Form No. 8.

Or. V, r. 28 [ = Ss. 85 & 86 = Or. V, r. 30]

Sub-Rule (3) of the Rule corresponds to Section 86 of the old Regulation and to Sub-Rule (3) of Rule 30 of the British Indian Code. In both these, the words, "post or by" occur before the words "a special messenger."

Order VI : I. "This Order is practically new, and contains provisions applicable to plaints and written statements. There is laid down explicitly and in detail what should be stated in a pleading, and how it should be said. Decisions, long-standing and uniform, which lay down that, in cases where fraud is set up, facts constituting the fraud should be expressly pleaded, are expressed now in terms in Rule 4 of this Order. There is also laid down what implications are involved by force of Statute, in advancing certain pleas. In fact, the attempt is to enforce the framing of full but brief pleadings enabling the Court as well as the parties to perceive what is and what is not the real dispute in a case. Again, the power to amend is considerably enlarged, and the restrictions now imposed by Statute as to the time and manner of amendment which are not infrequently ignored, are altogether removed. The only limitation is that which the ends of justice may put on the Court's powers in every case according to the circumstances disclosed in that case."—

II. The Indian Special Committee in their Report observe :—"The Committee have added a few Rules relating to pleadings based upon the system of pleading introduced by the Judicature Acts in England which is generally admitted to be the best form of pleading in civil suits. In this country, outside the Presidency-town, the pleadings are seldom artistically drawn. They are neither concise nor precise but contain vague and general statements from which it is difficult to ascertain definitely the real question in controversy between the parties. The sole object of pleadings is thus frequently defeated, the issue is enlarged, the trial is delayed, and much unnecessary expense is incurred by the parties who are also liable to be taken by surprise. They have further provided that the Forms in the Schedule shall when applicable be used for all pleadings, and when they are not applicable, forms of the like character shall be used. The Rules prescribed by us will not prevent the pleader from exercising his discretion ; for the amount of detail must necessarily vary with the nature of each suit. It is however made clear that there must be particularly sufficient to apprise the Court and the other party of the exact nature of the questions to be tried.

"The Committee have also given a party who considers that his opponent's pleading does not give him the information to which he is entitled, the right to apply for further particulars so as to enable him to know what case he has to meet at the trial."

"They have, however, endeavoured to modify the rigour of the Rules by providing in accordance with Section 58 of the Indian Evidence Act that the Court may, notwithstanding the absence of any special denial, require any fact to be proved by the party who relies upon it."

Case Law.

(General).

1. Notwithstanding the provisions in the Code, admissions of parties and waiver of contentions at any stage of the suit at variance with the written pleadings should be recorded in the form of statements or should be noted in the Judge's own hand.

If any contention is given up at the final hearing, the Court should take a statement from the Vakil or the party to that effect or at least make a note of it in the issue paper.

Any doubt in the written statement should be cleared by the examination of the defendant or his Vakil at the time of the settlement of issues.— 5 T. L. R., 124.

2. It is a well-established principle of law that the decision of a case must be in accordance with the pleadings. If, at the final hearing, the Court learns that the case stated in the pleadings is inaccurate, it must either dismiss the suit or allow the plaintiff to withdraw it, with liberty in either case to bring a fresh suit.

When a Vakil makes a statement totally inconsistent with his client's case in the pleadings, the Courts should not act upon it, unless they are certain that it was made under instructions.— 7 T. L. R., 33.

Fol.—32 T. L. R., 211
(=7 T. L. J., 32).
Ref.—17 T. L. J., 146.

3. It is inexpedient to allow parties to go to trial on issues of fact without some distinct and specific allegation on the one side and denial on the other. Where a plaintiff seeks relief against defendant on the ground of fraud, the facts or circumstances constituting the alleged fraud must be distinctly set forth in the pleadings before the case is allowed to go to trial. Otherwise, defendants have a valid right to complain that they were taken by surprise at the trial, and they may further be seriously prejudiced by enabling the plaintiffs to bring any evidence without giving defendants full opportunity to rebut such evidence. A plaint alleging vaguely a case of fraud, without a detailed statement of the circumstances constituting such fraud, does not satisfy the requirements of law, and the Court would do well to insist upon a distinct statement of facts in the pleadings.— 7 T. L. R., 117.

4. When the pleadings are silent on material points, it is the duty of the Court to have the defects in the written pleadings cured by returning the same for amendment, or by an oral examination of the party or his Vakil at the first hearing.— 9 T. L. R., 153.

5. When there is a doubt as to the nature of the plaint, the Court should take a statement from the plaintiff or his Vakil regarding the real nature of the suit before raising issues.— 17 T. L. R., 89.

6. Fraud and misrepresentation being serious allegations charged against the person sought to be made liable must be positively proved.— 21 T. L. R., 256.

7. Vague allegations of fraud are useless. "With regard to fraud, if there be any principle which is perfectly well settled, it is that general allegations, however strong may be the words in which they are stated, are insufficient even to amount to an averment of fraud, of which any Court ought to take notice."— 22 T. L. R., 143.

Ref.—16 T. L. J., 550.

8. The Legislature has expressly clothed the Courts with the power to strike off pleadings which are prolix. They have also inherent power to strike out or expunge scandalous and irrelevant remarks contained in pleadings, and the power of preventing abuse of their process, to forbid scandalous questions and such questions as are intended to annoy.— 2 T. L. J., 332.

9. Where an admission or a statement is made by a Vakil, which is totally inconsistent with his client's case in the pleadings, the Courts should not act upon it unless they are certain that such admission or statement has been made under instructions.— 32 T. L. R., 211 (= 7. T. L. J., 32).

10. When a Court accepts a new case set up, which is inconsistent with the pleadings, the Court acts irregularly. "It is impossible to conclude parties by inferences of fact which are not only not consistent with the allegations that are to be found in the plaint which constitutes the case the defendant has to meet, but which are in reality contradictory of the case made by the plaintiff. It will introduce the greatest amount of uncertainty into judicial proceedings if the final determination of causes is to be founded upon inferences at variance with the case that the plaintiff has pleaded and by joining issue in the cause has undertaken to prove."— 13 T. L. J., 409.

Rel.—18 T. L. J., 449.

Ref.—16 T. L. J., 253.

11. The view expressed in 7 T. L. R., 18 that written statements must be taken as public documents and presumed as such to be genuine, i. e., actually signed by the parties by whom they purport to be signed, has not been followed in subsequent cases. The position taken therein cannot be accepted as correct. Such a presumption may no doubt be legitimately drawn with reference to what are really public documents, i. e., records prepared by any public office in the course of its public business. But the pleadings stand on a different footing. They are prepared and signed out of Court and filed only subsequently in Court. To regard them as public documents and presume their genuineness on that basis would open a wide door to fraud. For instance, it is conceivable that a written statement containing important admissions, a confession of judgment, a compromise petition, a petition certifying satisfaction of decree and so on, which cannot be distinguished on principle from pleadings, may be filed purporting to be signed by persons who have not really signed them. To presume them to be genuine and act upon them and put the burden of proving that they are not genuine upon persons who dispute them, it may be long after they had been filed and after the originals thereof had been destroyed, must lead to considerable hardship in practice. "That class of documents which consists of plaints, written statements, affidavits and petitions filed in Court cannot be said to form such acts or records of acts as are mentioned in the Section (Law of evidence) and are, therefore, not public documents." 14 T. L. J., 138.

Ref.—16 T. L. J., 277.

12. It is an important rule of construction as regards pleadings that, unlike the testimony of witnesses, they should not be dissected, and must, if made subject to a condition, be either accepted subject to such condition, or not at all.— 14 T. L. J., 287.

13. The object of pleading is mainly to give the other party notice of the matter pleaded ; and when that object is attained, the mere omission of the plaintiff to raise the plea in question in formal terms ought not to stand in the way of his being allowed to rely upon that plea.—42 T. L. R., 1 (=15 T. L. J., 248).

Ref. —17 T. L. J., 857.

14. The general rule to be followed is that the plaintiff must fail in his suit if he cannot show that, at the date of the plaint, he had a cause of action. It is not enough that, during the course of the action, circumstances have so changed as to give rise to a cause of action. The rule is that a decree must have reference to the state of things existing at the date of the plaint, and where at that date the plaintiff had no cause of action, no relief could be given to him. One apparent exception is that the Court may take notice of events which have happened since the institution of the suit and afford relief to the parties on the basis of the altered conditions where it is shown that the original relief claimed has, by reason of subsequent change of circumstances, become inappropriate or that it is necessary to base the decision of the Court on the altered circumstances in order to shorten litigation or to do complete justice between the parties.— 42 T. L. R., 128 (=15 T. L. J., 326).

Fol.—18 T. L. J., 640.

15. The whole object of pleading is that the parties and the Court should know what is the real point to be discussed and decided.— 15 T. L. J., 440.

16. It is a well recognised rule in the law of pleadings that a party should state his whole case and that he should plead all facts on which he intends to rely, as otherwise, he could not strictly give any evidence of them at the trial. To allow a party to develop his case at every stage and base his claim on facts not specifically stated in the pleadings would be virtually embarrassing his opponent as the latter has a right in law to be told definitely the case which he is called upon to answer.— 18 T. L. J., 301.

17. The disposal of a suit on a case not raised by the parties and to which the evidence had not been directed would be a substantial error and defect of procedure. Even when a new argument contradictory to the case originally set up and involving a line of attack that the other side had not

Pleading to state material facts and not evidence.

2. Every pleading shall contain, and contain only, a statement in a concise form of the material facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence, as the case may be, but not the evidence by which they are to be proved, and shall, when necessary, be divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively. Dates, sums and numbers shall be expressed in figures.

the opportunity to meet, is advanced, the Courts would not accept the same.— 18 T. L. J., 449.

18. It is a cardinal rule of pleadings that material facts should be stated therein with certainty. The object of the pleadings is to enable the Court to ascertain with precision what is the question at issue between the parties. The rule should be that they must be particularly sufficient to appraise the Court and the other party of the exact nature of the question to be tried. All the material facts have to be expressly pleaded, i. e., facts which have to be proved at the trial before the party can succeed in his claim or defence. Of course, it is not necessary to state the evidence by which the facts are proved, but the facta probandi (facts to be proved), as distinguished from the facta probantia (the evidence which proves such facts), have to be set out in such pleadings.— 44 T. L. R., 32 (=18 T. L. J., 471**).

Or. VI, r. 1 [ = „ = Or. VI, r. 1 ]

I. "Pleadings are the written statements by each party to an action of the case on which the party relies, which are delivered by the parties to each other, and are delivered also to the Court which is to try the action. They form part of the 'record' of the action: their object is, first, to enable each party to the action to know definitely what case (claim or defence, as the case may be) he has to meet, and what facts he must be prepared to prove; and secondly, to inform the Court what the matters are which are in dispute, and on which judgment is to be given. Subject to the wide powers of the Court to permit amendments, parties are bound by the statements made in their respective pleadings, and cannot, at the trial of the action, go outside them."—Yearly Practice for 1925.

II. Section 100 of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, defines "Pleading" as follows :—

"'Pleading' shall include any petition or summons, and also the statements in writing of the claim or demand of any plaintiff and of the defence of any defendant thereto, and of the reply of the plaintiff to any counter-claim of a defendant."

III. "The whole object of pleadings is to bring the parties to an issue, and the meaning of the Rules was to prevent the issue being enlarged, which would prevent either party from knowing, when the case came on for trial, what the real point to be discussed and decided was. In fact, the whole meaning of the system is to narrow the parties to definite issues, and thereby to diminish expense and delay, especially as regards the amount of testimony required on either side at the hearing."— (Throp V. Holdsworth).

Or. VI, r. 2 [= „ = Or. VI, r. 2 = En. Or. 19, r. 4]

I. The Courts should see that pleadings are not unnecessarily prolix or in argumentative form. The causes of action and the matters of defence should be stated as concisely as possible.— 1 T. L. R., 48.

II. Rule 4 of Order XIX of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883 is as follows :—

3. The Forms in Appendix A when applicable, and where they are not applicable forms of the like character, as nearly as may be, shall be used for all pleadings.

Forms of pleading.

"4. Every pleading shall contain, and contain only, a statement in a summary form of the material facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence, as the case may be, but not the evidence by which they are to be proved, and shall, when necessary, be divided into paragraphs, numbered consecutively. Dates, sums, and numbers shall be expressed in figures and not in words. Signature of counsel shall not be necessary; but where pleadings have been settled by counsel or a special pleader they shall be signed by him; and if not so settled they shall be signed by the solicitor, or by the party if he sues or defends in person."

Case Law.

1. The rule in redemption suits is that when the mortgagee pleads that he has made improvements, it is incumbent on the plaintiff mortgagor to specifically state in his pleadings that the improvements are improper.— 17 T. L. J., 688.

2. It is absolutely essential that the pleading not to be embarrassing to the defendants, should state those facts which will put the defendants on their guard, and tell them what they have to do.

The object of pleading is merely to give the other party, notice of the matter pleaded, and if that object has been attained, the mere omission of the plaintiff to raise the plea in formal terms ought not to stand in the way of his being allowed to rely upon that plea.

"It is impossible to conclude parties by inferences of fact which are not only not consistent with the allegations that are to be found in the plaint which constitute the case the defendant has to meet, but which are in reality contradictory of the case made by the plaintiff. It will introduce the greatest amount of uncertainty into judicial proceedings if the final determination of causes is to be founded upon inferences at variance with the case that the plaintiff has pleaded and by joining issue in the cause he has undertaken to prove.

A party who in the trial Court fails to establish the case which he set up, is not entitled to advance a new case in appeal.— 17 T. L. J., 887.

3. It is well settled that scandalous matters should be avoided in pleadings, and any proceedings before the Courts may be objected to for scandal, and the scandalous matter ordered to be expunged. It is also well established that, if the allegations are relevant, they cannot be struck out because in other ways they are scandalous.

The expunging of such allegations may be done by the Court of its own motion.

Every pleading shall contain and contain only a statement in a concise form of the material facts on which the party pleading relies for his claim or defence, but not the evidence by which they are proved, as laid down under Order VI, Rule 2.— 19 T. L. J., 372.

Or. VI, r. 3 [ = „ = Or. VI, r. 3 = En. Or. 19, r. 5 ]

Rule 5 of Order XIX of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows :—

"5. The Forms in Appendices C., D., and E., when applicable, and when they are not applicable, forms of the like character, as near as may be shall be used in all pleadings, and where such forms are applicable and sufficient any longer forms shall be deemed prolix, and the costs occasioned by such prolixity shall be disallowed to or borne by the party so using the same, as the case may be."

4. In all cases in which the party pleading relies on any misrepresentation, fraud, breach of trust, wilful default, or undue influence, and in all other cases in which particulars may be necessary beyond such as are exemplified in the form aforesaid, particulars (with dates and items if necessary) shall be stated in the pleading.

Particulars to be given where necessary.

5. A further and better statement of the nature of the claim or defence, or further and better particulars of any matter stated in any pleading, may in all cases be ordered, upon such terms, as to costs and otherwise, as may be just.

Further and better statement or particulars.

6. Any condition precedent, the performance or occurrence of which is intended to be contested shall be distinctly specified in his pleading by the plaintiff or defendant, as the case may be; and, subject thereto, an averment of the performance or occurrence of all conditions precedent necessary for the case of the plaintiff or defendent shall be implied in his pleading.

Condition precedent.

I. Rule 6 of Order XIX of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—

"6. In all cases in which the party pleading relies on any misrepresentation, fraud, breach of trust, wilful default, or undue influence, and in all other cases in which particulars may be necessary beyond such as are exemplified in the forms aforesaid, particulars (with dates and items if necessary) shall be stated in the pleading; provided that, if the particulars be of debt, expenses, or damages, and exceed three folios, the fact must be so stated, with a reference to full particulars already delivered or to be delivered with the pleading."

I. Rule 7 of Order XIX of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—

"7. A further and better statement of the nature of the claim or defence, or further and better particulars of any matter stated in any pleading, notice or written proceeding requiring particulars may in all cases be ordered, upon such terms, as to costs and otherwise, as may be just."

II. When absence of necessity is specifically pleaded by the junior members of a Tarwad, in cases where the documents evidencing the loan are silent as regards the purpose for which the same was contracted, it is desirable that the creditor should detail out the purposes of the loan to enable the members of the Tarwad impeaching the loan, to adduce evidence to rebut the presumption regarding necessity arising in his favour. In such cases, Courts will do well to call for supplementary written statements or replications from the creditors, setting forth the same, treating the express denial of necessity by the junior members as a demand for such details which the creditor is bound to comply with (F. B.).— 19 T. L. J., 184.

Departure.

7. No pleading shall, except by way of amendment, raise any new ground of claim or contain any allegation of fact inconsistent with the previous pleadings of the party pleading the same.

Denial of contract.

8. Where a contract is alleged in any pleading, a bare denial of the same by the opposite party shall be construed only as a denial in fact of the express contract alleged or of the matters of fact from which the same may be implied, and not as a denial of the legality or sufficiency in law of such contract.

Rule 16 of Order XIX of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows :—

"16. No pleading, not being a petition or summons, shall, except by way of amendment, raise any new ground of claim or contain any allegation of fact inconsistent with the previous pleadings of the party pleading the same."

Case Law.

The setting up of inconsistent pleas by a defendant is not prohibited by any rule of law, especially in cases where the defendant has no personal knowledge of the facts to which the pleas relate. "There can be no objection to preferring alternative and inconsistent claims, or raising inconsistent pleas, provided they are based on facts which are not inconsistent. Even inconsistent facts are not prohibited as a matter of law, but inconsistent claims or pleas which are based on facts so inconsistent that the evidence required to prove one fact is destructive of the other fact, should be discouraged, except where the facts are not within the personal knowledge of the party pleading them.— 44 T. L. R., 339 (=18 T. L. J., 1133).

Case Law.

1. The suit was by plaintiffs, members of a Nambudiri Illom, against the Karanavan and Anandaravan of a Nair Tarwad for renewal fees, arrears of Michavarom and customary dues due on account of the renewal of 1097. In the plaint it was averred that the prior decree granted the plaintiff renewal fees for 1085 and Michavarom at the enhanced rate per annum against the defendants. In the course of the present suit, the second defendant impugned the binding nature of the former decree on the ground of its having contravened Section 25 of the Nair Regulation. The plaintiffs thereupon prayed for leave to amend the plaint by the inclusion of a prayer for getting enhanced Michavarom from 1097.

Held.—Under the circumstances leave to amend the plaint, as applied for by the plaintiffs, should have been granted. The case now set up could not be considered to be any new case as would materially alter or transform the nature of the suit, as originally framed. The reliefs now sought for relate to the rights that, according to the plaintiffs, would have accrued to them at the time of the renewal of 1097. In claiming these reliefs, it was perfectly open to the plaintiffs to set up contentions now attempted to be put forward as an alternative basis of their claim in the original plaint itself. For, it is a recognised principle of the law of pleadings that the plaintiff is entitled in law to rely upon several different rights alternatively though they may be inconsistent.

A suit cannot be dismissed because the plaintiff claims, in the alternative, rights which are inconsistent with each other. Such a dismissal could not be made when the plaintiff claims rights of ownership and easement over a property in the same suit. Of course, if the alternative case would prejudice, embarrass or delay a fair trial of the case the Court could direct the pleadings to be struck out. But it could not be laid down as a general rule that such prejudice or embarrassment would result in all cases in which alternative cases are set up. These rules relating to pleadings are enacted with a view to prevent multiplicity of proceedings and unless serious prejudice is caused the provisions contained in Order VI, Rule 16, relating to the striking off of the pleadings, should not be exercised. Even in the matter of inconsistent pleas, the policy of the Court should be to allow the party to set up a new plea of fact inconsistent with the facts already pleaded, unless they would be embarrassing or prejudicial, because the plaintiff should be allowed to do this at his own risk; if the pleas are contradictory they work out their own retribution by disproving each other to the extent of their contradiction and the party's knowledge of them.— 19 T. I. Section 49 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"49. When plaint may be rejected, returned for amendment, or amended.—The plaint may, at the discretion of the Court,

(a) at, or any time before, the settlement of issues, be rejected, if it does not disclose a cause of action;

(b) at, or any time before, the settlement of issues, be returned for amendment within a time to be fixed by the Court, and upon such terms as to the payment of costs occasioned by such amendment, as the Court thinks fit, if it—

(i) is not signed and verified as hereinbefore required,

(ii) does not state correctly and without prolixity the several particulars hereinbefore required, or contains particulars other than those so required,

(iii) is wrongly framed by reason of non-joinder or mis-joinder of parties, or joins causes of action which ought not to be joined in the same suit, or

(iv) is not framed in accordance with the provisions of Section 38;

(c) at any time before judgment, be amended by the Court upon such terms as to the payment of costs as the Court thinks fit:

Provided that a plaint shall not be amended either by the party to whom it is returned for amendment, or by the Court, so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character.

When a plaint is amended under this Section, the amendment shall be attested by the signature of the Judge and of the plaintiff or his Vakil."

III. See also Section 117.

IV. For the different kinds of amendment, see Sections 116 and 117, Order I, Rule 10 (2), and Order VI, Rules 16 and 17.

V. Rule 1 of Order XXVIII of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—

"1. The Court or a Judge may, at any stage of the proceedings, allow either party to alter or amend his indorsement or pleadings, in such manner and on such terms as may be just, and all such amendments shall be made as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties."

VI. "Section 49 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1065 allowed amendments to be made by the Courts upon such terms as to the payment of costs as the Courts thought fit, such amendments not being allowed to be made either when returned for the purposes indicated in Clause (b), or directed to be made under Clause (c), so as to convert a suit of one character into that of another and inconsistent character. The provisions relating to amendments in the later Code of 1100 appear to be wider and more comprehensive. Section 117 of the Code (corresponding to Section 153 of the British Indian Act V of 1908) lays down that all necessary amendments should be made for the purpose of determining the real question or issue raised by or depending on a proceeding in a suit. Order 6, Rule 17 of the Code of 1100 similarly enables the Court at any stage of the proceedings to allow either party to alter or amend his pleadings in such manner and in such terms as may be just, and lays down that all such amendments shall be made as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties. This Rule evidently also embodies the provisions relating to the amendment of written statements contained in Section 111 of the Code of 1065. One of the innovations introduced under the new Code in this matter is the omission of the provision in Clause (b) of Section 49 of the old Code enabling the return of the plaint for amendment at or before the first hearing of the suit in the several classes of cases set forth therein. While the pleadings unsigned, unverified, or not drawn up in the form required by the Code, dealt with under Clause (b) (ii) and (iii) of the above Section in the old Code, are required to be dealt with under the general provisions relating to amendment under the new Code, prolix, unnecessary and scandalous statements and those likely to prejudice and embarrass the other side, dealt with under Clause (b) (ii) of the old Code, have been directed to be struck out or called for being amended as the case may be by the Court under Rule 16 of Order VI of the new Code. Defects relating to mis-joinder and non-joinder of parties (Clause (b) (iv) of Section 49 of the Code of 1065) have similarly to be rectified by invoking the general rule relating to amendments in Section 113 and Order VI, Rule 17, and the provisions relating to joinder of parties contained in Order I of the new Code. It may be noticed here that the amendments in the above cases are allowed to be applied for and made at any stage of the suit under the new Code, the same to be effected without an actual return of the plaint. Another seeming innovation introduced by the new Code on this subject is the omission of the express provision prohibiting amendments that would tend to alter the character of the suit. This omission cannot be said to have changed the law to any appreciable extent, as the wording of the new Code seems to have only amplified and clearly explained what exactly was meant by the expression 'character of the suit' occurring in the old Code."— 43 T. L. R., 344 (=17 T. L. J., 161).

Case Law.

1. Whenever a plaint is rejected, a judicial order is to be recorded in the diary of the Court and the original plaint is also to be placed among the records, but not to be numbered or entered in the register.

Whenever a plaint is returned, the grounds and date of return are to be entered on the back of such plaint, and signed by the Judge, a copy of such endorsement being placed on record.

Where a plaint is returned for amendment the order of return should specify a time for such amendment.—I T. L. R., 48.

2. An order granting an application by plaintiff to amend his plaint is not appealable under Section 557 (old Code), as Clause (6) of that Section refers to a plaintiff aggrieved by the order and not to a defendant.

A Court is competent to grant an application made under Section 49, Clause (c), allowing an amendment of the plaint to be made at any time before judgment, provided that the character of the suit, as originally framed, is not altered by such amendment.— 13 T. L. R. App., 13.

3. Erroneous statement in a plaint as to the mode of acquisition of property, but which has been subsequently corrected before trial, is not a ground for disallowing the claim when there is ample evidence, oral and documentary, in support of such claim.— 13 T. L. R., 5.

4. A sued B for redemption of property No. 1 alleged to have been mortgaged to B's ancestor. B denied the mortgage of that property but admitted that property No. 2 was mortgaged to his family by A's Tarwad. The Munsiff, finding that A's case regarding property No. 1 was weak, suggested to his Vakil to withdraw the suit and institute a fresh suit for No. 2. A declined to adopt the suggestion or even ask for an amendment of the plaint. The Munsiff dismissed his suit. On appeal by A, the District Judge, reversing the Munsiff's decree, remanded the case to dispose of it in due course, after allowing A to amend the plaint.

Held.—The Judge's procedure was wrong and would, if allowed to stand, be tantamount to permitting him to make out a case for plaintiff not set forth in the pleadings.

The Court should not assist a plaintiff who has persisted in inviting a decree on a precisely worded plaint, as the plaintiff, in the case, had done.— 14 T. L. R. App., 35.

5. In a suit for cancellation of Pattah, there was no express prayer in the plaint for declaration of title ; but the allegation in the issue paper disclosed an issue as to title. The appellant, therefore, prayed for an amendment of the plaint.

Held.—In a case like this, the amendment of the plaint by adding a prayer for declaration could not be allowed.

The defect in the statement of the plaintiff's case in the plaint was however merely formal, and as all the questions as to title and possession had been raised and tried, it would be improper to send the parties to another suit for the trial of the same questions over again. The special appellant's prayer for declaration of title was therefore granted. The lower Court's decree was reversed and the suit remanded for re-trial on the plaint amended as above stated.—

7. Suit by a partner for recovery of money due on settlement of accounts. The lower Courts concurrently found that there was no settlement of accounts, and dismissed the suit. On special appeal, the High Court, while ordering the amendment of plaint for recovery of money into one for accounts and remanding the case under Section 533, Civil Procedure Code [Or. XL, r. 22] :

Held.—A suit for recovery of money due under a settlement of accounts might be amended into a suit for accounts as the relief arose out of and was immediately connected with the same transaction, and such an amendment did not alter the character of the suit. "The intention of the Legislature was that, as far as possible, all matters in dispute between the parties relating to the same transaction should be disposed of in the same suit." In the case, the facts as to partnership dissolution, &c., are all admitted and alternative cases or reliefs 'which arise out of' and are 'immediately connected with the same transaction' can be allowed to be raised and prayed for any amendment as the suit, considered in whatever way, will remain substantially a suit for recovery of money due by one partner to another in a partnership transaction which has come to an end.—

8. Where a plaintiff wanted to withdraw a portion of his suit on account of his inability to pay the whole court fees on the value of the plaint properties, as subsequently found by the commissioner deputed for the purpose, and the cause of action of the withdrawn portion was different from the rest of the plaint, the plaintiff might be allowed to amend his plaint as prayed for under the wide powers conferred upon Courts under Section 49, Clause (c).

1 S. D., 309.

9. When a Jenmi brings a suit for redemption while the properties were in fact demised on Kanom, the plaintiff cannot be allowed to amend his plaint by asking for a renewal as the suit for redemption is obviously different in character from a suit for renewal.

Para 1 of Section 44 purports to convey permanent occupancy. Para 2 says that the Jenmi and Kudiyan Regulation shall not apply to any right acquired by Kudiyans or Jenmis at the date that Regulation came into force and the first para saves the rights of Kudiyans who have had 50 years' possession of the holding without in any manner acknowledging the Jenmi's title.—

2 S. D., 81.

10. The plaintiff brought the suit for recovery of possession of property as if it was one against a lessee and a person claiming under the lessee. He added the separate cause of action based on title only by his petition for amendment presented more than 12 years after the sale to him of the plaint property.

Held.—(1) If the subsequent amendment did not change or add to the cause or causes of action on which the suit was originally brought, the amendment could not alter the date of the filing of the suit. But when a distinct cause of action, was added at a late stage, the suit for amendment became really two suits rolled into one, the first suit on the original cause of action being supplemented by a second suit on the new cause of action though the different suits are for convenience and brevity of description treated as one suit.

(2) The plaintiff cannot be in a better position than if his suit on his cause of action as landlord had been dismissed and he had brought a fresh suit on title on date of amendment (which was 12 years after the sale to him) and hence the suit was barred.— 3 S. D., 218.

11. Though an appeal is provided for from orders returning plaints for amendment, an order refusing permission to amend a plaint, which is of an interlocutory nature is not appealable under the Code.

The appeal could not be treated as an application for revision. The High Court does not exercise its revisional jurisdiction so long as there is any other remedy open to the applicant. The additional relief with respect to the damages claimed by the plaintiff is such as could be obtained by a separate suit.— 4 S. D., 87.

12. Where the Munsiff holding that the plaint was bad by reason of mis-joinder of parties and causes of action and giving 7 days' time for presenting two plaints, ordered the plaint to be struck off and then the Zillah Judge dismissed the C. M. Appeal presented against the above order of the Munsiff on the ground that the appeal ought to have been styled and stamped as a regular appeal:

Held (remanding the case to the Zillah Judge for disposal).—The Munsiff's order could be treated as one passed under Section 49, C. P. C., for amendment. Against such an order Section 557, clause (6), provides an appeal and the Zillah Judge, even if the appeal before him should be treated as a regular one, ought not to have dismissed it on that highly technical ground.

Obiter—Even where a plaint discloses no cause of action, it can be amended instead of being rejected. [See C P. C., Section 49 Clause (c)].— K. P., 257.

13. In a mortgage suit, the mortgagee was allowed to amend his plaint by adding a prayer to recover the value of improvements effected by his sub-mortgagee. The plaintiff should have sued also for the improvements due to his sub-mortgagee, for the mortgagor ought to be protected from harassment by separate suits brought by his mortgagee and the mortgagee's derivative mortgagee.— K. P., 475.

14. Where the relief prayed for is a minor one and may be included in the general prayer for other relief contained in the plaint, the prayer for amendment of the plaint in respect of the minor relief may be granted, as it does not change the suit into one of an inconsistent character.— K. P., 496.

15. The Court has ample powers to allow amendments even when the first mistake is due to negligence or carelessness. The defendant ought not to be prejudiced by the amendment.— 27 T. L. R., 192.

16. The plaintiff, a Makkathayam Hindu, alleging that his wife, a girl of 13 years of age, was being wrongfully kept back from him by defendant, her grandmother, sued for recovery of the wife. The District Judge being of opinion that without impleading the wife as a party defendant, an effective decree could not be passed, directed amendment of the plaint on impleading her. It was contended by the defendant in appeal that the addition of the wife as a party altered the nature of the suit and that as the order for amendment was made after the examination of some witnesses, it was irregular.

Held.—(1) The plaint in effect was one asking for a direction being made for the wife's joining her husband, the defendant who obstructs such return being enjoined to refrain from opposing it. For the granting of that relief the wife should be a party to the suit and such amendment did not materially alter the nature of the suit.

(2) Courts are to act with considerable liberality in the matter of granting amendments and ought to correct all kinds of errors or mistakes which are not fraudulent or intended to over-reach the Court.—

18. Plaintiffs entitled to a moiety of the self-acquisitions of their father who died on 4-8-1074, sued on 3-8-1086, to recover one-half of 6 out of 10 items of properties belonging to the deceased. On 2-2-1038, an application was made for amendment of the plaint by including in the plaint schedule four items of property omitted in the first instance owing to bona fide ignorance, and was granted. The amended plaint was put in on 21-4-1088, when it was found that the value of the suit was beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Munsiff, and the Munsiff on the same day ordered the plaint to be presented to the proper Court. The plaint was however actually returned to the plaintiffs only on 25-5-1088 and was presented before the District Court on 27-5-1088. The defence contended inter alia that the amendment was improperly allowed inasmuch as on the date of the application for amendment, the period of limitation of the suit had expired and that the period between the date of order for return of the plaint for presentation to the proper Court and the date of actual return thereof, should not be given credit to the plaintiffs to save limitation.

Held.—(1) So long as the cause of action had remained unaltered and the defendants had not been prejudiced by the amendment, there was nothing illegal or improper in allowing the plaint to be amended even after the expiry of the period of limitation; and where a plaint has been properly amended, the date of institution of the claim is the date of presentation of the original, and not of the amended plaint.

"The Court being desirous of getting at the true facts will allow an amendment subject to three general conditions: Bona fides on the part of the applicant: possibility of amendment without such prejudice to the other party as cannot be compensated by costs (such as prejudice to rights accrued) and subject to this that the amendment is not such as to turn a suit of one character into a suit of another character. This statement is not made as being exhaustive but as embodying what are perhaps the three chief conditions on which amendment may be allowed * * In short the object of a trial being to get at the rights of the parties, any amendment which may be required for that purpose should, subject to well-known general principles governing this matter, be allowed. It has been held that apart from the question of limitation, it is unjust to a plaintiff to put him to the great expense of a new suit when a reasonable amendment, not inconsistent with his case as it originally stood, might equally well answer his purpose as the new suit." (45 Cal., 305).

(2) As the delay in returning the plaint was the delay of the Court, the plaintiffs were entitled to be given credit for the time between the date of the order for return of the plaint and the date of the actual return thereof. Section 53, C. P. C., [Or. VII, r. 10] contemplates that the order for the return of the plaint and the actual return of the plaint must be made on the same date, and this shows that unless the Court was prepared to deliver out the plaint immediately the order for its return was made—in the case on 21-4-1088—the Court was not justified in dating its order for the return of the plaint on 21-4-1088.— 34 T. (= 17 T. L. J., 161).

20. Where a Court being of opinion that the allegation of fraud in a plaint was not specific and circumstantial, dismissed the suit :

Held.—The dismissal was not the proper mode of disposal of the suit ; but the Court should have either allowed or ordered an amendment or rejected the plaint.

"With regard to fraud, if there be any principle which is perfectly well settled, it is that general allegations, however strong may be the words in which they are stated, are insufficient even to amount to an averment of fraud of which any Court ought to take notice. There can be no objection to the use of such general words as 'fraud' or 'collusion', but they are quite ineffectual to give a fraudulent color to the particular statements of the fact in the plaint, unless these statements, taken by themselves, are such as to imply that a fraud has actually been committed.........If the Judge did not allow an amendment, he ought to have rejected the plaint. That would have enabled the plaintiff to present a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action if he found himself in a position at any future time to make averments which would give relevancy to his action."— 35 T. L. R., 32.

21. After the passing of an ex parte decree in a suit for declaration of title to and possession of plaint property, the defendant entered on the property and the suit was reopened at his instance. The plaintiff then sought to amend his plaint by inserting therein a prayer for recovery of possession which was refused:—

Held.—The amendment prayed for should have been granted.

No appeal lay against an order refusing the amendment.— 36 T. L. R., 118
(=10 T. L. J., 246).

22. An amendment setting up a claim which a party has precluded himself from insisting on, will not be allowed (F. B.)— 11 T. L. J., 1.

23. When the Court is convinced that it will be only promoting justice by allowing the prayer for amendment made by the plaintiff, the application will be allowed.— 37 T. L R., 186
(= 11 T. L. J., 213).

24. The plaintiffs and the defendant formed a trading firm. The plaintiffs brought the suit on behalf of the firm to recover from the defendant the value of some paddy alleged to have been lent to the defendant by the firm. The defendant denied receipt of the paddy. The primary Court allowed the suit. On appeal to the District Court, the defendant contended for the first time that the suit as framed was not maintainable, as the plaintiff's remedy was for a general account in respect of the partnership. The District Court accepted the contention and, in reversal of the decree of the primary Court, remanded the suit for trial and decision de novo after getting the plaint amended as one for partnership accounts. Against this order the defendant appealed to the High Court.

The High Court (while upholding the order of the District Court):

Held.—The provisions as to amendment are those given in Section 49 of the Code of the Civil Procedure: and the limit provided there is that a plaint shall not be so amended as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character: but within the limit thus laid down any amendment should be allowed, unless the party applying is acting mala fide or his blunder has done some injury to his opponent which cannot be compensated for by costs or otherwise.

"All rules of Court are nothing but provisions intended to secure the proper administration of Justice, and it is, therefore, essential that they should be made to serve, and be subordinate to, that purpose, so that full powers of amendment must be enjoyed and should always be liberally exercised: but none the less no power has yet been given to enable one distinct cause of action to be substituted for another, nor to change, by means of amendment, the subject-matter of the suit."

"It is a well-established principle that the object of Courts is to decide the rights of the parties and not to punish them for mistakes they make in the conduct of their cases by deciding otherwise than in accordance with their right.........I know of no kind of error or mistake which if not fraudulent or intended to overreach, a Court ought not to correct, if it can be done without injustice to the other party. The Courts do not exist for the sake of discipline but for the sake of deciding matters in controversy, and I do not regard such amendments as a matter of favour or grace.......... It seems to me that as soon as it appears that the way in which a party has framed his case will not lead to a decision of the real matter in controversy, it is as much a matter of right on his part to have it corrected, if it can be done without injustice, as anything else in a case is a matter of right."

From these statements, two propositions may be deduced, viz., (1) an amendment should be allowed if it will not prejudice the other party in some way that cannot be compensated for by costs or otherwise: and (2) if the amendment will put the other side into such a position that it must be injured, or cannot get justice done, it ought not to be allowed. These afford the limit to the Court's discretion which is of necessity controlled by the condition laid down in the Section that the result of the amendment should not be to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character.— 11 T. L. J., 381.

25. Assuming that the plea of limitation is open to the defendant, it is not an inflexible rule that an amendment of the plaint should not be allowed which would deprive him of that plea. Peculiar circumstances may take a case out of the ordinary rule. Amendments have been allowed in such cases on the ground that if the plaintiff were left to bring a separate suit, it might be met by a plea of limitation, which was considered inequitable, under the circumstances. It cannot be said that the relief sought to be inserted in the plaint by the amendment alters the character of the suit or relates to a question which is foreign to the nature of the suit as originally framed. On the other hand, it relates to a question that is intimately connected with the relief claimed by the plaintiff, and is actually one that should be considered by the Court in determining whether the plaintiff is entitled to the relief claimed by him. The amendment, therefore, is necessary for the satisfactory disposal of the suit. The mere fact that the plaintiff omitted to pray for a specific relief as regards the assignment (of the hypothecation bond) impugned by the plaintiff as fraudulent and invalid is not a sufficient reason for refusing the amendment prayed for.

The Courts are to act with liberality in the matter of granting amendments and ought to correct all kinds of errors and mistakes which are not fraudulent or intended to overreach.— 14 T. L. J., 313.

Ref.—16 T. L. J., 517.
(= 17 T. L. J., 161).

26. Courts show considerable liberality in the matter of granting amendment of plaint to correct errors, mistakes, etc., which are not fraudulent.

The proviso to Section 49, C. P. C. imposes the only limitation to the power of the Court to grant amendment and that is that a suit of one character should not be altered into a suit of another and inconsistent character. Power is given to Courts to grant amendments so that the real controversy between the parties may be tried and ultimately justice may be done and to avoid multiplicity of suits.

Amendments have been allowed where a fresh suit on the date of amendment would otherwise be time-barred.—14 T. L. J., 543.

Ref.—16 T. L. J., 517.
17 T. L. J., 125.
43 T. L. R., 344
(= 17 T. L. J., 161).
Fol.—19 T. L. J., 170.

27. It is settled law that the Courts should be liberal in the matter of granting amendments of plaint provided such amendments are not fraudulent or would cause serious prejudice to the opposite party which could not be sufficiently compensated by costs, and provided also that the character of the suit is not altered by the amendment. Subject to the above limitations amendments should be freely granted, as the Courts sit to decide the real controversy between the parties, and as the policy of the law is to avoid multiplicity of suits.

There is no authority for the position that, under no circumstances can a plaintiff be allowed to take advantage of an acknowledgment not specifically set up in the plaint; much less for the position that a plaintiff could under no circumstances be allowed to amend his plaint so as to claim the benefit of a ground of exemption from limitation bar which has not been set up in the plaint as originally filed.— 16 T. L. J, 517.

28. Plaintiff sued for declaration of his title to and possession of the plaint property and for a perpetual injunction restraining defendants from entering upon the same and interfering with his peaceful enjoyment thereof and also for certain other reliefs. During the course of the suit, he prayed for an amendment of the plaint by the inclusion of a prayer for eviction on the basis of a trespass of 6-1-1099, i. e., after the date of suit.

Held.—The order refusing the leave to amend cannot be upheld. The inclusion of an additional prayer for recovery of possession contained in the application for the leave to amend would remove the defect in the form of the plaint based upon the absence of a consequential relief, on the strength of which the Judge below nonsuited the plaintiff in the case.

The following rules can be taken to correctly and exhaustively lay down the considerations that should weigh in dealing with applications for amendment :—

(1) Where the original omission is due to negligence, carelessness or accidental error, amendments of pleadings will always be allowed, unless allowing the amendment will place the other party at a disadvantage for which he cannot be adequately compensated by costs.

(2) Amendment should not be allowed when a claim or relief was deliberately omitted.

18. If a party who has obtained an order for leave to amend does not amend accordingly within the time limited for that purpose by the order, or if no time is thereby limited, then within fourteen days from the date of the order, he shall not be permitted to amend after the expiration of such limited time as aforesaid or of such fourteen days, as the case may be, unless the time is extended by the Court.

Failure to amend after order.

(3) An amendment of pleadings must be allowed where it is necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties.

(4) Amendment should be refused where the application for amendment is not made in good faith, and the application is made at such a late stage of the case that, if granted, the plaintiff may be injured, because the defendant would without notice raise a totally different and inconsistent case which the plaintiff has not sufficient opportunity to meet.

(5) An amendment should be refused where it is such as will materially alter or transform the nature of the suit.

(6) Leave to amend pleadings should be refused where the amendment is merely technical or is immaterial.

Events subsequent to the filing of suits could be taken into account by Courts in appropriate cases in granting reliefs claimed in suits before them. In exceptional cases, a Court could, in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction, afford relief on the basis of altered conditions after suit. The power of the Court to grant the reliefs rendered necessary by reason of the altered conditions after suit, to make the same appropriate and effective and to shorten litigation has been recognised (42 T. L. R., 128). Ordinarily such reliefs should not be granted to a plaintiff who had no cause of action at date of suit. But the same could however be allowed in very exceptional circumstances. In the peculiar nature of the present action, an adjudication on the claim to the above relief has to be considered necessary for the avoidance of multiplicity of suits, and the application has therefore to be treated as deserving exceptional treatment.

Even accepting for argument's sake that the prayer for a permanent injunction claimed by way of consequential relief in the plaint as originally framed was incompetent, and the suit in the form in which it was originally presented was bad, the rejection of the application for amendment could not be supported as proper. The Judge ought to have exercised the discretion allowed him in law and granted the amendment prayed for by the plaintiff. Amendment is a mere matter of form, which could not affect the merits, or transform the nature of a suit. Even if the plaintiff had been guilty of laches, he could have been only mulcted with costs, and not punished by a refusal to grant the leave applied for by him. If the leave to amend is otherwise permissible, the defect in the form of the plaint as originally presented could not warrant the refusal of such leave. The fact that the trespass occurred long after the filing of the suit clearly showed that the plaintiff was not guilty of any laches in making the prayer.—43 T. L. R., 344 (= 17 T. L. J., 161).

I. 1. Section 50 (d) of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—"50. The plaint shall be rejected in the following cases:—

ORDER VII.

Plaint.

Particulars to be contained in plaint.

1. The plaint shall contain the following particulars :—

(a) the name of the Court in which the suit is brought;

(b) the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff;

(c) the name, description and place of residence of the defendant, so far as they can be ascertained;

(d) where the plaintiff or the defendant is a minor or a person of unsound mind, a statement to that effect;

(e) the facts constituting the cause of action and when it arose;

(f) the facts showing that the Court has jurisdiction;

(g) the relief which the plaintiff claims;

(h) where the plaintiff has allowed a set-off or relinquished a portion of his claim, the amount so allowed or relinquished; and

(i) a statement of the value of the subject-matter of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction and of court-fees, so far as the case admits.

---

(d) If the plaint, having been returned for amendment within a time fixed by the Court, is not amended within such time."

2. The whole Section (50) is given under Order VII, Rule 11.

II. Rule 7 of Order XXVIII of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:— "7. If a party who has obtained an order for leave to amend does not amend accordingly within the time limited for that purpose by the order, or if no time is thereby limited, then within fourteen days from the date of the order, such order to amend shall, on the expiration of such limited time as aforesaid, or of such fourteen days, as the case may be, become ipso facto void, unless the time is extended by the Court or a Judge."

Or. VII, r. 1 [= S. 46, Para 1
= Or. VII, r. 1]

I. Section 46 of Regulation II of 1065 is spread over several Rules in this Order. The Section as a whole is given below, and references to Paras thereof are made under the corresponding Rules.

"46. Particulars to be contained in plaint.—The plaint must contain the following particulars:—

(a) the name of the Court in which the suit is brought;

(b) the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff;

(c) the name, description and place of residence of the defendant so far as they can be ascertained;

(d) a plain and concise statement of the circumstances constituting the cause of action, and where and when it arose;

(e) a demand of the relief which the plaintiff claims; and

(f) if the plaintiff has allowed a set-off or relinquished a portion of his claim, the amount so allowed or relinquished.

In money suits.—If the plaintiff seeks the recovery of money, the plaint must state the precise amount, so far as the case admits.

In a suit for mesne profits, and in a suit for the amount which will be found due to the plaintiff on taking unsettled accounts between him and the defendant, the plaint need only state approximately the amount sued for.

Where plaintiff sues as representative.—When the plaintiff sues in a representative character, the plaint should show not only that he has an actual existing interest in the subject-matter but that he has taken steps necessary to enable him to institute a suit concerning it.

Illustration.

A sues as B's executor. The plaint must state that A has proved B's will.

Defendant's interest and liability to be shown.—The plaint must show that the defendant is or claims to be interested in the subject-matter, and that he is liable to be called upon to answer the plaintiff's demand.

Illustration.

A dies, leaving B his executor, C his legatee, and D a debtor to A's estate. C sues D to compel him to pay his debt in satisfaction of C's legacy. The plaint must show that B has causelessly refused to sue D, or that B and D have colluded for the purpose of defrauding C, or other such circumstances rendering D liable to C.

Grounds of exemption from limitation law.—If the cause of action arose beyond the period ordinarily allowed by any law for instituting the suit, the plaint must show the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed.

II. Rule 1 of Order VII corresponds to the first Para of the above Section. Clauses (d), (f) and (i) are new.

Case Law.

1. A civil suit is not a proper remedy for an intended criminal offence. When a man who says he has the title also alleges that he is in possession of all his rights, he is not entitled to sue for a declaration. The defendant's denial of plaintiff's right, in his written statement could not justify the suit which must be founded on a cause of action that had accrued prior to date of suit.— 9 T. L. R., 33.

Dist.—12 T. L. R., 113.
Ref.—1 T. L. J., 92.
Fol.—2 S. D., 230.

2. Several items of damages claimed in the plaint are the income which the plaintiff would have received within the year preceding the plaint, had no wrongful attachment and seizure of property taken place. But they furnish no fresh cause of action.— 9 T. L. R., 135.

3. Particulars of fraud must be alleged in the plaint. Vague allegations are not enough.— 2 S. D., 165.

4. When fraud is charged against a defendant, it is an acknowledged rule of pleading that the plaintiff must set forth the particulars of the fraud which he alleges.— 35 T. L. R., 41.

2. Where the plaintiff seeks the recovery of money, the plaint shall state the precise amount claimed :

In money suits.

But where the plaintiff sues for mesne profits, or for an amount which will be found due to him on taking unsettled accounts between him and the defendant, the plaint shall state approximately the amount sued for.

3. Where the subject-matter of the suit is immovable property, the plaint shall contain a description of the property sufficient to identify it, and, in case such property can be identified by boundaries or numbers in a record of settlement or survey, the plaint shall specify such boundaries or numbers.

When the subject-matter of the suit is immovable property.

---

5. A greater relief asked for in the plaint includes the lesser relief, and it can be granted.— 40 T. L. R., 127.

6. An averment of undue influence would not be bad in law, merely because it is put forward as the means whereby a fraud was perpetrated.— 15 T. L. J., 440.

7. Where a decree has been obtained fraudulently against a party, a subsequent suit for damages sustained thereby by the party against whom the prior suit was decreed, is not sustainable in the absence of a specific prayer in it, to set aside the prior decree on the ground of fraud.— 18 T. L. J., 541.

Or. VII, r. 2 [= S. 46, Paras 2 & 3 = Or. VII, r. 2]

For Paras 2 and 3 of the old Section 46, see under Rule 1 above.

Case Law.

The plaintiff, the Muthalpidi of a Devaswom, sued the defendants, the Adhikaris thereof, for recovery of monies due on accounts.

With regard to the procedure to be followed:

Held.—Where the account books produced by the plaintiff are repudiated as not being a correct record, the procedure to be followed would be to call upon the plaintiff to file a statement showing details of the receipts and the disbursements during his stewardship, showing the extent to which he has been out of pocket in meeting such expenses. If any extraordinary expenses had been incurred, the authority for the same may also be required to be specified. The defendants should thereafter be required to file a counter statement, specifying the amounts which according to them had come into the hands of the plaintiff under the various items of receipts and such additional amounts, if any, that had been received by him under items not referred to by the plaintiff. A similar statement should also be called for as regards disbursements. Upon receipt of these two statements, the Court should determine the points of difference between the parties, allow them to adduce such evidence as they may with respect thereto and thereafter decide how the accounts would stand with reference to such items. Even if, as in the case, any debt has been alleged to be discharged, the truth or otherwise of the plea will have to be determined and its binding nature on the defendant decided.— 44 T. L. R., 334.

---

When plaintiff sues as representative.

4. Where the plaintiff sues in a representative character, the plaint shall show not only that he has an actual existing interest in the subject-matter, but that he has taken the steps (if any) necessary to enable him to institute a suit concerning it.

Defendant's interest and liability to be shown.

5. The plaint shall show that the defendant is or claims to be interested in the subject-matter, and that he is liable to be called upon to answer the plaintiff's demand.

Grounds of exemption from limitation law.

6. Where the suit is instituted after the expiration of the period prescribed by the law of limitation, the plaint shall show the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed.

Case Law.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration of his title to property belonging to an undivided Konkani family following the Hindu Law of the Benares School, and purchased by him under a decree for money passed against two of the senior members thereof. It was contended that plaintiff could not recover more than the shares of his decree-debtors on the ground that they were not sued in their capacity as managers of their family and that the other co-parceners were not parties to the plaintiff's decree.

Held.—Para 4 of Section 46 of the Civil Procedure Code does not apply to defendants sued in a representative character.—

Or. VII, r. 6 [ = S. 46, Para 6 =Or VII, r. 6 ]

For para 6 of the old Section 46, see under Rule 1 Supra.

Case Law.

1. Under the last Clause of Section 46, C. P. C., (old), if the cause of action arose beyond the period ordinarily allowed by any law for instituting the suit, the plaint must show the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed. The plaintiff was bound to have mentioned in his plaint the particular acknowledgment or acknowledgments made during the currency of the ordinary limitation period which would have given a fresh starting point of limitation and save the suit from bar (F. B.).—
(= 10 T. L. J., 420).

2. If the plaintiff really meant to rely upon any acknowledgment, he should have distinctly referred to it in his plaint as required by Section 46. No reference had been made in the plaint to any acknowledgment having been made so as to save the claim from limitation, and the plaintiff cannot take advantage of any ground of exemp-

Relief to be specifically stated.

7. Every plaint shall state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims either simply or in the alternative, and it shall not be necessary to ask for general or other relief which may always be given as the Court may think just to the same extent as if it had been asked for. And the same rule shall apply to any relief claimed by the defendant in his written statement.

---

tion from the law of limitation which had not been set up in the plaint.—

37 T. L. R., 19
(= 10 T. L. J., 468).

Dist.—17 T. L. J., 286.
Ref.—16 T. L. J., 517.

3. The plaintiff relied, in the case, on an acknowledgment made by the defendant's mother, to save the suit from limitation. This acknowledgment was not specifically pleaded in the plaint. It was necessary for the plaintiff to do so only in the event of his suit being prima facie time-barred upon the allegations contained in the plaint. According to the allegations in the plaint, there arose no question of limitation, and the omission to specially rely on any such ground was not fatal to the plaintiff's case.

(= 11 T. L. J., 207).

4. The last paragraph of Section 46 has to be given a liberal interpretation. If the facts that form the basis of the claim for exemption are referred to in the plaint, the requirements of the statute should be taken to have been satisfied, even though a specific statement is not contained in the plaint that those facts it is that take the case out of the ambit of the ordinary rule of limitation. The British Indian Courts appear to have always acted liberally in this matter and allowed one ground of exemption to be pleaded, though not specifically set up, in case exemption had been claimed on a different though not inconsistent ground. "When a plaintiff does satisfy the requirements of the Section by stating what is in his opinion the ground upon which he intends to get over the bar of limitation, he ought not to be precluded from taking another and not inconsistent ground should he be later advised that the latter is the true ground." (10 Bom., 846). The decisions in the British Indian cases tend to show that the tendency there is to give the statutory provision of the Code a liberal construction, and if one of the grounds of exemption is set out in the plaint, a reason different from the one assigned in the plaint could be validly urged by the plaintiff to show that his suit is within time, if such plea is set up in time to enable the other side to meet the same. Section 46 only requires the ground of exemption to be set out in the plaint in such cases, but does not prohibit any other ground to be pleaded on that behalf, if the raising of such plea will not contravene the provisions of the Code.

17 T. L. J., 386.

5. The object of the Legislature in requiring the ground of exemption from limitation to be stated in the plaint where the suit is filed after expiry of the period of limitation, is obviously to enable the defendant to meet it in his defence and at the trial. Where the statement made in the plaint was sufficiently intelligible to the defendant who has answered it in his written statement without taking any exception to its sufficiency or otherwise, the above object has been substantially achieved.

Objection based on plaintiff's failure to set out in plaint the ground of exemption from limitation or on its defect must be taken in the trial Court and it should not be allowed to be raised for the first time in the Court of final resort.— 43 T. L. R., 419
(=18 T. L. J., 213).

Relief founded on separate grounds.

8. Where the plaintiff seeks relief in respect of several distinct claims or causes of action founded upon separate and distinct grounds, they shall be stated, as far as may be, separately and distinctly.

Rule 6 of Order XX of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—

"6. Every statement of claim shall state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims, either simply or in the alternative, and it shall not be necessary to ask for general or other relief, which may always be given, as the Court or a Judge may think just, to the same extent as if it had been asked for. And the same rule shall apply to any counter-claim made, or relief claimed by the defendant, in his defence."

Case Law.

1. Certain immovable property belonging to the plaintiff was sold in execution of an ex parte decree obtained against him. It was alleged that he had no notice of the suit, nor of the attachment and sale, and that the ex parte decree and execution proceedings were fraudulent. He sued to recover the property so sold, but did not seek for any relief as regards the decree.

Held.—The omission to seek for cancellation of the decree was fatal to the relief sought for, and the validity of the decree could not, in the circumstances of the case, be considered even incidentally.— 10 T. L. R., 4.

Dist.—17 T. L. R., 143.

2. Judgments and decrees relate to the state of things at the date of the suit. It is an elementary principle that a plaintiff who seeks possession must show that at the date of suit he was entitled to such relief.— 2 T. L. J., 145.

3. Where the original relief claimed has, by change of circumstances, become inappropriate, Courts may take into consideration events that have happened since the date of suit in deciding what should be the appropriate relief that should be decreed.— 35 T. L. R., 155.

Rule 7 of Order XX of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—

Procedure on admitting plaint.

Concise statements.

9. (1) The plaintiff shall endorse on the plaint, or annex thereto, a list of the documents (if any) which he has produced along with it; and, if the plaint is admitted, shall present as many copies on plain paper of the plaint as there are defendants, unless the Court by reason of the length of the plaint or the number of the defendants, or for any other sufficient reason, permits him to present a like number of concise statements of the nature of the claim made, or of the relief claimed in the suit, in which case he shall present such statements.

(2) Where the plaintiff sues, or the defendant or any of the defendants is sued, in a representative capacity, such statements shall show in what capacity the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued.

(3) The plaintiff may, by leave of the Court, amend such statements so as to make them correspond with the plaint.

(4) The chief ministerial officer of the Court shall sign such list and copies or statements if, on examination, he finds them to be correct.

"7. Where the plaintiff seeks relief in respect of several distinct claims or causes of complaint founded upon separate and distinct grounds, they shall be stated, as far as may be, separately and distinctly. Or. VII, r. 9 [ = S. 54 = Or. VII, r. 9]

I. 1. Section 54 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—

"54. Procedure on admitting plaint.—The plaintiff shall endorse on the plaint, or annex thereto, a memorandum of the documents (if any) which he has produced along with it ; and, if the plaint be admitted, shall present as many concise statements of the nature of the claim made and of the relief or remedy required in the suit, as there are defendants,

If the plaintiff sues, or the defendant or any of the defendants is sued in a representative capacity, such statements shall show in what capacity the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued,

The plaintiff may, by leave of the Court, amend such statements so as to make them correspond with the plaint.

The chief ministerial officer of the Court shall sign such memorandum and statements if, on examination, he finds them to be correct."

2. This Section has also another (last) Para for which see under Order IV, Rule 2.

3. The Statement of Objects and Reasons said :—" Section 58 (old Indian Code), as amended, relieves the plaintiff from the task of furnishing the defendants with copies of the plaint. It entails much labour and expense on the plaintiff without commensurate advantage to the defendants. The concise statements referred to in this

II. "In Rule 9, it is provided that copies of plaints are required to be filed, along with the plaint, except when the Court grants exemption. At present, it is only an abstract of the plaint that is required to be filed. It is well known that owing to the provision now in force, long and numerous adjournments are obtained on the ground that copies of plaints had not been given. This delay can now be avoided. In certain cases, however, where this would entail disproportionate and unnecessary hardship, the Court is given power to grant exemption, and allow the filing of concise statements only."— Notes on Clauses.

I. Sub-Rule (1).—See Sections 14 to 19 inclusive, for the Court in which a suit should be instituted.

II. Section 53 of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"53. When plaint shall be returned to be presented to proper Court.—The plaint shall be returned to be presented to the proper Court in the following cases :—

(a) if a suit has been instituted in a Court whose grade is lower or higher than that of the Court competent to try it, where such Court exists, or where no option as to the selection of the Court is allowed by law ;

(b) if, in a suit relating to immovable property, but not coming under the Proviso to Section 12, it appears that no part of such property is situate within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court to which the plaint is presented ;

(c) if, in any other case, it appears that the cause of action did not arise, and that none of the defendants are dwelling, or carrying on business, or personally working for gain, within such local limits.

Procedure on returning plaint.—On returning a plaint, the Judge shall, with his own hand, endorse thereon the date of its presentation and return, the name of the party presenting it, and a brief statement of the reason for returning it."

Case Law.

1. Where in a suit filed, it is found in the course of the trial that the suit is beyond the jurisdiction of the Court and there is no reason to question the bona fides of the plaintiff, the plaint ought to be returned to the plaintiff to be filed in the proper Court giving him credit for the fee already paid.— 1 T. L. R., 61.

Ref.—29 T. L. R., 148 (=4 T. L. J., 4).

2. When a Court finds that it has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit, the plaint ought to be returned to the plaintiff to enable him to present it to the Court that has jurisdiction.— 1 T. L. R., 96.

Fol.—8 T. L. R., 161.

3. Where a plaint filed in one Court is returned to be presented to another Court, it is not competent to the plaintiff to put in a fresh suit with an altered cause of action or a prayer for additional relief. He is bound to present the identical plaint returned, with any addition made that may have been ordered by the Court.—

4. Plaintiff brought a suit in the Zillah Court. The Zillah Judge ordered the plaint to be returned to be presented to the Munsiff's Court where the suit was filed and decided. In appeal, the Judge who heard the case, finding the suit to be beyond the Munsiff's pecuniary jurisdiction, dismissed it with costs throughout.

Held.—The Zillah Judge should file the plaint as an original suit in his Court and try it on the merits, giving credit for the instititution fees plaintiff had paid in the Munsiff's Court.

When a suit has proceeded to judgment in a wrong Court (i. e., which is ultimately found to have had no jurisdiction to try it) owing to the default of the party, an order of dismissal may be passed, as the party must then take the consequence of his own carelessness. But when the procedure in the wrong Court is due solely to the mistake of the superior Court before which the suit was rightly brought in the first instance, the party cannot be visited with the consequences of a procedure for which he was not in any way responsible. In such cases, though the proceedings without jurisdiction ought to be cancelled, it is nothing but equitable that the plaintiff must be given credit for the institution fees that he has paid into the wrong Court under the orders of the Court which ought to have filed the plaint in the first instance.—

5. The value of a suit to set aside a Court sale is not the amount of the sale proceeds but is the market value of the property sold. In special appeal, it was discovered that the value of the suit was not correctly made. The mistake in the valuation was purely due to a misconception of the law not only on the part of the plaintiff but also on the part of the other party and the two lower Courts. The decrees of the lower Courts were therefore, set aside and plaint returned to the plaintiff to be presented to the Zillah Court with the additional Court fee to cover the present valuation of the suit.— 8 T. L. R., 166.

6. In returning plaints to be presented to the proper Court, no Court can extend the time limited by express law.—

7. When a Court finds reasons to suspect that a particular item in the valuation is incorrectly put in to bring a suit within its jurisdiction, it is justified in returning the plaint in default of plaintiff's proving the valuation to be correct.

Where, therefore, a plaint was returned by a District Judge on the ground that when interest was calculated to the extent of half the principal, the claim fell below the Court's jurisdiction.

Held.—(1) The order of return was correct.

(2) A mistake as to the item claimable for interest is analogous to mistakes as to market values of properties as to which, if made in good faith, credit is allowed for the fees paid to the wrong Court.—

8. Plaintiff sued for renewal of a Kanom granted by a Devaswom in respect of certain properties. The defendant contended that the real object of plaintiff's suit was to establish plaintiff's alleged right as sole trustee to the properties of the Devaswom. It was found by the Munsiff before whom the suit was filed, after taking evidence, that the real object of the plaintiff's suit was, as contended for by the defendant, and the plaint was accordingly returned for presentation to the District Court, as the value of the properties of the Devaswom was admittedly above Rs. 6,000. On appeal, the District Judge confirmed the Munsiff's order,

11. The plaint shall be rejected in the following cases :—

Rejection of plaint.

(a) where it does not disclose a cause of action ;

(b) where the relief claimed is undervalued, and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to correct the valuation within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so ;

(c) where the relief claimed is properly valued, but the plaint is written upon paper insufficiently stamped, and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to supply the requisite stamp-paper within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so ;

(d) where the suit appears from the statement in the plaint to be barred by any law.

---

In revision, it was contended that the Munsiff should have rejected the plaint under Section 50 C. P. C. [Or. VII, r. 11], and not returned it under Section 53 (a).

Held.—The order of the Munsiff was correct.

It is only when the relief claimed is undervalued, and the plaintiff fails to correct the value as required by the Court, that the plaint can be rejected under Section 50. But in the case, the relief nominally claimed in the plaint was properly valued, but it was found by the Court that the real object of the suit was for declaration of plaintiff's alleged title to the Devaswom. The value of the Devaswom properties on which the plaintiff had to pay institution fees for getting such a declaration being admittedly above Rs. 6,000, Section 53 (a) properly applied and the order returning the plaint for presentation to the proper Court was correct. "When the decision is that the Court has no jurisdiction, that is a decision that the plaint ought not really to have been admitted. It ought to have been returned."—

29 T. L. R., *148
(= 4. T. L. J., 4).

9. The original plaint was returned to the plaintiff by the District Court and a fresh plaint with certain amendments was presented to the Munsiff. With this fresh plaint, the plaintiff also filed the old returned plaint and got credit under the Court Fees Regulation for the Court-fee paid into the District Court on the latter plaint. This fact does not, however, constitute the second suit a continuation of the first, as under the Law of Limitation, the re-instituted suit is regarded as an independent one in all respects except that, under certain conditions, the time requisite for going from Court to Court is excluded in computing the period of limitation. The reinstituted suit is a new suit, and is governed by the law applicable to it at the time of the re-institution.—

(a) if the relief sought is undervalued, and the plaintiff, on being required by the Court to correct the valuation within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so ;

(b) if the relief sought is properly valued, but the institution fee prescribed by law is not paid in part or whole, and the plaintiff, on being required to pay the amount of the fee due within a time to be fixed by the Court, fails to do so in the manner required by law for the time being in force ;

(c) if the suit appears from the statement in the plaint to be barred by any positive rule of law ;

(d) if the plaint, having been returned for amendment within a time fixed by the Court, is not amended within such time."

2. See Order VI, Rule 18, re last Clause (d) of the above Section.

Case Law.

1. The following question was referred to a Full Bench :—"Whether Section 50 of the Civil Procedure Code read with Section 4 of the Limitation Regulation and Section 8 of the Court Fees Regulation, permits a party who has presented an appeal memorandum within time to pay the Court fee on it after the period prescribed by law has expired and whether it is obligatory on a Court, before rejecting an appeal as barred by time, to give notice to the appellant to pay the necessary fee within a certain time."

Held.—An appeal memorandum unaccompanied by any fee is not a document of which judicial notice can be taken, except in cases specially provided for by law and the Court is not bound to give notice to the appellant before rejecting such appeal (F. B.).—

2. The dismissal of a claim for set-off is like the rejection of a plaint under Section 50 for non-payment of court-fees. The default is one which cannot be cured in appeal.— 2 S. D., *188.

3. (1) When a plaint is presented within the prescribed period of limitation on a paper insufficiently stamped and time is given by the Court to make good the deficiency, the suit is not barred by limitation if the deficiency is supplied within the time fixed by the Court but after the limitation period has expired.

Per Ramachandra Row, J.—Section 50 provides that the Court should fix a time for the payment, and if it is not paid within such time, the plaint should be rejected. That this is the procedure to be adopted even when no part of the fee has been paid is clear from Clause (b) of the Section. The forced construction put upon this Clause in 14 T. L. R., 102 appears to be the best proof of the correctness of the objection to such construction. * * The mischief of the reasoning in the 14 T. L. R. case, consists in the assumption that a plaint in fact is not such if the prescribed fee is not paid. The unsoundness of this assumption will appear clearly when it is remembered that Sections 7 and 8 of the Court Fees Regulation do not provide that the additional fees should not be collected after the expiry of the period of limitation. * * It seems to be no matter how or why the plaint was received in Court without the payment of the fee payable on it. The Legislature did not think it necessary to provide that an enquiry should be held to ascertain if the omission was honest or dishonest on the part of the party. On the other hand, it has expressly provided that the plaint shall be rejected on the plaintiff's omission to pay the fee within a time to be fixed by the Court. This appears to support the view that the intention of the Legislature is not that the omission to pay the fee in the first instance should be followed by a dismissal of the suit, without giving notice to the plaintiff to pay the balance in a given time. * * The Legislature was particular only about the collection of the full fee so that the public revenue may not be affected. When once that condition is fulfilled, it allows the parties the opportunity to have their proceedings carried on without any let or hindrance.

(2) The object of the Court Fees Regulation being purely fiscal, it cannot be read into the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code or the Limitation Regulation (F. B.).

(=3 T. L. J., 85).

4. Section 50 of the Civil Procedure Code did not prescribe any limitation as to the stage at or the time within which the powers given to the Court by that Section should be exercised. The fact that the Munsiff in the prior suit had expressed his findings on the issues raised and had indicated in his judgment the terms of the decree to be passed, in case the plaintiff obeyed the order of the Court for the payment of additional Court fee within the time specified, did not render Section 50 inapplicable. An order under this Section may be passed at any stage of the suit.—

I. For failure to produce documents, see Rule 18 Infra.

II. Great laxity is shown by the subordinate Courts in the matter of production of documents, in spite of the salutary and imperative provisions of Sections 55 to 59, 133 and 134 of the Code of 1065, corresponding to Rules 14 to 18 of Order VII and Rules 1 and 2 of Order XIII. Under Rule 1 of Order XIII, the parties or their pleaders are enjoined strictly to produce at the first hearing of the suit all the documentary evidence of every description in their possession or power, on which they intend to rely, while under the Code of 1065 (Section 133), they were required only to have such documents with them in readiness to be produced when called for by the Court. Even under the old Code, under the Sadr Court Proceedings dated 20-3-1041, it was pointed out that punctuality in the matter of the time of production of documents should be enforced, and that when parties asked for an extension of time for their production, the same should be regulated by a definite order from the Court, and this should not generally be admitted unless produced within the time specially granted. In Civil Circular No. 37 of 1079, the High Court laid down that laxity in the reception of documents in evidence at irregular stages regardless of the provisions of Section 133, as far as possible be avoided. Under Article 68 of the Civil Courts Guide, now in force, it has been made obligatory on the part of the Courts to call upon the defendant to file a list of documents proposed to be relied on by him and fix a time for its production, in cases where the production of the documents themselves is not directed. It is highly desirable that the above provisions are rigidly enforced, and the provisions of the Code relating to inspection and discovery of documents and interrogatories are availed of as far as possible, so as to enable the Courts to narrow the compass of the disputes between the parties as much as possible."—

17. (1) Where the document on which the plaintiff sues is an entry in a shop-book or other account in his possession or power, the plaintiff shall produce the book or account at the time of filing the plaint, together with a copy of the entry on which he relies.

Original entry to be marked and returned.

(2) The Court, or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, shall forthwith mark the document for the purpose of identification; and, after examining and comparing the copy with the original, shall, if it is found correct, certify it to be so and return the book to the plaintiff and cause the copy to be filed.

ORDER VIII.

Written Statement and Set-off.

Written statement.

1. The defendant may, and, if so required by the Court, shall, at or before the first hearing or within such time as the Court may permit, present a written statement of his defence.

New facts must be specially pleaded.

2. The defendant must raise by his pleading all matters which show the suit not to be maintainable, or that the transaction is either void or voidable in point of law, and all such grounds of defence as, if not raised, would be likely to take the opposite party by surprise, or would raise issues of fact not arising out of the plaint, as, for instance, fraud, limitation, release, payment, performance, or facts showing illegality.

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 ran as follows :—

"105. Written statements.—The parties may, at any time before or at the first hearing of the suit, tender written statements of their respective cases, and the Court shall receive such statements and place them on the record."

II. As to the contents of written statements, see Order VI, Rule 2, and also Rule 7 Infra.

Case Law.

1. Generally, objections which are not declared by law imperatively to operate as legal bar to actions, such as limitation, and which may or may not be allowed by Courts in the exercise of discretionary powers vested in them by law, should be taken by the parties interested in doing so, at the earliest opportunity and pressed upon the Court's attention at the different stages of the action. Omission to notice such objections on the part of the Courts, when the parties do not urge them, or waive them either by express words or by conduct, would not be serious irregularity to warrant interference with the final decisions, if otherwise sound.— 9 T. L. R., 17.

2. No party can be allowed to plead contrary to the pleas successfully urged by him in a former litigation against his adversary. The effect of a contrary doctrine would be to bring the administration of justice into ridicule.— 9 T. L. R., 177.

3. It is open to the defendant to raise inconsistent defences, and if in fact defendant wants to set the plea (in the case, the plea denying the genuineness of the pro-note and impugning the assignment to plaintiff as fraudulent), he should have been asked to put in a written statement and plaintiff should have been given opportunity to rebut defendant's evidence on the issue.— 18 T. L. R., 179.

4. A plea cannot be entertained in appeal, if it has not been specifically taken in the Court of first instance.—15 T. L. J., 427.

Or. VIII, r. 2 [= „ = Or. VIII, r. 2] = En. O. 19, r. 15]

I. Rule 15 of Order XIX of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is as follows:—

3. It shall not be sufficient for a defendant in his written statement to deny generally the grounds alleged by the plaintiff, but the defendant must deal specifically with each allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth, except damages.

Denial to be specific.

"15. The defendant or plaintiff (as the case may be) must raise by his pleading all matters which show the action or counter-claim not to be maintainable, or that the transaction is either void or voidable in point of law, and all such grounds of defence or reply, as the case may be, as if not raised would be likely to take opposite party by surprise, or would raise issues of fact not arising out of the preceding pleadings, as, for instance, fraud, Statute of Limitations, release, payment, performance, facts showing illegality either by statute or common law or Statute of Frauds."

"This Rule enforces what is one of the cardinal principles of the present system of pleading a defence or reply. The principle that all denials or traverses in a decree or a reply to a counter-claim should be specific and not evasive is dealt with by rr. 13, 17 and 19 [see under Rules 5, 3 and 4]. This Rule and r. 20 [see Rule 8 of Order VI] deal with affirmative defences and replies, and defences and replies in confession and avoidance, and enforce another cardinal principle, which is that all such defences and replies must be specifically pleaded so that the opposite party may know exactly what case he has to meet at the trial."—

Yearly Practice for 1925.

II. A plea raised on the doctrine of caveat emptor ought to be specifically put forward. This was not done by the defendants who, by their failure to contest the suit, must be held to have waived the plea and allowed the suit to be at least partially decreed ex parte against them.—

I. 1. "The Rule renders it obligatory to make denials specific, and not general, as is very often the practice now."—

2. Under Rule 5, every allegation of fact in the plaint will be taken to be admitted, if it is not denied specifically or by necessary implication or stated to be not admitted.

II. Rule 17 of Order XIX of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, as amended, is as follows:—

"17. It shall not be sufficient for a defendant in his defence to deny generally the grounds alleged by the statement of claim or for a plaintiff in his reply to deny generally the grounds alleged in a defence by way of counterclaim, but each party must deal specifically with each allegation of fact of which he does not admit the truth except damages."

"This Rule and rr. 13 and 19 [see under Rules 5 and 4] enforce the first cardinal principle of the present system of pleading a defence to a statement of claim or a reply to a counterclaim which is that traverses or denials must not be vague or general or evasive, but must be specific and must deal specifically with each allegation of fact, and as regards each must answer the point of substance."— Yearly Practice for 1925.

Case Law.

The suit was on a promissory note executed by defendant to plaintiff, for Rs. 198 towards remuneration for the services of plaintiff as Vakil, undertaking to pay interest at twelve per cent, per annum.

Evasive denial.

4. Where a defendant denies an allegation of fact in the plaint, he must not do so evasively, but answer the point of substance. Thus, if it is alleged that he received a certain sum of money, it shall not be sufficient to deny that he received that particular amount, but he must deny that he received that sum or any part thereof, or else set out how much he received. And if an allegation is made with diverse circumstances, it shall not be sufficient to deny it along with those circumstances.

Specific denial.

5. Every allegation of fact in the plaint, if not denied specifically or by necessary implication, or stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted except as against a person under disability:

Provided that the Court may in its discretion require any fact so admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission.

The undertaking to pay interest from the date of the commencement of the engagement was held not unconscionable or legally unenforceable.

As regards the rate of interest, no specific contention was raised in the written statement by the defendant on this question. Even in the appeal memorandum before the lower Appellate Court, the defendant did not choose to question the propriety of the rate claimed in the plaint. The argument that, by denying liability for interest as a whole, the respondent must be taken to have disputed the rate of interest also could not be accepted as sound. If the defendant wanted to object to the rate of interest as being extortionate or excessive it was incumbent on him to raise it specifically. To allow him to raise the plea in second appeal would virtually be allowing him to spring the same by surprise on the other side.— 17 T. L. J., 428.

Particulars of set-off to be given in written statement.

6. (1) Where, in a suit for the recovery of money, the defendant claims to set off against the plaintiff's demand any ascertained sum of money legally recoverable by him from the plaintiff, not exceeding the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, and both parties fill the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit, the defendant may, at the first hearing of the suit, but not afterwards, unless permitted by the Court, present a written statement containing the particulars of the debt sought to be set off.

(2) The written statement shall have the same effect as a plaint in a cross-suit so as to enable the Court to pronounce a final judgment in respect both of the original claim and of the set-off; but this shall not affect the lien, upon the amount decreed, of any pleader in respect of the costs payable to him under the decree.

(3) The Rules relating to a written statement by a defendant apply to a written statement in answer to a claim of set-off.

C pays Rs. 1,000 as surety for D; then D sues C for the legacy. C cannot set off the debt of Rs. 1,000 against the legacy, for neither C nor D fills the same character with respect to the legacy as they fill with respect to payment of the Rs. 1,000.

(b) A dies intestate and in debt to B. C takes out administration to A's effects and B buys part of the effects from C. In a suit for the purchase-money by C against B, the latter cannot set off the debt against the price, for C fills two different characters, one as the vendor to B, in which he sues B and the other as representative to A.

Or. VIII, r. 6 [= S. 106 = Or. VIII, r. 6]

I. 1. Section 106 of Regulation II of 1065, corresponding to this Rule, ran as follows:—

"106. Particulars of set-off to be given in written statement.—If, in a suit for the recovery of money, the defendant claims to set-off against the plaintiff's demand any ascertained sum of money legally recoverable by him from the plaintiff, and if in such claim of the defendant against the plaintiff both parties fill the same character as they

(c) A sues B on a bill of exchange. B alleges that A has wrongfully neglected to insure B's goods and is liable to him in compensation which he claims to set off. The amount not being ascertained cannot be set off.

(d) A sues B on a bill of exchange for Rs. 500. B holds a judgment against A for Rs. 1,000. The two claims being both definite pecuniary demands may be set off.

(e) A sues B for compensation on account of trespass. B holds a promissory note for Rs. 1,000 from A and claims to set off that amount against any sum that A may recover in the suit. B may do so, for, as soon as A recovers, both sums are definite pecuniary demands.

(f) A and B sue C for Rs. 1,000. C cannot set off a debt due to him by A alone.

(g) A sues B and C for Rs. 1,000. B cannot set off a debt due to him alone by A.

(h) A owes the partnership firm of B and C Rs. 1,000. B dies leaving C surviving. A sues C for a debt of Rs. 1,500 due in his separate character. C may set off the debt of Rs. 1,000.

fill in the plaintiff's suit, the defendant may, at the first hearing of the suit, but not afterwards, unless permitted by the Court, tender a written statement containing the particulars of the debt sought to be set-off. Nothing in this Section shall be deemed to bar the right of set-off, where the cross demands are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable, in the opinion of the Court, to subject the defendant to the necessity of a cross suit.

Inquiry.—The Court shall thereupon inquire into the same, and if it finds that the case fulfils the requirements of the former part of this Section, and that the amount claimed to be set-off does not exceed the pecuniary limits of its jurisdiction, the Court shall set-off the one debt against the other :

Proviso.—Provided that the defendant may relinquish any portion of the amount claimed to be set-off so as to bring it within the pecuniary limits of the Court's jurisdiction, but he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion so relinquished.

Effect of set-off.—Such set-off shall have the same effect as a plaint in a cross-suit so as to enable the Court to pronounce a final judgment in the same suit, both on the original and on the cross-claim ; but it shall not affect the lien, upon the amount decreed, of any pleader in respect of the costs payable to him under the decree."

[Here follow Illustrations (a) to (h), the same as in the new Rule.]

2. The Proviso in the above Section and the second sentence in the first Para were additions not found in the corresponding Section 111 of the Indian Code of 1882. The object was thus explained :—"The Proviso gives to the defendant the option of foregoing any portion of the claim pleaded by him in set-off, in order to enable him to obtain a relief in the plaintiff's suit. In case of plaintiff's insolvency, the defendants often find it advantageous to avail themselves of the option. In order to prevent further litigation in respect of the same claim, it is provided, in accordance with the spirit of Section 46, that he shall not afterwards sue in respect of the portion relinquished. The other amendment in the Section is made in conformity with the rulings of the Courts on its construction."—S. O & R., Para 17.

Case Law.

1. The foreman of a Chitty paid the defendant, a prized subscriber, a portion of the Chitty amount and executed a bond for the balance. The defendant executed a security bond for punctual payment of future instalments. The defendant obtained a decree against the foreman for the balance money due under the latter's bond. If the foreman sued the defendant (subscriber) on his security bond, the latter is entitled to claim a set-off of the decree amount under the decree he had obtained against the foreman. To raise the plea of set-off is tantamount to filing a cross-suit. The Court is bound to set-off the smaller debt against the larger, and to make a final decree between the parties.—

2. Where the plaintiffs sued for the recovery of certain items of consideration recited in a sale deed executed by them to the 2nd defendant and the latter pleaded that he was entitled to set-off against the plaint sum the amount of Vilayartham he paid to the Government which assumed the property as the original owner died issueless :

Held.—As in cases of sales the law implies the existence of an implied covenant of title (Section 55, Clause 2, of the Transfer of Property Act) and as the escheat proceedings showed that the plaintiffs had no ownership of the properties sold, the second defendant was entitled to set-off the Vilayartham against the plaint amount.—

3. The foreman of a Chitty sued a subscriber for the instalments due from the date of default. The second defendant, the son of the defaulting subscriber (the first defendant) sought to set-off against the plaint amount the money due to himself from the foreman on account of subscriptions paid by him. The District Judge held that the set-off pleaded could not be allowed in the suit.

Held.—(1) The view taken by the District Judge was wrong, and the second defendant was entitled to plead a set-off of the separate debt due to himself from the plaintiff.

When the second defendant appeared as the heir of his father, his father's property (for the purpose of the suit) belonged to him in the same manner as C, the surviving partner was entitled to the firm property on the death of his partner B in Illustration (b) of Section 106. On the same principle on which the partnership debt due to C could be set-off against a suit for his separate debt, the second defendant is entitled to plead a set-off of the separate debt due to himself from the plaintiff.

(2) The Chitty debt due to the second defendant was an "ascertained sum," as that expression includes sums which are capable of being immediately ascertained.

"The right of set-off exists not only when there appear to be mutual debts and credits but also where the cross demands arise out of the same transaction or are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover and the defendant should be driven to a cross suit. Considering that the debts arose out of the same Chitty transaction and the second defendant being in the position both of debtor and creditor, it is inequitable to make him pay what he owes to plaintiff, if in fact plaintiff owes him more. There is nothing gained by driving second defendant to another suit, Section 106 being only a rule of procedure which does not govern the general equitable rule as to the right of set-off.— 15 T. L. R., 68.

4. An arrangement by which the foreman of a Chitty agreed to set-off a debt due by him in another transaction to a prized subscriber against his future subscriptions is void as against the non-prized subscribers who hold a lien on such subscriptions, as the foreman who must be regarded as a trustee of the Chitty fund is incompetent to deal with it except in pursuance of the object of the trust.

It is evidently a principle of natural reason and justice that when two parties are mutually indebted in respect of one and the same transaction, one of the parties should not be compellable to pay the debt which he has incurred and be left to recover by other proceedings that to which he is entitled, especially so, when, owing to the bankruptcy of his debtor to whom he also is indebted, he has no means of recovering his debt except by way of set-off of one debt against the other. (In the case, the foreman became insolvent and allowed the Chitty scheme to collapse since the 12th drawing).

There was nothing in the circumstances of the case to show an intention, much less a manifest intention, on the part of the 3rd and 4th defendants (prized subscribers) to waive their lien for the unpaid portion of the prize money on the future subscriptions payable by them. The 3rd and 4th defendants can in equity be compelled only to pay back what they have actually received over and above the money already paid, and their claim for setting off the unpaid portion of the prize money against the future subscriptions due by them seems admissible. 5. The plaintiff was the assignee of a promissory note executed by the 1st defendant in favour of the 2nd defendant. The question in the case was of an equitable right which the first defendant who was the debtor as well as the creditor of the second defendant had to set off mutually the debts due by him and from him. That such right of set-off exists in equity there can be no doubt and the right is based upon the equitable doctrine that it is unjust to compel a debtor to pay his debts and drive him to recover his claim against his creditor by a separate suit.

There can also be no doubt that the assignee even for value of any debt or actionable claim takes the thing assigned subject to all the equities which may be urged against the assignor.

Where there is a chose in action, whether it is a debt or an obligation or a trust fund, and it is assigned, the person who holds the debt or obligation or has undertaken to hold the trust fund, has against the assignee the same equities as he would have had against the assignor.

A debt was due from B to A; but there was also a debt from A to B which B might set-off in an action by A. In this state of things, A assigned the first debt to C without B's knowledge, and C sued on the assignment.

Held.—B was entitled to the set-off as against C.— 17 T. L. R., *22.

6. A mortgagee setting up an oral agreement contrary to the terms of the mortgage deed as to payment of Government tax did not pay the same. The oral agreement was found to be not true. The mortgagor paid the tax for 26 years and in the redemption suit claimed among other items to set-off the whole amount against the mortgage-debt. The mortgagee pleaded limitation bar and the lower Court held that the mortgagor's right to set-off more than 12 years' tax was barred by limitation.

Held.—So long as the redemption suit was not barred, all sums due to the mortgagor which fall within the scope of, and had to be taken into calculation in, the settlement of accounts did not become barred. The Government due was one of such items and therefore the mortgagor was entitled to set-off the whole of the tax paid by him against the mortgage-debt.— 20 T. L. R., *38.

7. A decision of the Tanthri of the Suchindrum temple that a Bhagavathar attached thereto became an outcaste owing to private misconduct was cancelled by the Dewan, under the sanction of H. H. the Maha Rajah, and the Bhagavathar was ultimately reappointed to that temple. Subsequently, when the Melshanthi—plaintiff saw the Bhagavathar in the pagoda, he notwithstanding the Government decision, refused to perform the usual service unless Punyaham was performed. Consequently, the Punyaham and the supplementary Kalasam ceremonies were performed. In the suit by the Melshanthi for arrears of pay where the defendant, Sirkar, set up plaintiff's liability for the expenses of the purification ceremonies, plaintiff claimed immunity on the ground that the Tanthri's decision was final on matters of pollution, &c., and contended that the liability of the Tanthri was not ascertained and that defendant was not entitled to claim a set-off in this case:

Held (confirming the District Judge's decree).—(1) The ecclesiastical head in this State is His Highness the Maha Rajah: the Tanthri is the ecclesiastical referee of, and adviser to, Government and he cannot claim any jurisdiction independent of and paramount to the sovereign power.

(2) In the case of wrong-doers the Court may hold each liable for the whole damage.

(3) Where the damages claimed by the defendant arise from the same transaction in respect of which the plaintiff advances his claim in the suit, the set-off is equitable.

The defendant did not claim a set-off under the first part of Section 106. Hence the objection that the set-off was claimed of unliquidated damages was untenable. Unlike the corresponding Section of the British Act, Section 106 expressly allows the set-off of any sum on equitable grounds, as held in 2 M. H. C. R., 296, the principle of which, though not embodied in the British Act, has been expressly recognised by all the British Indian High Courts.—

8. Where defendant claims a set-off, his written statement is in the nature of a plaint in a cross suit, and Court fees should be payable on the amount claimed as if it were such a plaint. 9. Suit by two Uralers of a Devaswom against a third Uralan (who was also a tenant of the Devaswom) for arrears of Michavarom from 1070. The defendant inter alia pleaded a set-off consisting of various items of money alleged to have been expended by him at the request of his fellow Uralers for conducting litigation and enforcing renewals of Kanom documents. It was urged that the defendant was not entitled to put forward the plea of set-off as the claim sought to be set off was barred by limitation.

Held.—(1) In the circumstances of the case, the claim might be said to be founded on mutual credit which entitled the defendant to claim an equitable set-off and to such a claim the Limitation Regulation had no application.

(2) A trustee was at liberty to reimburse himself from the trust property all expenses properly incurred in the execution of the trust.

Per Ramachandra Rao, J.—'When the cross demands are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable in the opinion of the Court to subject the defendant to the necessity of a cross suit', the statute says the plea of set-off may be allowed. This connection may be established by reason of mutual credit. "By mutual credit we are to understand a knowledge on both sides of an existing debt due to one party and a credit by the other party, founded on and trusting to such a debt, as a means of discharging it." If there is such a connection between the two independent debts, as stated above, equity acts upon it and allows a set-off. There is also another kind of set-off which probably is not included in the first sentence of Section 106. "Where the nature of the employment, transaction or dealings necessarily constitutes an account consisting of receipts and payments, debts and credits, it is certain that only the balance can be the debt." Accordingly, in a suit between mortgagor and mortgagee, the mortgagor is allowed to set-off the Michavarom due to him against the mortgage amount, though the claim for the Michavarom may be time-barred. We are concerned only with the principle of set-off founded on mutual credit.

To allow a wholly unconnected item of barred debt to be pleaded as a set-off does not appear to be a position which logically follows from the theory of equitable set-off which is certainly not co-extensive with the demands of natural justice, which may require that cross demands 'should compensate each other by deducting the less from the greater'.— 25 T. 10. When the intention of both parties, i. e., the lender (a tenant of Devaswom lands) and the Devaswom trustee was to keep the loan taken by the trustee as a transaction distinct from the tenancy, the Devaswom cannot be allowed to convert what in fact was a loan into a payment of arrears of rent.

Such arrears may, no doubt, have been set-off in a suit on the bond. This the defendant (trustee) could have done, if he definitely specified the amount of the arrears and paid institution fees on the same as required by law. This he has not done. There is a clear distinction between a payment and a set-off, and though an advance made by a tenant on account of the subject-matter of the demise may be taken to be a part-payment of the rent, and therefore cannot form the subject-matter of a suit by the tenant irrespective of the arrears of rent, that cannot be said of a loan transaction which the parties have agreed to keep distinct from the tenancy account.—

1 S. D., 23.

11. In a suit for arrears of Michavarom, the defendant claimed credit for a certain sum found to have been overpaid by him in a prior suit which was for arrears up to a certain date.

Held.—In the prior suit the defendant did not plead a set-off of the excess payment under Section 106. If he did so and paid Court fees on the same, that would have enabled the Court to "pronounce a final judgment in the same suit, both on the original and the cross claim", as provided in the last para of Section 106. The above phraseology indicates that, in the absence of such plea of set-off, the finding in the judgment would not be final as to the excess amount of the counter-claim.—

Held.—The defendant had a cross claim against the plaintiff arising out of the same transaction (the sale) which has given rise to the plaintiff's suit for the balance of the purchase-money. Such cross-claims so arising may be set up by a defendant though not pleadable by way of set-off.—

Held.—Judgment was given for plaintiff for the sum sued for.— K. P., 135.

16. The plaintiff sued the defendant, an Abkari contractor, for recovery of the salary and cash-deposit due to his father who was employed under the defendant as cash-keeper and had left the service before his death. The defendant contended that, as plaintiff's father had to account for 9,000 and odd Fanams at the time of his leaving defendant's service, he (defendant) had set-off the said cash-deposit and salary in part-payment of the amount due to him. Both the lower Courts thereupon dismissed the suit.

Held.—(1) As the sum, if any, remaining unaccounted for and due to defendant by plaintiff's father could be known only after the taking of the accounts of the Jadithypatty book it was not an ascertained sum as defined in Section 106, C. P. C.

(2) The defendant in his written statement could not claim to set-off any amount without paying Court fees on it.

(3) As the counterclaim made in the written statement was beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Munsiff it ought not to have been considered by the lower Courts. K. P., 379.

It was urged by the plaintiff that the defendants were not entitled to put forward the plea, as a suit brought to recover the said sum had been dismissed as being barred by limitation.

Held.—In respect of debts, the Law of Limitation merely barred the remedy, but did not extinguish the right itself. The defendants, therefore, had the right to set off the debt against the arrears of Thiruppuvarom claimed in the plaint.

The set-off referred to in Section 106 relates only to debts which can be recovered by suit.— 26 T. L. R., 321

18. Plaintiff, a trustee of a Devaswom belonging to his Illom, sued for arrears of Thiruppuvarom due to the Devaswom. Defendant pleaded that the Thiruppuvarom was, under an agreement, being set off against the interest due on a hypothecation bond executed by plaintiff's predecessor in respect of a property alleged to belong to the Illom of the plaintiff. The Munsiff and the District Judge found the special agreement proved, but on the question of law they differed. The Munsiff held the discharge pleaded was not valid in law against the Devaswom. The District Judge held the contrary view and dismissed the suit.

Held (in second appeal).—(1) The discharge proved was valid and binding on the plaintiff.

2?? ...

(2) It was important in every case that there should be clear evidence that an endowment had been made or a trust created.

(3) The plaintiff failed to prove that there was a real as distinguished from a nominal trust in favour of the Devaswom.

On the other hand, the evidence in the case and the conduct of the parties abundantly showed that the plaintiff's Illom had been treating the property alleged to be Devaswom property as their Illom property and that the plaintiff and his predecessor did not make any distinction between the two.

(4) In cases where the question for determination is whether the property, the subject of dispute, is trust property or the trustee's private property, instances of re-appropriation by the alleged trustee to his own use, if numerous and extending over a long period, will afford good evidence of the trustee's right to the property.

(5) In the case of a private trust, the persons interested in the same have the power or the authority to use the fund for any purpose and to divest the fund from the original object. In the case of a public charitable trust, this cannot be done. As a consequence of this, it follows that the beneficiaries in the case of a private charitable trust may condone mal-administration by trustees. But in the case of a public charitable trust, the mal-administration cannot be so condoned, for the wrong is done to the State, and the trustees will still be liable.—

20. To equalise the shares in a partition between two brothers, one brother executed a pro-note in favour of the other for a certain sum. On a suit for the recovery of the amount under the note, the defendants claimed to set-off the value of two ornaments under the following circumstances. One of the ornaments was kept in common to be used by both the brothers but plaintiff was keeping it to himself. Defendant was entitled to half its value. The other was left to the share of defendant but it was already under a pledge made by the plaintiff who was bound under the partition-deed to redeem the pledge. The Munsiff allowed the set-off claimed; but the District Judge on appeal disallowed the claim on the ground that it related to unascertained sums.

Held (in second appeal).—No doubt the claim for the value of the two jewels may not strictly be regarded as one for an ascertained sum of money within the meaning of Section 106. But the Section is only a rule of procedure in regard to cases of set-off and was not exhaustive of cases in which defendants are entitled to raise such pleas.

The Code was not intended to take away any right of set-off, whether legal or equitable, which parties would have had independently of its provisions. It seems that the right of set-off will be found to exist not only in cases of mutual debts and credits but also where the cross demands arise out of one and the same transaction or are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover and the defendant be driven to a cross suit."

The cross-demands in the case, as they arose out of the partition arrangement, must be regarded as being so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the defendant should be driven to a cross suit, and therefore, the defendant was entitled to raise his plea as one for an equitable set-off.— 6 T. L. J., 286.

21. The decree directed that, if the plaintiff deposited in Court a lump sum within a certain date, he should be treated as a subscriber by the defendants in their Chitty, he should be entitled to his costs from the defendants and the defendants should bear their own. Plaintiff deducted the amount due to him as costs and deposited the balance.

Held.—The question does not fall under the purview of any of the Sections of the Civil Procedure Code; but in equity he is entitled, while making the deposit, to take credit for the amount of the costs awarded to him by the decree.— 10 T. L. J., 91.

22. The suit was for money due (Rs. 96) on a pro-note. The defendant set up by way of set-off or counter-claim against the plaintiff a claim for Rs. 72 and odd which he alleged was due to him on account of dealings between the parties in cocoanuts, &c. The plaintiff contended that the defendant's claim cannot be described as one for an ascertained sum of money.

Held.—The defendants' claim is for a definite amount of money on account of his dealings with the plaintiff and is one for an ascertained sum of money falling under Section 106, C. P. C.

It is not disputed that, if the defendant's claim is true, the amount of the claim is legally recoverable from the plaintiff, and it cannot be objected that in the defendant's claim the parties fill a different character from what they fill in the plaintiff's suit. The cross claim falls within the express language of the first part of Section 106; and therefore, under the ordinary law of set-off the defendant may be allowed to advance the money claim against the plaintiff. "When you have got two cross demands of a nature substantially the same and due to and from A and B in the same right, that is to say, when the one is a creditor in his own right and debtor also in his own right to the other, the one debt may be set-off against the other at the option of the party from whom payment is demanded. But it is essential in such cases that the rights should be substantially the same.—

10 T. L. J., 137.

23. In a suit for recovery of leased property with arrears of rent, the plaintiff is entitled to set-off the arrears of rent which are barred by limitation against the value of improvements payable to the defendant.

"The arrears of rent are, at the determination of the tenancy, customarily deducted from the amount due to a tenant by a landlord for improvements effected upon the property, and it is but reasonable and equitable that a landlord who has to recover arrears of rent should not be driven to the necessity of recovering his claim by compulsory process, when the claim can be met out of what is due from him to his tenant. The money invested by a tenant in the improvement of the property of his landlord is customarily a charge on the property and the tenant is, to the extent of his claim for improvements, virtually the holder of an encumbrance on the land, which cannot be resumed or redeemed unless and until the encumbrance is paid off. If so, the equitable principles upon which set-off is allowed, and accounts directed to be taken between the mortgagors and mortgagees would apply to the case of a landlord and tenant having mutual claims against each other" (9 T. L. R., 127).— 11 T. L. J., 47.

24. The decree for redemption was in the following terms:—"The plaintiff is allowed to recover the plaint shops and the site on which they stand from the defendants 1 to 4 on payment to defendants 1 and 2 of the balance of the mortgage amount of 8,000 Fanams less the arrears of Michavarom at the rate of Rs. 11½ per month from 25-5-1086 to this date. Future rent at the same rate till the date when the arrears of rent amount to more than 8,000 Fanams from which date future rent will be calculated at the rate of Rs. 40 per mensem. Arrears of rent to be payable by the defendants 1 and 2, who will pay the costs of the plaintiff. The defendants will suffer their own costs. Interest on costs at 6 per cent."

Plaintiff claimed the right to set-off the amount of costs payable to him under the decree against the mortgage amount payable by him.

Held.—He is not entitled to claim the set-off. Neither Section 216 [ =Or. XX, r. 6 (3) ] nor 248 [ = Or. XXI, r. 17 ] of the Civil Procedure Code applies to the facts of the case.— 11 T. L. J., 398.

25. One G. K., who had started a Chitty scheme was adjudicated an insolvent, and the plaintiff was appointed Receiver in insolvency. The defendant, who was a subscriber to the Chitty, had prized one-half of her ticket at the fifth drawing. On the allegation that the defendant had defaulted to pay the subscriptions from the 6th drawing, the plaintiff as Receiver brought the suit to recover in a lump the future subscriptions due in respect of the prized half ticket. The defendant claimed that she had the right under Section 29 of the Insolvency Regulation to set-off the amount of the paid up subscriptions in respect of her unprized half ticket against the amount due from her on her prized half-ticket. The lower Court disallowed the claim for set-off as unsustainable. The defendant appealed to the High Court.

It was admitted before the High Court that, when the suit was disposed of by the lower Court, no application had been made by the defendant under the provisions of the Insolvency Regulation for proof of the debt alleged to be due to her from the insolvent.

The appeal was referred to a Full Bench for disposal.

Held.—It was not necessary to decide at that stage whether the statutory right of set-off allowed by Section 29 of the Insolvency Regulation was or was not available to the defendant. Assuming that the right was available to the defendant, it was essential for claiming that right that the defendant should be 'a creditor proving or claiming to prove a debt under the Regulation.' When the suit was before the lower Court, the defendant had not satisfied this contention; and, consequently, that Court was right in disallowing the claim for set-off. (F. B.).— 12 T. L. J., 154.

26. (1) A defendant cannot maintain a counter-claim in respect of a matter for which he could not, as plaintiff, maintain an independent action; and consequently upon a barred claim set up by the counter-claim, the defendant cannot be given a decree.

Section 106 expressly authorises the Court to enquire into claims by way of equitable set-off also ; and it provides that such set-off shall have the same effect as a plaint in a cross-suit so as to enable the Court to pronounce a final judgment in the same suit, both on the original and on the cross claim. The Section affords, with a view to avoid circuity of actions, statutory sanction for a cross action to be brought and tried at the same time as the original action. It is a legal proceeding commenced by the defendant, which for purposes of procedure is allowed to be tried together with the original action. He occupies the position of a plaintiff in respect of his counter-claim, and it is difficult to see how the original plaintiff can be precluded from setting up the defence of the statute of limitation as well as any other defence to the attack of the defendant who uses his counter-claim not only as a shield but as a sword. It does not seem right or proper that the defendant should be allowed to evade the statute of limitation merely because the plaintiff has filed a suit against him. "Under Or. VII, r. 6 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a set-off is not permissible if the money is not legally recoverable. This would include all unsustainable claims, whether barred by limitation or otherwise. It is no doubt true that this rule applies in terms only to what is known as legal set-off. Although in this country, it has been held in numerous cases that the Code of Civil Procedure does not prevent the defendant from claiming an equitable set-off in respect of unliquidated damages claimable in connection with the transaction on which the suit is brought, I think that on the principle that equity follows the law, the plea will be available only in respect of sums legally recoverable. * * 'For when the Legislature had fixed the time at law, it would have been preposterous for equity (which by its own proper authority always maintained a limitation) to countenance laches beyond the period that law had been confined to by Parliament. And, therefore, in all cases where the legal right has been barred by Parliament, the equitable right to the same thing has been concluded by the same bar.' 'It is said that Courts of equity are not within the statutes of limitation. It is a mistake in point of language to say that Courts of Equity act merely by analogy to the statutes; they act in obedience to them. Courts of Equity are bound to yield obedience to the Statute of Limitations upon all legal titles and legal demands, and cannot act contrary to the spirit of its provisions.' I am therefore of opinion that, as the defendant's claim was barred by limitation, the plea of equitable set-off was not open to him." (39 Mad., 939).

(2) A suit for the recovery of a specific sum of money does not assume the character of a suit for accounts in the technical sense of that expression, merely because in the determination of the question in controversy accounts may have to be examined.

(3) It is of the essence of a suit for accounts that the defendant should be under a liability to render accounts to the plaintiff.

(4) A suit for accounts is an action for the balance that may be found due on taking the accounts between the parties; and in such an action, the plaintiff applies by his plaint to have an account taken in order that adequate relief may be granted to him. It necessarily involves the taking of accounts, and the law provides a special procedure to be followed in such actions (F. B.).— 39 T. L. R., 135 (= 13 T. L. J., 46).

Ref.—18 T. L. J., 167.

27. The suit was on a bond executed by the defendant in plaintiff's favour on account of the prize amount due to the plaintiff as a prized subscriber in the defendant's Chitty. The defendant made a counter-claim on the basis of a security bond executed by the plaintiff in defendant's favour to secure due payment of the future subscriptions in another Chitty conducted by the defendant to which also the plaintiff was a subscriber. The plaintiff had also offered the plaint bond as collateral security for the payment of the said subscriptions.

The Munsiff held that the defendant's counter claim was barred by limitation and decreed the suit as prayed for.

The District Judge held that the defendant could be allowed an equitable set-off to the extent of the plaintiff's claim, and accordingly dismissed both the suit and the counter claim.

Held (in special appeal).—The decree of the District Judge should be upheld. Even on the assumption that a suit on the security bond would be barred, there was nothing to prevent the defendant from pleading an equitable set-off in respect of the amount due under the security bond, at least to the extent of the plaintiff's claim. In respect of debts, the law of limitation barred only the remedy, but did not extinguish the right. In the case under consideration, there was the further circumstance that the plaint bond was given as a collateral security for the due payment of the amount due under the security bond. The transactions were therefore so intimately connected that it would be inequitable to deny to the defendant the right to set-off the amount due to him against the amount due by him.— 16 T. L. J., 431.

of a Court to entertain a suit. The valuation of the suit made in the plaint in the light of the averments made and reliefs claimed in the plaint alone need be looked into to decide questions relating to jurisdiction.— 18 T. L. J., 73.

29. A plea of payment refers to a satisfaction or extinguishment already had prior to the raising of the defence. It is essential in the case of such a plea that payment set up should have been made after the liability that forms the subject-matter of the claim in the suit came into existence. A claim of set-off is virtually a prayer for satisfaction or extinguishment of the liability to be declared by the Court after the date of the plea itself on a future date and not one effected already prior to the date of the plea as in the case of a plea of payment.— 18 T. L. J., 167.

30. If a set-off is pleaded, Court fee has to be paid under Article 1 of the Court Fees Regulation of 1087, irrespective of its being a "legal" set-off or an "equitable" set-off.

A plea of set-off has to be distinguished from a plea of payment. While the latter refers to a satisfaction of the debt that forms the subject-matter of the suit prior to the raising of the defence and its consequent extinguishment before that date, the help of the Court is invoked in the former case and the debt in question required to be thereafter declared to have become extinguished in whole or pro tanto against another debt or ascertained sum due to the defendant from the plaintiff.

In cases where a higher amount than that claimed by the plaintiff in the suit is pleaded and claimed, the same is technically known as a counterclaim. It is virtually a weapon of offence which entitles a defendant to enforce a claim against the plaintiff as effectually as in an independent action.— 18 T. L. J., 266.

31. It is well established that Section 106 does not take away any rights of equitable set-off which parties would have independent of it, and in the matter of equitable set-off, the bar of limitation does not arise. Though it is not easy to state precisely under what circumstances equitable set-off can be allowed, the principle may be enunciated thus :—'The right of set-off exists not only in cases of mutual debts and credits, but also where cross demands arise out of the same transaction or are so connected with each other as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover and the defendant should be driven to a cross-suit.'

In applying the principle, Courts should not construe the principle over-rigidly against the defendant.

A set-off will be legally recoverable under Section 106, if the amount was recoverable in a separate suit at the time when the plaintiff institutes the suit. It need not be legally recoverable at the time the written statement is put in. This is so because the right to set-off arises when the suit is filed (F. B.).— 19 T. L. J., 702.

ORDER IX.

Appearance of Parties and Consequence of Non-appearance.

Parties to appear on day fixed in summons for defendant to appear and answer.

1. On the day fixed in the summons for the defendant to appear and answer, the parties shall be in attendance at the Court-house in person or by their respective pleaders, and the suit shall then be heard unless the hearing is adjourned to a future day fixed by the Court.

Dismissal of suit where summons not served in consequence of plaintiff's failure to pay costs.

2. Where on the day so fixed it is found that the summons has not been served upon the defendant in consequence of the failure of the plaintiff to pay the court-fee or postal charges (if any) chargeable for such service, the Court may make an order that the suit be dismissed:

Provided that no such order shall be made although the summons has not been served upon the defendant, if on the day fixed for him to appear and answer he attends in person or by agent when he is allowed to appear by agent.

Order IX: 1. Section 584, Paragraph 1 of the old Civil Procedure Code [new Section 105] should not be so construed as to make the procedure laid down in Chapter VIII—Sections 90 to 104 [ = Rules 1 to 14 of this Order ] always applicable to all execution procedings.— 35 T. L. R., 75.

Or. IX, r. 3 [ = S. 92 = Or. IX, r. 3 ]

I. The corresponding Section of the old Regulation was as follows:—

"92. If neither party appears, suit to be dismissed.—If, on the day fixed for the defendant to appear and answer, or on any other subsequent day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned, neither party appears, the suit shall be dismissed, unless the Judge, for reasons to be recorded under his hand, otherwise directs."

II. The words "may make an order that the suit be dismissed" are used to 'make it clear that the dismissal under this Rule is not a decree, but an order.'

III. See also Rules 9 and 13.

Case Law.

1. Plaintiff sued for recovery of her father's one-fifth share of the plaint properties, alleging she was the heir of her deceased father. During the pendency of the suit, she died, and the Munsiff, in ignorance of her death, dismissed the suit on the ground that neither the plaintiff nor the defendant was present.

It was contended that the order dismissing the suit should have been regarded as one passed under Section 92.

Held.—The order dismissing the suit should be regarded as an order of abatement under Section 350 [=Or. XXII, r. 3 (2)]. Section 92 which deals with cases of non-appearance of parties cannot be held to apply. "It requires no words to show the inapplicability of rules or orders dealing with the case of the non-appearance of a suitor to the situation which arises when the suitor is dead. The principle of forfeiture of rights in consequence of a default in procedure by a party to a cause, is a principle of punishment in respect of such default, but the punishment of the dead or the ranking of death under the category of default, does not seem to be very stateable."—

2. The non-appearance of the appellant in person on the day fixed and his Vakil's submission that he had no instructions, make it obligatory on the Court to abstain from disposing of the case on the merits. Under the circumstances, the Court should deal with the case under the provisions of the law relating to default of appearance.—

Fol.—15 T. L. J., 368.

3. When there is a failure of appearance on the part of one or both parties, the Court should, under Order XVII, Rule 2, proceed to dispose of the case in one or other of the methods provided for in Order IX. Therefore, the operation of Order XVII, Rule 3, would be excluded in such a case. If the plaintiff were the party who failed to appear, the Court in disposing of the case would have to do so under Order IX, Rule 3 or 8, according to whether defendant appears or not. In either case, the plaintiff is entitled to move the Court to set aside the order of dismissal. The mere fact that the Court has purported to pass a decree on the merits under Order XVII, Rule 3, will not alter the position of the plaintiff.

Where the Counsel appears only for the purpose of applying for an adjournment or where he states that he has no instructions, the party cannot be said to appear by counsel, and where the party is only present in Court on such an occasion, he cannot be said to appear in person.

recognised agent under Order III, Rule 1, or through a co-party under Order I, Rule 12; but in either case, the party or the person authorised on his behalf must be present for the purpose of conducting the case. The mere presence of the party, unless he is there for that purpose, is not an appearance within the meaning of the Rules, nor does the presence of his pleader who has been instructed to represent him on previous occasion, constitutes an appearance unless he is instructed to represent him on the occasion in question and attends for that purpose." Case Law.

1. An order restoring a suit to file, with or without conditions, is an interlocutory order, and it can be questioned only in an appeal preferred against the final decision of the suit. Or. IX, r. 5 [ = S. 94 = Or. IX, r. 5 ]

I. Section 94 of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—"94. If, after a summons has been issued to the defendant or to one of several defendants and returned unserved, the plaintiff fails for a period of 6 months from such return to apply for the issue of a fresh summons and to satisfy the Court that he has used his best endeavours to discover the residence of the defendant who has not been served, or that such defendant is avoiding service of process, the Court may dismiss the suit as against such defendant.

In such case the plaintiff may (subject to the Law of Limitation) bring a fresh suit."

The above Section corresponded to Section 99-A of the Indian Code of 1882 in which the period allowed for applying for the issue of a fresh summons was one year. In adopting that Section, the period was reduced, and the Statement of Objects and Reasons said:—"One year seems to be too long a period for a plaintiff to ascertain the whereabouts of the defendant to enable him to apply for the issue of a fresh summons. 6 months seem to be amply sufficient, and Section 99-A is amended accordingly."—

II. The present Rule reproduces the corresponding Rule of the Indian Code of 1908, in which the period allowed for applying for the issue of fresh summons was one year. That Rule has since been amended by Act XXIV of 1920, and the Rule now runs as follows:—

"5. (1) Where, after a summons............ fails for a period of three months from the date........issue of a fresh summons, the Court shall make an order that the suit be dismissed as against such defendant, unless the plaintiff has within the said period satisfied the Court that—

(a) he has failed after using his best endeavours to discover the residence of the defendant who has not been served, or

(b) such defendant is avoiding service of process, or

(c) there is any other sufficient cause for extending the time, in which case the Court may extend the time for making such application for such period as it thinks fit.

(2) In such case...........bring a fresh suit."

III. For the words "make an order that the suit be dismissed," see under Rule 3 above.

IV. It may be noted that an order for abatement under Order XXII, Rule 4, may, by virtue of Article 162 of the Limitation Regulation, be made within ninety days.

Or. IX, r. 6 [= S. 95 = Or. IX, r. 6]

I. 1. The words "when the suit is called on for hearing, then" have been substituted for the words "the procedure shall be as follows" which occurred in Section 95 of the old Regulation.

2. In Sub-Rule (2), the words "was not duly served or" after the word "summons" are an addition not found in the corresponding second para of the old Section.

II. For Form of Notice to defendant, see Appendix B, Form No. 11.

Case Law.

1. On the day fixed in the summons for hearing, the defendant appeared and applied for an adjournment; but on the date to which the hearing was so adjourned, he failed to appear in person or by Vakil. The Judge treated him ex parte.

The default of a defendant to appear on the day to which the hearing of a case is adjourned, falls under Section 100 of the Civil Procedure Code (Regn. II of 1087) in the same way as his default to appear on the day named in the original summons. To bring a case under that Section, the hearing may be either on the day named in the summons or a subsequent day to which the first hearing might have been adjourned.

No appeal under Section 108 of the (old) Civil Procedure Code, therefore, lay by a defendant who was treated as ex parte by a Court under such circumstances.—

3 T. L. R., 32.

[Sections 100 and 108 of Regulation II of 1087 referred to above were as follow :—

"100. If the plaintiff shall appear in person or by a pleader and the defendant shall not appear in person or by a pleader, and it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the summons was duly served, the Court shall proceed to hear the suit ex parte. If the defendant appear on any subsequent day to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned and shall assign good and sufficient cause for his previous non-appearance, he may, upon such terms as the Court may direct as to payment of the costs or otherwise, be heard in answer to the suit in like manner as if he had appeared on the day fixed for his appearance.

"108. No appeal shall lie from a judgment passed ex parte against a defendant who has not appeared, or from a judgment against a plaintiff by default for non-appearance. But in all cases in which judgment may be passed ex parte against a defendant, he may apply, within a reasonable time, not exceeding thirty days after any process for enforcing the judgment has been executed, to the Court by which the judgment was passed, for an order to set it aside; and if it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the summons was not duly served, or that the defendant was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall pass an order to set aside the judgment and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit. In all cases of judgment against a plaintiff by default, he may apply, within thirty days from the date of the judgment, for an order to set it aside; and if it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the plaintiff was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall pass an order to set aside the judgment by default, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit. But no judgment shall be set aside on any such application as aforesaid, unless notice thereof have been served on the opposite party. In all cases in which the Court shall pass an order under this Section for setting aside a judgment, the order shall be final; but in all appealable cases in which the Court shall reject the application, an appeal shall lie from the order of rejection to the tribunal to which the final decision in the suit would be appealable, provided that the appeal be preferred within the time allowed for an appeal from such final decision."]

2. The Sirkar, who was defendant in a suit, was declared ex parte by the District Judge on the ground that no written statement was filed. The Sirkar Vakil was present in Court.

Held.—A suit cannot be declared ex parte when the opposite party has put in an appearance though he might not have filed a written statement.— 14 T. L. R., 100.

3. Section 95, C. P. C., is not controlled by Section 101 [=Or. IX, r. 11], and where there are several defendants and some alone do not appear, they can be declared ex parte under Section 95.

"It is said that Section 103 [ = Or. IX, r. 13] has no application to the case of one of several defendants, and that that Section only applies to the case of a sole defendant or to a case where there are several defendants all of whom have not appeared. I cannot accept this interpretation of the Section. I do not see why because a defendant happens to be one of many, he is less 'a defendant' within the meaning of that Section. If the petitioner's contention were to prevail, the result would be that if there be one defendant out of many against whom a decree has been passed ex parte, he would be deprived of the benefit of the Section. There is nothing in Section 101 [ = Or. IX, r. 11] which conflicts with Section 103, nor is there anything in Section 101 which limits the operation of Section 103 in the way suggested by the petitioner."

Of course, the defendant declared ex parte may appear subsequently and apply for setting aside the ex parte order. It wi[ll] then be for the Court to consider whe[ther] such an application would be grante[d] any rate the ex parte orde[r] passe[d] lower Court was not illegal or [...] the provisions of the Code.—

4. A non-contesting defendant may appeal from a decree made against him; but by so appealing he is not relegated to the position of a contesting defendant, who is entitled to an adjudication on the merits of the controversy between the parties.—

5. On the day the case stood posted for final hearing in the lower Court, the Vakil for the defendant informed the Court that he had no instructions. The Court heard the case and passed a decree against the defendant.

The defendant applied to the Court for an order setting aside the decree and reopening the case on the ground that the decree was one passed for default of appearance under Section 152 C. P. C. [= Or. XVII, r. 2].

The Court refused the application on the ground that the decree was one passed on the merits.

Held.—The order of the lower Court was wrong.

Appearance by a Vakil who has no instructions is tantamount to non-appearance. Therefore, there was in the eye of the law no appearance for the appellant on the day on which the final arguments were heard. There can be no doubt that the hearing of a suit includes the hearing of the final arguments. Very often that is the most important stage of the hearing of a suit. A judgment pronounced without the hearing of arguments is liable to be set aside as ... law. The non-appearance of the ... the final hearing is sufficient to ... non-appearance at the hearing ... meaning of Section 95, though the party might have appeared at the prior stage of the suit. It follows therefore that there was no appearance for the appellant when the suit was heard in the lower Court.

As regards the interpretation of Sections 152 and 153, C. P. C. [= Or. XVII, rr. 2 & 3], according to the view taken in 13 T. L. J., 101 and 207, the decision under consideration must be treated as one passed under Section 152 read with Section 95. The application of the appellant under Section 103 was therefore competent.—15 T. L. J., 368.

1. A petition was put in by the defendant praying to be heard after he had been declared ex parte. The petition was not to set aside any decree passed in the suit, but to obtain permission to defend the suit before the decree was passed or judgment pronounced. The Zillah Judge dismissed the petition for default.

Held.—The proper Section applicable to the case was Section 96, C. P. C., and not Section 103 [=Or. IX, r. 13]. There is an appeal against an order under Section 103, but no appeal against an order passed under Section 96. Nor could the appeal be treated as a revision petition under Section 568 [new Section 89]. No revision petition lies when the party has other remedies open to him. The party could apply under Section 103 to set aside the ex parte decree subsequently Procedure where defendant only appears.

8. Where the defendant appears and the plaintiff does not appear when the suit is called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order that the suit be dismissed unless the defendant admits the claim, or part thereof, in which case the Court shall pass a decree against the defendant upon such admission, and, where part only of the claim has been admitted, shall dismiss the suit so far as it relates to the remainder.

Case Law.

1. An order dismissing a suit at an adjourned hearing for non-appearance of the plaintiff or his Vakil is an order under Section 152 C. P. C., [=Or. XVII, r. 2] and its consequential Section 97, and not under Section 153 [=Or. XVII, r. 3], and is appealable.

If the plaintiff had put in any appearance in person or by pleader, his default in producing the evidence might have been a reason for decision under Section 153.—

2. The suit was for recovery of property trespassed upon by defendants, with damages. Issues were settled and evidence, oral and documentary, was produced by both parties. On an adjourned date, the case was dismissed for default of plaintiff's appearance apparently under Section 152, C. P. C. [=Or. XVII, r. 2]. The plaintiff's appeal was also dismissed.

Held.—The dismissal of the case for plaintiff's default when the Munsiff ought to have decided it on the evidence before him would be a denial of justice. Case remanded for disposal according to law.

A default made on an adjourned hearing may occur under two different stages of circumstances—(1) where the plaintiff has produced no evidence whatever, and (2) where he has produced his evidence. In the former case, the trying Judge could have applied the peremptory provisions of Section 97 by force of the earlier part of Section 152; and even in such cases the order of dismissal for default is appealable.

In the second class of cases, the question arises whether the Munsiff was bound to dismiss the case under Section 97 or ought to have decided it on the evidence befo[re] him. To dismiss the case would be a gr[oss] injustice.— 4 S. D.

Decree against plaintiff by default bars fresh suit.

9. (1) Where a suit is wholly or partly dismissed under Rule 8, the plaintiff shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action. But he may apply for an order to set the dismissal aside, and if he satisfies the Court that there was sufficient cause for his non-appearance when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order setting aside the dismissal upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit.

(2) No order shall be made under this Rule unless notice of the application has been served on the opposite party.

Or. IX, r. 9 [ = S. 98 = Or. IX, r. 9]

The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows :—"98. When a suit is.........the dismissal aside, and if it be proved that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall set aside the dismissal..........with the suit.

No order.........notice in writing of.........party."

Case Law.

1. An application made in the Munsiff's Court to conduct a suit in forma pauperis was dismissed for default. A subsequent application for review was also dismissed. In these circumstances, Section 98, read along with Section 584 [new Section 105], will operate as a bar to an application to conduct a suit for the same relief before the District Court in forma pauperis.—
13 T. L. J., 353.

2. A junior member of a Tarwad sued to set aside a sale deed executed by some of the defendants, the senior members. The suit stood posted for settlement of issues. Subsequently, the plaintiff filed a petition stating that he withdrew from the suit as he was satisfied that the deed was executed for consideration and Tarwad necessity. Another junior member put in a revision petition under Sections 97 and 98 praying that the suit might be restored to the file and that she might be permitted to go on with the suit, as the plaintiff who sued on her behalf also had fraudulently withdrawn from the suit in collusion with the defendants. The Munsiff dismissed the petition.

Held.—A person not a party to the suit cannot apply for restoration under Section 98. That Section provides for cases where a plaintiff may apply for an order to set aside the dismissal of the suit, when a suit is wholly or partially dismissed under Section 97 [ = Or. IX, r. 8] for default of appearance of the plaintiff. Section 98 can by no stretch of language be made applicable to the facts of this suit. The suit was dismissed, not on account of default of appearance of the plaintiff, but because the only plaintiff in the suit petitioned requesting that the suit might be struck off.

The principle that, when a suit is instituted on behalf of a Malabar Tarwad to cancel an alienation by the Karanavan, it is not competent for the plaintiff to withdraw the suit when the other members of the Tarwad oppose the withdrawal on the ground that the withdrawal is prejudicial to the interests of the Tarwad, is not applicable to the facts of this case, as the petitioner put in her petition only after the plaintiff's withdrawal petition was allowed and the suit dismissed. The petitioner's remedy after dismissal of the suit does not lie under Section 98.

Procedure in case of non-attendance of one or more of several plaintiffs.

10. Where there are more plaintiffs than one, and one or more of them appear, and the others do not appear, the Court may, at the instance of the plaintiff or plaintiffs appearing, permit the suit to proceed in the same way as if all the plaintiffs had appeared, or make such order as it thinks fit.

Procedure in case of non-attendance of one or more of several defendants.

11. Where there are more defendants than one, and one or more of them appear and the others do not appear, the suit shall proceed, and the Court shall, at the time of pronouncing judgment, make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the defendants who do not appear.

Consequence of non-attendance, without sufficient cause shown, of party ordered to appear in person.

12. Where a plaintiff or defendant, who has been ordered to appear in person, does not appear in person, or show sufficient cause to the satisfaction of the Court for failing so to appear, he shall be subject to all the provisions of the foregoing Rules applicable to plaintiffs and defendants, respectively, who do not appear.

---

Review under Section 569 [new Section 88] is the appropriate remedy, if the petitioner was constructively a party to the suit and the suit was filed by the plaintiff on her behalf also. The Court has inherent power to right a wrong, but such powers could be exercised only when no other remedies are open to the petitioner.—
16 T. L. J., 71.

3. An application under Order IX, Rule 9, need not be by all the plaintiffs, where there are more than one. This cannot be the true interpretation of the word "plaintiff" occurring in the Rule. The better interpretation is "the plaintiff, if there is one, or any one or more of the plaintiffs, if there are two or more." This view is in accordance with justice, as otherwise the claims of several plaintiffs might be defeated by the collusion of one of them with the defendant.— 45 T. L. R., 1

Setting aside Decrees ex parte.

Setting aside decrees ex parte against defendant.

13. (1) In any case in which a decree is passed ex parte against a defendant, he may apply to the Court by which the decree was passed for an order to set it aside; and if he satisfies the Court that the summons was not duly served, or that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, the Court shall make an order setting aside the decree as against him upon such terms as to costs, payment into Court or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit:

provisions of Section 62 or 416, does not appear.........who do not appear.''

I. "Power is expressly given in Rule 13 of Order IX to set aside an ex parte decree against defendants not applying to do so, in cases where such a course is unavoidable; this power, however, is now exercised as a matter of practice settled by judicial authority."— Notes on Clauses.

II. Section 103 of Regulation II of 1065 ran as follows:—

"103. In any case...called on for hearing the Court shall pass an order to set aside the decree upon such terms......with the suit."

The Proviso and Sub-Rule (2) are additions.

III. The Rule adopts the wording of the corresponding Rule in the British Indian Code, in regard to which the Indian Special Committee said:—"The Committee have inserted words to make it clear that a decree can only be set aside in favour of a defendant against whom the decree has been passed ex parte. There is some conflict of judicial authority upon this point, and the Committee think that the matter should be set at rest in this sense."

The Indian Select Committee, in reporting on the Bill, thought it "necessary to provide specially for cases in which it may not be possible to set aside the decree as against the applicant only." Accordingly, they added the Proviso.

IV. Sub-Rule (2) is an addition made by the Select Committee, and is not found in the British Indian Rule.

Case Law.

1. As it was difficult to say whether the defendant had notice of the adjournment or not, the benefit of the doubt was given him and the ex parte judgment against him set aside.— 1 T. L. R., 29.

2. A party whose application of a miscellaneous nature is dismissed for default is entitled to apply for a retrial.—

3. Certain immovable property belonging to the plaintiff was sold in execution of an ex parte decree obtained against him. It is alleged that he had no notice of the suit, nor of the attachment and sale, and that the ex parte decree and execution proceedings were fraudulent. He sues to recover the property so sold, but does not seek for any relief as regards the decree.

Held.—(1) The omission to seek for cancellation of the decree is fatal to the relief sought for, and the validity of the decree cannot, in the circumstances of the case, be considered even incidentally. A party to a decree cannot treat it as mere waste paper. So far as he is concerned, the decree is the paramount authority for the proceedings taken under it. While it remains in force, no proceedings taken under it is, as a rule, open to objection.

(2) The remedy for a party injured by an ex parte decree, is by an application to the Court that passad it, to set it aside, and not by a fresh litigation. The expiry of the period allowed for making such an application, will not warrant the institution of a regular suit.

The Code of Civil Procedure contains express and special provisions for the cancellation, on the application of the defendant, of the ex parte decree on the ground of want of notice of the suit in which it was passed. The object of these provisions is to enable a party injured by an ex parte decree to obtain redress without the cost of a fresh litigation and to avoid multiplicity of suits. The policy of the law is to compel parties to a litigation to seek redress in respect of any wrong done to them by the abuse of legal proceedings, by means of an application to the Court under whose authority the proceedings were taken.

(3) The Civil Procedure Code prohibits the institution of a regular suit to set aside a sale held in execution of a decree, by a party to the proceedings on the ground of irregularity (F. B.).— 10 T. L. R., 4.

Dist.—17 T. L. R., 143.

4. An ex parte decree that has been set aside is not revived by a second decree being passed in the same terms, but is replaced or superseded by the second decree. It is from the date of the second decree that limitation will run for the purpose of execution, and all proceedings taken on or in respect of the first must be considered as cancelled by the order setting it aside.—

Appr.—17 T. L. R. App., 1.

6. A obtained in Kumbhom 1073 a decree ex parte against B and, in execution thereof, got his properties sold. B, alleging that he came to know of the decree and execution proceedings only in Chingom 1075, applied for a review of the judgment. The District Munsiff rejected the application. B applied for revision of the said order. It was contended on behalf of the respondent, that the High Court had no revisional jurisdiction in this matter, as he had another remedy open to him, viz., that of a regular suit, to set aside the ex parte decree on the ground of fraud.

Held.—In a case like this, the High Court has revisional jurisdiction under Section 568 of the Civil Procedure Code [new Section 89]; and an ex parte defendant might apply for a review under Section 569 [new Section 88] of the Code without resorting to the remedy under Section 108, both remedies being concurrent and a party may elect either course of action.

The defendant had no knowledge of the suit and of the execution proceedings. No effort was made to effect personal service. The words "for any other sufficient cause" in Clause (c) of Section 569 mean that the reason must be one sufficient to the Court to whom the application for review is made. The order is set aside under Section 568 the language of which is wider than and different from that of Section 622 of the Indian Code.— 16 T. L. R. App., 29.

Ref.—2 S. D., 240.

7. The suit was for setting aside an ex parte decree and the execution proceedings thereunder, including a Court sale, on the allegation that the defendant fraudulently suppressed and attempted to suppress the processes issued both in the course of the suit and of the execution proceedings, and thus obtaining the ex parte decree and its execution behind the back of the plaintiff. The plaintiff had previously moved the Court under Section 103 for setting aside the ex parte decree for re-trial, but his motion was rejected by the lower Court.

Held.—A party to an ex parte decree, who had unsuccessfully applied under Section 103 is competent to maintain a separate suit for setting aside the ex parte decree and the execution proceedings thereunder on the ground of fraud.

The general rule seems to be that a judgment cannot be set aside or impeached collaterally upon the mere ground that false evidence such as a forged document, was given at the trial, but that it may be set aside or impeached collaterally for actual fraud, such fraud consisting "in meditated and intentional contrivance to keep the parties and Court in ignorance of the real facts of the case, and obtaining the judgment by such contrivance and also in facts relating to the manner of obtaining jurisdiction of the cause." A party against whom an ex parte decree is passed and who by fraud of the decree-holder is kept in ignorance of the execution processes until the expiry of 30 days allowed by law for application for new trial, would be left without any remedy, if he is not to be permitted to prove such fraud in a separate suit, and though it is very desirable that in such suits the allegation of fraud should be closely scrutinised and should be supported by strong proofs, it does not appear equitable to prevent the party from producing strong proofs in support of his plea and getting relief on the ground of fraud.

The question of fraud or no fraud is a question of fact. Fraud is a thing which from its very nature is incapable of direct proof, and proof of fraud depends mostly upon circumstances.

A plea of fraud in avoidance of the Court's proceedings should be carefully scrutinised and should not be allowed to prevail on light ground.

10 T. L. R., 4 is distinguishable, as the plaintiff there did not seek to set aside the ex parte and the incidental observations made in that case were mere obiter dicta.— 17 T. L. R., 143.

Fol.—K. P., 550.

8. An order under Section 103 setting aside an ex parte decree is not liable to revision under Section 568 [new Section 89], as the aggrieved party has a remedy provided by law under Section 560 [new Section 88 (1)] of the Code.

An order setting aside an ex parte is an interlocutory order. The intention of the Legislature was to give a provisional finality to such interlocutory orders with a view to allow the trial in the original Court to proceed without disturbance at every stage on account of alleged illegality or irregularity, until the trying Court has come to a decision on the whole case. The Legislature provides a remedy for such orders but, for reasons of public policy, it has thought fit to give the remedy only when the case comes in appeal (F. B.).—

9. In a suit for recovery of money due on a joint hypothecation deed, the first Court passed an ex parte decree against all the defendants; but on the application of one of the defendants, the ex parte order as against him alone was set aside. At the re-trial the Munsiff found that the hypothecation debt was discharged and dismissed the plaintiff's suit as against all the defendants. The District Judge modified the Munsiff's decree by restoring the ex parte decree against all the remaining defendants who failed to get the same cancelled.

Held.—The decision of the Munsiff was right.— 19 T. L. R., 37.

10. The maternal grand-uncle of a minor defendant applied to set aside an ex parte decree against the latter on the ground that notice of the suit was not served on the minor and that his mother who had represented him in the suit defaulted to appear in collusion with plaintiff. The Munsiff dismissed the application on the sole ground that the applicant was not a party to the ex parte decree and could not therefore apply to set it aside, and this order was upheld in appeal by the District Judge. It appeared that the appointment of the mother as guardian was not made on enquiry by the Court and that the notice to the mother was not personally served and she did not appear to defend the suit nor show that she was careful of the interest of the minor.

Held.—Where the appointment of a guardian was not made by the Court under Section 423, Civil Procedure Code, the application under Section 103 to set aside an ex-parte decree against the minor need not necessarily be made by the minor himself or the guardian on the record of the suit. The minor in the ex parte enquiry must be taken to have been unrepresented and therefore the decree ought to be set aside.

The appointment of a guardian ad litem must be made on application by plaintiff to the effect that the person proposed is a proper person and has no interest in the subject-matter of the litigation adverse to the minor. On being satisfied on these points, the Court has to pass a formal order of appointment under Section 423, Civil Procedure Code [=Or. XXXII, r. 3].—

11. The question having arisen whether under Section 103 of the Civil Procedure Code the legal representative of a judgment-debtor was entitled to apply to have an ex parte decree set aside:

Held (by the majority).—The legal representative had, under the Section, no unconditional right to apply to have the decree set aside, but that if he had been brought on the record by the decree-holder or his representative then he acquires the right to make an application under the Section.

Per T. Sadasiva Iyer, C. J.—I hold that defendant's heir has an unconditional right to come in under Section 103 and that it is unnecessary that even the original decree-holder should have brought him on the record in execution, that it is a fortiori unnecessary that even a recognised assignee should have so brought the defendant's heir on record and that it is still less necessary that an alleged assignee decree-holder should have so brought him. * * I cannot understand why if the defendant's heir 'becomes subject to the obligations under the decree he is 'not entitled to the rights and benefits qua procedure of the original defendant'. I think that in all statutes whenever a right is given to a person, that person's heirs, assignees and legal representatives have ipso facto the same right, unless by the very nature of the right (such as a right to an office which involves considerations of personal fitness and rights under a contract which are dependant on personal performance, as a contract with an artist or a sculptor and), unless (to repeat) by the very nature of such right it cannot accrue to the benefit of the legal representatives or assignee. I think that 'defendant' in Section 103 includes defendant's heir, and just as the defendant could at any time and unconditionally (subject, of course, to the law of limitation) apply for setting aside an ex parte decree, his heir has the same unconditional right. * * Section 103 gives a valuable and necessary right to a party and I see no reason why a very narrow interpretation should be put upon it.— 23 T. L. R., 219.

12. An application for setting aside an ex parte decree is governed by Article 186 of the Limitation Regulation (old) which lays down a period of thirty days from the date of executing any process for enforcing the judgment or from the date of notice personally served for showing cause why execution should not issue, whichever may happen first. The defendant's knowledge of the decree is immaterial.—

Ref.—9 T. L. J., 119.

[Under the corresponding Article 149 of the present Limitation Regulation, time runs from "the date of the decree or, where the summons was not personally served, when the applicant has knowledge of the decree."]

13. Where a party presented a petition to the Munsiff misquoting the Section being under the impression that the Section quoted by him covered his case :

Held.—The fact that the applicant relied on the wrong Section will not deprive the Court of a jurisdiction it is competent to exercise.

Under Clause (9) of Section 557 C. P. C., [= Or. XLII, r. 1], an appeal lies against an order under Section 103. The order in appeal being final, there is no right of second appeal provided therefrom.—

1 S. D., 349.

14. The appeal was against the order of the Munsiff setting aside the decree ex parte against the first defendant. The Munsiff's decree was passed on 23-4-1082. Plaintiffs appealed against the decree on 25-7-1082. The first defendant's application for setting aside the ex parte decree as against him was made on 27-6-1082. The order to setting aside was passed on 7-8-1082, that is, after the appeal had been filed in the High Court.

Held.—When an appeal has been duly filed, the lower Court has pending the decision of the appeal no jurisdiction over the cause, and can, as a rule, pass no order thereon.

It is always advisable "to avoid a conflict of jurisdiction and to prevent any action on the part of the inferior Court which would have the effect of controlling the powers of the High Court with reference to the matter actually under appeal." "There could not be a greater absurdity in judicial proceedings than that a cause should be proceeding at the same time in the inferior and appellate tribunals of the country." If the first defendant as a respondent (in the appeal) is in a position to bring before the Appellate Court the matter to be reviewed, he can never be allowed to get an order in his favour from the inferior Court till the appeal is disposed of.

Though the application in the lower Court was entertainable, the order passed during the pendency of the appeal against the decree is set aside.— 2 S. D., 264.

15. In a suit on a pro-note executed by A alone, B and C were also made defendants on the ground that the execution was for a partnership liability. The suit which had been at first decreed ex parte was restored to the file on the motion of B alone. Thereupon B denied the partnership liability and the suit was accordingly decreed against A alone.

The High Court while dismissing the appeal by the plaintiff recorded the following findings:—The claim under the pronote being indivisible, the Court on an application by one of the defendants under Section 103, C. P. C has power to re-open the whole suit.

Though C continued to be ex parte even in the second trial, he cannot be made liable as he is not a party to the plaint pronote and as there is no reliable evidence against him.— K. P., 556.

16. A decree on a hypothecation bond passed ex parte against the defendants was modified at the instance of some of the defendants in regard to the amount of interest due on the bond, the Court in the revised decree using language suggesting that the first decree was left unchanged as against the other defendants. On the decree-holder proceeding to execute the first decree against the defendants who had not joined in the application to set aside the ex parte decree :

Held (upholding the contention of the defence).—As the interests of the defendants were identical, and as both the decrees were against the plaint properties, the second or amended decree, under Section 516 [Or. XL, r. 4] read with Section 288 [new Section 40] enured to the benefit of all the defendants, and the decree-holder could not execute the first decree.

17. Plaintiff obtained a decree for money against defendants on 16-4-1082, and applied for execution of the decree by the issue of warrants of arrest of the defendants on 24-10-1082. The warrants were returned unexecuted and the Court on 17-11-1082 struck off the execution application. In the meanwhile the first defendant who had been originally ex parte applied on 28-10-1082 under Section 103, C. P. C., to set aside the decree. On 31-11-1082, plaintiff put in a petition opposing the above application. The first defendant's application was rejected on 29-12-1083. The plaintiff on 8-5-1086 sought to execute his decree. The District Judge rejected the application as time-barred.

Held (by the majority).—The period of pendency of first defendant's application for setting aside the ex parte decree should be deducted in calculating the time allowed by the law of limitation for execution of decrees.

Per Viraraghava Iyengar, J.—The object of the first defendant's application under Section 103 is to have the decree which was then subsisting against him set aside, thus relegating the parties to the position they occupied when the suit was first instituted. If the application of the first defendant had been a valid one, it might have been granted unconditionally or on terms. The Court may set aside a decree upon such terms as it thinks fit. The Court has a full discretion in the matter. If the defendant is not at all in fault and has a sufficient defence, there does not appear to be any reason why he should be put on terms. In other cases terms may be imposed. The Court may direct payment of all previous costs in the action as a condition precedent to setting aside a decree. It may order a party to give security for those likely thereafter to be incurred; it may direct him to pay the decretal amount into Court, &c. Whether the application is granted unconditionally or on terms, it has been decided that, if execution proceedings had already been taken under the first decree and such proceedings had culminated in a sale of immovable properties belonging to the defendant—judgment-debtor and purchased by the decree-holder himself, that such purchase could not stand, and that, even in cases where in the course of such execution proceedings, the auction purchasers were strangers to the suit, the purchase moneys paid into Court by such strangers, auction-purchasers, should be restored to the judgment-debtor.

Per Krishnan Nair, C. J.—Reason and convenience point to the desirability of the Court not allowing the execution of an ex parte decree during the pendency of an application to set it aside.—

(=3 T. L. J., 128).

Overruled.—18 T. L. J., 1114.

18. An application for re-delivery of the property delivered in execution of an ex parte decree which was subsequently set aside may be made within three years of the setting aside of the ex parte decree.—

(=4 T. L. J., 35).

19. A Land Acquisition Officer passed an ex parte decree in a case under the Land Acquisition Regulation; but the claimant having applied the same day to set aside the ex parte decree, he set aside the decree and admitted a statement of defence from the claimant. After evidence was taken, the then presiding Officer who had succeeded the Officer who set aside the ex parte decree considered the claimant's application for setting aside the ex parte decree, as an application for review and holding that an application for review could not be entertained under the Regulation, rejected that application of the claimant.

Held.—The latter order was made without jurisdiction. There was no provision of law under which the order passed under Section 103 C. P. C., could be revised by the successor in office.

As the decision of the first Officer was set aside by that Officer himself, and was no longer in existence, it was clearly improper to have filed an appeal against it. The correct course under the circumstances was to have gone to the High Court by way of revision.— 4 T. L. J., 112.

20. In a suit for redemption on payment of the mortgage amount and the value of improvements, the first defendant filed a written statement setting forth several contention buts, did not adduce any evidence. On the final day of hearing, neither the defendant nor his Vakil appeared and the suit was decreed in terms of the plaint. Subsequently, the first defendant applied to set aside the ex parte decree and the Court granted his prayer.

Held.—As neither the first defendant nor his Vakil appeared on the last day to which the case stood posted, the Munsiff was right in treating his judgment as one passed under Section 152 [=Or. XVII r. 2] and in holding that he was competent to entertain an application under Section 103 to have the ex parte decree set aside.—

21. Plaintiff obtained an ex parte decree against defendants 1 to 3 on 30-1-1082. He then applied for execution, but his application was struck off for default of prosecution on 27-2-1084. On the application of defendants 1 and 3, the ex parte decree was set aside. After due trial a revised decree was passed on 31-1-1085 dismissing the suit as against defendants 1 and 3, but the decree expressly declared it was operative against the second defendant. Plaintiff's appeal against the decree was dismissed on 27-4-1086. The plaintiff applied on 11-3-1089 for execution of the decree against the second defendant. On behalf of the second defendant it was contended that as there was an executable decree against him at least from the date of the revised decree, i. e., from 31-1-1085, and as it was not jeopardised by the appeal, limitation ought to be calculated from the date of the revised decree and not the date of the decree in appeal, and if so reckoned the application of 11-3-1089 was barred.

Held (Overruling the contention).—According to the strict grammatical construction of Clause (2) of Article 153 of the Limitation Regulation [=Art. 166 of Regn. VI of 1100], the decree-holder had three years from the date of the appellate decree, even though there was an executable decree against the 2nd defendant from at least the date of the revised decree and though that decree was not imperilled by plaintiff's appeal; and this strict interpretation was the correct one.— 6 T. L. J., 66.

22. As soon as an ex parte decree is set aside, the Court sale held in execution of that decree falls through and any fresh decree, even if subsequently made in favour of the plaintiff, cannot validate such sale.— 34 T. L. R., 163.

23. Plaintiff sued defendants 1 to 4 for the redemption of a mortgage granted by the plaintiff's Karanavan. At first, none of the defendants appeared to contest the suit and consequently an ex parte decree was passed in plaintiff's favour on 30-5-1085. Subsequently the first defendant got the ex parte decree set aside under Section 108 of the Civil Procedure Code. The District Munsiff after trial dismissed the plaintiff's suit on 31-10-1087. The plaintiff then took the matter in appeal with the result that on 6-8-1088 the Appellate Court reversed the Munsiff's decision and gave the plaintiff a decree for redemption. About a year after that, viz., on 6-7-1089, the fourth defendant applied to the District Munsiff to have the ex parte decree against her set aside on the ground that she had no knowledge of the litigation and that the summonses to her were not properly served. The District Munsiff set aside the ex parte decree and the suit was once more restored to the file by an order dated 29-10-1089. Upon the fourth defendant's contention, evidence was again recorded and eventually on 17-11-1091, the District Munsiff gave the plaintiff a decree in his favour. This decision was subsequently reversed by the District Judge. The plaintiff in special appeal contended that the District Munsiff was acting ultra vires in setting aside the ex parte decree passed by the Appellate Court against the fourth defendant, that the District Munsiff had no jurisdiction to pass such an order and that consequently all proceedings had, as the result of the aforesaid illegal order, are null and void and should be declared to be such, so as to restore the parties to the position in which they were before the case was restored to the file at the fourth defendant's instance.

Held.—(1) The fact that a plaintiff does not withdraw from the case, when, in pursuance to an illegal order (setting aside an ex parte decree) passed without jurisdiction the Court proceeds to try the case, does not amount to acquiescence or waiver on the part of the plaintiff.

(2) Even assuming that there was any sort of acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff, that circumstance by itself will not be sufficient to give jurisdiction, if under the law the Court had no jurisdiction in the matter.

(3) Reading Sections 547 [new Section 78] and 560 [new Section 83 (1)] together, it seems to be clear that the plaintiff is entitled to challenge in an appeal presented by him on a decree against him, the validity of the order of the lower Court setting aside the ex parte decree.

(4) All the proceedings had, as the result of an illegal order, setting aside an ex- parte decree, passed without jurisdiction, are null and void.

(5) The Munsiff was not competent to restore the suit to his file after the case was decided by the Appellate Court.— 8 T. L. J., 286.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 867.

24. A party who has during the progress of a suit unsuccessfully applied under Section 96 [= Or. IX, r. 7] to have the order declaring him ex parte set aside and to be heard in answer to the suit is not debarred ipso facto from applying under Section 103, to have the decree passed ex parte against him set aside.— 9 T. L. J., 95.

25. A decree was originally passed ex-parte against one of the defendants. This decree was superseded by the appellate decree of the High Court. The defendant who had not entered appearance, applied to the original Court under Section 103, to set aside the ex parte decree passed against him.

Held.—The original Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application.— 35 T. L. R., 30.

Ref.—19 T. L. J., 867.

26. When the defendant makes an application under Section 103 to set aside an ex parte decree relying on his inability to appear when the suit was called on for hearing, he should account for his non-appearance not only on the date of the first hearing but on any subsequent date when the suit was called on for hearing.

The appellant is entitled to have the decree set aside if he can show that he was prevented by sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing. This means on the date of first hearing and also on the date when the suit was called on for hearing subsequently, in the light of Section 96 [= Or. IX, r. 7] which lays down that, if the Court has adjourned the hearing of the suit ex parte, the defendant may at or before such hearing, appear and show good cause for his previous non-appearance in which case he will be allowed to defend the suit. The words "for his previous non-appearance" must refer to the previous non-appearance of the defendant not only on the date of first hearing but on any subsequent date to which the case had been adjourned.— 10 T. L. J., 269.

27. The words "the Court by which the decree was made" in Section 103 are to be taken according to their grammatical construction. Therefore, so long as that Court exists, it is to that Court that an application under the Section has to be made.— 10 T. L. J., 336.

28. The defendant, judgment-debtor, in a case applied to the Court under Section 103 to set aside the decree. His petition was rejected and his appeal from the order was also disposed of against him, on the ground that the allegations, on which the petition was based, were false. Then he appealed from the decree after the time limited by law and, contending that the proceedings under Section 103 and the appeal therefrom constituted 'sufficient cause' under Section 5 of the Limitation Regulation, prayed for the delay being excused.

Held.—The words "sufficient cause" in Section 5 are no doubt very wide, but they must be construed just like other words giving discretionary power to Courts in a reasonable and proper manner. The defendant based his petition on false allegations and was defeated.

In the circumstances, the proceedings under Section 103, C. P. C., could not constitute 'sufficient cause' under Section 5 of the Limitation Regulation. The delay could not be excused (F. B.).— 38 T. L. R., 47
(= 11 T. L. J., 509).

29. The High Court cannot, under Section 568, C. P. C., [new Section 89] entertain a revision petition against an order setting aside an ex parte decree under Section 103, as the aggrieved party has a remedy provided by law under Section 560 [new Section 83 (1) ] of the Code (F. B.).— 39 T. L. R., 63 (=12 T. L. J., 371).

Ref.—41 T. L. R., 257 (= 16 T. L. J., 29).
17 T. L. J., 125.
19 T. L. J., 383.

30. (1) Under Section 103 C. P. C., what is or is not sufficient cause would depend on the circumstances of each case and cannot be laid down a priori; but the use of the word 'prevented' points to something that actively caused the appellant's non-appearance—such as unavoidable casualty or misfortune, mistake, want of notice, fraud or the like. A mere miscalculation by a defendant as to the probable course of litigation could hardly be described as something that 'prevented' him from appearing at the hearing in the above sense, without a straining of the language. Such cases may no doubt be deserving of relief and are actually relieved against by the Courts in England and America which are invested with large discretionary powers in this respect; but the powers of the Courts here to give relief by summary process in such cases is limited by Section 103 and they have no power to give relief in a case not covered by the words of the Section.

(2) In an appeal from an ex parte decree, it is open to the appellant to take the plea that the evidence on record is not sufficient to sustain the decree.

(3) On an appeal from an ex parte decree, there is nothing to preclude the Court from considering whether the ex-parte should not be set aside for the reason that the appellant has been prejudiced by the procedure adopted by the lower Court. And if it comes to that conclusion, the High Court is competent to set aside the decree and order a re-trial.

In so doing the Appellate Court is not confined to the grounds mentioned in Section 103.— 14 T. L. J., 220.

31. On an appeal from the order refusing to vacate an ex parte decree, the High Court has inherent jurisdiction to stay execution of the decree and that jurisdiction is not ousted by the provisions in the Code dealing with the subject of stay of execution.— 16 T. L. J., 24.

32. On an application to set aside an ex parte decree, the lower Court passed an order that the defendant should furnish security for Rs. 7,500, a moiety of the decree amount, within a specified time, and that, in the event of his not doing so, the application would stand dismissed. Without complying with the order to furnish security, the defendant preferred the appeal.

Held.—(1) The order requiring security to be furnished for a portion of the decree amount was ultra vires. The power of the Court to put the applicant on terms under Section 103, was limited to costs of the suit.

The claim to impose any other terms does not seem to be warranted by the words of the Section. The expression "payment into Court or otherwise" occurring after "upon such terms as to costs," should be taken to refer to mode of payment of costs and not to the decree amount or any other money in the absence of any reference to the latter. If the Legislature intended to empower Courts to demand in proper cases safeguards for provisional satisfaction of the ex parte decree other than relating to costs when passing order under Section 103, some reference might be expected not only to decretal amount but also to other decretal awards so as to embrace all classes of ex parte decrees. But the provision mentions only costs for imposing terms.

(2) The order in question was appealable. An order under Section 103 imposing terms on the applicant and providing for dismissal of the application if the terms are not satisfied was appealable under Section 557,

Clause 9, of Regulation II of 1065 or under Order XLII, Rule 1, Clause (c) of Regulation VIII of 1100, as the case might be (F. B.).— 42 T. L. R., 468 (= 16 T. L. J., 449).

Overruled.—19 T. L. J., 248.

33. In construing the expression "the decree" in Section 108, Courts are agreed that when the decree is indivisible, the whole must be taken to have been set aside. The test in such cases is taken to be whether the claim of the plaintiff did not rest on a basis common to all the defendants.

The benefit of the recent amendment of the Limitation Regulation could not be made available to a suitor if, on the date of the action, his rights to enforce the remedy have been lost by lapse of time. The rule that the presumption against retrospective construction has no application to enactments which affect only the procedure and practice of the Courts even where the alteration which the statute makes has been disadvantageous to one of the parties could not have any application to the case. The subsisting nature of the legal right for enforcement of the remedy has to be determined with reference to the date of the filing of the plaint and not the date of the decree.— 43 T. L. R., 99 (= 17 T. L. J., 644).

34. Except in cases where the decrees are indivisible so far as the various defendants are concerned, the cancellation of the ex parte decree against any one of them would be operative against him alone. The position will all the more hold good in cases where the decree originally passed is arrived at upon an adjudication on the merits so far as such other defendants are concerned. 18 T. L. J., 449.

35. The conditions which, under Order IX, Rule 13, a Court may impose on an applicant who seeks to have an ex parte decree set aside may be conditions as to the payment of costs or conditions as to the payment into the Court of the whole or part of the decretal amount or such other conditions as the Court may think fit to impose. Such conditions, therefore, are not restricted to questions relating to costs.

The words "payment into Court" in the Rule indicate that the terms may be imposed not only regarding costs but also in respect of payment of the decretal amount or any portion thereof (F. B.).— 19 T. L. J., 248.

36. If the decree of the primary Court has become merged with that in appeal, the former will not have jurisdiction to entertain an application under Order IX, Rule 13. Even in such cases, the absence of the particular defendant in question on record in appeal would enable the primary Court to validly entertain such an application unless the decree passed in appeal is an indivisible one. But in all these cases, the filing of the appeal per se would not divest the primary Court of jurisdiction to entertain applications of this kind. The method of disposal is an essential factor for consideration in the matter. To deprive the original Court of jurisdiction to entertain applications of this kind, the disposal of the case in appeal must be on its merits.

Where a decree is passed against a minor represented by a guardian who has not consented to act as such, the decree cannot be treated as a nullity. The minor has to be considered to be a party to the suit and it is open to him to apply to set aside the decree under Order IX, Rule 13.— 19 T. L. R., 867.

37. Order IX, Rule 13, does not warrant the setting aside of a decree in favour of one defendant and against plaintiff at the instance of another non-appearing defendant. What the Proviso to the Rule assumes and what is required for it to operate is the existence of a decree against more than one defendant.

So long as a plaintiff has not exerted himself to modify a decree by a review or through an appeal, he cannot get rid of the

No decree to be set aside without notice to opposite party.

14. No decree shall be set aside on any such application as aforesaid unless notice thereof has been served on the opposite party.

Examination of Parties by the Court.

Ascertainment whether allegations in pleadings are admitted or denied.

1. At the first hearing of the suit, the Court shall ascertain from each party or his pleader whether he admits or denies such allegations of fact as are made in the plaint or written statement (if any) of the opposite party, and as are not expressly or by necessary implication admitted or denied by the party against whom they are made. ## ORDER XI.

Discovery and Inspection.

Discovery by interrogatories.

1. In any suit the plaintiff or defendant by leave of the Court may deliver interrogatories in writing for the examination of the opposite parties or any one or more of such parties, and such interrogatories when delivered shall have a note at the foot thereof stating which of such interrogatories each of such persons is required to answer: Provided that no party shall deliver more than one set of interrogatories to the same party without an order for that purpose: Provided also that interrogatories which do not relate to any matters in question in the suit shall be deemed irrelevant, notwithstanding that they might be admissible on the oral cross-examination of a witness.

Or. X, r. 4 [= S. 115 = Or. X, r. 4]

2. In Sub-Rule (2), the words "pronounce judgment" have been substituted for "pass a decree."

Or. XI: I. 1. See Objects and Reasons, Page 14, Supra.

Particular interrogatories to be submitted.

2. On an application for leave to deliver interrogatories, the particular interrogatories proposed to be delivered shall be submitted to the Court. In deciding upon such application, the Court shall take into account any offer which may be made by the party sought to be interrogated to deliver particulars, or to make admissions, or to produce documents relating to the matters in question, or any of them, and leave shall be given as to such only of the interrogatories submitted as the Court shall consider necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs.

2. In regard to Interrogatories, the Indian Special Committee observed as follows :—"The provisions in the Code as to discovery are based on the rules of English procedure in force at the time when it was passed. Since then the English procedure has been amended and is now contained in Order 31. This Order has in effect been adopted in the rules regulating the procedure on the original side of the High Courts of Calcutta and Bombay and has, it is believed, been found to work satisfactorily in practice.

"On the other hand, in Mofussil Courts little use has yet been made of the machinery of discovery, and the Committee therefore think the rules of the Calcutta and Bombay High Courts on their original sides may be safely adopted without risk of disturbing a procedure with which the Mofussil Courts have become familiarised.

"This will secure uniformity of practice and also the advantage of the commentary on the rules prescribed by the English decisions."

II. Rules 1 to 11 deal with the first branch of discovery, that is, by way of answers to interrogatories. Rules 12 to 19 deal with the second branch of discovery as affecting documents.

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 ran as follows :—

"116. Power to deliver interrogatories.—Any party may at any time by leave of the Court deliver through the Court interrogatories in writing for the examination of the opposite party, or where there are more opposite parties than one, any one or more of such parties, with a note at the foot thereof stating which of such interrogatories each of such persons is required to answer:

Provided that no party shall deliver more than one set of interrogatories to the same person without the permission of the Court, and that no defendant shall deliver interrogatories for the examination of the plaintiff unless such defendant has previously tendered a written statement and such statement has been received and placed on the record."

II. Rule 1 of Order XXXI of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, as amended, is as follows:—

"1. In any cause or matter the plaintiff or defendant by leave of the Court or a Judge may deliver......required to answer : Provided that interrogatories which do not relate to any matters in question in the cause or matter shall be deemed......cross-examination of a witness."

Section 100 of the Judicature Act, 1873, defines 'Cause' as including any action, suit, or other original proceeding between a plaintiff and a defendant, and 'Matter' as including every proceeding in the Court not in a cause.

The English Rule does not contain the first Proviso.

III. For Form of Order for delivery of interrogatories, see Appendix C, Form No. 1.

3. In adjusting the costs of the suit, inquiry shall at the instance of any party be made into the propriety of exhibiting such interrogatories, and if it is the opinion of the Court, either with or without an application for inquiry, that such interrogatories have been exhibited unreasonably, vexatiously, or at improper length, the costs occasioned by the said interrogatories and the answers thereto shall be paid in any event by the party in fault.

Section 121 of the old Regulation was:—

"121. Interrogatories shall be answered by affidavit to be filed in Court within ten days from the service thereof or within such further time as the Judge may allow."

Form of affidavit in answer.

9. An affidavit in answer to interrogatories shall be in Form No. 3 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require.

No exception to be taken.

10. No exceptions shall be taken to any affidavit in answer, but the sufficiency or otherwise of any such affidavit objected to as insufficient shall be determined by the Court.

Order to answer or answer further.

11. Where any person interrogated omits to answer, or answers insufficiently, the party interrogating may apply to the Court for an order requiring him to answer or to answer further, as the case may be. And an order may be made requiring him to answer or answer further, either by affidavit or by viva voce examination, as the Court may direct.

Application for discovery of documents.

12. Any party may, without filing any affidavit, apply to the Court for an order directing any other party to any suit to make discovery on oath of the documents which are or have been in his possession or power relating to any matter in question therein. On the hearing of such appplication, the Court may either refuse or adjourn the same, if satisfied that such discovery is not necessary, or not necessary at that stage of the suit, or make such order, either generally or limited to certain classes of documents, as may, in its discretion, be thought fit: Provided that discovery shall not be ordered when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs.

Case Law.

Suit on an account. The defendant denied the account and, in order to test the accuracy of plaintiff's account, he applied for issue of a commission for seizure of all records and vouchers in plaintiff's custody and touching the transactions in question. The lower Court allowed his application on the ground that plaintiff was no loser thereby.

Held.—In passing the order, the District Judge has wholly ignored the provisions contained in Chapter X of the Civil Procedure Code (Sections 116-140). Granting that the provisions contained in that Chapter are not exhaustive, it does not follow that the lower Court was justified in ordering the wholesale seizure and taking out by a commissioner of all the accounts and records from 1079 onwards as prayed for by the defence. Section 124 and the following Sections in Chapter X lay down the procedure that has to be adopted in such cases and invest the Court with ample powers to punish the plaintiff or the defendant, as the case may be, who has disobeyed any order for discovery and inspection passed by the Court.— 27 T. Consequence of non-compliance with such notice.—No party failing to comply with such notice shall afterwards be at liberty to put any such document in evidence on his behalf in such suit, unless he satisfies the Court that such document relates only to his own title, or that he had some other and sufficient cause for not complying with such notice."

The Court shall not make such order for inspection of such documents when and so far as the Court shall be of opinion that it is not necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs.

Verified copies.

19. (1) Where inspection of any business books is applied for, the Court may, if it thinks fit, instead of ordering inspection of the original books, order a copy of any entries therein to be furnished and verified by the affidavit of some person who has examined the copy with the original entries, and such affidavit shall state whether or not there are in the original book any and what erasures, interlineations or alterations: Provided that, notwithstanding that such copy has been supplied, the Court may order inspection of the book from which the copy was made.

(2) Where on an application for an order for inspection privilege is claimed for any document, it shall be lawful for the Court to inspect the document for the purpose of deciding as to the validity of the claim of privilege.

The two Sections of the old Regulation corresponding to Sub-Rules (1) and (2), respectively, of this Rule, were as follow :—

"128. Application for order of inspection.—If any party served with notice under Section 126 omits to give notice under Section 127 of the time for inspection, or objects to give inspection, or names an inconvenient place for inspection, the party desiring it may apply to the Court for an order of inspection."

"129. Application to be founded on affidavit.—Except in the case of documents referred to in the plaint, written statement or affidavit of the party against whom the application is made, or disclosed in his affidavit of documents, such application shall be founded upon an affidavit showing (a) of what documents inspection is sought, (b) that the party applying is entitled to inspect them, and (c) that they are in the possession or power of the party against whom the application is made."

Or. XI, r. 19 [ = ,, = Or. XI, r. 19 = En. Or. 31, r. 19-A]

The original Sub-Rule (3) of Rule 19-A of Order XXXI of the Rules of the Supreme Court 1883, has been annulled and the following Sub-rule substituted (R. S. C., March 1919) :—

"(3) The Court or a Judge may, on the application of any party to a cause or matter

(3) The Court may, on the application of any party to a suit at any time, and whether an affidavit of documents shall or shall not have already been ordered or made, make an order requiring any other party to state by affidavit whether any one or more specific documents, to be specified in the application, is or are, or has or have at any time been, in his possession or power; and, if not then in his possession, when he parted with the same and what has become thereof. Such application shall be made on an affidavit stating that in the belief of the deponent the party against whom the application is made has, or has at some time had, in his possession or power the document or documents specified in the application, and that they relate to the matters in question in the suit, or to some of them.

at any time, and whether an affidavit of document shall or shall not have already been ordered or made, make an order requiring any other party to state by affidavit whether any particular document or documents, or any class or classes of documents, specified or indicated in the application is or are, or has or have at any time been in his possession, custody, or power; and, if not then in his possession, custody, or power, when he parted with the same, and what has become thereof. Such application shall be made on an affidavit, stating that, in the belief of the deponent, the party against whom the application is made has, or has at some time had, in his possession, custody, or power the particular document or documents, or the class or classes of documents, specified or indicated in the application, and that they relate to the matters in question in the cause or matter, or to some or one of them."

"This Sub-Rule enables a party, notwithstanding that the opponent has made an affidavit of documents, sufficient in point of form, to make an application supported by an affidavit (which may be contentious), for an order that his opponent shall state whether he has or has had in his possession or power any particular document or documents or any class or classes of documents. Thus, in practice, a party can, by the use of this Sub-Rule, in some cases attack his opponent's affidavit of documents, and obtain an order for a further affidavit as to particular documents.

"The new Rule considerably enlarges the power to order discovery. The original Sub-Rule was confined to the case where the applicant was able to specify some one or more specified documents. No order could be made unless the applicant could name and specify certain specific documents, and the order must be confined to those particular documents. The particular document or documents had to be named and specified, so that it or they could be identified. Moreover, it was held that the affidavit in support must show that in the belief of the deponent such documents actually are or have been in the party's possession, and have a bearing on the point in dispute. A mere general affidavit based upon a priori reasoning asserting that the applicant has reason to believe that a correspondence must have passed, and that book and document exist, would not suffice. The new Sub-Rule substitutes for the words 'one or more specific documents to be specified in the application' the words 'any particular document or documents or any class or classes of documents', and so gets rid of the limitation imposed by the original Sub-Rule."— Yearly Practice for 1926.

22. Any party may, at the trial of a suit, use in evidence any one or more of the answers or any part of an answer of the opposite party to interrogatories without putting in the others or the whole of such answer: Provided always that in such case the Court may look at the whole of the answers, and if it shall be of opinion that any others of them are so connected with those put in that the last-mentioned answers ought not to be used without them, it may direct them to be put in.

Using answers to interrogatories at trial.

23. This Order shall apply to minor plaintiffs and defendants, and to the next friends and guardians for the suit of persons under disability.

ORDER XII.

Admissions.

1. Any party to a suit may give notice, by his pleading, or otherwise in writing, that he admits the truth of the whole or any part of the case of any other party.

Notice of admission of case.

Or. XI, r. 23 [ = „ = Or. XI, r. 23 = En. Or. 31, r. 29 ]

Order XII. I. "This order is entirely new. It enables parties to require, as a matter of right, the opposite party to admit or deny their case, whether it be as regards facts or as regards documents. The system now in vogue is to record admissions and denials at the time of settling issues. While the system yields good results when it is followed, it is not always adopted, nor is full use made of it. One disadvantage of the system is that parties are not given previous notice of what exactly they are required to admit or deny, with the result, that admissions are rarely made. Again, it is left to the option of the Court to record such admissions or denials, and the parties have neither the right, nor are they under any obligation to question their opposite side by notice. The proposed provisions should go a great way to render questions at issue specific and direct. Further, by Rule 6, Courts are authorised to pass judgments so far as they are justified by the admissions made by the parties, leaving questions in controversy only to be decided in due course. This provision cannot but be wholesome. It is not infrequently that litigants are able to keep their opponents out of what is theirs by raising trivial questions, and delaying the eventual decision unfairly long."— Notes on Clauses.

II. The Indian Special Committee observed:—"The Committee think the practice of admissions may with advantage be extended to facts as well as to documents.

Notice to admit documents.

2. Either party may call upon the other party to admit any documents, saving all just exceptions; and in case of refusal or neglect to admit, after such notice, the costs of proving any such document shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the suit may be, unless the Court otherwise directs; and no costs of proving any document shall be allowed unless such notice is given, except where the omission to give the notice is, in the opinion of the Court, a saving of expense.

The procedure is not compulsory, but its adoption would result in cheapening and expediting litigation, and it is hoped that its use will be encouraged by the Courts."

III. This Order deals with admissions made by the parties voluntarily (Rule 1), or pursuant to a notice to admit documents (Rules 2 and 3) or facts (Rules 4 and 5) given by the opposite party, with judgments on admissions (Rule 6), with notice to produce documents (Rule 8), the proof of documents (Rule 7) and with the costs of unnecessarily setting out documents in notices to admit or produce (Rule 9).

Or. XII, r. 1 [= „ = Or. XII, r. 1 = En. Or. 32, r. 1]

I. A party may in his pleading state expressly that he admits all or certain of the allegations of fact made in the pleading of his opponent. He may also admit any allegation or allegations in a statement of claim or counterclaim by not denying or not stating that he does not admit the same. (See Order VIII, Rule 5). He may also give express notice in writing that he admits all or certain of the facts alleged by his opponent.

II. As to different kinds of admissions, see Order VII, Rule 5; Order VIII, Rules 3, 4 and 5, and Order XI, Rule 22.

Or. XII, r. 2 [= S. 123 = Or. XII, r. 2 = En. Or. 32, r. 2]

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—

"123. Power to demand admission of genuineness of document.—Either party may, by a notice through the Court, within a reasonable time not less than ten days before the hearing, require the other party to admit (saving all just exceptions to the admissibility of such document in evidence) the genuineness of any document material to the suit.

The admission shall also be made in writing signed by the other party or his pleader and filed in Court.

If such notice be not given, no costs of proving such document shall be allowed, unless the Judge otherwise orders.

If such notice is not complied with within four days after its being served and the Judge thinks it reasonable that the admission should have been made, the party refusing shall bear the expenses of proving such document, whatever may be the result of the suit."

II. The English Rule has the words "unless at the trial or hearing the Court or a Judge shall certify that the refusal to admit was reasonable" for the words "unless the Court otherwise directs."

III. The object of this Rule is to save the expense of producing at the trial evidence as to the documents which are admitted.

3. A notice to admit documents shall be in Form No. 9 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require.

Form of notice.

4. Any party may, by notice in writing, at any time not later than nine days before the day fixed for the hearing, call on any other party to admit, for the purposes of the suit only, any specific fact or facts mentioned in such notice. And in case of refusal or neglect to admit the same within six days after service of such notice, or within such further time as may be allowed by the Court, the costs of proving such fact or facts shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the suit may be, unless the Court otherwise directs: Provided that any admission made in pursuance of such notice is to be deemed to be made only for the purpose of the particular suit, and not as an admission to be used against the party on any other occasion or in favour of any person other than the party giving the notice: Provided also that the Court may at any time allow any party to amend or withdraw any admission so made on such terms as may be just.

Notice to admit facts.

5. A notice to admit facts shall be in Form No. 10 in Appendix C and admissions of facts shall be in Form No. 11 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require:

Or. XII, r. 4 [= ,, = Or. XII, r. 4 = En. Or. 32, r. 4]

I. The English Rule has the words "unless at the trial or hearing the Court or a Judge certify that the refusal to admit was reasonable, or unless the Court or a Judge shall at any time otherwise order or direct" in the place of the words "unless the Court otherwise directs."

II. This Rule provides the procedure by which a party may call upon his opponent to admit facts. The only penalty which is incurred by refusing to admit facts pursuant to a notice given under this Rule is that, if a party unreasonably refuses to admit facts he may be ordered to pay the costs occasioned by proving the facts which ought to have been admitted.

Judgment on admissions.

6. Any party may at any stage of a suit, where admissions of fact have been made, either on the pleadings, or otherwise, apply to the Court for such judgment or order as upon such admissions he may be entitled to, without waiting for the determination of any other question between the parties; and the Court may upon such application make such order, or give judgment, as the Court may think just.

Affidavit of signature.

7. An affidavit of the pleader or his clerk, of the due signature of any admissions made in pursuance of any notice to admit documents or facts, shall be sufficient evidence of such admissions, if evidence thereof is required.

Notice to produce documents.

8. Notice to produce documents shall be in Form No. 12 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require. An affidavit of the pleader, or his clerk, of the service of any notice to produce, and of the time when it was served, with a copy of the notice to produce, shall in all cases be sufficient evidence of the service of the notice, and of the time when it was served.

---

Or. XII, r. 6 [= „ = Or. XII, r. 6 = En. Or. 32, r. 6]

This Rule enables a party to apply for any judgment or order to which on admissions made in the pleadings or otherwise he may be entitled. The words "or otherwise" are not confined to cases where notice of admission has been given under Rule 1 or admission made pursuant to notice under Rule 4.

Case Law.

The Court can pass an order or judgment under Order XII, Rule 6, of the Code only when there is an unequivocal admission of the liability imposed. It would be unduly enlarging the scope of the Rule to make it include the decision of a part of the case arrived at by a separate enquiry or trial for the purpose of giving relief to the plaintiffs in the suit. An enquiry of that character is not contemplated by the Rule.—

I. 1. Section 133 of the old Regulation corresponding to Sub-Rule (1) ran as follows :—

"133. Documentary evidence to be in readiness at first hearing.—The parties or their pleaders shall bring with them and have in readiness at the first hearing of the suit, to be produced when called for by the Court, all the documentary evidence......... and all documents which the Court at any time before such hearing has ordered to be produced."

2. The first Para of Section 135 of the old Regulation which corresponds to Sub-Rule (2) was :—

"135. Documents to be received by Court.—The Court shall receive the documents respectively produced by the parties at the first hearing, provided that the documents produced by each party be accompanied by an accurate list thereof prepared in such form as the High Court may, from time to time, direct."

Effect of non-production of documents.

2. No documentary evidence in the possession or power of any party which should have been but has not been produced in accordance with the requirements of Rule I shall be received at any subsequent stage of the proceedings unless good cause is shown to the satisfaction of the Court for the non-production thereof; and the Court receiving any such evidence shall record the reasons for so doing.

Rejection of irrelevant or inadmissible documents.

3. The Court may at any stage of the suit reject any document which it considers irrelevant or otherwise inadmissible, recording the grounds of such rejection.

Endorsements on documents admitted in evidence.

4. (1) Subject to the provisions of the next following Sub-rule, there shall be endorsed on every document which has been admitted in evidence in the suit the following particulars, namely:—

(a) the number and title of the suit,

(b) the name of the person producing the document,

(c) the date on which it was produced, and

(d) a statement of its having been so admitted;

and the endorsement shall be signed or initialled by the Judge.

(2) Where a document so admitted is an entry in a book, account or record, and a copy thereof has been substituted for the original under the next following Rule, the particulars aforesaid shall be endorsed on the copy and the endorsement thereon shall be signed or initialled by the Judge.

Case Law.

The lower Court finally rejected in toto the pro-note sued on, in the case, as inadmissible in evidence; and this the Zillah Judge was competent to do (see Sections 135 and 137, C. P. C.). The omission to endorse the rejection on the back of the document, as provided in Section 137, does not vitiate the order of rejection (F. B.).—

Endorsements on copies of admitted entries in books, accounts and records.

5. (1) Where a document admitted in evidence in the suit is an entry in a letter-book or a shop-book or other account in current use, the party on whose behalf the book or account is produced may furnish a copy of the entry.

(2) Where such a document is an entry in a public record produced from a public office or by a public officer, or an entry in a book or account belonging to a person other than a party on whose behalf the book or account is produced, the Court may require a copy of the entry to be furnished—

(a) where the record, book or account is produced on behalf of a party, then by that party, or

(b) where the record, book or account is produced in obedience to an order of the Court acting of its own motion, then by either or any party.

(3) Where a copy of an entry is furnished under the foregoing provisions of this Rule, the Court shall, after causing the copy to be examined, compared and certified in manner mentioned in Rule 17 of Order VII, mark the entry and cause the book, account or record in which it occurs to be returned to the person producing it.

Endorsements on documents rejected as inadmissible in evidence.

6. Where a document relied on as evidence by either party is considered by the Court to be inadmissible in evidence, there shall be endorsed thereon the particulars mentioned in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of Rule 4, Sub-rule (1), together with a statement of its having been rejected, and the endorsement shall be signed or initialled by the Judge.

Recording of admitted and return of rejected documents.

7. (1) Every document which has been admitted in evidence, or a copy thereof where a copy has been substituted for the original under Rule 5, shall form part of the record of the suit.

Law of Evidence for the time being in force. Every document so proved or admitted shall be endorsed with the number and title of the suit, the name of the person producing it, and the date on which it was produced. The Judge shall then endorse with his own hand a statement that it was proved against or admitted by (as the case may be) the person against whom it is used. The document shall then be filed as part of the record:

Entries in shop-books.—Provided that (a) if the document is an entry in a shop-book or other book, the party on whose behalf the book is produced may furnish a copy of the entry and (b) if the document is an entry in a record produced from a public officer or by a public officer, or an entry in a book belonging to a person other than a party on whose behalf the book is produced, the Court may require a copy of the entry to be furnished (i) where the record or book is produced on behalf of a party, then by that party, or (ii) where the record or book is produced in obedience to an order of the Court acting on its own motion, then by either or any party; and the copy of the entry may be endorsed as aforesaid and shall be filed as part of the record, and the Court shall mark the entry and shall then return the book or record to the person producing it.

If a party required under this Section to furnish a copy of an entry in a record or book fails to comply with the requisition, the Court may cause the copy to be made and order the cost thereof to be levied by attachment and sale of the movable property of the defaulting party.

All documents produced at the first hearing and not so proved or admitted shall be returned to the parties respectively producing them.

Explanation.—Every document to prove which evidence is adduced, shall, for the purposes of this and the following Sections, be deemed "proved," although the Judge may not believe such evidence."

"137. Rejected documents to be marked, and returned.—When a document so proved or admitted is filed and relied on as evidence by either party, but the Court in a subsequent stage considers it inadmissible, it shall be further endorsed with the addition of the word "rejected," and the endorsement shall be signed by the Judge.

All rejected documents shall then be returned to the party who produced them."

II. The above two Sections were taken from the Indian Code of 1882 as amended by Act VII of 1888, and corresponded to Sections 141, 141-A, 142 and 142-A, of that Code. It is these latter Sections that are reproduced, with some alterations, as Rules 4, 5, 6 and 7 respectively of the present Indian Code.

III. In regard to the Explanation found in Section 136 quoted above, the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Bill which became Regulation II of 1065 said:—"An Explanation is added to Section 141 (British) to explain the meaning of the word 'proved'. In the absence of this Explanation, it may happen that some Judges, when they disbelieve evidence adduced to prove a document, may refuse to place such documents on the record. In practice, such documents are not, in British India, returned to the parties. They ought not to be returned, so long as the contingency of their being found genuine, continues. It is hardly necessary to add that an Appellate Court might come to a conclusion different from that arrived at by the Court of first instance."— S. O & R., Para 20.

8. Notwithstanding anything contained in Rule 5 or Rule 7 of this Order or in Rule 17 of Order VII, the Court may, if it sees sufficient cause, direct any document or book produced before it in any suit to be impounded and kept in the custody of an officer of the Court, for such period and subject to such conditions as the Court thinks fit.

Court may order any document to be impounded.

9. (1) Any person, whether a party to the suit or not, desirous of receiving back any document produced by him in the suit and placed on the record shall, unless the document is impounded under Rule 8 be entitled to receive back the same,—

Return of admitted documents.

(a) where the suit is one in which an appeal is not allowed, when the suit has been disposed of; and

(b) where the suit is one in which an appeal is allowed, when the Court is satisfied that the time for preferring an appeal has elapsed and that no appeal has been preferred or, if an appeal has been preferred, when the appeal has been disposed of :

Provided that a document may be returned at any time earlier than that prescribed by this Rule if the person applying therefor delivers to the proper officer a certified copy to be substituted for the original and undertakes to produce the original if required to do so :

Provided also that no document shall be returned which, by force of the decree, has become wholly void or useless.

(2) On the return of a document admitted in evidence, a receipt shall be given by the person receiving it.

---

In regard to the next Section 137, the same Statement of Objects and Reasons said:—"A slight alteration has been made in the wording of Section 142 (British) so as to prevent the idea that every Judge is bound to hear evidence respecting every inadmissible document. This alteration is consistent with the latter part of Section 140 (British)."— S. O & R., Para 21.

10. (1) The Court may of its own motion, and may in is discretion upon the application of any of the parties to a suit, send for, either from its own records or from any other Court, the record of any other suit or proceeding, and inspect the same.

Court may send for papers from its own records or from other Courts.

(2) Every application made under this Rule shall (unless the Court otherwise directs) be supported by an affidavit showing how the record is material to the suit in which the application is made, and that the applicant cannot without unreasonable delay or expense obtain a duly authenticated copy of the record or of such portion thereof as the applicant requires, or that the production of the original is necessary for the purposes of justice.

(3) Nothing contained in this Rule shall be deemed to enable the Court to use in evidence any document which under the law of evidence would be inadmissible in the suit.

The corresponding Section 139 of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"139. When document admitted in evidence may be returned.—In suits in which an appeal is not allowed, when the suit has been disposed of, and in suits in which an appeal is allowed, when the time for preferring an appeal from the decree has elapsed, or, if an appeal has been preferred, then after the appeal has been disposed of, any person, whether a party to the suit or not, desirous of receiving back any document produced by him in the suit, and placed on the record, shall, unless the document is impounded under Section 138, be entitled to receive back the same :

When document may be returned before time limited.—Provided that a document may be returned at any time before either of such events, if the person applying for such return delivers to the proper officer a certified copy of such document to be substituted for the original :

Certain documents not to be returned.—Provided also that no document shall be returned which by force of the decree, has become void or useless.

Receipt to be given for returned documents.—On the return of a document which has been admitted in evidence, a receipt shall be given by the party receiving it, in a receipt-book to be kept for the purpose.

Or. XIII, r. 10 [ = S. 132=Or. XIII, r. 10]

Sub-Rule (1).—The words "or public office" which occurred after the words "from any other Court," and the words "or any official paper not being a privileged document" which occurred after the words "or proceeding," have been omitted.

Sub-Rule (2).—The second Para of Section 132 corresponding to this Sub-Rule was :—"Every application made under this Section shall show how the record...... for the purpose of justice ; and shall also be verified as hereinbefore provided for the verification of plaints."

The words now omitted were inserted in the old Regulation in view "to retain, in the hands of the Courts, the power of sending for records from public offices according to the existing law and practice." They were not in the Indian Code of 1882.—

ORDER XIV.

Settlement of Issues and Determination of Suit on Issues of Law or on Issues agreed upon.

1. (1) Issues arise when a material proposition of fact or law is affirmed by the one party and denied by the other.

Framing of issues.

(2) Material propositions are those propositions of law or fact which a plaintiff must allege in order to show a right to sue or a defendant must allege in order to constitute his defence.

(3) Each material proposition affirmed by one party and denied by the other shall form the subject of a distinct issue.

(4) Issues are of two kinds : (a) issues of fact, (b) issues of law.

(5) At the first hearing of the suit, the Court shall, after reading the plaint and the written statements, if any, and after such examination of the parties as may appear necessary, ascertain upon what material propositions of fact or of law the parties are at variance, and shall thereupon proceed to frame and record the issues on which the right decision of the case appears to depend.

(6) Nothing in this Rule requires the Court to frame and record issues where the defendant at the first hearing of the suit makes no defence.

---

Or. XIII, r. 11 [=S. 140 = Or. XIII, r. 11]

---

Or. XIV, r. 1 [= S. 141, Paras 1-5 & 7 = Or. XIV, r. 1]

1. In Sub-Rule (2), the words "or a defendant must allege in order to constitute his defence" are new.

2. In Sub-Rule (5), the words "to the Court" which occurred between "appears" and "to depend," have been omitted.

Case Law.

1. The particular attention of the Courts is drawn to Section 26 (old Code) to see that pleadings are not unnecessarily prolix or in argumentative form. The causes of action and the matters of defence should be stated as concisely as possible.

[Section 26 of Regulation II of 1037 ran as follows :—

"If the plaint do not contain the several particulars hereinbefore required to be specified therein, or if it contain particulars other than those required to be specified, whether relevant to the suit or not, or if the statement of particulars be unnecessarily prolix, or if the plaint be not subscribed and verified as hereinbefore required, the Court may reject the plaint, or at its discretion may allow the plaint to be amended."— 1 T. L. R., 48.

2. Issues are to be framed regarding the "questions" at issue between the parties and not regarding each particular item of evidence which may be adduced to support or disprove the position of either party with regard to such question.—

3 T. L. R. App., 11.

3. The necessity of formally recording issues on disputed questions of fact or law and taking evidence thereon has been repeatedly enjoined upon the lower Courts.

The probability of the defence turning out to be false is no ground for refusing a fair trial to a defendant, who is entitled to full opportunity to prove the defence by any admissible evidence.— 5 T. L. R., 76.

4. When the parties or their Vakils are at issue upon a question of law—on whom lies the onus probandi is a question of law—it is the duty of the presiding Judge to decide such point and to call upon the parties to adduce evidence in the order determined by him.— 6 T. L. R., 136.

5. It is always inexpedient to allow parties to go to trial on issues of fact, without some distinct and specific allegation on the one side and denial on the other.—

7 T. L. R., 117.

6. Though no specific issue (in regard to possession of plaint property) has been given, the parties have adduced their evidence and the Courts have expressed their opinion on that evidence. Possession being the chief matter to prove title in the case, the particular attention of the parties must have been directed to it in adducing evidence. The argument that the omission to frame a formal issue on possession has placed the party at a disadvantage has no force, so far the case is concerned. Both the lower Courts have considered the question and have recorded distinct finding on it. Nothing has been urged to doubt the soundness of that finding.— 9 T. L. R., 17.

7. Where the Court itself has not done its duty of recording carefully the several issues raised by the pleadings of the parties, the issues were framed and the case sent back for retrial.— 9 T. L. R., 129.

8. It is for the plaintiff to set forth his case distinctly, so that the defendant may have the opportunity of answering and meeting the case by evidence at the trial, and the issue should embrace only points affirmed on one side and denied on the other.— 9 T. L. R., 153.

9. The trial Court should have taken the defendant's statement as to why he pleaded limitation, whether he pleaded adverse possession, when it began and whether plaintiff had notice of the same. These facts should have been ascertained and noticed in the issue paper.— 16 T. L. R. App., 46.

10. Where there is a doubt as to the nature of a plaint, the Court should take a statement from the plaintiff or his Vakil regarding the real nature of the suit before raising issues.— 17 T. L. R., 88.

11. As both the parties to the suit have adduced evidence on the question of management (of plaint properties), they must be presumed to have gone to trial on the understanding that that was one of the questions in issue, and it cannot be said under the circumstances that the discussion of that question was a surprise on the appellants. They have not taken the objection in their appeal memo and their Vakil does not say that he has any additional evidence to adduce on the point. The objection based on the absence of an express

Issues of law and of fact.

2. Where issues both of law and of fact arise in the same suit, and the Court is of opinion that the case or any part thereof may be disposed of on the issues of law only, it shall try those issues first and for that purpose may, if it thinks fit, postpone the settlement of the issues of fact until after the issues of law have been determined.

---

issues as to management is therefore disallowed (F. B.).— 21 T. L. R., 183.

12. The plaintiff's objection that no express issue as to whether the fish (the supply of which was contracted for) was available was untenable, as it was covered by the general issue as to damages for breach of contract. The evidence adduced by the plaintiff himself proved the point.— 3 S. D., 102.

13. The point urged for the appellant was that there was no issue and no finding as to whether the fourth defendant was a minor. There was certainly no specific issue on the point, and it was urged that, had an issue been framed, the defendants would have adduced evidence to show that the fourth defendant was a minor at the date of Exhibit A (Pro-note). However, in a defferent form, the question of the age of the fourth defendant did come before the Court. The fourth defendant was very backward in giving evidence on the subject of his age. The defence had not been prejudiced by the absence of any issue.— 12 T. L. J., 151.

14. The issue raised in the case and tried is general in its wording, and the mind neither of the parties nor of the Courts below, seems to have been specifically directed to the statutory qualification the Section contains. The issue was therefore remitted for retrial.— 38 T. L. R., 179 (=13 T. L. J., 323).

15. It is an irregular procedure for the Judge not to record the pleadings in his own hand but allow them to be recorded by the Vakils appearing in the case. It is necessary to impress upon the lower Courts the necessity of a rigid compliance with the statutory provisions and the standing orders of the High Court on the subject.— 44 T. L. R., 1 (=17 T. L. J., 693).

16. Rule 64 of the Civil Courts Guide is as follows :—

"The following procedure shall ordinarily be followed by the Courts in settling issues in original suits and other proceedings of a similar nature under special circumstances :........"

The use of the word "ordinarily" in Rule 64 indicates that the preparation of issue paper in the manner stated therein, need not be done in certain cases. Where, for instance, the contest is only nominal or the issue to be decided is a simple one based on a clear statement of fact in denial of plaintiff's claim, the trial Court may frame issues without going through the procedure prescribed under the Rule.— 18 T. L. J., 836.

Or. XIV, r. 2 [= S. 141, Para 6 = Or. XIV, r. 2]

The words "or any part thereof" after the words "the case" are new.

---

3. The Court may frame the issues from all or any of the following materials:—

Materials from which issues may be framed.

(a) allegations made on oath by the parties, or by any persons present on their behalf, or made by the pleaders of such parties;

(b) allegations made in the pleadings or in answers to interrogatories delivered in the suit;

(c) the contents of documents produced by either party.

4. Where the Court is of opinion that the issues cannot be correctly framed without the examination of some person not before the Court or without the inspection of some document not produced in the suit, it may adjourn the framing of the issues to a future day, and may (subject to any law for the time being in force) compel the attendance of any person or the production of any document by the person in whose possession or power it is by summons or other process.

Court may examine witnesses or documents before framing issues.

---

Or. XIV, r. 3 [= S. 142 = Or. XIV, r. 3]

1. In Clause (a), the words "or persons" which occurred after the words "such parties" have been omitted.

2. In Clause (b), the word "pleadings" has been substituted for the words "plaint or in the written statements (if any) tendered in the suit."

Case Law.

From the contentions of the parties noted in the issue paper at the settlement of issues, it appeared that the plaintiff relied on an aditional ground not stated in the pleadings; and an issue was raised and tried in regard to that contention. This the Court was competent to do under Section 142, C. P. C.— 18 T. L. R., 111.

Or. XIV, r. 4 [= S. 143 = Or. XIV, r. 4]

The changes made in the old Section are:—

1. The words "to be fixed by the Court" which occurred after the words "a future day" have been omitted.

2. The words "(subject to the Rules contained in the Law of evidence)" have been replaced by the words "(subject.........in force)."

3. The words "possession or power it is" have been substituted for "hands it may be."

Power to amend and strike out issues.

5. (1) The Court may at any time before passing a decree amend the issues or frame additional issues on such terms as it thinks fit, and all such amendments or additional issues as may be necessary for determining the matters in controversy between the parties shall be so made or framed.

(2) The Court may also, at any time before passing a decree, strike out any issues that appear to it to be wrongly framed or introduced.

Questions of fact or law may by agreement be stated in form of issues.

6. Where the parties to a suit are agreed as to the question of fact or of law to be decided between them, they may state the same in the form of an issue, and enter into an agreement in writing that, upon the finding of the Court in the affirmative or the negative of such issue,—

(a) a sum of money specified in the agreement or to be ascertained by the Court, or in such manner as the Court may direct shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them, or that one of them be declared entitled to some right or subject to some liability specified in the agreement;

(b) some property specified in the agreement and in dispute in the suit shall be delivered by one of the parties to the other of them, or as that other may direct; or

(c) one or more of the parties shall do or abstain from doing some particular act specified in the agreement and relating to the matter in dispute.

2. As to Form for Agreement of parties as to Issue to be tried, see Appendix I, Form No. 1.

Court if satisfied that agreement was executed in good faith, may pronounce judgment.

7. Where the Court is satisfied, after making such inquiry as it deems proper,—

(a) that the agreement was duly executed by the parties,

(b) that they have a substantial interest in the decision of such question as aforesaid, and

(c) that the same is fit to be tried and decided.

it shall proceed to record and try the issue and state its finding or decision thereon in the same manner as if the issue had been framed by the Court; and shall, upon the finding or decision on such issue, pronounce judgment according to the terms of the agreement; and, upon the judgment so pronounced, a decree shall follow.

Disposal of the Suit at the first hearing.

Parties not at issue.

1. Where at the first hearing of a suit it appears that the parties are not at issue on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment.

One of several defendants not at issue.

2. Where there are more defendants than one, and any one of the defendants is not at issue with the plaintiff on any question of law or of fact, the Court may at once pronounce judgment for or against such defendant and the suit shall proceed only against the other defendants.

Parties at issue.

Provided that, where the summons has been issued for the settlement of issues only, the parties or their pleaders are present and none of them objects.

(2) Where the finding is not sufficient for the decision, the Court shall postpone the further hearing of the suit, and shall fix a day for the production of such further evidence, or for such further argument as the case requires.

4. Where the summons has been issued for the final disposal of the suit and either party fails without sufficient cause to produce the evidence on which he relies, the Court may at once pronounce judgment, or may, if it thinks fit, after framing and recording issues, adjourn the suit for the production of such evidence as may be necessary for its decision upon such issues.

Failure to produce evidence.

ORDER XVI.

Summoning and Attendance of Witnesses.

1. At any time after the suit is instituted, the parties may obtain, on application to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf, summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents.

Summons to attend to give evidence or produce documents.

Or. XV, r. 3 [ = S. 149 = Or. XV, r. 3]

Or. XV, r. 4 [= S. 150 = Or. XV, r. 4]

Or. XVI, r. 1 [ = S 154 = Or. XVI, r. 1]

I. Section 154 of Regulation II of 1065, corresponding to Rule 1 ran as follows :—

2. (1) The party applying for a summons shall, before the summons is granted and within a period to be fixed, pay into Court such a sum of money as appears to the Court to be sufficient to defray the travelling and other expenses of the person summoned in passing to and from the Court in which he is required to attend, and for one day's attendance.

Expenses of witness to be paid into Court on applying for summons.

"154. Summons to attend to give evidence, or produce documents.—The parties or their pleaders may, at any time after the issue of the summons to the defendant, if the summons be for the final disposal of the suit, or after the issues have been recorded, if the summons to the defendant be for the settlement of issues only, obtain, on application to the Court, summonses to witnesses or other persons to attend, either to give evidence or to produce documents, and in any such summons the names of any number of persons may be inserted."

The above Section was a reproduction of Section 136 of Regulation II of 1087. That Section was adopted in preference to Section 159 of the Indian Code of 1882, as it was considered "inconvenient and productive of unnecessary expense, to summon witnesses, in cases not posted for final disposal, before the settlement of issues".—

II. The present Rule is the same as Rule 1 of Order XVI of the British Code, which Rule corresponded to Section 159 of the Code of 1882 except as to the time for application for witness-summons. Section 159 ran thus:—"The parties may, after the summons has been delivered or sent for service on the defendant, whether it be for the settlement of issues only, or for the final disposal of the suit obtain, on application to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf, before the day fixed for such settlement or disposal, as the case may be, summonses to persons whose attendance is required either to give evidence or to produce documents."

II. For Form of summons to Witnesses, see Appendix B, Form No. 12.

Case Law.

To obtain a summons for a party to a Civil suit as a witness, it is necessary for the party applying for such summons to satisfy the Court that there are "sufficient grounds in support of such application."—

2 T. L. R., 6.

It is not the business of the Court, but of Vakils employed, to see that proper steps are taken to secure the attendance of witnesses.— 8 T. L. R., 158.

Under Or. XVI, r. 1, a party has no doubt the right to summon witnesses and to insist that their attendance shall be enforced. But this right is subject to the control of the Court, though such control will be exercised sparingly and only in exceptional cases to prevent abuse of its processes. Where the application is not made bona fide or where it is necessary in the exercise of the Court's inherent powers to prevent the abuse of its own processes, the Court has the power to refuse to issue summons to the witnesses.— 17 T. L. J., 704.

When application for summons to witnesses was not made ten days before the date fixed for trial as provided for under Rule 82 of the Civil Courts Guide, the Court need not adjourn the case, but could dispose of it.— 18 T. L. J., 1017.

Experts.

(2) In determining the amount payable under this Rule, the Court may, in the case of any person summoned to give evidence as an expert, allow reasonable remuneration for the time occupied both in giving evidence and in performing any work of an expert character necessary for the case.

Scale of expenses.

(3) Regard shall be had, in fixing the scale of such expenses, to any Rules made in that behalf by the High Court.

Tender of expenses to witness.

3. The sum so paid into Court shall be tendered to the person summoned, at the time of serving the summons, if it can be served personally.

Procedure where insufficient sum paid in.

5. Order XVI, Rule 1, says that parties may obtain summonses for witness at any time before the suit is instituted. Rule 82 of the Civil Courts' Guide requires that application for issue of processes should be made not less than ten days before the date fixed for trial. Though the party may not claim as a matter of right that the Court should issue processes even in contravention of the above Rule of the Civil Courts' Guide, having regard to the provisions of Order XVI, Rule 1, the Courts should ordinarily issue such processes at the risk of the party even though not applied for within the time prescribed by Rule 82 of the Civil Courts' Guide.— 19 T. Every summons for the attendance of a person to give evidence or to produce a document shall specify the time and place at which he is required to attend, and also whether his attendance is required for the purpose of giving evidence or to produce a document, or for both purposes; and any particular document, which the person summoned is called on to produce, shall be described in the summons with reasonable accuracy.

Summons to produce document.

to the Court that the summons for the attendance of a person, either to give evidence or to produce a document, cannot be served, the Court shall examine the serving officer on oath touching the non-service; and upon being satisfied that such evidence or production is material, and that the person for whose attendance the summons has been issued is absconding or keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding the service of the summons, may issue a proclamation requiring him to attend to give evidence, or produce the document, at a time and place to be named therein; and a copy of such proclamation shall be affixed on the outer door of the house in which he ordinarily resides.

If he does not attend at the time and place named in such proclamation, the Court may, in its discretion, at the instance of the party on whose application the summons was issued, make an order for the attachment of the property of the person whose attendance is required, to such amount as the Court thinks fit, not exceeding the amount of the costs of attachment and of the fine which may be imposed under Section 165:

Provided that, in non-appealable cases, no order for the attachment of immovable property shall be made."

II. Rule 10 to 18 of the British Indian Code of 1908 contain the several changes made in the corresponding Sections 168 to 175 of the previous Code of 1882. These changes were mainly proposed in the Bill of 1901 to amend the Code of 1882. In the Notes on Clauses appended to the Statement of Objects and Reasons for that Bill, the amendments were explained as follows:- "The provisions of the Code have undoubtedly proved insufficient to secure the due attendance of witnesses and the prompt despatch of business. At present, coercive process cannot, where a summons is unserved, be issued until the Court is satisfied, usually after the issue of repeated summonses, that a witness is absconding or avoiding service; and even then the party seeking the witness's attendance is required to move the Court. When the Court is duly satisfied of a witness's intentional default, still it cannot attach property without first issuing a proclamation with due formality, and, on the expiry of the time fixed thereby, the party desiring the attendance of the witness has again to move the Court, which may or may not, in its discretion, order attachment. No remedy like that provided by Section 278 for the disposal of the claims of third parties to attached property has been provided, and apparently a suit would lie against a purchaser. If a witness is served with a summons and simply refuses to obey it, he cannot be fined unless the party summoning him actually procures his arrest under a warrant and causes him to be produced in custody before the Court. In order to remove these defects, it is now proposed to abolish the distinction between the avoidance of service in Section 168 and the failure to comply in Section 174, and to

11. Where, at any time after the attachment of his property, such person appears and satisfies the Court,—

If witness appears, attachment may be withdrawn.

(a) that he did not, without lawful excuse, fail to comply with the summons or intentionally avoid service, and,

(b) where he has failed to attend at the time and place named in a proclamation issued under the last preceding Rule, that he had no notice of such proclamation in time to attend, the Court shall direct that the property be released from attachment, and shall make such order as to the costs of the attachment as it thinks fit.

shift from the party to the Court the initiative in issuing coercive process where the Judge, without necessarily being 'satisfied' by any elaborate enquiry, 'sees reason to believe' that a witness has intentionally failed to attend or has knowingly avoided service. The Court is, in such cases, ordinarily to issue a proclamation and, if it thinks fit, at once to follow the proclamation up with a warrant of arrest and the attachment of property, ending up, by an automatic process, with sale in satisfaction of a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees. This attachment, like all others under the Chapter, is to be governed by the summary procedure applicable to execution proceedings, and the right of suit in respect of claims advanced by third parties is to be limited to that conferred by Clause 283. The Judge is also to be invested with the power, analogous to that already exercised by a Magistrate of binding over witnesses in their recognisances to attend at further hearings, and, over and above this machanical safeguard, the procedure relative to proclamation with a warrant and an attachment will be capable of being enforced against persons departing without the leave of the Court. At the same time, one of the causes of the failure to execute process will be removed by investing the Courts with the reasonable power of issuing warrants with bail instead of compelling a witness, as at present, to submit to the humiliation of production in custody before he can obtain an order for his release. Finally, as the Courts are to be responsible for enforcing compliance with their own processes, it is proposed to make special provision with reference to the recovery of court-fees and other incidental expenses."—India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

is :—"A person so summoned and attending shall, unless the Court otherwise directs, attend at each hearing until the suit has been disposed of." This provision had been suggested by the Indian Select Committee who reported on the 1901 Bill. That Committee said :—"In view of the possible necessity for recall we think that witnesses should be required, as a general rule, to attend at each hearing until the suit has been disposed of. ---

Or. XVI, r. 20 [=S. 172 = Or. XVI, r. 20]

The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 ran as follows :—

"172. Consequence of refusal of party to give evidence when called on by Court.—If any party to a suit who shall be ordered to attend to give evidence or produce a document shall, without lawful excuse, fail to comply with such order, or attending or being present in Court refuses, without lawful excuse, when required by the Court, to give evidence or to produce any document then and there in his actual possession or power, the Court may, in its discretion, either pass a decree against him, or make such order in relation to the suit as the Court thinks fit."

Case Law.

1. The default of a co-defendant to appear as a witness is no valid ground for giving a decree against the others, and the power of the Court to pass judgment against a defaulting party could not be exercised except on the day on which the default occurred.

If, as in the case, the Court chose to adjourn the hearing to another day on some other ground, the Court must be presumed to have condoned the fault, or, at least, waived the power of giving judgment for default, and there is nothing in the law to warrant the exercise of such power (which it is not only not imperative upon the Courts to exercise, but should be put in force with great discrimination) on a subsequent day. 3 T. L. R., 6.

2. The provisions of this Section apply only to cases of contumacious refusal by party to appear in obedience to the order of the Court.— 3 T. L. R., 19.

3. On the defendant's application, a notice was issued to plaintiff's Vakil to produce his client on a certain day. The notice should have been to the plaintiff, though it may have been served on the Vakil. The form of the notice was therefore not such as the law contemplated. However, the plainsiff admitted that his Vakil gave him intimation of the notice. The case was adjourned, and the plaintiff had no notice of any of the days to which the case stood adjourned.

Held.—(1) In the absence of a written notice to plaintiff requiring his attendance on any of the adjourned hearing days, a Court is not justified in visiting a party with the extreme penalty provided by Section 156 (old) a penalty which is intended to meet only cases of contumacious refusal to obey the orders of the Court.

(2) A verbal order to a Vakil to produce his client does not satisfy the requirements of the law.— 7 T. L. R., 14.

4. For want of timely notice, the plaintiff was not able to attend before the lower Court and give evidence on the day appointed. From the perusal of the diary, it was seen that the neglect of his Vakil to communicate to plaintiff the orders of the Court as they were passed was the sole cause of his non-attendance. The 3rd defendant, therefore, was fairly entitled to claim exemption from the costs of this appeal which was brought about by the negligence of the plaintiff's Vakil. The proper course was to excuse plaintiff's default and to exonerate 3rd defendant from liability to pay the costs.— 7 T. L. R., 18.

21. Where any party to a suit is required to give evidence or to produce a document, the provisions as to witnesses shall apply to him so far as they are applicable.

Rules as to witnesses to apply to parties summoned.

---

5. A defendant was summoned to appear as a witness in the case on a certain date. But as he was unable to be present that day, he got an adjournment. Meanwhile, on the application of the plaintiff, the Court passed an order that the defendant should be produced on a particular date and the same was communicated to his Vakil. But the notice issued to defendant was returned unserved and the defendant defaulted to appear.

Held.—Such a default was no contumacious defiance of authority so as to justify the Court in exercising its discretionary powers under the penal provisions of Section 172, Civil Procedure Code.

"The power given by the Section is one which ought, from its very nature and effect, to be used with caution and forbearance and was clearly intended to be enforced only in extreme cases of contumacious refusal to give evidence as to material facts in the case." To render a person liable to the penalty attaching under the Section, it must be shown that notice has been duly served (F. B.).— 24 T. L. R., 72.

6. Where the lower Court gave a decree for plaintiff under Section 172, C. P. C., owing to defendants' having vexatiously withheld their accounts which were material to plaintiff's case :

Held.—The High Court saw no grounds to interfere with the discretion of the lower Court under Section 172, C. P. C.— K. P., 266.

7. Where a peremptory order was given to plaintiff to appear as witness on a certain day with a threat of the dismissal of the suit in case of default, and the plaintiff defaulted, the Court has power to dismiss the suit under Section 172 of the C. P. C. The Court's failure to pronounce judgment on the very day of default cannot save the plaintiff from the legal consequences of her contempt.

The lower Court was not wrong in refusing to examine plaintiff's witnesses on the day of default.— 2 S. D., 196.

8. To enable a valid order to be passed under Section 172, the party must be called upon to do something and must disobey the order. It is not enough that the party's Vakil should be called on to cause the party to do something. The notice should have been addressed to the party, though, possibly, it might be served on his Vakil. There is no other Section in the Code which would empower the Court to decree a suit against a party for failure to obey an order of the Court.— 14 T. L. J., 586.

Section 173 of the old Regulation was as follows :—

"173. Rules as to witnesses to apply to parties summoned.—Whenever any party to a suit is summoned, either at the instance of the Court or on the application of the other party, to give evidence or to produce a document, the Rules as to witnesses contained in this Code shall apply to him so far as they are applicable."

ORDER XVII.

Adjournments.

Court may grant time and adjourn hearing.

1. (1) The Court may, if sufficient cause is shown, at any stage of the suit grant time to the parties or to any of them, and may from time to time adjourn the hearing of the suit.

Costs of adjournment.

(2) In every such case the Court shall fix a day for the further hearing of the suit, and may make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the costs occasioned by the adjournment:

Provided that, when the hearing of evidence has once begun, the hearing of the suit shall be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, unless the Court finds the adjournment of the hearing beyond the following day to be necessary for reasons to be recorded.

---

Or. XVII, r. 1 [= S. 151 = Or. XVII, r. 1]

1. In Sub-Rule (2), the words "In every such case" have been substituted for "In all such cases."

2. In the Proviso, the words "beyond the following day" have been added; and the words "by the Judge with his own hand" which occurred after the word "recorded" at the end, have been omitted.

Case Law.

1. The defendant was fairly entitled to collect true evidence, though of a circumstantial nature, and adduce the same at the trial of the case. She had no opportunity to seek out evidence, the suit being decided at the first hearing for the settlement of issues. In fact, there had been no proper trial in the case, and the decree passed without a proper trial in the manner contemplated by the Code of Civil Procedure could not be supported. The lower Court's decree was reversed.— 5 T. L. R., 76.

2. A preliminary objection raised by the appellant was that, owing to the intervention of holidays he could not get copies of the issues in time to apply for summons earlier. Any how, on the ground alleged by him, he ought to have applied to the lower Court for an adjournment under Section 151, C. P. C. offering to pay the costs of the same. This had not been done. To allow such excuses in appeal would be to encourage laxity in the procedure of the lower Courts. The objection was therefore disallowed (F. B.). 1 S. D., 302.

3. Held (Govinda Pillai, J. dissenting).—The High Court has power under Section 568 of the Civil Procedure Code [new Section 89] to revise an interlocutory order regarding the payment of the day's costs passed under Section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code in case of any irregularity in the matter (F. B.).— 19 T. L. R., 82.

4. One of the defendants in a Civil suit applied for an adjournment to enable him to file his written statement. The Court ordered the applicant to pay day's costs to the opposite party, and adjourned the case to a future day for settlement of issues;

Held.—The order requiring payment of day's costs was illegal, as the adjournment to enable the filing of written statement was not granted.

The order distinctly stated that the case stood adjourned for settlement of issues and not for the filing of the written statement.— 4 T. L. J., 288.

5. Under the provisions of Section 151, a Court is competent to impose terms on a party applying for an adjournment when granting his application. But the Court is bound to give what can be called a sufficient or reasonable opportunity for its being complied with. "There is no foundation for the broad contention that the Court could not make an appropriate order as to costs. The second paragraph of the Section gives the Court ample discretion as to the particular directions to be given in the matter of costs occasioned by the adjournment. At the same time we are of opinion that, in the circumstances of the case, the Court might have adjourned the case to a subsequent date and made the hearing on that date conditional upon the payment of costs before that date. Such an order would have enabled the plaintiff or his legal adviser to comply with the order for costs." (36 Cal., 566).

In the case, the direction that the day's costs should be paid into Court before the evening of that day was clearly one which gave no reasonable or sufficient opportunity for its being obeyed by the defendant or his Vakil. On this ground, the decree was set aside and suit remanded for trial (F.B).— 8 T. L. J., 199.

6. Section 151 of the Code of 1065 enables the Court, for sufficient cause shown, to grant time to the parties or to any of them, from time to time, at any stage of the suit.

Under Article 302 of the Civil Courts' Guide, the applications for postponing the hearing of cases should be made by a petition endorsed with the consent of or on notice to all parties who have entered appearance and the same should be supported by evidence to be given on affidavits. Order XIX, Rule 3, requires affidavits to be confined to such facts as the declarant is able of his own knowledge to prove, except on interlocutory applications on which statements of his belief may be admitted, provided that reasonable grounds thereof be set forth.

When statements are made partly based on knowledge and partly on belief, the affidavit must clearly express how much is a statement of the deponent's knowledge and how much is a statement of his belief, and the grounds must be stated with sufficient particularity to enable the Judge to decide whether it would be safe to act upon the deponent's belief.

So far as applications for adjournment are concerned, the affidavits required to be filed should clearly set forth the grounds upon which the postponement is prayed for and must contain averments which could constitute the evidence contemplated in Section 151. The provisions are laid down with a view to avoid unnecessary and undesirable prolongation of the suit by the parties and to enable the Courts to grant time to parties on being satisfied that the prayer therefor has been made bona fide. The affidavits are insisted upon in such cases with a view to penalise false and reckless statements made with the intent of evading the salutory provisions contained in the Code.

The policy of the Legislature is to allow evidence to be adduced by affidavits as much as possible, taking care, however, to have the declarants in Court whenever the same is considered essential in the interests of justice. If the true scope of the provisions relating to affidavits is clearly realised and the requirements laid down therein are strictly complied with, the intention of the Legislature to relieve the litigant public from the inconvenience, unnecessary expense and delay in the matter of adducing evidence would be carried out. On the other hand, the continuance of the irregular and the irresponsible drafting of affidavits and the countenancing of the same by the Court would be to reduce the whole proceedings to a farce and only tend to defeat the object of the Legislature in making these provisions.

Procedure if parties fail to appear on day fixed.

Affidavits not in conformity with the provisions should perforce be rejected.— 43 T. L. R., 165.

Case Law.

1. When a case is disposed of under Section 135 (of Regulation II of 1037), it cannot be re-admitted as having been heard ex parte. The decision was not an ex parte decision and consequently could not be set aside on an application as if it were an ex parte decree.

The defendant in the case applied for a review, or re-hearing or re-trial, the result being that the case was restored to the file and a decision passed reversing that originally entered for the plaintiff. This procedure was wholly irregular. As the re-admission was made wholly without jurisdiction, it was set aside on appeal.

[Section 135 referred to was as follows :— "If either party to a suit to whom time may have been granted shall fail to produce his proofs, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to perform any other act for which time may have been allowed, the Court shall proceed to a decision of the suit on the record, notwithstanding such default."]— 1 T. L. R., 50.

2. It was objected to for first defendant that plaintiff's suit which had been once dismissed for default of appearance on the day fixed for production of evidence and after the settlement of issues, ought not to have been restored to the file on a mere application under Section 108 [see Or. IX, r. 6]. As the first dismissal of the suit could not be treated as a decision on the merits, the order for restoring the case to the file under Section 108 could not be found fault with. In 1 Mad. 287, where, as in this case, issues were recorded and a date fixed by the Court of its own motion for production of evidence, and plaintiff failed to appear on this latter date, it was held that Section 148 (corresponding to Section 135 of Regulation II of 1037) was inapplicable, the case not being one which had been adjourned in favour of either party to enable him to produce his proofs (F. B.).— 10 T. L. R., 151.

3. After settlement of issues, the suit was adjourned from time to time at the request of the parties. On the last occasion when the case was taken up, the defendant's Vakil applied for adjournment, but neither the plaintiff nor her Vakil put in an appearance. The Court rejected the application and decided the suit against the plaintiff. The plaintiff applied under Section 98 C. P. C., [= Or. IX, r. 9] for restoration of the suit but her application was rejected on the ground that the suit had been disposed of not under Section 152 C. P. C., but "on the merits after several adjournments after the settlement of issues."

Held (on appeal by the plaintiff).—

The Court must be deemed to have dismissed the suit for default under Section 152 C. P. C., and the plaintiff's application for restoration was well-founded and should be granted.

If on a date to which the suit stands adjourned, whether at the instance of a party or otherwise, both parties or either of them fail to appear, the Court ought to proceed under Section 152 C. P. C., and if on the said date there is no such default of appearance but there is such default as is contemplated by Section 153 C. P. C., action should be taken under the latter Section. Sections 152 and 153 C. P. C., are independent and mutually exclusive and the one is not intended to overlap the other.

Both Sections 152 and 153 (Rules 2 and 3) contemplate default. Whereas in Section 152 provision is made for the failure of the parties to appear in Court when a case is taken up on the date to which the hearing is adjourned, the next Section prescribes the procedure to be followed when a party to whom time has been granted, fails to have his evidence ready or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit. Reading the Sections together, one is easily convinced that the one is not intended to over-lap the other. The view that, where a party not only fails to appear but also fails to produce evidence or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit, Section 152 is inapplicable, but the provisions of Section 153 ought to be availed of by the Court, is not consistent with the scheme of the Code. To sustain such a view, some such words as 'to appear or' after the word 'fails' have to be introduced into Section 153. Having regard to the persistency of the British Indian Legislature in substantially retaining the wording of Section 158 in the newly enacted Code of 1908 [Or. XVII, r. 3], the intention of the Legislature must be gathered from the language used to express it. One point of difference between the language of Section 152 and that of Section 153 is worth noting. In the latter Section, it is enacted that 'notwithstanding such default' (i e., failure to produce evidence &c.,), the Court may proceed to decide the suit forthwith. In the other Section, however, where a party's failure to appear is dealt with, no corresponding phrase is inserted, but it is merely said that the Court may proceed to dispose of the suit. Whatever be the reason for this point of distinction, it cannot be said to be devoid of significance. Probably the expressions 'to dispose of' and 'to decide' used in Section 152 and Section 153 respectively, have to be interpreted in the light of the above distinction. While the disposal of the suit under Section 152 entitles the aggrieved party to get rid of the order against him by making an application in due course, the decision under Section 153 compels him to appeal therefrom, if he wants the decision to be set aside. It may even be that, though a disposal of the suit for default of appearance may be a bar to a fresh suit based on the same cause of action, it has not the effect of res judicata to the fullest extent as in the case of a decision of the suit contemplated by Section 153. The disposal of the suit for the default specified in Section 152 is, therefore, intended to be distinguished from the decision of the suit, where the default is of the particular kinds enumerated in Section 153.

The most appropriate construction of the law appears for these reasons to be to regard Section 152 and Section 153 as independent and mutually exclusive.

In 41 Cal. 956, it was laid down that the points of distinction between Rules 2 and 3 are (1) Rule 2 applies to hearings adjourned at the instance of the Court and Rule 3 to those adjourned at the instance of a party who wishes to do some act necessary to the progress of the suit, but has defaulted; (2) where there are materials on the record, the proper procedure to follow is what is prescribed by Rule 3. But,

Court may proceed notwithstanding either party fails to produce evidence, etc.

3. Where any party to a suit to whom time has been granted fails to produce his evidence, or to cause the attendance of his witnesses, or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit, for which time has been allowed, the Court may, notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the suit forthwith.

---

there is no justification for distinguishing the scope and operation of Rules 2 and 3 as suggested in the above case. The language of Rule 2 ought not to be so restrictively interpreted as to confine its scope to adjournments made at the instance of the Court, nor is it always easy to determine in a case whether the adjournment is ordered by the Court suo motu or at the party's instance. Further, there is no warrant for reading into the provisions of Rule 3, the qualification "where there are materials on the record". The question whether there are such materials is not easy to decide. The vagueness of this condition is likely to lead to further confusion.—

Rel.—45 T. L. R., 291.

4. In Rule 2 of Order XVII, the basis of the decision is the default. On the other hand, under Rule 3, the decision is in spite of the default. The former Rule contemplates the non-appearance of the parties or any of them, while the latter assumes the appearance of the parties and contemplates some other default than non-appearance. Before Rule 3 can apply, there must be a decision on the records as they stand, and the default, be it what it may, should not be made the ground of decision. Again, under the same Rule, time should be granted to a party to perform some act for the further progress of the suit.— 19 T. L. J., 698.

5. The principles to be borne in mind in determining whether, in any case, there was appearance or not, are:—

Firstly.—If the party or his pleader is not present in Court, there could be no appearance as contemplated in the provisions of Order IX, so far as such party is concerned.

Secondly.—No such appearance could be held to have been entered even if the party or his pleader or both are present and their application for time is refused whereupon they retire from the conduct of the case. Such retirement need not expressly be stated to the Court, the same being liable to be gathered from the circumstances made out in the case.

Thirdly.—The expression of inability to conduct or a proposal to retire from the conduct of the case must be made when the case is taken up for trial on a particular date. Such intimation given by the party or his agent or his pleader after participating in the conduct of the case, the same being not in connection with applications for the grant of time, would not justify such conduct being held to constitute an appearance within the meaning of the above order.

Fourthly.—The bona fides of the party with respect to the default referred to above is not a matter which will have a material bearing in the determination of the question of appearance, as the same has to be taken into account only in disposing of an application under Order IX, Rule 13.

Case Law.

1. As the deed of sale on which the plaintiff's suit was based was insufficiently stamped, the lower Court called on him to pay the penalty required under the Stamp Regulation within one month. Plaintiff applied for a review of the order, and the application was rejected. As the penalty had not been paid, the Judge ordered the dismissal of the suit. This order was upheld.

The request of the plaintiff's Vakil for time to pay the penalty was declined by the High Court, as plaintiff had been given abundance of time by the lower Court. His suit could not proceed without the deed being put in evidence, and he having put himself out of Court by his conduct, the appeal was dismissed.— 9 T. L. R., 183.

L. R., 118.

4. Suit for declaration that plaintiff is entitled to an equity of redemption in plaint properties. The plaintiff fixed the market value at eight thousand and odd fanams while the defendant in his written statement contended that its value was only 800 and odd fanams. The District Judge thereupon ordered the issue of a commission at plaintiff's cost to ascertain the market value of the property and on the plaintiff's failure to deposit the amount accepted the amount mentioned in the written statement and returned the plaint for presentation to the proper Court.

Held.—The proper procedure for the Judge should have been to dismiss the suit under Section 153, Civil Procedure Code. The question of jurisdiction being at the fore-front of a litigation, the suit cannot progress till it is decided, and if the plaintiff would not obey an order necessary to the further progress of the suit, the Court had inherent powers to dismiss the suit because on the materials before it, it could not decide the suit on the merits.

In 21 Mad., 403, it was impliedly held that, if a plaintiff had been ordered to pay the defendant's day costs as a condition precedent to the plaintiff's being allowed to continue the further progress of the suit, his suit might be dismissed on default of his compliance with that order.— 23 T. L. R., 232.

The plaintiff having failed to take oath, the suit was dismissed. Subsequently, another member of the same Tarwad brought the present suit for the same relief. It was contended for the defendants that the decree in the prior suit barred the subsequent suit,

Held.—The decree in the prior suit oprated as res judicata.

The plaintiff in the former suit undertook with the consent of the defendants and with the approval or consent of the Court, to furnish the Court with evidence which was to be treated as the evidence or as conclusive evidence in support of his case. He failed to do so. The Court thereupon dismissed the suit, that is, it held that the then plaintiff's case had not been established. The decision of a Court so arrived at, is as much a decision on the merits

Hearing of the Suit and Examination of Witnesses.

Right to begin.

1. The plaintiff has the right to begin unless the defendant admits the facts alleged by the plaintiff and contends that either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to begin.

Statement and production of evidence.

2. (1) On the day fixed for the hearing of the suit or on any other day to which the hearing is adjourned, the party having the right to begin shall state his case and produce his evidence in support of the issues which he is bound to prove.

(2) The other party shall then state his case and produce his evidence (if any) and may then address the Court generally on the whole case.

(3) The party beginning may then reply generally on the whole case.

Evidence where several issues.

3. Where there are several issues, the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning may, at his option, either produce his evidence on those issues or reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party; and, in the latter case, the party beginning may produce evidence on those issues after the other party has produced all his evidence, and the other party may then reply specially on the evidence so produced by the party beginning; but the party beginning will then be entitled to reply generally on the whole case.

Witnesses to be examined in open Court.

I. The corresponding Rule in the British Indian Code is :—"4. The evidence of the witnesses in attendance shall be taken orally in open Court in the presence and under the personal direction and the superintendence of the Judge."

II. The difference in the wording of the two Rules is due to the absence of a Regulation corresponding to the British Indian Oaths Act and the consequent necessity to make provision for administration of oaths to witnesses.

Case Law.

1. The usual practice is said to be not to examine the witnesses for plaintiff and defendant on the same day. This practice entails hardship on, and inconvenience to, the parties and witnesses and should be put a stop to. When the examination of witnesses in any case has once begun, it should, as a rule, be continued from day to day until all the witnesses in attendance in the case, have been examined. This would avoid the heavy expenses which the parties are subjected to, by having to take out fresh summonses for the appearance of witnesses on the adjourned dates.—3 T. L. R. App., 64.

2. The refusal of the Munsiff to examine three witnesses produced before him on plaintiff's behalf at the last hearing could not be supported. The matter would have been different, if the application of the plaintiff had been to adjourn the hearing for the purpose of summoning additional witnesses not named in the original list. In the case, some of plaintiff's witnesses named in the original list were said to have turned hostile to plaintiff, and three other men were actually produced in Court on plaintiff's behalf, and the plaintiff was, in the circumstances, entitled to have the evidence of these men recorded by the Court. The case was remanded to take the evidence of the three witnesses, and also try certain other questions.— 10 T. L. R., 132.

How evidence shall be taken in appealable cases.

5. In cases in which an appeal is allowed, the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing, in the language of the Court, by or in the presence and under the personal direction and superintendence of the Judge, not ordinarily in the form of question and answer, but in that of a narrative and, when completed, shall be read over in the presence of the Judge and of the witness, and the Judge shall, if necessary, correct the same, and shall sign it.

The Judge shall require the witness to sign the deposition taken down in a language understood by the witness. In case of refusal, the Judge shall ascertain and record the reasons assigned by the witness for refusing to sign the deposition.

No deposition of a witness shall be treated as invalid for the sole reason that it is not signed by the deponent.

Or. XVIII, r. 5 [= S.177
= Or. XVIII, r. 5]

I. This Rule reproduces Section 177 of Regulation II of 1065, with the difference (1) that, in the first Para, the words "and also in the presence of the parties or their pleaders" which occurred after the words "of the witness" have been omitted; and (2), that in the third Para, the words "Provided that" which occurred in the beginning before the words "no deposition" have been omitted.

II. Para one of this Rule is the same as Section 182 of the Indian Code of 1882 and the corresponding Rule in the present Code. Paras 2 and 3 do not occur either in the old or the new Indian Code.

The Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Bill which became Regulation II of 1065 explained as follows the addition of the two Paras :—"Judges, as a measure of precaution, require the witnesses to sign their deposition taken down in the language understood by them. The addition made legalizes this salutary practice. A witness who is unwilling to sign the deposition has only to give the reasons for the same to be recorded by the Court. It will be observed that, for the legal validity of the deposition, the witness' signature is not necessary where the reasons for refusal to sign are recorded."— S. O & R., Para 26.

III. In the 1901 Bill to amend the Indian Code of 1882, a provision was proposed for the witness signing his deposition, if he admitted its correctness; and the Notes on Clauses to that Bill said :—"It seems expedient, if only in order to secure uniformity with Clause 192 [see Rule 15 Infra] to require a witness's signature to his deposition. As a matter of fact signatures are very largely taken; and the practice is useful in making deponents hesitate before resiling from their prior testimony." (This provision, however, was not adopted).—

ORDER XIX.

Affidavits.

1. Any Court may at any time for sufficient reason order that any particular fact or facts may be proved by affidavit, or that the affidavit of any witness may be read at the hearing, on such condition as the Court thinks reasonable:

Power to order any point to be proved by affidavit.

Provided that where it appears to the Court that either party bona fide desires the production of a witness for cross-examination, and that such witness can be produced, an order shall not be made authorising the evidence of such witness to be given by affidavit.

2. (1) Upon any application evidence may be given by affidavit, but the Court may, at the instance of either party, order the attendance for cross-examination of the deponent.

Power to order attendance of deponent for cross-examination.

(2) Such attendance shall be in Court, unless the deponent is exempted from personal appearance in Court, or the Court otherwise directs.

ORDER XX.

Judgment and Decree.

1. (1) The Court, after the case has been heard, shall pronounce judgment in open Court, either at once or on some future day, of which due notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders.

Judgment when pronounced.

(2) A Judge may pronounce a judgment written but not pronounced by his predecessor.

Power to pronounce judgment written by judge's predecessor.

I. Sections 195 and 196 of the old Regulation were as follow :—

"195. Language of judgment.—The judgment shall be written by the Judge in his own hand in the language of the Court or in English :

Provided that the judgments of the High Court and the District Courts need not necessarily be in the hand-writing of the Judges."

"196. Translation of judgment.—Whenever the judgment is written in English, the judgment shall, if any of the parties so require, be translated into the language of the Court, and the translation shall also be signed by the Judge or such officer as he appoints in this behalf."

II. The original Bill did not contain this Rule. It was put in by the Select Committee.

III. See Section 102 Supra.

Case Law.

Peishkars should strictly observe the rules of Civil Procedure in settling claims under Regulation III of 1067 (Land Acquisition).

As Section 9 of Regulation III of 1067 requires that judgments and decrees in compensation cases should be recorded in the manner prescribed in the Code of Civil Procedure, Peishkars should, under Section 195 of that Code, write their judgments in their own hand.

In the case, the decision was written in Malayalam by a clerk under the instructions of the Peishkar. This could not be accepted as a legal judgment or decree. It was set aside. The case should be restored to the file and re-heard by the Peishkar and fresh judgment recorded in the manner provided by law.— 14 T. L. R., 35.

II. Re: review, see Section 88 and Order XLV, Rule 1.

4. (1) Judgments in non-appealable cases need not contain more than the points for determination and the decision thereon.

Judgments in non-appealable cases.

(2) Judgments in all other cases shall contain a concise statement of the case, the points for determination, the decision thereon, and the reasons for such decision.

Or. XX, r. 4 [ = S. 198 = Or. XX, r. 4 ]

Sub-Rule (1).—The wording of the first para in Section 198 of the old Regulation was :—"The judgments of the Courts in non-appealable cases.........thereon."

Case Law.

1. A District Judge, in appointing a certain person as guardian of the person and properties of a minor under the Guardian and Wards Regulation, gave no reason for his order, nor even referred to the contentions of the parties or the evidence, if any, adduced in the case.

Held.—The order of the District Judge was passed under Regulation II of 1077, and under Section 43 of that Regulation, the order is appealable. It is necessary that a Court, disposing of a matter under that Regulation by an order that is subject to appeal, should write a judgment containing all the points referred to in para 2 of Section 198, C. P. C. The procedure prescribed in the Code of Civil Procedure is made applicable under Section 584 of the Code [new Section 105] to all proceedings in any Court of civil jurisdiction, other than suits and appeals. This Section has been interpreted to mean that the procedure prescribed in the Civil Procedure Code applies to applications for probate, guardianship, divorce and other similar matters. Applications under the Guardian and Wards Regulation partake, especially when contested, of the nature of suits; and to such applications the procedure laid down in the Civil Procedure Code with reference to the taking of evidence and the writing of judgment must be applied. The order of the lower Court is therefore reversed.—

(=3 T. L. J., 25).

Fol.—28 T. L. R., 197
(=3 T. L. J., 154).

2. The judgments in Small Cause suits must fully set forth all the points for determination, as also the decision upon each point, so that they may be intelligible when they come up for purposes of revision. The judgment of the Munsiff, in the case, does not show that he understood and considered the facts which would have a bearing upon the right decision of the case. The judgment is set aside as not in accordance with law and the suit remanded. The parties are not allowed to adduce fresh evidence.— 4 T. L. J., 107.

Ref.—5 T. L. J., 366.
Diss.—43 T. L. R., 286.

3. The judgment in a Small Cause Suit was as follows :—" The only point for determination is whether Exhibit A is genuine. I find it is not. In the result, etc."

Held (reversing the judgment).—The judgment was unsatisfactory as no reasons were given sufficient at least for a Revision Court to see whether the trying Court had applied its judicial mind to the matter before it.

The Legislature does not require Courts of small causes to write elaborate judgments as in original suits ; this is merely a matter of expediency and in the public interests.

Section 198, C. P. C., gives directions as to judgments in non-appealable cases, and this, no doubt, aims at conciseness and brevity.— 5 T. L. J., 366.

4. Under the existing law, the judgment of a Court exercising small cause powers need not contain anything more than the points that arise for determination in the case and the decisions thereon. In particular, it need not specify the reasons for such decision.

But it is necessary that the points for determination should be clearly, definitely and in the concrete formulated by the Court. The concrete questions for decision should be specified by the Court.

The judgment need only contain the decisions on the various points raised in the case. But the decisions must show that the material points in the case have been passed upon.

The compliance that will be enforced by the High Court is, not merely technical compliance, but substantial compliance with the provisions of the Code and such compliance is all that is necessary; the question whether in any particular case there has been such compliance, being for the most part one to be decided with reference to the nature and circumstances of that case.

When the judgment of a Court exercising small cause powers is not according to law as laid down in the Code, the High Court will, in the exercise of its revisional powers, as a rule, set aside the judgment and the decree based thereon, and remand the suit for fresh decision and (if need be) for re-trial also; the reason for this procedure being that the decisions in such cases must primarily be passed by the trial Courts.

In the case, instead of finding specific questions of fact, the lower Court had recorded only conclusions of law, thereby depriving the High Court of the only effective means of judging whether the decree on the facts found should be for the plaintiff or for the defendant. In other words, the judgment is no better than if no issues were formulated and the only decision were:— "The claim of the plaintiff is found against and dismissed with costs." Both the judgment and the decree founded upon it are therefore set aside.— 32 T. L. R., 285.

Ref.—17 T.L. J., 15,
17 T. L. J., 130.

5. Where an Appellate Court fully adopts the reasoning and conclusions of the Court of first instance, it is not bound to set out the reasons for its decision with the same fullness as if it was deciding the suit in the first instance or as if it was reversing the first Court's decree.—

13 T. L. J., 131.

6. The suit was on a promissory note, the genuineness of which was denied by the defendant. The plaintiff had to take all the coercive steps to get the two attesting witnesses to Court. When they were examined, they turned hostile, and the plaintiff cross-examined them. It was contended for the defence that, inasmuch as the witnesses were treated hostile by the plaintiff who called them, their evidence could not be utilised for establishing the genuineness of the promissory note.

Held.—The evidence of the witnesses had, no doubt, to be handled with the greatest caution. But simply because a witness has turned hostile to the party calling him, especially if the witness was one whom the party, in the circumstances of the case, was in a way compelled to call, his whole deposition should not be rejected, and it should not be utilised only to discredit him. When a party had to exhaust all the coercive steps sanctioned by the Procedure Code before he was able to get a witness to Court,

Court to state its decision on each issue.

5. In suits in which issues have been framed, the Court shall state its finding or decision, with the reasons therefor, upon each separate issue, unless the finding upon any one or more of the issues is sufficient for the decision of the suit.

there was very little meaning on calling such a witness that party's own witness.— 43 T. L. R., 48 (= 16 T. L. J., 393).

7. Judgments in non-appealable cases need contain only the points for determination and decision thereon. Although in arriving at a decision the Judge has to weigh the reasons for and against, to see which preponderate and to be governed by that preponderance, it is not obligatory on him to record the reasons for the decisions in judgments in non-appealable cases.

It is a well-known canon of interpretation of statutes that when the language of a statute is clear and unambiguous it must be interpreted in its ordinary sense, even though it leads to manifest absurdity, repugnance, mischief or injustice.

The word "decision" as used in Section 198 C. P. C., and Section 14 of the Civil Courts Regulation is comprehensive enough to include reasons also for the decision. "Decision" is explained as "a judgment or decree pronounced by a Court in settlement of a controversy submitted to it and by way of authoritative answer to the questions raised before it." "Decision" is not synonymous with "opinion." A decision of the Court is its judgment, the opinion is the reasons given for that judgment. It is not obligatory on the Judge to record the reasons for the decision in judgments in non-appealable cases. (Mr. Justice Parameswara Menon and Mr. Justice Narayana Rao).

Per Joseph Thaliath, J. dissenting.—The judgments in Small Cause suits should contain the reasons which induced the Court to come to a certain conclusion, and they are unsatisfactory if no reasons whatever are given, sufficient at least for a Revision Court to see whether the lower Court had applied its judicial mind to the matter before it.

Even though a strict interpretation of the relevant Sections may sustain the conclusions arrived at by a majority of the Judges, yet the fact should not be lost sight of that such an interpretation would render the High Court practically helpless to redress wrongs that may have been done by the subordinate Courts in the exercise of their Small Cause jurisdiction. If, in the interpretation of the Section, without doing violence to the language, a conclusion which would be manifestly to the greater advantage of the parties and more conducive to the better administration of justice, could be arrived at, such an interpretation should be adopted.— 43 T. L. R., 286.

8. Under Section 198, C. P. C., the points for determination have to be set forth in the judgment.— 17 T. L. J., 15.

9. Courts of Small Causes must raise the points for determination under Section 198, C. P. C., and when this provision has not been substantially complied with, the High Court will set aside such judgment and decree.— 17 T. L. J., 130.

1. If, in the opinion of a Judge, a question of fact is immaterial for the decision of a case, the evidence bearing on it ought to be left unconsidered and the question undetermined. 2. When the plaintiff's claim is found unsustainable, the defence need not be gone into.— 12 T. L. R., 177.

3. Care should be taken that the findings of the Court are not the result of inadvertence to and erroneous views of material facts and questions of law involved in the case.

In the case, the Munsiff has mixed up the evidence in all the connected suits and disposes of all the issues in a perfunctory manner. He begins by formulating certain propositions of law which are irrelevant to the controversy between the parties. His judgment is unsustainable.— 15 T. L. J., 521.

3. Sub-Rule (3).—The words "by the other" have been substituted for the words "by another." The latter portion of the old Section was:—"against a sum which is admitted or is found in the suit to be due from the former to the latter."

Plaintiff deducted the amount due to him as costs and deposited the balance.

8. Where a Judge has vacated office after pronouncing judgment but without signing the decree, a decree drawn up in accordance with such judgment may be signed by his successor or, if the Court has ceased to exist, by the Judge of any Court to which such Court was subordinate.

---

Held.—Though the only Sections relevant for the decision of the question are 216 and 243 [=Or. XX, r. 6 (3) and Or. XXI, r. 17], the question does not fall under the purview of any of the Sections of the Code. But in equity, he is entitled, while making the deposit, to take credit for the amount of the costs awarded to him by the decree.

10 T. L. J., 91.

3. The plaintiff in the case claimed to set off the amount of costs payable to him under the decree against the mortgage amount payable by him. He can do this only when the terms of the decree will permit it to be done without doing violence to the direction contained in the decree. Reading the decree, it is clear that the Court directed that the mortgage amount payable to the mortgagee was to be kept at a particular figure till arrears of rent should reach that figure, and it was only thereafter that the liability of the defendant to pay enhanced rent arose. If it was the intention that the costs should be capable of being deducted from the mortgage amount, this direction would be clearly out of place. Besides, if a right in the mortgagor to deduct the costs were contemplated, the provision in the decree for interest on costs would be meaningless. Upon the specific language of the decree, no case for the application of Section 216 would arise.—

Case Law.

1. Plaintiff sued for recovery of an elephant together with the value of its chain wrongfully taken by the defendant. The lower Court gave a decree for delivery of the animal, but did not state the amount of money to be paid as an alternative, if delivery could not be had. The animal died after the decree of the lower Court had been passed.

Held.—Under Section 203 of the Civil Procedure Code, the decree should have specified the amount of money to be paid in case of non-delivery of the elephant. The decree was incomplete in that it did not contain an order for payment of a money compensation in default of such delivery.

The Appellate Court is bound to cure the defect in the lower Court's decree and to pass a legal decree capable of execution. Conversion consists in one's wrongfully possessing himself of the movable property of another under the pretence of his being the owner of such property and in actions for such conversion of chattels, the full value of the chattel at the time of the conversion is the measure of damages.

A Court can exercise its equitable power in reducing the damages, even after decree when any subsequent matter renders it unjust that the whole value of the converted chattel should be recovered (F. B.).—

2. When a bond provides only for return of the paddy grain lent with interest in paddy, the proper course for the Court is to pass a decree in accordance with Section 203 C. P. C. In other words it ought to give a decree for paddy and only as an alternative for the price thereof.—

3. Where the decree was one for future rent payable in paddy and the decree did not fix any commutation rate, in execution commutation should be allowed at the market rate prevailing on the date of the execution application and not at the rates that prevailed on the dates when the paddy was due.

In this State, paddy is regarded very much in the same light as currency. It is loanable and a paddy loan is recoverable in kind with interest at a special rate recognised by the law. If, on the date of the application, the judgment-debtor offered the quantity of paddy that was due, the decree-holder would be bound to accept it in discharge of the decree-debt. If paddy was not offered, then principle seems to require that he should be paid its equivalent in money as on that date.— 12 T. L. J., 59.

5. In a suit to recover the arrears of Michavarom payable in paddy, the paddy should ordinarily be valued at the market rate on the date of suit, not on the date when it became due, except in cases where unreasonable advantage was intended to be taken.

Section 203 has no application to suits for recovery of paddy which is regarded in several respects as equivalent to money.— 14 T. L. J., 22.

(= 14 T. L. J., 419).

6. (1) Section 203, C. P. C., merely lays down a law of procedure. It does not point out in what cases delivery of property should be decreed, but merely directs the Court to provide for payment of the value of movable property in cases where the delivery of such property is decreed.

It applies not only to suits for specific movable property but also to suits for the recovery of paddy in kind.

(2) In suits for the return of paddy the lender should sue for the paddy in the first instance and claim its value only in the alternative, unless there is anything to the contrary in the contract between the parties.

(3) A suit for the recovery of the value of the paddy loaned under a bond cannot be treated as a suit for damages and the value should be calculated as at the date of suit and not as at the date when it fell due under the bond.

(4) The decree should give an opportunity to the debtor to pay the paddy in kind.

Per Chatfield, Ag. C. J. & Jacob, J.— When paddy is loaned under a bond with the stipulation that the paddy was to be returned with interest in paddy, it is reasonable to hold that what the parties bargained for was for the return of paddy in kind and not for its value in money. It is well-known that in this country paddy is regarded very much in the same light as currency. It is loanable and carries interest at a specified rate recognised by the law. Numerous Chitty concerns are started where the subscription is paid in paddy, and the prize consists of a quantity of paddy. Paddy is in daily requirement for consumption and for payment to daylabourers in the agricultural tracts. Having regard to the custom and habits of the people dealing in the commodity, it is not unreasonable to presume that when a stipulation is made in a bond for the payment of paddy, the intention of the parties is that the payment should be made in paddy itself and not in its equivalent in money.

There is no reason why the operation of Section 203 should be restricted to suits for specific movables, when the Section in terms does not make any such restriction. A suit for the recovery of paddy loaned falls under this Section, though the suit is not strictly to recover the identical grains of

11. (1) Where and in so far as a decree is for the payment of money, the Court may for any sufficient reason at the time of passing the decree order that payment of the amount decreed shall be postponed or shall be made by instalments, with or without interest, notwithstanding anything contained in the contract under which the money is payable.

Decree may direct payment by instalments.

(2) After the passing of any such decree, the Court may, on the application of the judgment-debtor and with the consent of the decree-holder, order that payment of the amount decreed shall be postponed or shall be made by instalments on such terms as to the payment of interest, the attachment of the property of the judgment-debtor, or the taking of security from him, or otherwise, as it thinks fit.

paddy which had been loaned. The jurisdiction of the Court to decree a suit for the recovery of paddy is in no way curtailed by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code as to the form of the decree or the method of its execution. If the Court thinks fit to grant a decree for the recovery of paddy in kind, Section 208 comes into play, and the Court has to state the amount of money to be paid in the alternative, as paddy is movable property.

Raman Tampi, J.—The Section (208) must be interpreted as laying down that, whenever the decree directs the delivery of any movable, the Court should alternatively provide for payment of the value thereof. The question whether in a particular instance the Court ought to decree delivery of any movable depends on other considerations.

The plaintiff is entitled in certain cases to claim delivery of a movable, but in other cases he cannot set up such a claim but must rest content with the value of the movable. Even where the plaintiff can as a matter of fact insist on the recovery of a movable and his claim is upheld and decreed, circumstances beyond his control and the Court's control may render it impossible, inconvenient or difficult to effectuate the decree. It is in view of all this, that an alternative decree is provided for as a precautionary measure in Section 208.—

7. Under Or. XX, r. 10, C. P. C., Courts shall, when the suit is for movable property and if the decree be for the delivery of such property, also state the amount of money to be paid as an alternative if delivery cannot be had. As there is no other provision in the Civil Procedure Code as regards the form of the decree in suits for return of promissory notes, it has to be held that the Legislature intended Or. XX, r. 10 to apply to such cases also, for promissory notes cannot be said to be not movable property within the meaning of the Section.

The measure of damages in an action for conversion of a negotiable instrument would prima facie be the face value of the instrument.— 17 T. L. J., 95**.

I. The corresponding Section of Regulation II of 1065 was as follows:—"205. In all decrees for the payment of money, the Court may, for any sufficient reason, order that the amount shall be paid by instalments with or without interest, and upon such conditions as it thinks proper.

And after the passing of any decree for payment of money, the Court may, on the application of the judgment-debtor and with the consent of the decree-holder, order that the amount decreed be paid by instalments on such terms as to the payment of interest, the attachment of the property of the defendant, or the taking of security from him, or otherwise, as it thinks fit:

Save as provided in this Section and Section 201, no decree shall be altered at the request of parties."

II. The new Rule provides expressly "for an order postponing the payment of the decretal amount. A temporary postponement is a smaller concession than a scheme of instalments; and in many cases such a discretion might be fitly exercised without waiting, as at present, for a judgment-debtor's arrest under Section 337-A."

India Gazette dated 21-12-1901, Pt. V.

[Section 337-A referred to corresponds to Section 327 of Regulation II of 1065 which is adopted as Rule 33 of Order XXI.]

III. The last Para of Section 205 was "inaccurate inasmuch as it takes no account of consensual alterations in revision or appeal," and so it is omitted.—

Case Law.

It is a well-recognised principle of law that an execution Court cannot go behind the decree or vary its terms. It has to take the decree as it stands and execute it according to its terms. Where there is no provision in a decree for the payment of the decree amount by instalments, the executing Court has no jurisdiction to make such an order.

The expression "Court" in Order XX, Rule 11, means the Court passing the decree. Under Clause (1) of Rule 11, the Court can pass the order at the time of passing the decree.

Clause (2) of Rule 11, can come into operation only if there is the consent of the decree-holder.

Order XXI, Rule 38, does not empower the Court to suspend the operation of the decree so far as the other remedies of the decree-holder are concerned. Rule 38 is a special provision enabling the executing Court to suspend the operation of the decree in so far as it relates to the arrest and detention of the judgment-debtor. There is nothing in Rule 38 which empowers the executing Court to make an order directing the payment of any decree amount by instalments.

To allow the executing Court to do so would be to allow the executing Court to go behind the decree so as to vary the terms thereof which is not warranted by law. The effect of disallowing the decree-holder's petition for the judgment-debtor's arrest and detention is merely to postpone the execution of a warrant for the arrest of the defendant. On the contrary an order for payment in instalments would, in effect, be a negation of the decree-holder's right to realise his amount in execution.—

Decree for possession and mesne profits.

12. (1) Where a suit is for the recovery of possession of immovable property and for rent or mesne profits, and in cases in which value of improvements is claimed but the amount of such value is disputed, the Court may pass a decree—

(a) for the possession of the property;

(b) for the rent or mesne profits which have accrued on the property during a period prior to the institution of the suit or for the value of improvements or directing an inquiry as to such rent or mesne profits, or value of improvements;

(c) directing an inquiry as to rent or mesne profits or the value of improvements from the institution of the suit until—

(i) the delivery of possession to the decree-holder,

(ii) the relinquishment of possession by the judgment-debtor with notice to the decree-holder through the Court, or

(iii) the expiration of three years from the date of the decree, whichever event first occurs.

(2) Where an inquiry is directed under clause (b) or clause (c), a final decree in respect of the rent or mesne profits shall be passed in accordance with the result of such inquiry.

---

Or. XX, r. 12 [= Ss. 207, 206 = Or. XX, r. 12]

I. 1. Sub-Rule (1).—Clause (a) is new, Clause (b) corresponds to Section 207 of the old Regulation and Clause (c) to Section 206 without the Explanation.

2. Sub-Rule (2).—This is new.

II. 1. Sections 206 and 207 of the old Regulation were as follow:—"206. In suits for land, Court may decree payment of mesne profits with interest.—When the suit is for the recovery of possession of immovable property yielding rent or other profit, the Court may provide in the decree for the payment of rent or mesne profits in respect of such property from the institution of the suit until the delivery of possession to the party in whose favour the decree is made, or until the expiration of three years from the date of the decree (whichever event first occurs), with interest thereupon at such rate as the Court thinks fit.

Explanation.—"Mesne profits" of property mean those net profits which the person in wrongful possession of such property actually received, or might, with ordinary diligence, have received therefrom."

"207. Court to determine amount of mesne profits prior to suit.—When the suit is for the recovery of possession of immovable property and for mesne profits which have accrued on the property during a period prior to the institution of the suit, and the amount of such profits is disputed, and in cases in which value of improvements is claimed and the amount of such value is disputed, the Court shall determine the amount or value as the case may be by the decree itself."

[The Explanation to Section 206 has been relegated to "Definitions."—See Section 2 (12) Supra.]

2. It may be noted that Section 207 of the old Regulation differed from the corresponding Section 212 of the Indian Code of 1882. The latter Section was :—

"212. When the suit is...........and the amount of such profits is disputed, the Court may either determine the amount by the decree itself, or may pass a decree for the property and direct an enquiry into the amount of mesne profits, and dispose of the same on further orders."

In regard to the modification introduced, the Statement of Objects and Reasons for the old Regulation said :—"The discretionary power of postponing till the execution of the decree, the settlement of the amount of mesne profits, &c., claimed in the plaint is sometimes abused to the great detriment of the litigant public. Without a settlement of the amount at the time of the judgment, it is often impossible to make a proper order regarding the costs of litigation. The postponement of the decision upon an important part of the claim often misleads the parties, to say nothing of the loss of evidence which the delay may cause. Moreover, in execution of the decree, the matter does not receive the consideration it deserves. Some Judges are prone to postpone enquiry into the complicated questions of mesne profits and valuation to the execution in order to clear their file of suits, and the consequence is that additional work is thrown on the Judge whose duty it is to execute the decree. For these reasons, it is intended to take away the power of reserving for execution, the decision as to the amount of mesne profits, value of improvements, &c. Section 212, as amended and adopted, requires that all such questions must be tried at the hearing of the suit and decided by the judgment and decree."— S. O & R., Para 30.

III. "In Rule 12, power is given to the Court to direct by means of a preliminary decree an enquiry into mesne profits, or value of improvements. This is to enable the Court to decide the matter in controversy other than rent, mesne profits, or value of improvements, and to have that decision, immediately taken to the Appellate Court without holding an elaborate enquiry as to mesne profits or value of improvements which may eventually turn out to be needless. Again, it is thought desirable that, even in cases of mortgagor and mortgagee, where the mortgagee claims and is awarded value of improvements, the mortgagee should not be in a position to claim value of improvements, for a period more than 3 years from date of decree. As the law now stands, where a mortgagee is sought to be ousted in execution of a decree for redemption, he claims and is allowed a fresh valuation of his improvements made or effected subsequent to the decree without any reference to the length of time elapsing after decree, and thus giving rise to the necessity of another enquiry into a matter which ought to be, and is expected to be, settled by the decree itself. This new provision would provide an inducement to a mortgagee surrendering possession, soon after decree, just as the 3 years' rule would induce a decree-holder entitled to possession to recover his property within the 3 years on the penalty of not getting mesne profits or rent for more than that period."

IV. This Rule follows the corresponding Rule in the British Indian Code, with the additional provision for value of improvements. The words "and in cases in which .........disputed" in the main para of Sub-Rule (1): the words "or for the value of improvements" and the words "or value of improvements" in Clause (b): the words "or the value of improvements" in Clause (c) do not occur in the British Indian Rule.

V. The observations contained in the Notes on Clauses of the India Bill of 1901 to amend the Code of 1882, may be extracted in this connection:—"It is proposed to affirm a decision interpreting a deferred investigation into mesne profits under Section 211 [ = S. 206 of old Regulation ] as a proceeding in the suit and to supersede the provisions of Clauses (a) and (b) of Section 244 [ =S. 238 of old Regulation ] in so far as they relegate an enquiry directed under Section 212 [ = S. 207 of old Regulation] to the execution department. * * The inquiry will be as much a part of the suit as any other proceeding therein, with this single difference that objections to the principle of the decision must be taken in appeal against the preliminary decree, while pleas capable of being argued in appeal against the final decree will be restricted to matters affecting the amount of mesne profits. The check on undue delay will be sought, not in the law relating to the limitation of the period for applications, but in that regulating the hearing of pending suits; and the plaintiff will be bound to prosecute the inquiry, under stress of the ordinary penalties for default, with the same diligence as though this portion of the case were a separate suit for mesne profits. With a view, however, to the further curtailment of delay and expense, it is suggested that the claim for mesne profits should not continue till actual delivery of possession, if the defendant prefers to relinquish the land with notice to the plaintiff.

The Explanation at present appended to Section 211 has been removed to its proper place among the definitions."

Case Law.

1. The question of mesne profits may be left for settlement in execution when the suit is for land and profits, but not when the suit is for mesne profits alone in the shape of damages To do otherwise is to reserve for settlement in execution the very question and perhaps the only one on which the parties were at issue, and such a procedure is unwarranted.— 3 T. L. R., *41.

[Note the new Rule.]

2. A and B obtained a decree against C for recovery of certain property with mesne profits. They subsequently sued also D, E and others, the alienees of C. to recover from them mesne profits on the portions of the property held by them during the pendency of the former suit from the date of their alienation.

Held.—(1) The claim against C was res judicata, inasmuch as a decree had already been obtained against him on the same cause of action for the same relief; but the claim against D, E and others, the alienees pendente lite is not open to that objection because they were no parties to the former suit.

(2) A and B have a cause of action for profits against all those who hold possession of their properties since the decree in the former suit did not deal with that claim.— 6 T. L. R., *121.

3. In cases where the holder of a decree dispossesses those who are not parties to his decree but are in possession of the property concerned, the latter are entitled to restoration of the property on proving their possession unless the decree-holder proves, as against them, a better title. A person so dispossessed and suing for restoration of the property cannot claim mesne profits, under these Sections.

The general principles of law are that no man should be deprived of the property in his possession without the authority of a decree of competent Court duly obtained against him ; and that those who seek to disturb present possession must prove their title to do so. When the holder of a decree dispossesses those who are not parties to his decree and calls upon them to prove their title, he violates these sound principles. From the provisions of Sections 213 and 214 (of Regulation II of 1037) which allow the person dispossessed to recover possession free of cost and the decree-holder to establish his title against the possession without further charge, it is clear that the Legislature did not intend to confer an additional privilege upon decree-holders as against strangers to the decree. Possession which is said to be nine points of law will cease to be of the great importance which it, in the interests of commonwealth, deservedly enjoys, if A, by obtaining a decree against B, could dispossess C of the property in his possession, and call upon him to prove his title and be allowed to retain possession without proving a better title.

Claim to mesne profits is beyond the scope of the provisions of Sections 213 and 214 which are simply intended to secure possession of immovable property. [Section 213 deals with obstruction to execution of decree by a bona fide claimant other than the defendant and the investigation of the claim in the same manner and with the like power as if a suit for the property had been instituted by the decree-holder against the claimant.

Section 214 refers to cases where a person other than the defendant dispossessed of immovable property, disputes the right of the decree-holder to be put into possession of such property and the investigation of the matter in the same manner and with the like powers as if a suit for the property had been instituted by the applicant against the decree-holder.].— 9 T. L. R., 46.

4. Under the new Procedure Code, Section 207, questions regarding improvements etc., must be determined by the Court which adjudicates on the case and cannot be reserved for settlement in execution.—

9 T. L. R., 147.

5. Questions as to value of improvements should not be reserved for settlement in execution.— 9 T. L. R., 185.

6. As an exception to the general rule that a plaintiff cannot recover more than what he claims in the plaint, a plaintiff is entitled to recover the ascertained amount of mesne profits, although it may exceed the amount stated in the plaint.

The reason for making an exception in favour of mesne profits is that the person claiming them, being generally out of possession, could hardly give the exact amount of profits due to him and that the party in possession who is to account for profits should not take advantage of his adversary's imperfect knowledge.—

9 T. L. R. App., 12.

7. It is imperative that the Courts should determine the value of improvements claimed by the decree itself ; and not leave it for settlement in execution.—

8. A plaintiff whose claim for future mesne profits was neither expressly allowed nor refused in the decree might be allowed to bring a fresh suit for profits from the date of the decree up to the date of satisfaction of the decree.

It is entirely discretionary with the Courts to adjudicate upon the claim to future mesne profits or to leave it to the plaintiff's option to enforce it by a separate suit. This is clear from the express language of Section 206 and especially from the words "may provide" therein. If the Court considers the claim to future profits and either allows it or disallows it, its decision would certainly bar a fresh suit in respect of the same. From the decree or judgment being silent on the point, it may be presumed that the Court declined to allow it unless there are circumstances pointing to the conclusion that there was no adjudication on the matter (F. B.).—

9. In the absence of any direction in the decree for the ascertainment and award of the value of improvements in execution, it is not open to a Court executing the decree to go into the question.

Questions relating to the value or amount of improvements should be determined by the decree itself and no separate suit for the same is maintainable.— 17 T. L. R., 87.

Fol.— 28 T. L. R., 129 ( =2 T. L. J., 478).

10. A Jenmi obtained a decree for ejectment of his tenants and for 3 years' Michavarom from the date of the decree. He did not get possession of the lands for some time. The present suit was for recovery of mesne profits that accrued subsequent to the 3 years fixed in the prior decree.

Held.—The plaintiff's suit for the subsequent mesne profits was not res judicata and was maintainable.— 17 T. L. R., 115.

11. Plaintiff, on 8-5-1069, brought a suit for redemption and for arrears of Michavarom, future Michavarom and costs, and valued the claim for the Michavarom of 1067 and 1068 and for the Chingom crop of 1069. The Munsiff allowed redemption and the Michavarom for 1067 and 1068, but dismissed the rest of the claim. Plaintiff obtained possession of the property in execution of the decree in 1074, but the Michavarom from 1069 was withheld. The present suit was for recovery of Michvarom from 1069 to 1074. Defendant contended that the suit was barred by res judicata inasmuch as the plaintiff had, in the previous suit, claimed the future mesne profits and had been disallowed the same.

Held.—Section 207 is imperative as regards mesne profits which have accrued due prior to the institution of the suit. Section 206 is an enabling Section, and there is no bar to a fresh suit for future mesne profits in those cases in which the Court has not exercised the discretion vested in it.

Under Section 207, the expression "the rest of the claim is dismissed" referred not to mesne profits after suit, but to mesne profits claimed for the period before suit in excess of the period, for which the Court considered the plaintiff entitled to claim mesne profits.— 1 S. D., 90.

12. The final order contemplated by Section 206 is the decree of the Appellate Court in cases where appeals are preferred.

The three years laid down in the Section is to be calculated from the date of the final order of the High Court where an appeal was preferred from the original decree.— 1 S. D., 196.

13. Where, in execution of a decree, it was found that the decree fixed no time for which mesne profits were recoverable in execution:

Held.—The period for which the profits could be allowed by the Court is three years.— 4 S. D., 227.

14. In a suit for partition and other reliefs, the decree awarded past and future mesne profits but refused interest which decree was confirmed by the Appellate Court. In execution, the Court awarded interest to plaintiff and the order became final as no appeal was presented against it. The plaintiff having realised the mesne profits and interest, the 1st defendant applied for refund of these two sums alleging that they were illegally recovered from him. Whereupon the Court disallowed his prayer.

Held (on appeal).—As the 1st defendant did not appeal against the order awarding interest to plaintiff he was bound by that order. Orders in execution proceedings not appealed from, are binding on the parties thereto in all subsequent proceedings on principles analogous to those of res judicata.

Under Section 206, even where a decree is silent about interest, it cannot be awarded in execution.— K. P., 281.

15. A decree for partition passed by the Zillah Judge in a suit by the plaintiff, a member of a Hindu family, provided, inter alia, for "future mesne profits." The decree was confirmed by the High Court on the 26th Makarom 1074. The report of the commissioners deputed to divide the properties was accepted and a decree in pursuance thereof passed on the 31st Adi 1081. On the plaintiff applying for execution of the decree relating to mesne profits :

Held.—(1) The date of decree for purposes of Section 206, C. P. C., should be taken to be that of the final decree, viz., 31st Adi 1081.

(2) "Future mesne profits" meant mesne profits up to date of possession. Section 206, C. P. C., having no application to decrees in suits for partition by members of a Hindu family, inasmuch as the plaintiff has no specific interest in properties until he obtains a decree for partition.

Per Hunt, J.—The only question is whether future mesne profits means from the date of the plaint or from date of decree. In the absence of any direction to the contrary, the Courts must be deemed to have awarded future mesne profits from the date of plaint ; and 21 All., 361 lays down a practical rule for guidance where there is any ambiguity in the terms of the decree sought to be executed ; for it holds that the Court executing the decree must in such a case construe it in accordance with law.—

16. A decree provided for payment of mesne profits at a particular rate without specifying from and up to what date they were payable. The plaint claimed mesne profits from 1073 and the appellate decree in the case was dated 13-11-78.

Held.—(1) The decree, being in its terms ambiguous, it is competent to the Court executing it to refer to the pleadings in the suit in which such decree was passed, to ascertain its precise meaning. So construed, mesne profits were payable from the date claimed in the plaint.

(2) Under Section 206, C. P. C., the decree-holder was entitled to get mesne profits only for three years from the date of the final or appellate decree.—

1 T. L. J., 375.

17. The decree of the Court awarded to the plaintiff "future mesne profits," without mentioning whether such mesne profits should be calculated from the date of the institution of the suit, or from the date of the decree.

Held.—The expression "future mesne profits" should, in the absence of any direction to the contrary, be construed to mean mesne profits from the date of the plaint, and not from the date of the decree, and this view was supported by the language of Section 206, C. P. C.—

2 T. L. J., 291.

18. A mortgagee, defendant, is entitled to claim compensation for improvements effected between the date of the decree and the time of actual eviction or redemption even though the value of improvements made before decree has been settled by the decree itself. Such claim must be determined in execution as the question may be said to come within the provisions of Section 238 of the Civil Procedure Code [new Section 40], and not by a separate suit.

Improvements made before decree and whose value has been fixed by the decree are not liable to be re-valued on date of delivery of property on the ground that they have increased in value owing to the labour spent upon them by the mortgagee ; and this view does not militate against the rule which allows the mortgagor to claim a reduction in the value of improvements adjudged by the decree if the loss is due to misfeasance of the mortgagee, as the basis of the mortgagor's right is entirely a different one.

Per Ramachandra Row, J.—As regards improvements made after decree, it appears that it is unjust to deny the defendant's right to compensation for the same. To say that the defendant ought not to have made improvements after decree is unreasonable. The defendant's possession after decree is not that of a trespasser. He has a substantial interest in the property. He continues to be interested in its efficient condition till he is redeemed. Whether after the decree for redemption the relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant is that of the mortgagor and mortgagee or not, it is clear that the defendant acts lawfully in making improvements, and is entitled to their value on the principle of Section 70 of the Contract Act. The right to claim compensation for such improvements must be determined in execution. Section 238 [new Section 40] of the Civil Procedure Code must be liberally construed so as to include within its scope such a claim.

Per Muttunayagom Pillai, J.—The right of the mortgagee to claim the value of improvements, if any, effected by him after suit was not meant to be curtailed by Section 207 of the Civil Procedure Code. As the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee subsists between the parties even after the decree is passed, the right to make improvements continues even after decree; and if that be so, it is plain on ordinary principles of justice that the increase should not go into the pocket of the mortgagor without his paying the sum of money which caused the increase, merely because it happened to be made after the passing of the decree. Such improvements could be claimed by him in execution, Section 238 of the Civil Procedure Code being wide enough to enable the execution Court to entertain and dispose of the claim.

Per Viraraghava Iyengar, J.—Section 207 of the Civil Procedure Code could not be interpreted as impliedly debarring the mortgagee from making improvements subsequent to the date of the decree and the question as to the value of such further improvement could be gone into in execution (F. B.).— 28 T. L. R., 129 (=2 T. L. J., 478).

[Note the change in the new Rule.]

19. Certain properties were outstanding on lease in favour of the defendants, who had besides the option of purchasing them for a certain specified sum before the expiry of the period of the lease. The defendants did not avail themselves of the option of purchasing the properties. The lease expired on 14-2-77 and after the expiry of the lease the lessors (the owners of the properties) sold the properties to the plaintiff. Plaintiff brought a suit (on 27-7-77) for the arrears of rent up to 14-2-77 and also for rent, mesne profits, or damages for wrongful occupation up to 14-7-77. Plaintiff did not in that suit claim recovery of possession as his allegation was that he had taken peaceable possession nine days before the date of suit. Plaintiff got a decree as prayed for. Plaintiff next brought a suit on 16-8-'79, for possession and mesne profits from 6-9-'77, on the allegation that, though plaintiff took peaceable possession on 18-7-'77, defendants trespassed on the properties on 6-9-'77. The defendants reiterated the contention they had raised in the previous suit, viz., that plaintiff never got possession and that they (defendants) were all along in possession and that the claim for recovery was barred under Section 39 C. P. C. It was held in appeal by the High Court that plaintiff's claim to recover possession was barred under Section 39, but that his title subsisted so as to support a further suit for mesne profits. Plaintiff was awarded the amount claimed as damages for wrongful detention. The present suit was brought in 1088 for mesne profits from 1079. The plaintiff alleged that the decree of the High Court in his second suit (A. S. 265 of 1082) created as it were a rent charge on the the property. The defendants contended that the suit was not maintainable. The lower Court awarded mesne profits for three years and held the rest of the claim was barred. Both parties appealed.

Held.—The decree of the High Court in A. S. 265 of 1082 did not create a rent charge as claimed by plaintiff, and the observation in the judgment as to the possible preservation of the plaintiff's title by successive decrees for mesne profits and peaceable re-entry was opposed to any such construction being put on the decree.

An owner who had lost his judicial remedy to recover possession by means of suit and whose jus possidendis had been reduced to a bare chance of peaceable re-entry could not recover profits from the person in possession, on the footing that such possession was wrongful.— 6 T. L. J., 255.

20. 'Mesne profits' does not as a matter of law include also 'interest on mesne profits'. The decree-holder, therefore, is not entitled as a matter of law to get interest on mesne profits where the decree sought to be executed does not provide for such interest.— 7 T. L. J., 8.

[See definition of 'mesne profits'—Section 2 (12).]

21. A decree for partition directed delivery of possession of a specific share of immovable property with mesne profits till the date of recovery of possession. Owing to the obstructions created by the judgment-debtor, the decree-holder was put in possession only about five years after the passing of the final decree. The execution Court awarded mesne profits till the date of recovery of possession. In appeal it was contended for the appellant that only three years' mesne profits could be awarded, and the respondent contended that the period during which the execution of the decree was stayed on the application of the judgment-debtor should be excluded on the analogy of the provisions of Sections 15 and 16 of the Limitation Regulation (old).

Held.—(1) Under Section 206, only three years' mesne profits could be awarded. Even if the decree allowed mesne profits till the date of delivery of possession, it must be taken to be subject to the implied period of limitation mentioned in that Section.

(2) The provisions of Sections 15 and 16 of the Limitation Regulation did not qualify those of Section 206 of the Civil Procedure Code.— 33 T. L. R., 258
(= 7 T. L. J., 245).

Fol.—18 T. L. J., 81.

22. In a prior suit between the parties, the High Court decreed to the plaintiff one-half of the plaint properties therein with mesne profits ; but the High Court did not say up to which date mesne profits should be awarded. This was in 1080. The execution Court awarded mesne profits for three years from the date of the High Court decree, and plaintiff recovered it. The present suit was brought for mesne profits for three years after the above period, because delivery of possession of the property was given to the plaintiff only after 6 years after the date of the High Court decree.

The defendant contended, inter alia, that the suit was not maintainable, as this question related to the execution of the prior decree, which under Section 238 of the C. P. C. [new Section 40], should be decided in execution, and not by a separate suit.

Held.—(1) A decree which prescribed no specific period (for which mesne profits were awarded) was governed by Section 206 of the C. P. C., and under it no more than three years' mesne profits from the date of the decree was awardable at the highest.

(2) Where under the decree in the prior suit no more than three years' future mesne profits was intended to be dealt with, a separate suit for mesne profits for the period beyond the three years covered by the decree was maintainable.—

23. The claim for mesne profits is virtually a claim for damages. 'Mesne profits are in the nature of damages which the Court may mould according to the justice of the case.' There is no abstract principle independent of the particular facts which determines the assessment of mesne profits in every case. The facts have first to be ascertained: and then the determining principle will be: what was the character of the possession of the plaintiff before he was ousted? and what has the owner lost?

Where the defendant originally came into possession under a good and valid title and it is his continuance in possession after his holding was sold in execution that has made him a wrong doer, the character of the possession before trespass by the defendant should be ascertained to arrive at the true measure of damages, because such possession is a fair index of intention as to the mode of occupation if there was no trespass.

Where the owner is a person who does not cultivate the land himself, the assessment of mesne profits should be made on the basis of a fair and reasonable rent.

The definition of "mesne profits" given in Section 206 does not include interest, and, in this respect, it differs from the provision in the British Indian Civil Procedure Code.

There is no rule of law obliging the Court to allow interest on mesne profits: and it is a matter for the discretion of the Court, upon consideration of the facts, whether to allow interest or not.—

( = 12 T. L. J., 72).

The old definition has been superseded by the new.—See Section 2 (12).]

24. If the claim for possession fails, the claim for mesne profits must also fail along with it.— 15 T. L. J., 202.

25. Section 206 places an absolute time-limit on the period for which mesne profits may be recovered, and it is not therefore permissible to read into it the provisions of Section 15 of the Limitation Regulation. Section 206 is not controlled by Section 15 of the Limitation Regulation.

Under the general rule, all amounts similar to Michavarom and Chumadu could be taken into account on redemption, and no special limit applies to the claim for such dues apart from that which would apply to the mortgage itself.

The fact that the decree-holder got delivery of possession only after the three years stipulated in the decree cannot enlarge his rights in that respect.

The decree has, in the generality of cases, a right of fresh suit for the mesne profits which are refused to him in execution.—

(=18 T. L. J., 81).

26. It is settled by a series of decisions that a unilateral expression by one co-parcener of intention to terminate jointness is enough to create the status of division and that consequently the filing of a suit for partition is enough to make the plaintiffs from that moment a divided member of the family. A suit for partition, therefore, is a suit for specific property, and Section 206, C. P. C., applies to partition decrees also and more than three years' mesne profits cannot be realised in execution by the decree-holder.

The observation contained in 1 T. L. J., 249 about the inapplicability of Section 206 to partition suits was obiter, as the question did not arise at all on the facts of that case and the real dispute in that case was about the interpretation of the words "future mesne profits" used in the decree.—

27. A hypothecatee from the mortgagee cannot have greater rights against the mortgagor than the mortgagee himself has. The hypothecatee's right is subject to all the liabilities of the mortgagee to the mortgagor. His security attaches only to the mortgage amount that might be left after settlement of all accounts between the mortgagor and the mortgagee. Those accounts have to be taken in a suit for redemption, up to the date on which the property is actually redeemed, i.e., passes back into the possession of the mortgagor. The mesne profits due to the mortgagor on account of the delay in delivering the mortgaged property to him after the deposit of the mortgage amount is one item in the account. The amount payable to the mortgagee has to be determined on striking a final balance in the account between him and the mortgagor. That necessarily means that the mesne profits due to the latter have to be set off pro tanto against the mortgage amount and the value of improvements, if any, payable to the mortgagee.—

28. The second defendant leased the plaint property to the plaintiff directing him to recover possession from the first defendant a prior lessee. The plaintiff accordingly brought the suit to recover possession of the property with mesne profits. During the pendency of the suit in the Munsiff's Court, the first defendant put in a petition before the Court, whereby he surrendered the property and disclaimed liability for rent from that date.

Held.—In the circumstances disclosed, the obstinate refusal of the plaintiff to take possession of the property vacated by the first defendant till after the decree could not be left out of account. The plaintiff's claim for mesne profits after the date of the surrender of the property by the first defendant had to be disallowed. Mesne profits were in the nature of damages, and each case had to be dealt with on its merits.

29. Some of the Adhikaris of a Devaswom sued the defendants for an injunction restraining them from performing certain services in the temple on the ground that they had been removed from the offices by the management of the Devaswom. This prayer was allowed by the trial Court as regards the second defendant. On appeal, the decision was reversed and the suit dismissed with costs as against him also. The second defendant then applied to the lower Court in execution for recovery of his costs and in addition a sum towards damages. The lower Court allowed the claim only to a smaller amount. The second defendant filed an appeal as regards the balance disallowed, and the Devaswom as regards the amount awarded.

Held.—The claim for damages could not be said to be one for mesne profits, as it did not relate to profits which the person in wrongful possession of property actually received or might with ordinary deligence have received therefrom.—

I. This Rule was not in the original Bill, but was inserted by the Select Committee.

II. The provision existed in the Indian Code of 1882—Section 213. It was not adopted in Regulation II of 1065, and the Statement of Objects and Reasons said :—"31. As administration suits are unknown in this country, and under the systems of law here administered, there is hardly any necessity for an administration suit, the retention of Section 213 seems quite unnecessary. It is accordingly omitted."

III. This Rule reproduces the corresponding Rule in the British Indian Code with the difference that the words—"within the local limits of the Courts in which the administration-suit is pending"—which occur in that Rule after the words "for the time being", have been omitted. It may be noted that, in British India, there is the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act as to Presidency Towns, and the Provincial Insolvency Act as to the rest of British India.

IV. The British Indian Rule is almost the same as Section 10 of the Judicature Act of 1875.

The law in Travancore allows a suit for an account of the property of an intestate and for its due administration under decree.

Decree in pre-emption suit.

(a) specify a day on or before which the purchase-money shall be so paid, and

(b) direct that on payment into Court of such purchase-money, together with the costs (if any) decreed against the plaintiff, on or before the day referred to in clause (a), the defendant shall deliver possession of the property to the plaintiff, whose title thereto shall be deemed to have accrued from the date of such payment, but that, if the purchase-money and the costs (if any) are not so paid, the suit shall be dismissed with costs.

(2) Where the Court has adjudicated upon rival claims to pre-emption, the decree shall direct,—

(a) if and in so far as the claims decreed are equal in degree, that the claim of each pre-emptor complying with the provisions of Sub-rule (1) shall take effect in respect of a proportionate share of the property including any proportionate share in respect of which the claim of any pre-emptor failing to comply with the said provisions would, but for such default, have taken effect; and,

(b) if and in so far as the claims decreed are different in degree, that the claim of the inferior pre-emptor shall not take effect unless and until the superior pre-emptor has failed to comply with the said provisions.

The persons to be sued are, in the present state of the law, the heirs or next of kin, and the only one who would have occasion to sue them are the creditors of the intestate.

An administration suit does not necessarily imply the existence of an administrator to whom letters of administration have been granted. The grant of letters of administration is not a sine qua non of such a suit. The word "administration" is used not in the narrow sense but generally to denote the dealing with a property with a view

15. Where a suit is for the dissolution of a partnership, or the taking of partnership accounts, the Court, before passing a final decree, may pass a preliminary decree declaring the proportionate shares of the parties, fixing the day on which the partnership shall stand dissolved or be deemed to have been dissolved, and directing such accounts to be taken, and other acts to be done, as it thinks fit.

properly to utilise it for the purposes which under the law it has to serve. The essential conditions for administration appear to be the existence of property that is liable to be utilised for a particular purpose, a person in whom the property is vested and who fails or is unable to use it for the purpose and a person who is interested in that purpose. The wording of Order XX, r. 13 of the Code itself lends support to this view. It refers in terms not to a suit against an administrator, but to a suit for an account of any property and for its due administration. The wording is wide enough to embrace all cases where there is a person who is entitled to call for an account of the property.

Order XX, Rule 13, and Form 41, Appendix A, are concerned naturally with the procedure in such a suit, how it should be started, tried and decided. They do not enumerate the cases in which such a suit will lie or the persons by whom or against whom such a suit can be brought (F. B.).—44 T. L. R., 320 (= 19 T. L. J., 15).

I. The Section of Regulation II of 1065 corresponding to Sub-Rule (1) was as follows:—

"208. Suit to enforce right of pre-emption.—When the suit is to enforce a right of pre-emption in respect of a particular sale of property, and the Court finds for the plaintiff, if the amount of purchase-money has not been piad into Court, the decree shall specify a day on or before which it shall be so paid, and shall declare that on payment of such purchase-money together with the costs (if any) decreed against him, the plaintiff shall obtain possession of the property, but that if such money and costs are not so paid, the suit shall stand dismissed with costs."

II. Sub-Rule (1).—This reproduces the British Indian Rule. In regard to the change made by the addition of the words "whose title thereto......of such payment," the Indian Special Committee said:—Having regard to the opinion expressed in I. L. R., 24 Mad., at page 463, we have thought it right to make it clear that title vests without an instrument of transfer. To require a transfer now might throw a cloud over numberless titles which rest on the assumption sanctioned by long practice that no instrument of transfer was necessary."

The title to the property vests in the plaintiff on payment of the purchase-money.

III. Sub-Rule (2).—This is new and is the same as the corresponding British Indian Rule which is "based on the rulings contained in the decisions of the High Court of Allahabad at I. L. R., 6 All., 370, 455, and I. L. R., 11 All., 164." It prescribes the form of decree to be passed when these are rival pre-emptors.

Or. XX, r. 15 [= S. 209 = Or. XX, r. 15]

I. The corresponding Section of the old Regulation ran as follows:—

"209. Suit for dissolution of partnership. When the suit is for the dissolution of a partnership, the Court, before making its decree, may pass an order fixing the day on which the partnership shall stand dissolved, and directing such accounts to be taken and other acts to be done as it thinks fit."

Case Law.

1. The suit was by a partner for recovery of money due on settlement of accounts. The lower Courts concurrently found that there was no settlement of accounts, and dismissed the suit. On special appeal, the High Court while ordering the amendment of plaint for recovery of money into one for accounts and remanding the case under Section 583, C. P. C., [= Or. XL, r. 22]:

Held.—(1) A suit for recovery of money due under a settlement of accounts might be amended into a suit for accounts as the relief arose out of and was immediately connected with the same transaction and such an amendment did not alter the character of the suit.

(2) Even after the dissolution of a partnership, the rights and liabilities of a partner as such continued in all things necessary for its winding up; and partners being agents of each other, each could call upon the other for an account at the dissolution of the partnership, provided that each had managed the affairs of the firm.

All partners must render proper accounts of their dealings. Of course if accounts have been accepted expressly or impliedly up to a certain date, accounts need not be rendered up to that date. The party rendering accounts must explain and support them if called upon to do so. The preliminary decree in such cases should be simply "an order on the defendant to file his accounts". Then the Court should fix days for hearing objections, taking evidence on disputed entries, &c. If this will be unduly encroaching on the time of the Court, a commissioner should be appointed to look into the accounts, take evidence about the disputed entries, and submit his report. A receiver should be appointed to collect outstandings, but in this case the outstandings must either have been collected by 1st defendant or already barred. If either partner has been guilty of negligence and this caused loss to the firm, he should be debited with that amount. If defendant refuses to produce accounts and explain or support them when he is bound legally to do so, presumption should be made against him.— 24 T. L. R., 95.

(=13 T. L. J., 46),
14 T. L. J., 543.

2. Under a decree in a suit for settlement of accounts, any partner to whom money may be due from his co-partners is entitled to have the same realised in execution, whatever be the position he occupies in the suit.

It is usual to allow interest on advances made by the partners in a firm when settling the accounts of the partnership.— 1 S. D., 64.

3. A suit for accounts on dissolution of a partnership is no exception to the rule that a plaintiff in a suit must prove his own case. The non-production by a party of material records in his possession may no doubt give rise to a presumption against him, but the weight due to such a presumption will depend on the facts of each individual case. It is the duty of each of the partners in a partnership to attend diligently to the partnership affairs, and one partner cannot plead in excuse of his own negligence in this particular the neglect o[f] another partner. The facts that a defe[nd]ant partner has been negligent in not [keep]ing detailed accounts of the partn[ership] and that he is also at fault in not pr[oducing] the partnership accounts would n[ot] the plaintiff to succeed if he [...]

negligent and as much at fault as the defendant. The right to call for accounts on dissolution is mutual and each partner is entitled to an account from his co-partners unless he has waived it.

Per Sankara Pillai, J.—The proper procedure to be followed in dealing with a suit for dissolution of partnership and rendition of accounts is to pass a preliminary decree dissolving the partnership as from a specified day, and to direct an enquiry into the accounts as provided in Section 209 of the C. P. C. The preliminary decree should also contain a specification of the shares of the parties in the profits and losses of the concern.

Per Varghese, J.—When the issue is so simple and so clearly raised and met by evidence so as to be ready for decision at the original hearing, the Court may proceed to pass the final decree without having recourse to a preliminary decree; but that is the exception; the general rule is the other way. In ordinary cases the regular course is to pass an order dissolving the partnership and directing the accounts to be taken; a premature attempt to make a final decision may prejudice the parties.

The test whether a person is a partner or not is whether the business is carried on by him or another as his agent; the question is really one of agency and authority. Each partner is liable to account for his act to his co-partner. The preliminary decree is usually framed to satisfy this condition. The simplest form of the preliminary decree in a partnership suit as given by Lindley is:—"Let an account be taken of all partnership dealings and transactions between the plaintiff and the defendant as co-partners from the.........day of.........And t what upon taking the said accounts shall certified to be due from either of the arties to the other of them, be within nth of the Master's certificate paid arty from whom to the party to same shall be certified to be due. pply."

In taking the accounts the amount due from one partner to another is ascertained; the balance may be in favour of the plaintiff or in favour of the defendant. The right to call for an account, upon the dissolution of a firm, is mutual, and each partner is entitled to an account from his co-partners of their partnership dealings and transactions unless he has legally waived or parted with such a right. The final decree will direct the plaintiff or the defendant as the case may be to refund the excess in his possession.

After passing the preliminary decree, accounts have to be taken. The method of taking partnership accounts is, as given by Lindley, :—

"1. Ascertain how the firm stands as regards non-partners.

"2. Ascertain what each partner is entitled to charge in account with his co-partners; remembering in the words of Lord Hardwicke, that 'each is entitled to be allowed as against the other everything he has advanced, or brought in as a partnership transaction, and to charge the other in the account with what that other has not brought in, or has taken out more than he ought.'

"3. Apportion between the partners all profits to be divided or losses to be made good; and ascertain what, if anything, each partner must pay to the others, in order that all cross claims may be settled."

The proper and convenient mode of doing this is to "fix a day before which each of the partners should file a written statement of his accounts exhibiting therein all the items of receipt for which he is accountable on one side and all items of disbursements on the other; and to fix another day before which the opposite party should file objections which he may have to make to these accounts; and finally the Court ought to appoint a third day upon which an enquiry into the truth and correctness of the statements of accounts filed

16. In a suit for an account of pecuniary transactions between a principal and an agent, and in any other suit not hereinbefore provided for, where it is necessary, in order to ascertain the amount of money due to or from any party, that an account should be taken, the Court shall, before passing its final decree, pass a preliminary decree directing such accounts to be taken as it thinks fit.
